

BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

1941

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

THIRTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1941 TO FEBRUARY 1942 INCLUSIVE
WITH CUMULATED INDEX, 1937-1941

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

MANAGING EDITOR
SADIE BRACHFELD

Property of Graduate Theological Union Return to San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1942

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

THIRTY-SIXTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

NUMBER 10 FOR OCTOBER, 1924
PUBLISHED MONTHLY

Printed in the U. S. A.

Volume 10, Number 10

October, 1924

Published by

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Price 10 Cents

Subscription Price $3.00 per Annum in Advance

Entered as Second-Class Matter

July 16, 1902, Post Office at Chicago, Ill., under

Post Office No. 1000

PREFACE

The thirty-seventh Annual volume of the Book Review Digest is a cumulation of the monthly issues from March, 1941, to February, 1942, inclusive. No separate number for February is issued, the books and additional reviews for that month being combined with other entries in this volume. Books with the 1942 imprint are not included in this volume. Because the annual volumes of the Book Review Digest are used for reference permanently, it seems to be important that, so far as possible, each annual volume should include only books of the current (and preceding) years.

The number of books entered in this issue is approximately 3800. The volume also includes a cumulated index by subject and title for all books which have appeared in the Digest from 1937 to 1941, inclusive, indicating in which annual volume reviews will be found.

There have been no additions this year to the list of periodicals from which digests of reviews are made. In April, 1941, the Boston Transcript suspended publication. The Transcript had been on the Book Review Digest list of reviewing publications since 1918. One magazine changed its name during the year: News Edition, changed to Chemical and Engineering News in January, 1942.

During the past year Miss Marion Knight has continued to cooperate in an advisory capacity to the present editors.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

- Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. Peabody Museum, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.
- Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
- Am Econ R—American Economic Review. $5. American Economic Assn, Evanston, Ill.
- Am Hist R—American Historical Review. $5. The Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York
- Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. $5. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York
- Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. $5. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Annals St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4. American Sociological Society, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh
- Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. $5. 3457 Walnut St, Philadelphia
- Atlantic—Atlantic Bookshelf of the Atlantic Monthly. $5. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston
- Booklist—Booklist. $3. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago
- Bookmark—Bookmark. 50c New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany
- Books—New York Herald Tribune Books. $1. N Y Tribune, Inc, Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York
- Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $7.50 (Thursday, Friday and Saturday). Boston Transcript Co, Inc, Pub, 324 Washington St, Boston Publication suspended April 1941
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $2. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 28 Wellington St, W, Toronto
- Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto
- Cath World—Catholic World. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 411 W 59th St, New York
- Chem & Chem Eng N—Chemistry & Chemical Engineering News. See News Edition
- Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, 407 S Dearborn St, Chicago
- Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $12. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston
- Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Commonweal—Commonweal. $5. Commonweal Publishing Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York
- Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.
- Current Hist—Current History. $2. Events Publishing Co, Inc, 225 Varick St, New York
Current History (founded 1914) combined with The Forum and The Century Magazine, May 23, 1940; Current History and Forum combined with Events, July 21, 1941, and the name Current History restored, beginning with the issue, September, 1941.
- Economist—Economist. £3. Economist Newspaper, Ltd, 8 Bouverie St, London, EC 4
- El School J—Elementary School Journal. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago
- Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. $2s. Longmans, Green & Co, 39 Paternoster Row, London, E.C. 4 (55 Fifth Av, New York)
- Ethics—Ethics. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 45 E 65th St, New York
- Forum. See Current Hist & Forum
Merged with Current History, July 1940
- Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York
- Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. McGraw-Hill Book Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. 10s. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($2.50. Leroy Phillips, 99 Revere St, Boston)
- Horn Bk M—Horn Book Magazine. $2.50. Horn Book, Inc, 264 Boylston St, Boston
- Ind & Eng Chem News ed—Industrial and Engineering Chemistry News Edition
Now registered under name News Edition
- J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. $2.50. American Home Economics Assn, Mills Bldg, Washington, D.C.
- J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W 116th St, New York
- J Phys Chem—Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Aves, Baltimore
- J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- J Religion—Journal of Religion. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Library J—Library Journal. $5. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York
- Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Living Age—Living Age. $5. 25 W 45th St, New York
- Management R—Management Review. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York
- Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York
- Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Nation—Nation. $5. Nation, Inc, 55 Fifth Av, New York

- Nature—Nature. $15. Macmillan Company, 60 Fifth Av, New York (4£ 10s Macmillan & Co, Ltd, St Martin's St, London, WC 2)
- New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. M. Ellis, 200 Stevens Hall, Orono, Me.
- New Repub—New Republic. $5. Editorial Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York
- New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d New Statesman and Nation, 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1
- N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books. 25c N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, N.Y.
- N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, 229 W 43d St, New York
- New Yorker—New Yorker. $5. F-R Publishing Corp, 25 W 43d St, New York
- News Ed—News Edition (American Chemical Society) $2; single numbers 15c. American Chemical Society, Mills Bldg, 1709 G St, N.W, Washington, D.C.
Formerly Industrial and Engineering Chemistry News Edition
Name changed to Chemical and Engineering News, January 10, 1942
- No Am—North American Review. $4. North American Review Corp, 420 Madison Av, New York
- Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs. $2. 129 E 52d St, New York
- Poetry—Poetry. $3. 232 E Erie St, Chicago
- Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. $5. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York
- Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. $4. Saturday Review Co, Inc, 25 West 45th Street, New York
- School & Society—School and Society. $5. Science Press, N Queen St and McGovern Av, Lancaster, Pa.
- School Arts—School Arts. $3. Printers Bldg, 44 Portland St, Worcester, Mass.
- School R—School Review. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago
- Scientific Bk Club R—Scientific Book Club Review. Subscription. Scientific Book Club, Inc, 80 Lafayette St, New York
- Social Educ—Social Education. $2. 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington, D.C.
- Social Forces—Social Forces. $4. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore
- Social Studies—Social Studies. $2. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia
- Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $5. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York
- Spec—Spectator. The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1
- Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $11. Republican Publishing Co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.
- Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $2. American Library Association, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago
- Survey—Survey. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York
- Survey G—Survey Graphic. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York
- Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. $3.50. Theatre Arts, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York
- Time—Time. $5. Time, Inc, 330 E 22d St, Chicago
- Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd. Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York
- Yale R n s—Yale Review. $3. Yale University Press, 143 Elm St, New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from America; Churchman; Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Living Church; Pratt Institute Quarterly; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

(W) Sets of Wilson catalog cards are available for all books marked with this symbol. Publishers' directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers, March 1941—February 1942

ABBEY, KATHRYN TRIMMER. Florida, land of change. 426p il maps $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

975.9 Florida—History 41-2778

Popularly written history of Florida from the early days of Spanish exploration and colonization to the present. The author is professor of history at the Florida State College for Women. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Abbey is well equipped for the task she has accomplished. Aware that scarcity of materials must postpone any definitive essay, she has used available data to produce, as judged by modern standards, the first really scholarly attempt at a complete history of the area and the state called Florida. Eclectic to a degree, she has used local minutiae sparingly, and little of such 'clutter' is found within her covers unless it ties in with some larger nexus. Withal, the book not only achieves satisfying perspective but contains factual data sufficient to dismiss any charges of vagueness." J. D. Glunt

+ Am Hist R 47:365 Ja '42 800w

"The Florida Miss Abbey writes of is not alone the State of Florida. . . The task Miss Abbey has undertaken and brought off so well is to set down, not local and state history as it is commonly treated, but to dig into the past, showing what silt from what streams, what cultures, have been deposited to make the soil of today." Ernestine Evans

+ Books p19 S 7 '41 440w

"An ingenious organization of material and a lucid, conversational style give the book that rare distinction in historical writing: Popular appeal combined with faithful adherence to the requirements of scholarship. An extensive bibliography, selected for its accessibility and an adequate index help make this work what the Florida Historical Quarterly describes as 'by all odds the best general history of the State.'" A. J. Hanna

+ N Y Times p13 Je 15 '41 850w

ABBEY, KIERAN. Run with the hare. 234p $2 Scribner

41-14657

Mystery story.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"Here's a thriller done to a turn in the polite manner, a product that doesn't grow on every bush." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 S 7 '41 120w

"So skillfully has the author maintained the suspense that the reader is as much in the dark as is Susan herself and as much surprised and pleased when the mystery is finally cleared up. The name Kieran Abbey is new to us but the bearer of that name is no novice at writing. He (or is it she?) will bear watching. Let us have more of Kieran Abbey." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 10 '41 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 180w

ABBOTT, BERENICE. A guide to better photography. 182p pl $2 Crown

770 Photography (W) 41-14642

"The 80 illustrations include the work of the great masters of photography from Matthew Brady and David Octavius Hill to Arnold Genthe, Margaret Bourke-White, Ansel Adams, Lewis Hine and Paul Strand. These photographs are analyzed to show their fine points and they serve to demonstrate and enhance the text." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:31 O 1 '41

Reviewed by E. F. Hall

N Y Times p27 S 28 '41 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 450w

ABBOTT, JANE LUDLOW (DRAKE) (MRS FRANK ABBOTT). Lorrie. 287p $2 Lippincott

41-9959

Lorrie, a young Chicago dancer is the heroine. When she is rescued from starvation by a young man who is a friend of Lorrie's doctor, with whom Lorrie is in love, the stage is set for a modern triangle love affair.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p10 Jl 6 '41 160w

N Y Times p22 Je 29 '41 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 O 18 '41 100w

ABBOTT, LAWRENCE. Approach to music [foreword by Walter Damrosch]. 358p $2.50 Farrar

780.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation, Music—History and criticism (W) 40-34379

"A bird's-eye view of the entire field of music. . . [The author] starts with the simplest of nursery tunes and folk songs and from there by easy stages progresses to the gradual historical evolution of music from the time of the early church composers on to the great masters of the present. The intelligent reader will gain some knowledge of melody, harmony, rhythm, counterpoint and even of the more intricate musical forms." (Foreword) Index.

"Mr. Abbott has a vivid way in dealing with history and sounds interested himself. . . One might protest here and there. . . The statement that Wagner and Debussy were instinc-

Subject and title index at end of alphabet

ABBOTT, LAWRENCE—Continued

positive rather than conscious innovators as opposed to the composers of today is used in the same paragraph with the phrase in quotes 'music of the future.' That is funny if you remember some of the writings of Liszt and Wagner. These slips however are rare and it is rather unfair to bring them up in reviewing a book which is so well devised and so attractively written." Douglas Moore

+ — Books p16 F 9 '41 750w

"Mr. Abbott has performed a masterful exploit, indeed, in summarizing what has been spoken in halls and studios and written in the newspapers and magazines the past generation by way of calling to popular notice the art of music. The task he undertakes comes in the line of what we often refer to as salesmanship; but regardless of how called, it is a task well done."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 13 '41 310w

"While weak on American music and hazy in evaluating many composers discussed, it is fairly complete, concise, and written sensibly—not down. Some good musical examples and a short reference list are included."

+ — New Repub 104:610 Ap 28 '41 50w

"Mr. Abbott's approach to music is sane, direct, intelligible and probably helpful. He is not patronizing; he uses a constant stream of apt analogies and homely similes, but for the most part he does not oversimplify the problem. There are times, of course, when Mr. Abbott speaks with the evangelism of an advertising copy writer. He is out to sell music, and if you are a hardened sales resister, you may react badly to the glowing promise Mr. Abbott holds out. But if you give him a chance, he does an honest job of selling." Howard Taubman

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 13 '41 600w

ABEL, HILDE. Victory was slain. 320p $2.50 Alliance bk.

41-23667

Historical novel based on the three days' civil war in 1934, when the Social-democrats of Vienna were beaten by Dollfuss and the Fascists.

"'Victory Was Slain,' is a moving document of the death of Austrian freedom. Moving and terrifying, for we realize once again how much could have been saved—and with how little effort. But the effort came too late and human heroism was turned into senseless slaughter. Miss Abel's book presupposes a sound knowledge of events in Central Europe during the last decade. This may be regrettable in view of the fact that those who lack this precise knowledge will hardly be able to follow her story. But may all those who read her book heed her plea that democracy must never again act too late." Ursula Wasserman

+ — Books p14 O 26 '41 440w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

— New Repub 106:124 Ja 26 '42 480w

"It is a novel written with utter conviction and a compassion thoroughly felt and lived. The terror of poverty and defeat is shown with hot intensity. . . This is a book which no one should miss. Its message is political as well as human. More than any other book that I have recently read it proves why indecision is the first step toward surrender, and why, no matter how deep our love of freedom, we will have lost it unless we fight for it." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 O 12 '41 800w

"Miss Abel is very much in earnest and seems to know her Vienna and the events of that critical time. But zeal and knowledge do not in themselves make a novel clear, moving, or interesting."

New Yorker 17:102 O 11 '41 50w

"The hero's uncertainties leave the reader in a state of constant bewilderment. There is, unfortunately, no other person on whom he can focus. There are inserted chapters, describing the mighty and rich, but they are irrelevant to the story and do not further it. The actual battle scenes occupy too much space, and lack the strength and concentration that the subject demands." R. R. Plant

Sat R of Lit 24:14 O 11 '41 450w

ABEND, HALLETT. Japan unmasked. 322p map $3 Washburn

950 Japan—Foreign relations. Eastern question (Far East). U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Far East) (W) 41-51687

"Survey of conditions in the Far East by the New York Times' correspondent. Details of the situation in Japan (the militarists can't stop now), Hong Kong, Shanghai, French Indo-China, Thailand, Singapore, the Netherlands East Indies (ready for a showdown), and the Philippines (not ready), plus a look at our excellent military-naval setup at Pearl Harbor. The author thinks we should fight Japan, that war is imminent, and that it will be a long struggle. Maps." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

"It is a book that one can start anywhere and read in any direction. But this is nothing against it, for however one reads it is good reading. Like every job that Mr. Abend has done, it is characterized by intelligent, painstaking observation and by thoroughly honest opinion which, though justly warm in spots, is always tempered by an obvious effort to understand the other fellow's point of view and be fair." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p5 Ap 27 '41 1150w

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 300w

"A piece of thorough, fact-packed, up-to-date reporting. . . His book must be reckoned a reliable ready reference book, entertainingly written."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 24 '41 320w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipley, Jr.

Churchman 155:19 Jl 1 '41 200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:883 Jl '41 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 4 '41 360w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 152:702 Je 14 '41 160w

"Mr. Abend is primarily a reporter, and a good one. He makes his points with facts and episodes found at first hand. His own experiences were dramatic and are vividly told." Nathaniel Peffer

+ New Repub 105:124 Jl 28 '41 390w

"No one has given a more complete, convincing factual picture of the balance of strength as between Japan and China. And the present book is also an absorbing picture of Japan's thrust for empire in the south and of the steps which have been taken to meet this thrust in the countries that will quite possibly be the centers of action if the Pacific storm ever bursts, in the Philippines, in Malaya and in the Dutch East Indies. Mr. Abend's work is a veritable 'Information Please' as regards Japan-in-China, the large cities which the Japanese have occupied and held in their vain attempt to break the Chinese nationalist resistance." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 13 '41 1500w

"Well-informed, up-to-the-minute survey."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Ap 26 '41 60w

Pratt p13 autumn '41

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson

Sat R of Lit 23:19 My 3 '41 500w

Reviewed by Alvin Wilson

Spec 167:406 O 24 '41 500w

"His book is tense, timely, ominous."

+ Time 37:98 My 5 '41 750w

"The worst part about this excellent book is the title. Japan has long ago lost her mask, and even the covering necessary to decency; it is fortunate that Mr. Abend has not in fact limited himself to so unprofitable a subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p526 O 25 '41 750w

ABERCROMBIE, ROLAND KNIGHTS. How to buy or build your home wisely. 168p il $1.75 Macmillan

643 Home economics, Building—Estimates, Dwellings (W) 41-51688

"Beginning with a discussion of who should own his own home, the chairman of the Department of Commerce of the San Mateo, California, Junior College examines the problems facing the prospective home owner through all stages of acquisition until he finally places his insurance on his property. Only the barest essentials are included under each heading of this compact manual for the layman written in textbook style." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 30w

"Clear, simple, sensible book for the ordinary householder."

+ J Home Econ 33:345 My '41 90w

Reviewed by H. A. Carpenter

Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 70w

"A careful, competent, sober book doing precisely what the title says it does." F. Y.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 My 24 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

ABERNETHY, THOMAS PERKINS. Three Virginia frontiers. 96p $1.50 La. state univ. press

975.5 Virginia—History—Colonial period. U.S.—Territorial expansion. Kentucky—History 41-3353

"This study in three parts, one each on 'tidewater', 'piedmont and the Valley', and 'Kentucky', comprises the 1940 Walter Lynwood Fleming Lectures delivered at Louisiana State University and is intended to be illustrative of stages of American frontier advance. To those who trace democracy largely to Jeffersonian influences it will come as a challenge, for its author goes a long way toward proving that some among them do not understand Jefferson's ideas and have frequently mistaken manifestations of Western self-interest for democracy. More informing still is his thesis to the effect that most of the social progress in these stages of our advance were products of liberal rather than of democratic leadership." Am Hist R

Reviewed by C. H. Ambler

Am Hist R 47:205 O '41 340w

Social Studies 32:240 My '41 50w

ABRAHAM, DORIS CAROLINE (CARYL BRAHMS, pseud), and SIMON, S. J. Don't, Mr Disraeli! 322p $2.50 Putnam [8s 6d Joseph, M]

41-5366

An extravaganza on Victorian manners, written in the form of a novel embodying the feud between two London families—the Clutterwicks and the Shuttleworths. A Romeo and Juliet situation arises between two young members of the rival houses, and their romance goes forward with an accompaniment of sidelights on the lives and customs of famous Victorian characters in high life, including Queen Victoria and Lady Caroline Lamb, with references to later days worked in.

"We have had heaven's plenty of Victorian memoirs, and as reading them impels any young English writer to produce a parody, we have had plenty of spoof Victorianism as well. It has never taken just this form before. 'Don't, Mr. Disraeli!' just misses the right of comparison with the incomparable '1066 and All That.' It is longer and not so funny, but quite funny enough to be taken with gratitude just now." M. L. Becker

Books p14 Ap 6 '41 480w

"On with the motley! In the bright lexicon of 'Don't, Mr. Disraeli!' the word 'anachronism' does not exist. It is a comic compendium of the Victorian Age which can seriously recall 'The Song of the Shirt' in an indignant passage on sweated labour and can put a telling description of a public execution into Disraeli's mouth. It is a variety show, a period revue of Victoria and All That, but there is a story, veritably narrated." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p7 N 15 '40 160w

"Not all the jokes and excursions are good, but Don't, Mr. Disraeli is a book people will enjoy reading together, or in families. 'It was snowing, a thousand fathers were waiting impatiently at doorways for it to get dark, so that they could put out their sinning daughters': that is the kind of sentence that makes up for a good deal of hit-or-miss exuberance." G. W. Stonier

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:582 D 7 '40 300w

"Apparently the book has had considerable success in England. At any rate, several quotations on the jacket indicate that reviews thought it 'mad, but exceedingly funny,' 'merry,' 'witty,' and Frank Swinnerton speaks of its 'sustained sportiveness.' Those who shrink from sustained sportiveness as they do from anything gleeful will not find even the most diverting caricatures comical." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '41 650w

"The authors have ransacked the nineteenth century for every allusion and cliché that might yield a wheeze with which to decorate this Victorian whatnot. The result is somewhat labored, though it has an occasional welcome touch of the Beerbohm of 'Zuleika Dobson.'" New Yorker 17:90 Ap 5 '41 40w

"'Don't, Mr. Disraeli' is the English literary fantasy gone haywire, ga-ga, or otherwise modernist. It is 'Zuleika Dobson' in Hollywood, but still aware of the Great Tradition. If you like Max Beerbohm and if you like the Marx Brothers and if you can bear to think of them as mashed up together, you may like this book very much. But if you are leery of the English when they go into a whimsy, you'd better try to forget the war some other way." Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ap 12 '41 450w

"It is a first-rate idea for a rollicking farce, and if it went like a whirlwind and never gave us pause for thought would read like an uproarious travesty. But it goes too slowly; here and there the jokes are a little laboured. The regular rotation of scenes and reappearances of characters comes to seem mechanical. Yet if some of it is tedious, there are some good moments, and it would probably go very well if read aloud." Bonamy Dobrée

+ — Spec 165:560 N 22 '40 150w

"The reader, according to his mood, will probably apply to this book a range of adjectives varying from brilliant to irritating. Round a plot, which owes everything to melodrama and is consequently apparent in the opening pages, the authors have managed to fit together a remarkable patchwork of Victorianism, and the reader, who is frequently addressed by the authors and assured by them that they have the situation well in hand, is never quite certain how often the joke is for him or at him."

+ Time: [London] Lit Sup p581 N 16 '40 360w

ACKERMAN, EDWARD AUGUSTUS. New England's fishing industry. 303p il maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press

639.22 Fisheries—New England 41-13623

"A description of the New England commercial fishery and an explanation of the factors governing the location of its various cultural features." (Foreword) Contents: The place of fish in New England regional life; General locational factors of fisheries; The fishing grounds; New England fishing gear—general use and local adaptations; Man-made limitations on and regulations of the New England fisheries; Marketing areas and methods of handling; The several economic divisions of the industry—characteristics and location; The location of industries related to fishing; Social aspects of the New England fisheries. Index.

ACKERMAN, E. A.—Continued

"This profusely illustrated book is a welcome addition to the all too small list of popular books on the fishing industry. It is written in an engaging style, the author being unusually adept at carrying the reader from chapter to chapter without a loss of interest. This book should be of special interest to those engaged in all phases of the fishing industry, as well as to that large segment of the population concerned with the conservation of natural resources. It could readily serve as a textbook." R. H. Fiedler

+ Ann Am Acad 218:234 N '41 450w

Booklist 38:3 S '41

"This book is a welcome contribution to our literature on the geographical, economic, and social aspects of new England's fishing industry, and its author is to be commended for the skill and courage with which he has given us a general but nevertheless detailed and competent view." Gordon Sweet

+ Geog R 31:686 O '41 950w

"A remarkably complete and vivid picture of the commercial fishing of our New England coast." G. L. Clarke

+ New Eng Q 14:742 D '41 420w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Ag '41 370w

"Mr Ackerman's book, like so many of the newer works on the economic aspects of our society, makes interesting reading to the layman and is a useful volume for reference. Many of its numerous photographs will prove familiar to the coast enthusiasts among its readers. Considered as a serious study, it will be found a scholarly investigation of an adventurous industry." M. A. M.

+ Spring'd Republican p8 J1 24 '41 500w

ACKLEY, EDITH (FLACK) (MRS STOW WENGENROTH). A doll shop of your own; drawings by Telka Ackley. 115p $2 Stokes 649.55 Dolls (W) 41-15325

"Based on practical experience, this prettily illustrated guide to running a doll-shop begins with a one-room enterprise at home, describes various types of larger and more professional shops, and shows how several allied trades can cooperate in selling or promoting their work through such an establishment. A chapter on famous doll makers of the present day shows their work qualifies for museum exhibits. Mrs. Ackley has written several books on doll-making; in this one she shows how to make only doll-house dolls and place-card figures." Books

Booklist 38:75 N 1 '41

Books p12 S 14 '41 90w

ACOMB, EVELYN MARTHA. The French laic laws (1879-1889) the first anti-clerical campaign of the third French republic. 282p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

261.7 Roman Catholic church in France. France—Politics and government. Church and state in France 41-24522

"In the second decade of the Third Republic the political questions relating to religion grew out of the opposition between two irreconcilable factors in the French tradition: on the one hand, the old but still vigorous Roman Catholic conception of a society in which culture and education should be dominated by the church, . . . on the other, the ancient tradition of Gallican liberties, the rising spirit of nationalism, and the conception of a liberal secular state as developed by the Revolution and Napoleon. The period . . . was one in which the stubborn resistance of the church to . . .

reforms provoked legislation which took away some liberties to which the church is entitled." Christian Century

"The author is a 'Protestant who believes that the civil and religious liberty of those of every faith should be preserved.' More reassuring, she did her extensive research under the direction of Carlton Hayes. The result of her labors is a fairly objective presentation of the process of secularization. The book is more scholarly than popular." R. Corrigan

+ America 66:107 N 1 '41 280w

Christian Century 58:1305 O 22 '41 260w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 20w

ADAMIC, LOUIS. Two-way passage. 328p $2.50 Harper

325.73 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics. Reconstruction, 1939—. World war, 1939—Peace (W) 41-21190

Realistic accounts of racial antagonism in this country, the reactions of various nationalities toward the second World war, Nazi propaganda in the United States, and the author's opinions on the state of Europe. He closes with a proposal for shipping back to Europe thousands of Americans of European stock, for the purpose of establishing a United States of Europe.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic F '42 300w

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"At the end it is fanciful. The book is written in a hurry; it is thrown together in places; it is trying to start a fire, not present a carefully inert 'analysis.' It skips the colossal difficulties. But the idea it embodies is a real idea, clothed, by Mr. Adamic's wide knowledge and sensitive awareness, in the flesh of actual men and women as they actually live and feel and dream in this vast complex of American democracy." Walter Millis

+ — Books p4 O 26 '41 1050w

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson

— Cath World 154:367 D '41 420w

"The book, as the vehicle for the introduction of an idea, is very adequately done. If that idea is to 'seize the imagination of the European peoples and set their souls afire,' it will most certainly require development beyond that accorded it here." J. E. E.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 N 15 '41 600w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 120w

"Louis Adamic has written another book about the nationals who comprise the United States, and as usual he handles his subject with passion and brilliancy. . . . As an international strategist Mr. Adamic reflects some of the confusion he ascribes to most current American thought on what must be the role of the United States in the war and in the period that will follow." R. H. Reyher

+ — Nation 153:648 D 20 '41 360w

"It would be fine if every member of the America First group would read his book." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 N 23 '41 1500w

New Yorker 17:98 O 18 '41 60w

"We shall have many other schemes more visionary and more impractical than this before the world comes to its senses, but we certainly will never have one that is more naive." O. G. Villard

Sat R of Lit 24:11 O 18 '41 1300w

Spring'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 340w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson

Survey G 30:708 D '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:198 D '41

ADAMS, CLEVE F. The black door. 268p $2
Dutton

Detective story.

41-20720

"Mr. Adams includes some impressive touches of brutality in his exciting pipe dream." Will Cuppy

Books p40 N 2 '41 160w

"A lot of blood is spilled before Flagg discovers the truth, but you, gentle reader, may sit in your comfortable armchair and learn all about it without fear of anything more dreadful than boredom—perhaps not even that if you happen to like sensational and improbable adventures." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 N 9 '41 190w

"Lone-Wolf hero a pleasant addition to hard-boiled gallery. Yarn is full of action and gore. Ending a bit far-fetched. O.K."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 1 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 110w

ADAMS, CLEVE F. Decoy. 244p $2 Dutton
41-3531

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Mr 9 '41 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 30w

"The tale is a thriller with as gory a climax as we have ever encountered." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '41 160w

"No holds barred in this rapidly moving, realistic, high-tension tale of diabolical plotters and their final undoing. Tempestuous."

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 40w

ADAMS, DAVID ERNEST. Man of God. 217p
$2 Harper

232 Jesus Christ—Biography 41-15079

"The head of the department of religion at Mount Holyoke College translates the results of biblical scholarship into layman's language. He ranges through both Testaments, building up as he goes a picture of life in biblical times and a picture of Jesus that modern men can accept." Christian Century

"This book is practical, sensible and historically dependable as far as it goes. Its importance might have been increased if the author had recognized more clearly that the Gospels were written after Christianity had spread to gentile soil. In this wider setting the writers felt the necessity not only of making their portrait of Jesus acceptable to Jewish ways of thinking but also of making it appeal to gentiles. This is a feature of the situation that Professor Adams seems not to have taken sufficiently into account."

+ — Books p32 N 23 '41 180w

Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 40w

Churchman 155:34 O 15 '41 150w

"This is one of those rare books which needed to be written, for which there is a definite place." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 19:66 Ja '42 1100w

"The wonder and mystery of Christ's life is recognized, but whether this portrayal of Jesus as a man, even a very great man, is adequate for Christian faith is a matter to be judged by the reader of the book. The book itself represents much reflection and research and is a contribution of merit." F. T. Steele

Springf'd Republican p10 S 18 '41

480w

ADAMS, FRANK RAMSAY. Arizona feud. 278p
$2 Doubleday

41-15430

Mystery story with a Western setting.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"In this lively yarn Steve Boyd, a young reporter, manages to solve a murder and clear out a nest of villains after the violent death of Phoebe Dover on the eve of her fourth wedding." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 O 26 '41 70w

"It's all a grim and horrible tragedy, but it's handled as if it were a farce—with lightness and dash and cleverness and wise-cracking dialogue that hold the reader's interest to the end." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p17 S 14 '41 140w

ADAMS, HARLEN MARTIN. Junior college library program; a study of library services in relation to instructional procedures. 92p $2 A.L.A.; Stanford univ. press

027.7 Libraries, University and college. Junior colleges—Curricula. Library administration (W) 40-27825

"Present practices in leading schools, and basic principles for correlating the services of junior college libraries with the curriculum are covered in a book which is of interest to all school and college librarians and teachers. Discusses standards and functions of the library, relation to the student, administration, and a new library program at Menlo junior college." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:167 Ja 1 '41

"Mr. Adams' book, to use a humble analogy, is like a good solid appetizer—it provides tangible food but does not in itself entirely still the hunger it arouses. On the other hand, the wealth of facts and ideas it presents is not confined to the junior college library alone. As the author himself states, this volume 'has value for all school librarians and teachers.' And for the junior college it is a 'must' book." Michael Koch

+ — Library Q 11:375 Jl '41 1500w

ADAMSON, HANS CHRISTIAN. Lands of New World neighbors. (Whittlesey house publication) 593p $3.50; text ed $2.75 McGraw

970 America—History. America—Description and travel (W) 41-20692

"Written by the author of the 'New Horizons' broadcasts of the CBS School of the Air of the Americas. Each chapter of this book closely parallels one of the 26 broadcasts in this series. Jointly sponsored by the NEA and the American Museum of Natural History, the New Horizons series and this book dramatize the exploration, natural history, geography and history of the Western Hemisphere." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"The reader who wants information about present problems and conditions must seek it elsewhere. But for the historical foundation upon which present conditions rest, this is excellent. There is no attempt at imaginative or stylistic embellishment. The narratives are clear, and rather heavy with factual detail. If one tires of reading, such a book is always valuable for reference."

+ Christian Century 58:1442 N 19 '41 140w

"The style of writing is informal to the point of annoyance with anecdotes, trivial details, and direct quotations of conversations. On the other hand the book is extremely informative, often fascinating as it tells the story of the many lands and the striking personalities who have made their history. This work should be of interest to younger readers." H. A. von Urrf

+ — Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 120w

"It is written in the self-consciously easy style often employed in an attempt to dramatize history for children. Any self-respecting travel folder contains much of the material here presented, while the 'World Almanac,' in a fraction of the space, contains much more that is valuable and significant. Those who want to gild their dinner-table conversation with the names of a few conquistadores will perhaps find it useful." Katherine Rodell

Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 1 '41 400w

ADAMSON, H. C.—Continued

School & Society 54:339 O 18 '41 60w

"The reviewer cannot portray his impression of this book better than by summarizing it as a series of highly colored portraits of romantic personalities and pictures of colorful events strung together on a line extending along the American continents from Hudson's Bay to the Falkland Islands in such a way as to imply a certain common relationship." Alfred Hasbrouck

+ Social Studies 33:37 Ja '42 480w

ADLER, CYRUS. I have considered the days. 447p il $2.50 Jewish pub.

B or 92

41-11124

"The life-story of Dr. Cyrus Adler, educator and public-spirited citizen, who died a little over a year ago." (N Y Times) "[Dr Adler] was at one time connected with the Smithsonian Institution and for more than thirty years he [was] president of Dropsie College. Through the whole of a long life he [was] devoted to Hebrew scholarship, the interests of his people and humanitarian causes." (Christian Century)

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 50w

"This is a noble, straightforward and unassuming autobiography which touches a number of diverse facets of information and significance."

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 27 '41 500w

AESOP. Fables; a new version written by Munro Leaf, with il. by Robert Lawson. 134p $2.50 Heritage

398 Fables

41-9061

"This is published on the 2,500th anniversary of Aesop's death, supposing there was an actual Aesop. The introduction by Emile Van Vliet tells his history—though perhaps this, too, is a fable—and names some of those through the ages who made successive versions of the shrewd and deathless apologues. . . Most of us remember one of these fables in our childhood books, by a picture and a point; in this version both are new yet old." Books

"The animals are in Mr. Lawson's best vein, not overhumanized and collaborating beautifully with the spirit of the story. This is a handsome addition to a child's library." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 O 26 '41 200w

"This large quarto, beautifully printed on a smooth warmly-tinted paper, reaches a high point in bookmaking. For illustration it contains line drawings of a strength and vigor suited to the character of animal fables. Unfortunately, however, the text is a decided disappointment. Departing from the dignity and folk quality of the edition which Joseph Jacobs adapted from Croxall, Munro Leaf has made a familiar jocular rendering which strips the fables of their simple distinctive flavor. Perhaps it is as well that few children will have access to this book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:471 N '41 100w

AGAR, HERBERT, and others. The city of man; a declaration on world democracy. 113p $1 Viking

321.8 Democracy

41-48

Reaffirmation of the religious but non-sectarian principles of democracy, plus a program for the new world state, which the authors suggest as a means of defeating Fascism, and assuming "leadership among the nations."

Reviewed by E. D. Ellis

Am Pol Sci R 35:397 Ap '41 350w

Reviewed by R. V. Peel

Ann Am Acad 217:178 S '41 380w

Booklist 37:264 F 15 '41

"With much of this Declaration, most of us would agree. . . [The authors] do not make sense when they skip over the truth of war and broken dreams that lies between a reformed America and a reformed world. They do not make sense when they burst into a cloud of rhetoric about the 'Universal Parliament representing people, not states,' with 'an elected president, the President of Mankind.' And, to the old, tempting lure of the impossible, which seems to glitter to us afresh with each new generation, they add a language dangerously close to that of the world-devouring cults they oppose." R. H. Phelps

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 420w

Foreign Affairs 19:674 Ap '41 20w

"In this declaration a galaxy of brilliant scholars and thinkers, Americans like Alvin Johnson and William Neilson, refugees like Salvemini and Borgese, all of them gallant fighters for freedom, accept the cave man's challenge. . . In spite of the occasionally enraptured overtones of its style the Declaration is not the wishful thought of a Dreamland. As a beacon of faith in the blackout of violence it illuminates the way of reason which leads beyond the rationale of materialism. Facts may dim the vision of men; they may prove temporarily incongruous with this City of the Future. But as a French wit said, 'Tant pis pour les faits.'" Rustem Vambéry

+ Nation 152:104 Ja 25 '41 800w

"Not every reader will follow with agreement everything that is said here. But every American can realize here the fervor of the spirit, the large horizon of the mind, the acceptance of effort and sacrifice, which hold whatever hope may be left for the world." K. W.

N Y Times p5 D 22 '40 750w

New Yorker 16:123 D 7 '40 90w

Pratt p19 spring '41

AGEE, JAMES, and EVANS, WALKER. Let us now praise famous men. (Three tenant families, v 1) 471p il $3.50 Houghton

917.61 Alabama—Social conditions. Farm tenancy 41-13770

"For some weeks James Agee, poet, and writer for 'Time' and 'Fortune,' and Walker Evans, photographer for the Farm Security Administration, lived with a sharecropper family, during the summer of 1936. 'Let Us Now Praise Famous Men,' in pictures and words, is the resultant study of this family of George Gudger (a one-mule half-cropper) and of two poorer neighboring tenant families, the Ricketts and Woods." Books

"Certainly Walker Evans's superb photographs may go unchallenged. Uncaptioned, they speak. They tell so much, so eloquently, that the documentary text becomes secondary, even at its best. But the writing is here and the writer must, because of the specific nature of his subject, communicate also in objective terms. . . With one or two notable exceptions, Mr. Agee is less happy describing the people he lived with and knew. . . A section on education becomes a brilliant, bitterly ironic attack on the whole subject of schooling not only in Alabama but throughout America. Like many writers, Agee is most effective when angry. But his anger here thins down to the pros and cons of the 'murderous' neurosis-making methods of old-fashioned schooling and the intended neurosis-preventing methods of 'progressive' education. . . As readers of this book, we have moved in on Mr. Agee (even as he moved in on the cotton tenant families) and we learn possibly as much about him (and the things about ourselves which he represents) as we do about the share-croppers. Perhaps this, whether intentional or not, is the book's chief social documentary value." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p10 Ag 24 '41 950w

"Thirty-one excellent photographs must give pause to anyone whose imagination is not stirred by the written word. A disagreeable subject, handled with vivid bitterness! This book as well as Grapes of Wrath, which it inevitably brings to mind, are efforts to force the American people to clean house." E. C. Thompson

+ Churchman 155:19 S 15 '41 190w

"The book presents at times a fairly good picture of tenant farmers and their families, their life—if you can call it that—and the simple dignity and beauty that some of them retain in spite of the brutal conditions of that life. Mr. Agee has a real sympathy—and even love—for his subjects, and he is certainly a sensitive observer. So is Mr. Evans's camera. But the book is too repetitious, too obscure, too obsessed with irrelevant detail, and particularly too obsessed with the author's complex reactions to his subject and to everything else from Cezanne to Kafka [and] his own relatives." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 34:499 S 12 '41 360w

"While their book is mainly the story of tenant farmers, the author has included a mass of unrelated, nonsensical material, some parts almost the ravings of a lunatic, while others are beautiful, lyric prose of high merit, not entirely related to sharecropping. There are many objectionable passages and references. I am sorry not to be able to recommend this book, for the subject is an important one." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 100w

"Summarily I would say that the virtues of this book are also its faults. For that generosity of sympathy which makes Mr. Agee feel so strongly about not omitting even ridiculous details from his book, in other words, his virtue of immense hospitality toward all things, is at the same time the vice of greed. His desire to establish a great memorial to these three Alabama families has ended in the accumulation of an edifice in which old boots, staircases, the exact texture of Mr. Gudger's overalls, and the number of hairpins in the possession of Mrs. Woods, all hang together like the articles discovered in aboriginal graves. But every now and then, from this extraordinary imbroglia, one of the figures of the Gudgers or Woodses or Rickettses rises and really looks at the reader with accusation and condemnation." George Barker

+ Nation 153:282 S 27 '41 900w

"Whatever the case, whether attracted or repelled, whether for or against, it is a rich, many-eyed book and ought to be looked into." Harvey Breit

+ New Repub 105:348 S 15 '41 550w

"Overdone in spots, and doesn't add up to a single effect, but superior, highly original accurately poetic writing."

+ New Yorker 17:75 S 13 '41 70w

"This is not a book for those who consider Kenneth Roberts a realist. . . . Take the opening pages. If the reader does not like the kind of naked realism which is the truth as Walker Evans's camera-eye sees it, he is through before he even reaches the text. . . . Even if the reader should be humble about the meaning of life, and not be sure that he always understands what such indefinable, unclassifiable, and by-nature-once-occurring thing as 'art' and 'poetry' are he will from time to time fall into one or another of the springs and masked batteries, throw down the volume in a rage, and curse the author for a confused adolescent, an Ezra Pound in Wolfe's clothing, a shocking snob, or a beligerent mystic posing with a purple pencil on the Left Bank of Fortune. Part of the greatness and unique quality of 'Let Us Now Praise Famous Men,' then, is its structural failure, its over-all failure as the 'work of art' it does not aim or presume to be and which from moment to moment it is. . . . 'Let Us Now Praise Famous Men' will be spat upon—and years hence (unless the country is given over to the fascists or the faith-healers of 'far away' democracy) read." Selden Rodman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Ag 23 '41 1250w

Social Studies 32:378 D '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 550w

"As a book, this is the most distinguished failure of the season. . . . Agee's bad manners, exhibitionism and verbosity are a sort of author's curse at his own foredoomed failure to convey all he feels. . . . At his self-forgetful best, Agee has a delicacy and power that make the total effect of the book overwhelming. Even his most myopic descriptions are a poet's."

+ Time 38:104 O 13 '41 600w

AGG, THOMAS RADFORD. The construction of roads and pavements. 5th ed 483p il $4 (26s) McGraw

625.7 Roads, Pavements 40-27128

"Rewriting, rearrangement, and a fair amount of new material bring this textbook up to date." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1916. Index.

Booklist 36:286 Mr 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:53 O '40

AGHION, RAOUL. War in the desert; the battle for Africa. 300p il maps $2.75 Holt

961 Africa, North—History. World war, 1939—Campaigns and battles—Africa (W) 41-51841

"Treats the historic battles of the Sahara as keys to the present conflict, just as Lawrence used the pattern of ancient conquest in planning his Arabian campaigns. Excellent description of early tribal invasions of the Nile region, the wars of the Pharaohs, the Crusades, the Moslem conquest, Napoleonic Wars, and others, including the campaigns in progress during April, 1941." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson

Ann Am Acad 218:200 N '41 500w

Booklist 37:543 J1 15 '41

"M. Aglion's book is unpretentious; it is not, I think, free of inaccuracy; it covers only cursorily an essentially enormous ground. But it makes the strange war in the desert much more intelligible in its politics, its strategy and its tactics, and manages to convey not a little of its epic quality." Walter Mills

+ Books p3 Je 29 '41 850w

"The book belies its title, as it devotes more space to other factors entering into the complicated picture of past and present affairs in the Near East, than it does to desert warfare. This fact, however, in no way renders it uninteresting reading." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 16 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:198 O '41 60w

"Because of its compelling interest and scholarly bibliography, its value should long outlive the emergency for which it is written, with its timely plea for aid to Britain. Would be valued by those interested in the philosophy of history who enjoy tracing the geographic influence on the interplay of war and politics."

D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 110w

"As a picture of the theater of the Middle Eastern war this book is good. As a collection of stirring episodes it is even better. As a criticism of British diplomacy it is far too easy on Mr. Eden and his predecessors in the Foreign Office. For this M. Aglion must be excused; this is war time, and the buttons on his Free French uniform are British." Peter Stevens

+ Nation 153:76 J1 26 '41 1000w

Reviewed by A. M. Nikolaieff

N Y Times p4 Ag 3 '41 650w

"A readable job by an expert in this field."

+ New Yorker 17:56 J1 5 '41 50w

AGHION, RAOUL—Continued

"One of the most interesting and valuable books which have come out of this war."
Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 JI 12 '41 650w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 11 '41 240w

AGLION, RAOUL. See Aghion, R.

AGNEW, HUGH ELMER, and HOUGHTON, DALE. Marketing policies. 615p il maps $4 McGraw

658.8 Marketing 41-4465

"Omitting such topics as advertising and sales management, well covered in other books, the author approaches the study of marketing from the qualitative rather than the quantitative angle, and in a widely inclusive treatise includes some material usually found only in magazine articles. Three campaigns are analyzed in detail." (Booklist) Index.

"The authors must be challenged on several scores. The statement that 'this book literally starts about where most books on the general subject of marketing leave off' is hardly justified. The direct statements and indirect implications that marketing policies have not been treated in general books in marketing cannot be substantiated. . . . The authors also imply that the study of what makes prices, with a view of evolving price theory or principles, belongs entirely to the realm of 'economics' rather than marketing. Few marketing authorities would subscribe to such views. . . . Despite such shortcomings and limitations, 'Marketing Policies,' will, no doubt, tend to focus more attention on the matter of policies. It supplies detailed information on certain phases of marketing which have heretofore been lacking. In a limited way, it also presents relatively new subjects for discussion, such as those embodied in chapter XIII, on continuing services." T. N. Beckman

+ — Am Econ R 31:904 D '41 600w

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

"The study is a distinct contribution to the literature of distribution. Each common problem of marketing has been handled in a separate chapter. The analyses which are presented are thus in particularly useful form. . . . Although the relation of sales management and taxation, among other subjects, deserves more thorough treatment than has been given it, the book offers an excellent starting point for the individual with general business background who requires knowledge of current marketing practices." Albert Haring

+ Management R 30:194 My '41 500w

AHERN, ELEANOR. The way we wash our clothes. 140p il $2 Barrows

648.1 Laundry (W) 41-12291

Practical instruction for the home laundress, with information on the how and why of washing various materials. Partial contents: Washing, yesterday and today; Soaps and other washing agents; Fibers and fabrics; Laundering fine fabrics; Stain removal; Ironing the weekly wash; Laundry equipment and planning. Index.

Booklist 38:30 O 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 JI '41

J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 50w

Pratt p14 D '41

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. And in the human heart. 87p $1.50 Duell

811 40-35395

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Booklist 37:289 Mr 1 '41

"Any similarity between the poems and reality is purely coincidental: they are produced by the extravagantly emotional, rhetorical and sentimental manipulation of the beautiful objects of an imaginary universe. But if they are empty, they are still beautifully able. Are there any finger-exercises by Liszt? They would be like these poems." Randall Jarrell

— + New Repub 104:221 F 17 '41 600w

"Mr. Aiken is a modern and minor Shakespeare in love, an admirable writer. . . . But though we fall for it, nobody will whistle to it; the sonnet is not in Mr. Aiken's vein, it is not his music. No writer, I agree, is doing it better, not even Miss Millay; but Mr. Aiken ordinarily writes more expansive emotion and in a freer technique." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p18 F 9 '41 90w

AIR YOUTH OF AMERICA. Building and flying model airplanes; an Air youth handbook [foreword by George W. Lewis]. 246p il $2 Appleton-Century

629.13 Airplane models (W) 41-51587

"A handbook [designed to] outline in a simple, practical manner the steps by which a sound introduction might be gained to the fascinating sport of building and flying model airplanes. . . . Emphasis has been placed upon the value of mastering fundamentals through the building of a series of elementary models typified by the first five Air Youth projects, and basic building operations are stressed. The material on the testing of models in flight and on the weather as it affects both building and flying, has not been covered in this manner elsewhere." (Acknowledgments) Glossary of terms. Indexes.

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:160 O '41

AIR YOUTH OF AMERICA. Youth in aviation; an Air youth manual for leaders [foreword by Luther Gulick]. 265p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

629.13 Airplane models (W) 41-51770

"This book, like the other Air Youth handbooks, has been prepared to meet a specific need. In all the literature dealing with youth activities in aviation, no book has been designed directly to meet the needs of the group leader or instructor. It is the purpose of this volume to serve this need. The preparation of this material has been the result of a collaboration on the part of the Air Youth staff with qualified persons in the various fields touched upon. The volume contains two hundred review questions, a list of recent books on aviation of interest to youth, and a glossary of terms." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:35 JI '41

AKINS, ZOE (MRS HUGO RUMBOLD). Forever young. 324p $2.50 Scribner

41-7324

Ruth Nesbit was the youngest girl in the school when she entered Huntly in 1900. Forty years later on the receipt of an invitation to the school's centennial, Ruth reviews her first year at school, remembering the stern but understanding principal, Miss Penwise; the exquisite Mlle de Thal, who taught French and German; Richard Stockton, the famous sculptor who came to make a portrait of Miss Penwise, and stayed to fall in love with Mlle de Thal; Minnette Kerby, forced on the school by a wealthy benefactor, and the havoc she wrought; and the part which Ruth herself played in saving the school from disgrace.

"The characters move through [the book] like the dim, romantic figures of a dated novel. They seem remote and quaint, not because they are creatures of an earlier generation, but because they are not alive. Their emotions and thoughts are so completely the conventional ones of their period that there is nothing to make them understandable as people. Miss Akins has given them a charming background in the formal old school with its wise headmistress, but they remain so inactive against their background that the picture is static." Anne Brooks

+ — Books p8 Ap 27 '41 500w

"The novel is very well written, sensitive, intelligent and mature, true to its period in spirit as well as in detail, but the best thing in it is the delineation of Ruth's own character. Loving beauty, she nevertheless realizes that she learned more from 'the ugliness she had discovered in the small world of Huntly' than from its many beauties; deeply honest, she questions her own sincerity, affected by her inherent romanticism; her appraisal of herself and her own reactions is an unusually capable study in psychology." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 27 '41 850w

"Miss Akins doesn't bother much with her background; as a result, it, like the crisis, seems slightly unreal."

New Yorker 17:86 My 3 '41 70w

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 10 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

ALBJERG, MRS ESTHER MARGUERITE (HALL), and KNIGHT, FREDERIC BUTTERFIELD. We, the guardians of our liberty. 194p il $1.20 Beckley-Cardy

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history. U.S. Constitution—Amendments 41-2630

Discussion of the American Bill of rights, which goes back to Magna Carta, and traces its history to the present. Grades six to eight. Index.

Booklist 37:328 Mr 15 '41

School & Society 52:344 O 12 '40 10w

ALBRIGHT, WILLIAM FOXWELL. From the stone age to Christianity: monotheism and the historical process. 363p $2.50 Johns Hopkins

291.14 Monotheism. Religion, Primitive. History—Philosophy 40-35257

"In this book the sometime Director of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem attempts to survey the development of man's idea of God and to relate it to its historical background." Commonweal

"It is an impressive range of scholarship through which Professor Albright moves with confidence. And his position is presented with the vigor and independence of thinking for which he is well known. Whether or not one is convinced of its major thesis, the book is an important contribution to the theological literature of today." W. A. Irwin

+ Christian Century 58:322 Mr 5 '41 800w

"On the whole, compared to many other modern scholars, Dr. Albright's conclusions are distinctly on the conservative side. It should be said emphatically, however, the author never writes as a traditionalist but always as the scholar." L. W. Batten

+ Churchman 155:20 Ja 1 '41 240w

Reviewed by T. M. Avery, Jr.

Commonweal 33:235 D 20 '40 650w

"An extremely compact, well-ordered compendium of personal reactions on the findings of archaeology, anthropology, prehistory, history, sociology, philosophy, and kindred studies during recent decades." L. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 18:246 Jl '41 2600w

Reviewed by W. A. Irwin

+ — J Religion 21:318 Jl '41 850w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD. Life for life's sake; a book of reminiscences. 411p $3 Viking

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-51501

Reminiscences of an English poet, essayist and novelist covering his childhood and youth, his services in the Great war, his years of travel in Europe and his literary achievements. The volume ends with his first visit to the United States in 1935 and his reasons for determining a few years later to make America his home.

Booklist 37:240 F 1 '41

Bookmark 2:11 Mr '41

"There is more in 'Life for Life's Sake' than literary history. To begin with, Aldington gives a detailed account of his own professional career which ought to be of keen interest to all writers and journalists who prize independence.

... To the general reader, however, the book's chief interest will lie in its power to recapture and revitalize that vanished world of Europe before 1914, the equally vanished optimism of 1918 and the growing disillusionments of the late '20s and the entire '30s." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 Ja 12 '41 700w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 460w

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 15 '41 160w

"Richard Aldington has never come as near to doing justice to the largeness of his nature or the vigor of his personality as he does in these lively pages. Clearly the man is bigger than his novels." Richard McLaughlin

+ Commonweal 33:499 Mr 7 '41 280w

Current Hist & Forum 52:60 Mr '41 150w

Reviewed by Dorothy Van Doren

Nation 152:134 F 1 '41 700w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

New Repub 104:672 My 12 '41 650w

"After all, Mr. Aldington is not writing an autobiography. His book is plainly labeled 'A Book of Reminiscences' and that is what it is in the best sense of the word. He remembers clearly and he sets down with precision what he has seen. There are times when one may read with clarity between the lines and there are other moments when the ghosts of passion seem to stir somewhat murkily behind reticent paragraphs." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 12 '41 1500w

"Except for the first World War, the major events in Mr. Aldington's life would seem to have been of a literary and artistic nature. In any case, he is most interesting when talking about Imagism and Ezra Pound and Yeats and Norman Douglas and particularly D. H. Lawrence. It's good gossip, touched occasionally with a perfectly acceptable malice, and any future historian, wishing to find out how a typical literary man lived during the period just before 1914 and during the interregnum from 1918 to the present, will find Mr. Aldington's memoirs useful." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:62 Ja 11 '41 440w

Pratt p4 spring '41

Reviewed by George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ja 11 '41 900w

Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

ALDINGTON, RICHARD, ed. The Viking book of poetry of the English-speaking world. 1272p $3.50 Viking

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections (W) 41-17652

Anthology of English poetry, containing nearly 1300 poems, by some 300 known authors, and a considerable number of anonymous authors. The time range is from A. D. 600-800, to about 1914; the arrangement is chronological. Of the poets quoted 53 were born since 1875; 24 of these are American, 22 English, five Irish, and one each is from

ALDINGTON, RICHARD—Continued
Canada, and South Africa. Bibliography. Indexes of poets and of first lines.

"The idiosyncrasies that make the book unsuitable as a school or college text should the more endear it, by reason of its controversial possibilities, to the connoisseur of anthologies. Here is one that will never have the smell of chalk on it, and will therefore be the more welcome on the casual shelf." R. S. Hillyer

+ — Atlantic N '41 450w

Booklist 38:48 O 15 '41

Bookmark 2:9 N '41

"Mr. Aldington has genuinely renewed our poetic heritage by the individuality of his selections, and certainly no previous anthologist has more generously interpreted in a one-volume collection the meaning and nature of English poetry. He has not limited his field to the supreme heights of lyric expression, but has included many snatches from narrative and dramatic poetry and a considerable body of humorous and satiric verse. . . . No doubt the book he has put together as the fruit of many years of professional reading will not satisfy every taste, but in spite of all shortcomings that may be pointed out the 'Viking Book of Poetry' is a bold and notable achievement. It may well turn out to be for the mid-twentieth century a favorite collection holding a place equivalent to that held by 'The Golden Treasury' in the latter nineteenth century or 'The Oxford Book of English Verse' in early 1900's." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p5 O 12 '41 1600w

"Doubtless the omission is quite unintentional, but in point of fact Mr. Aldington has not been quite fair to the modern Catholic contribution. His serio-comic quotations from Chesterton are amusing but show a very small side of that fine and trenchant poet. He includes nothing whatever from Louise Imogen Guiney, Father Tabb, Charles O'Donnell, Sister Madeleva or Joyce and Aline Kilmer—although space has been found for some highly debatable contemporary experimentalists. There is much to admire in this Viking anthology, but such omissions as these, together with the rather cavalier treatment of Colum, Masefield, Millay and Eleanor Wylie, and the somewhat superfluous generosity toward Landor and Peacock, certainly push it toward the personal rather than the general category." Katherine Brégy

+ — Cath World 154:369 D '41 460w

"An excellent new anthology." Pearl Strachan
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '41 550w

"The volume is a masterly achievement." James van Zant

+ Churchman 155:18 N 1 '41 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"The 'Viking Book of Poetry' is a major disappointment. The editor has planned a 'general, popular and esthetic' compilation but only on the second count has the book been a success. . . . As a volume, the 'Viking Book' is well planned, indexed and arranged, and, despite its bulk, easy to hold and read. The foreword by Aldington makes some good points, even though not always sustained in the selections, and the bibliography is admirable." Tom Boggs

+ Commonweal 35:225 D 19 '41 430w

"Yes, it is a good anthology, a very good one indeed." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 153:337 O 11 '41 1450w

"Mr. Aldington's project was, for our time, new and exciting. It has been forty years or more since anthologists have seriously tried to present the poetry of the English-speaking world. Since then, two separate tendencies have limited the scope of their activities. English and American poetry were growing farther apart, so that they could no longer be judged by the same standards; critics preferred to treat them in separate volumes. . . . [But] he has taken advantage of his opportunity only in part, and timidly. He has of course edited what by conventional standards is an excellent anthology. It is more comprehensive and more in the taste of our time than 'The Oxford Book of English Verse,' which has lately been revised without being greatly improved. It covers a broader field in space and time and pays more attention to minor poets than does 'An Oxford Anthology of English Poetry,' although it is less complete and judicious in its treatment of the major figures. It is clearly superior to the other recent anthologies that are now on my shelves. . . . But I feel . . . that Mr. Aldington has presented the poetry of the English-speaking world as something poorer and more remote than it is in reality. Perhaps what is largely at fault is his quite un-English liking for clarity, logic and le bon sens. This ought to be a wise prejudice for anthologists, and yet it leads him to neglect some of the more fruitful tendencies in English poetry." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:377 S 22 '41 1500w

"The Viking Book of Poetry of the English Speaking World' is, at least in the purely English section, a noteworthy book; Richard Aldington is comprehensive and, in spite of a few lapses, discriminating, and the anthology he has made stands out from others in a special way. He has restored a type of English poetry that other anthologists were inclined to leave out—the satiric, the fantastic, the bawdy. . . . He is uncertain when he comes to modern poetry, and a poor selector of American and Irish poetry. There is not much judgment shown in his choice of American poetry." M. M. Colum

+ — N Y Times p5 N 30 '41 550w

"Aldington has done a workmanlike job. He has used practical methods and achieved practical results. His anthology, up to the modern section, is remarkably complete, the list of unforgivable omissions is not long, and he has included little rubbish. His chief faults are a certain lack of taste and an opacity to the underlying currents of a period. These drawbacks come out clearly in his Victorian and modern choices. He is competent, but generally misses the heart of the matter. As for being 'completely new,' Aldington's anthology and the control volumes, up to the point of dealing with modern times, agree in all important respects." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 17:94 O 18 '41 950w

"The poems have been chosen by a distinguished English man-of-letters with a considerable reputation as a poet in his own right. Mr. Aldington's is a popular anthology, but embellished by choices that only a man of ripe taste could have made. With his introductory letter to his publisher this reviewer finds himself in delighted agreement—in the matter of the Augustans, with respect to Shelley and Wordsworth and Kit Smart—in fact, throughout. . . . But it would seem that Emily Dickinson's strange love story had too far influenced Mr. Aldington's choices from her, and we ourselves should have chosen otherwise from William Morris. . . . A facile poet like Frederic Prokosch is accorded two pages, and Louis MacNeice, a far better modern poet, allowed but a single slight lyric. On the other hand, a poem by a little-known modern Irishman, by the prosaic name of Dobbs, is a genuine discovery. These criticisms are of the kind, however, to be accorded any anthology. In general, Mr. Aldington's is a superior achievement." W. R. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:11 S 20 '41 460w

"This is a very big book. This is a very small book. It is disappointing."

— Spring'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 420w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:700 D '41 160w

Time 38:103 D 8 '41 220w

ALDIS, HARRY GIDNEY. The printed book; the 2d ed, rev. and brought up to date by John Carter and E. A. Crutchley. 141p pl $1.50 Macmillan [5s Cambridge]

655 Books, Printing—History 41-51797

"The historical portions remain almost unchanged; other parts have been rewritten or revised in view of modern technique and theory." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1917. Index.

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

"In appraising it today we must not forget how little surveying and competent summarizing had been done when Mr. Aldis first wrote his 'Printed Book.' There was no Updike, no Morrison, no Dolphin No.III before him. In its present new edition the book is up against the heavy competition of these and other well-established histories and surveys. It is well fortified to hold its own by the initial competence of its writing, by the intelligent revisions of Carter and Crutchley and, last but not least, by its attractive price." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt

+ Publishers' Weekly 140:48 Jl 5 '41 140w

"There is no other pocket manual of the history of book production that covers the same ground or covers it so adequately as this. By the use of a smaller type and a closer setting the enlarged edition actually runs to fewer pages than its predecessor, and its more suitable format makes it fit more easily into the pocket. The revisers have pieced their new material so cleverly into the old fabric that not the keenest eye will detect the joins without comparing the two editions. Much that was personal and rather obscurantist in the old edition has been replaced by material more closely in accord with the modern standpoint, and this does not apply exclusively to the more recent history of book production, though, naturally, emendation and revision have been more necessary here."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p120 Mr 8 '41 150w

ALDRICH, MRS BESS (STREETER). Drum goes dead. 39p $1 Appleton-Century

(W) 41-22352

A bank cashier in a Midwestern town finds that he has lost faith in Christmas. In making a desperate attempt to recapture his faith he awakens the whole town to a sense of their responsibilities.

"The inspired common sense that has always kept Mrs. Aldrich's sentiment from bogging down gives a turn to this Christmas story of a man in a Mid-Western small town that will keep it alive long past this holiday season." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 D 14 '41 140w

"A simple and heart-warming Christmas story."

+ Christian Century 58:1580 D 17 '41 60w

"This should be a good prescription for incipient Scrooges." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p25 D 14 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:181 N '41

ALDRICH, CHARLES ANDERSON, and ALDRICH, MRS MARY M. Feeding our old fashioned children; a background for modern mealtimes [phot. by Frank F. Selfridge]. 112p $1.75 Macmillan

649.3 Children—Nutrition (W) 41-5006

This book, a companion volume to the authors' Babies are Human Beings (Book Review Digest, 1938) contains advice addressed particularly to those whose children show loss of appetite or feeding difficulties. The thesis is that the cause of such troubles is often psychological and that the attempt should be made to understand the child himself, his rhythms and natural desires, and to fit the feeding routine and menu to the individual. Index.

"This book can be recommended unreservedly to all thoughtful parents for reading and re-reading." M. E. Champion

+ Am J Pub Health 31:842 Ag '41 110w

Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

"Like the original, this readable 'background for modern mealtimes' is a common-sense discussion of the lack of appetite so frequently seen in children of prosperous families, with emphasis on the fact that too much interference by parents is often a principal cause. There are sensible, practical suggestions about how to compromise between allowing full play to the child's instinctive reactions to his food and the overstrict adherence to a dietary regimen."

+ J Home Econ 33:410 Je '41 130w

Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

ALDRICH, MRS CLARA CHAPLINE (THOMAS). See Aldrich, D.

ALDRICH, DARRAGH, pseud. (MRS CLARA CHAPLINE [THOMAS] ALDRICH). Some trails never end. 282p $2 Kinsey

"Sandy was a fine young man and deserved better of life than that his business partner and his wife should get together in most intimate circumstances behind his back. He was so upset when he walked in on them that he wanted to disappear from the world, and when he happened to see a man commit suicide he dropped his identity onto the dead man, who was conveniently damaged beyond recognition, and tried to start a fresh life for himself. The girl who befriended him, and other friends, stood by him nobly when he was accused of murdering his former self." N Y Times

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 28 '41 140w

"Sandy's adventures make an exciting if somewhat implausible story, but who cares about the probabilities when the suspense holds up?" Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 N 16 '41 150w

"The evident motif of the book is to show that an honest courage is better in facing a disheartening situation than any amount of camouflaging. The book borders on being a murder mystery story with a side thrill in the discovery of a large patch of marihuana in the wilderness, cultivated by a half-breed Indian."

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 120w

ALDRICH, ELLA VIRGINIA. Using books and libraries. 86p il pa 75c Prentice-Hall

020.7 Library science. Reference books

(W) 40-31401

"This manual was originally written for the freshman course in library use at Louisiana State University. . . . An effort was made, first of all, to prepare it within the vocabulary range of the average freshman, and then to make it readable and in places entertaining." (Foreword) Partial contents: Classification and arrangement of books; The card catalog; Indexes; Dictionaries; Encyclopedias; Yearbooks; History and the social sciences; Biographical dictionaries; Literature; Making a bibliography. Index.

"A readable, entertaining text." M. A. Gel-fand

+ Library J 65:801 O 1 '40 170w

"The author of this very convenient manual has succeeded in making lessons on the use of the library interesting. The arrangement of topics follows the more or less standardized units commonly incorporated into such outlines, but this manual is distinctive because of its readability and the inclusion of cartoon-like illustrations. . . . The manual is well adapted to instructional purposes, even to the extent of containing detachable work sheets, and it is an important addition to the literature on the use of books and libraries." L. E. Reed

+ Library Q 11:219 Ap '41 1000w

Pratt p5 spring '41

ALEGRIA, CIRO. Broad and alien is the world; tr. from the Spanish by Harriet de Onís. 434p $2.75 Farrar

(W) 41-22353

This is the story of the life and ultimate destruction of a small Indian village high up in the Peruvian mountains. For centuries the inhabitants had lived there, peacefully, co-operatively; and then a greedy rancher from the lowlands casts covetous eyes on the village and its doom is sealed.

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"If you choose, you may see in this novel an epitome of the divisions of our age. What makes it so satisfying, however, is not symbolism, but fullness, authenticity, compassion. Sailing down a broad river of narrative, the author finds excuse again and again for turning down by-streams for fanciful legends or bizarre local characters. Rich and strange, the material almost always justifies itself." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p6 N 9 '41 950w

"All in all, the story is impressively dramatic, reasonably convincing; it stirs the reader both to pity and to anger. More than that it is not easy to say without a personal knowledge of Indian life in the mountains of Peru." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:369 D '41 500w

"Story and thesis do not get in each other's way, but the overwhelming regional knowledge of the author considerably retards the flow. The abundance of songs, fables, fairy tales, and legends in the novel gives it a folksy tang which sustains it and makes it a memorable introduction to Peru and the Indians, who await a new Rosendo Maqui to liberate them from their superstitions and their economic oppression." M. J. Benardete

+ Nation 153:542 N 29 '41 900w

"The narrative is both easy and intricate. The dozen stories of various village characters are sharply focused in themselves, yet they melt into the total life of the community, which is everything. . . . The translation reads easily if a trifle on the modern side. . . . But one reads this as easily as the next American novel. It is not enough to say that this is the novel through which every reader will understand something fundamental in South American life, though that is true and important; it is a fine work of the imagination." F. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p1 N 16 '41 1000w

"I suppose it's a class-warfare novel, but it is very different from the mechanical mintings of our own early nineteen-thirties. There is more poetry than dogma in it, a poetry rather akin to that of 'Growth of the Soil.' Señor Alegria knows everything there is to know about the life of his Indian farmers but he does not yet know how to fashion and carve this life into a clear narrative." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:108 N 15 '41 200w

ALESSIOS, MRS ALISON J. (BAIGRIE). The spear of Ulysses; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 214p $1.75 Longmans

(W) 41-14043

Pavlo and Lambro, two Greek boys, living on the island of Ithaca in the Ionian Sea, want to find a lost spearhead, reputed to be part of the treasure of Ulysses. In their travels they see many aspects of modern Greek life: the festival of Holy Week; currant picking on the island of Zante; the life of the fishermen and the peasants. Finally they find a spear, which may or may not be the one they are seeking, and it is deposited in the museum at Athens. For boys and girls nine to twelve.

"Timeliness attaches to this story, bringing out landscapes, people and events in crystal clearness. Though there is nothing in it about war, the war has caught up with it; its localities are in the headlines. . . . It is a lively, lifelike story of boy life on the isles of Greece as it was but a few short months ago, which means as it had been for a long, long time." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 27 '41 320w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 30w

"An accurate knowledge of archaeology gives this story of a modern Greek boy a sound connection with classical Greece that keeps alive the ancient tales from history. . . . We have few stories of modern Greece and this is a real addition to their number." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:358 S '41 80w

"The story seems slow-moving and may not have a wide appeal; however, in the light of world happenings, this book might well be used with Greek Journey, by Lincoln MacVeagh [Book Review Digest, 1937] in presenting modern Greece. Not necessarily a first purchase." E. A. Groves

Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 10w

"This story of modern Greece, told with a quiet charm, gains in significance from the times, for though there is nothing in the book about the war, the place names are those we have read in the headlines, and the author has preserved in her pages a picture of the peaceful life of simple country folk as it existed before the horror of the recent campaigns. . . . The type is delightfully clear and easy to read, the spirited line drawings are made by an artist familiar with the country, and the appearance of the book, though simple and unpretentious, is very pleasing. For boys and girls 9 to 12." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '41 550w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 60w

ALEXANDER, EDWIN P. Iron horses; American locomotives, 1829-1900. 239p il $5 Norton 621.13 Locomotives 41-25857

After a short preliminary chapter outlining the development of the railroad engine from a steam carriage operated on the streets of Paris in 1769, to an engine of the year 1849 which made the run between Utica and Schenectady in thirteen minutes, the remainder of the book is made up of full page pictures of representative locomotives in chronological order from 1829 to 1900, with explanatory captions. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"Despite the cliché implicit in its title, 'Iron Horses' is a book which every railroad historian, enthusiast and student of the legend of the high iron in America will want to have on his shelves. The principal virtues of the volume are its handsome format, judicious selection of representative material and the apparent reliability of its captions and reference material. Its deficiencies lie in its arbitrary and unexplained period coverage and its something less than abundance of editorial material." Lucius Beebe

+ — Books p2 D 14 '41 500w

"This comprehensive record of the development of locomotives from the earliest primitive machines to the imposing engines of today is sure of an enthusiastic reception. Boys and men, everywhere, will find it absorbing." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:41 Jq '42 130w

"With the advent of electrification and the Diesel-engined streamliners the young generation is likely to wonder what manner of locomotives so excited their forebears. Mr. Alexander's book will answer this question in a most satisfactory manner, and the older folk will thank him too for bringing to mind the choo-choos of yesteryear." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p5 N 9 '41 420w

"Iron Horses" is more than a mere collector's piece; it is a continuous picture story which, besides outlining the technical and economic development of the locomotive, carries the suggestion of events and the color of succeeding eras. . . Mr. Alexander has filled out his collection with drawings of his own of the earlier engines of which contemporary prints are unsatisfactory. . . The text is purposely slight, consisting, except for some twenty pages of introductory historical outline, of extended captions facing the plates. These descriptions are surprisingly comprehensive considering their brevity." Roger Burlingame

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ja 10 '42 500w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 27 '41 550w

ALEXANDER, FREDERICK MATTHIAS. Universal constant in living; with an appreciation by G. E. Coghill. 270p $2.50 Dutton

131 Mind and body. Self 41-19162

"Concerned with the nature of human reaction in its bearing upon individual and mass activity, this volume on 'the true integration of human behavior' should be of interest to the lay public as well as to those in the field of education." (School & Society) Index.

"To those who are interested in the possibilities of a new and more effective education, I heartily recommend this latest and, in many ways, most enlightening of Mr. Alexander's books. In 'The Universal Constant in Living' they will find, along with a mass of interesting facts, the ripest wisdom of a man who, setting out fifty years ago to discover a method for restoring his lost voice, has come, by the oldest of indirect roads, to be a quite uniquely important, because uniquely practical, philosopher, educator and physiologist." Aldous Huxley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 O 25 '41 2250w

School & Society 54:311 O 11 '41 50w

ALEXANDER, IRENE. Revenge can wait. 265p $2 Putnam

Mystery story.

41-10675

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"Adequate detection, human characters, quiet fun and general entertainment for your money." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Ag 17 '41 100w

"Violence, humor, romance and melodrama have been blended in a delightfully grisly brew." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p12 J1 27 '41 200w

ALEXANDER, SIDNEY. Man on the queue [poetry]. 160p $1.50; pa 75c Press of James A. Decker

811 Radio plays

A first book of poems "consisting of some thirty poems and two verse-plays for radio. . . One of these, Where Jonathan Came, clothes in modernity the men and women of old Salem. . . The Hawk and the Flesh is a psychological dramatization of the Spanish Civil War centering around the brother-against-brother theme." (Poetry)

"Notable for its original and timely material, its drive and direction, the weakness in this first book of poems lies mainly in the fact that Sidney Alexander's voice, as poet, is not yet his own. He tends to follow those who 'speak through an elaborate literary text, elaborately.'" Ruth Lechlitter

+ Books p13 O 12 '41 260w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

Poetry 59:221 Ja '42 500w

ALFRIEND, MRS MARY BETHELL. Juan Ortiz: gentleman of Seville; a novel. 289p maps $2 Chapman & Grimes

Ortiz, Juan—Fiction

41-7293

Of the chief character in this novel one incident is recorded in history, otherwise the tale is fiction based on the author's knowledge of the times and on research. The story reconstructs the life history of a Spaniard, Juan Ortiz, a survivor of an earlier expedition who had lived for ten years among the Florida Indians when he was rescued by De Soto. He joined De Soto's force as interpreter and guide, suffered hardships and frustration out of loyalty to the leader, and died without ever returning to his home land.

"One of the minor but colorful figures in the early history of American exploration stands out vividly in this romance by the author of 'San Luis of Apalache.' . . The known facts of Juan Ortiz' life have been adroitly fused with fancy." Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 Ap 20 '41 80w

"Fictional biography may indeed be interesting, and the author's characters, whether in Spain or in the New World, well drawn, but we prefer total history or total fiction. We did not relish, moreover, the ultra-realistic scenes which vividly portray the immorality of De Soto and Ortiz in both thought and deed. There is such a thing as being fair to the dead."

Cath World 153:508 J1 '41 200w

ALL Gaul is divided. . . ; letters from occupied France; with a foreword by Elizabeth Morrow. 94p $1 Greystone

940.548 World war, 1939—France. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, French. France—History—German occupation, 1940- (W) 41-51647

Translation of a collection of some sixteen letters, evidently smuggled across the border, from a family living in the French occupied zone. They give a picture of what has happened to French money, food, and industry, and what is happening to French morale.

"The letters are a voice worthy of France at its best, intelligent, lively, balanced, informative. The picture is necessarily one of bleak deprivation, material and spiritual; but there is a noteworthy absence of hysteria and exaggeration." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '41 150w

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

Reviewed by Janet Flanner

Books p4 Mr 16 '41 1000w

"The quality of the letters is France at its best: high-spirited, resourceful, witty, intelligent." W. H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 8 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:878 J1 '41 20w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis

New Repub 104:445 Mr 31 '41 60w

"It is not present suffering which makes this probably the saddest book that has come out of the war: it is the deliberate destruction of future hope. The crushing burden which these courageous but candid letters lay upon the heart of the reader is not in the disclosure of physical pain or personal loss; it is in the picture of a country being minutely looted and impoverished, systematically and thoroughly sapped of strength, and intellectually and spiritually first starved and then poisoned—and that the country which has led the civilization of the world for a thousand years." K. W.

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 2 '41 700w

"A good job, though the translation is full of odd little gaffes."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Mr 1 '41 70w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

ALL Gaul is divided—Continued

"The letters are obviously entirely genuine, though they contain one or two slightly doubtful hearsay anecdotes, and they give an excellent cross-section impression of French life as it was changed or refused to change after the first shock of the German impact."

+ Spec 167:116 Ag 1 '41 160w

"Since we have so little authentic information from France, it is worth while to stress the serious limitations on the evidential value of this book. But it has real value, real interest, especially for its account of life in Paris and its revelation of the bewilderment of the French people."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p342 J1 19 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

ALLEE, MARJORIE (HILL) (MRS W. C. ALLEE). The camp at Westlands; il. by Erick Berry. 242p $2 Houghton

(W) 41-5680

Story for older girls about a summer work camp in a Pennsylvania mining community, where a young college girl of wealthy family learns to work with her hands and likes it.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"This book helps more than one kind of reader: it will be [passed on] from one reader to another, and do good along its path." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 My 11 '41 360w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:213 My '41 130w

"There is good character development, although too many people make for sketchiness in the middle of the story. This, however, strengthens the indication that group living makes one lose sight of personal interests, often to find them better clarified in the end. A good addition to career and 'personality' stories. Most readers will feel a need of further development of the implied romance." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 160w

"As in her other novels of contemporary life, Mrs. Allee has given an insight into some significant questions of the day, in a story of lively and likable young people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

ALLEN, EDWARD, and KELLEY, FRANCIS BEVERLY. Fun by the ton. 116p il $2.50 Hastings house

791.3 Circus, Elephants

An intimate story of the life of the circus elephant, including many anecdotes culled from American circus history of the last sixty years.

Booklist 38:127 D 15 '41

Spring'd Republican p7e D 28 '41

ALLEN, HENRY JUSTIN. Venezuela: a democracy. 289p il map $3.50 Doubleday

987 Venezuela (W) 40-34399

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Venezuela: A Democracy, hardly merits the publisher's jacket comment of being 'a complete and authoritative book on the country, its history, and its people.' The coverage is broad but superficial." S. G. Hanson

+ Ann Am Acad 214:231 Mr '41 500w

"The experienced reader will take the overstatements at their real value, yet find this well-written travel book a key to precious information." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 33:428 F 14 '41 280w

Foreign Affairs 19:689 Ap '41 20w

Reviewed by W. R. Sharp

Survey G 30:298 My '41 230w

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Western star; a story of Jim Bridger [il. by Henry Pitz]. 186p $2 Longmans

Bridger, James—Juvenile literature 41-51887

Fictionized biography of Jim Bridger, the second white man to see the Yellowstone. It gives as background considerable history of the West when it was full of wild beasts and Indians. For boys and girls of ten to thirteen.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"I read two adult 'Westerns' this week to keep up on my home-work and see how they stood in comparison with juveniles. Judging by those, and by this, the boys have the best of it: their books are more convincing, better written and more grown-up." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 16 '41 360w

"Background, biography, geography, and adventure are so interwoven with a swift moving plot that the reader scarcely draws a deep breath. Jim Bridger stands out as a very real boy and develops into the great mountaineer as the story progresses. The roughness and cruelty of the pioneer life, and the heroism that persevered in spite of them, are well portrayed. The illustrations by Henry Pitz fit the spirit of the book. This [is a] well-written and interesting story." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 100w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 10w

"The tale is of absorbing interest, full of excitement and dangers."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 50w

ALLEN, WILLIAM EDWARD DAVID. The Ukraine; a history. 404p maps $4.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

947.7 Ukraine—History [A41-521]

"The Ukraine as the name implies, is a border land. Its limits have been fluctuating and uncertain. Somewhat similarly during the last thousand years its inhabitants have wavered uneasily between the independence of Kiev Russia and the pressure of the steppe-nomads, and between rule by Lithuania, Poland, Muscovy, Russia, or Austria-Hungary. Politically divided, they remained solidly orthodox by religion, with the important exception of Eastern Galicia since the creation of the Uniat Church in 1596. The fortunes of this border-land before the end of the sixteenth century are sketched very briefly by Mr. Allen, and he devotes much the greater part of his four hundred pages to the Ukrainian-Cossack struggle with Poland and Muscovy in the seventeenth century and then to the new Ukrainian nationalism of the last hundred years and the Ukrainian problem since 1917." Spec

"This book is a good specimen of scholarship having uneven values. It is not based on source material, but is grounded on the best published works in several languages. The author seems to emulate the fine examples set by the scholarly chapters of the Cambridge Histories, but his inadequate knowledge of the subject betrays immaturity in the general field of history; and his burdensome style makes difficult reading. A comparison of this work with that of Hrushevsky's in translation will readily convince the reader on this point. But it is hardly fair to compare the work of one who is rather new in the field with that of a master who has labored throughout his long life on the history of his people. Altogether, Mr. Allen has produced a good work and has become somewhat a pioneer in the field of eastern European history." A. O. Sarkissian

+ — Ann Am Acad 219:177 Ja '42 600w

Reviewed by J. E. Williams

Christian Science Monitor p18 J1 15 '41 650w

"An enormous mass of information, almost exclusively political and social in content, is summarized concisely and objectively with no affectation of literary brilliance. . . . Lengthy bibliographical notes, which incidentally are extremely readable, make available to English readers the views, theories and recent researches of outstanding specialists. . . . There are few good histories of the Ukraine available in any of the languages of Western Europe. Therefore Mr. Allen's book should be welcomed by our libraries." T. M. Avery, Jr.

+ Commonweal 34:236 Je 27 '41 390w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:880 Jl '41 10w

"The book is immensely detailed, recondite yet readable, and well supplied with maps and bibliographical notes." W. H. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 28 '41 130w

"It is impossible within brief space to convey any idea of the rich contents of this book, or of all the implications of the conquest of Ukraine by such a power as the Third Reich. The book is readable and just now it would repay reading." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 27 '41 850w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 20w

"This is a well-written, well-produced book, with useful maps, but it is not easy to read. Perhaps because it has been written in collaboration with several, anonymous, Russian and Ukrainian scholars, and has been hurriedly finished under difficulties, it is uneven and overcrowded with detail, especially in the narrative of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, though there are from time to time invigorating comparisons and wide sweeps putting Ukrainian history in the general setting of European and Ottoman history. The notes should not be missed; they contain references to an exceptionally wide range of the relevant literature, but they also include much interesting other material and discussion. This solid, informative, and frequently striking work is a worthy successor to Mr. Allen's History of the Georgian People, and is, in most respects, superior to the recently published English translation of Doroshenko's history of the Ukraine." B. H. Sumner

+ Spec 166:480 My 2 '41 600w

"Having studied carefully the 400 pages of Mr. Allen's book, the reader will be hard put to it to tell whether the author considers the 'Ukrainians' to be a separate people or a branch of the Russian nation. That he should not have reached any definite conclusion on this point is evidence of knowledge and of prudence. But that he does not even try to sum up the relevant facts hangs together with a weak side of his work. It is almost throughout narrative, with little attempt at analysis. . . . Mr. Allen's book, which is to be welcomed, is naturally not a piece of original research: it would be impossible for anyone to attempt it over so large an area and so long a period, especially with regard to a foreign country. But where good secondary sources are available, he has done the work, on the whole, in a satisfactory manner. His acquaintance with the Russian historical literature seems thorough, with the Ukrainian satisfactory, but with the Polish rather slight and superficial."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 11 '41 1700w

ALLEY, NORMAN. I witness. 370p $2.75 Funk, W.

B or 92 Photography, Journalistic 41-7156

"Thirty years ago, Norman Alley went to work for the Chicago Tribune as a copy boy. His ambition was to become a reporter. Then he decided that 'a picture is worth 10,000 words' and became a photographer. His autobiographical 'I Witness' seems to justify the shift. . . . Norman Alley's first newsreel feat was to photograph the Eastland steamship disaster in Chicago in July, 1915. His last (recorded) was to depict on celluloid the German army's invasion of the Low Countries and France." Sat R of Lit

Books p14 Ap 13 '41 110w

"When the reader once becomes adjusted to the machine-gun wise-cracking of Mr. Alley's prose, the book is fascinating. He is one of the news-hawks with the knack of being on the spot when big stories break. When he isn't, he can be counted on to break in while things are still hot." DeLancey Ferguson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '41 290w

"Excessive use of clichés and Hollywood journalese will annoy some readers of this book. But Alley's intelligent observations on his extensive travels more than atone for that. Alley has had an exciting, energetic and useful career to date. His experiences in witnessing the news being made offer entertaining and informative reading." Jasper Ovel

+ Commonweal 34:91 My 16 '41 210w

"The book reads well, though perhaps the addition of some supplementary still-shots would have added greatly to its interest. For anyone curious about a newsreel cameraman's life and his work, I Witness is absorbing reading." S. W. Kirsten

+ Living Age 360:197 Ap '41 200w

"Here is a famous photographer, brightly wooing public interest without a single photograph! He does it successfully too."

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 23 '41 550w

Reviewed by Linton Wells

Sat R of Lit 23:15 Mr 22 '41 650w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY. The oaken heart. 305p $3 Doubleday [10s 6d Joseph, M]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Great Britain 41-17360

A picture of how life was lived in a small, English village during the first year and a half of war.

Booklist 38:92 N 15 '41

"There are many ways of telling a story and, though other English writers have told the tale of England through these past two years, this account of Margery Allingham is almost startlingly fresh, convincing, intimate and absorbing. Perhaps her effect is due, in part, to the fact that as a well known author of mystery stories she strikes us as wholly beyond suspicion; only a normal person writes murder mysteries, nothing high-brow or tentatious here." Iris Barry

+ Books p6 S 28 '41 850w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 25 '41 400w

Reviewed by Basil de Selincourt

Manchester Guardian p3 S 12 '41 220w

"Miss Allingham's characters are apt to change at times into jolly John Bulls of the routine sort, full of the pawky bravado and laconic invincibility which—although they are not untrue—decline so readily into what the stage knows as 'character' parts. It is perhaps Miss Allingham's vein of sentiment at these times which sets one's teeth on edge. This apart, The Oaken Heart is well worth reading. Miss Allingham's temperate good-humour is attractive, her knowledge of Essex folk is mature and sympathetic, and she has a gift for realising events in the dimension of individual men and women."

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:514 D 20 '41 300w

"Other books have said the same thing to us, in other ways. Few have said it with such concrete and readable directness of simple record. Nor has it ever come to us with greater pertinence." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p8 S 21 '41 600w

"The sentiments are by this time familiar, but the observation is keen, and humorous."

+ New Yorker 17:111 S 20 '41 40w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY—Continued

Reviewed by Klaus Lambrecht

Sat R of Lit 24:32 O 18 '41 300w

"An agreeably tempered, quite well written and utterly uninspired book."

Spec 167:454 N 7 '41 170w

"This is a light-hearted book, but light-hearted only in the sense that an extremely acute mind sees the dangers, is disquieted by many of them and yet has such faith in humanity and in her country that she can say, at the close, 'What a period! What an age to have been alive in! Oh thank God I was born when I was.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p428 S 6 '41 550w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY. Traitor's purse. 280p $2 Doubleday [8s Heinemann]

(W) 41-3900

Detective story.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Exciting is the word." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 9 '41 130w

"One of Miss Allingham's best."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 50w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 9 '41 500w

"Good and exciting as is the story, novel as is the central idea, one is not sure that this type of fast-moving thriller, with knock-outs, swift pursuits, hairbreadth escapes on almost every page, is best suited to Miss Allingham's fine and delicate talent." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 8 '41 300w

"The two-edged business makes uncommonly exciting stuff, and brings out the fine Allingham skill in story-building and plausible characters that makes her as much a novelist as a mystery writer." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 104:477 Ap 7 '41 130w

"If England has to be saved by every distinguished detective in turn, I would as soon witness her salvation by Campion as any of them; for Miss Allingham never forgets how to write, even when she sinks to a thriller." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:540 My 24 '41 90w

"It is rather a fantastic plot, but the idea of having a detective forced to work almost completely in the dark is a novel one." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 160w

"You'll be so sewed down to this one that you won't stop for anything."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Mr 15 '41 50w

"Diabolical 'Minute Fifteen' involves redoubtable Albert, his puzzled companions, and reader, in hair-raising chain of situations, above and below ground. Scintillating."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 40w

"The chief conspirator is not a sufficiently solid character to my mind; but Miss Allingham works up a fine crescendo of excitement." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 166:454 Ap 25 '41 80w

Time 37:104 Ap 7 '41 40w

"In 'Black Plumes' Miss Allingham proved herself to be a writer with a conscience and showed enough skill to make one wonder what she would do next. 'Traitor's Purse' comes as a complete surprise. It is not what one expected. It does not suggest a writer with the same conscience, nor with the right dexterity for keeping her tongue in her cheek, if that is what she has been doing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p105 Mr 1 '41 280w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Not without peril. 405p $2.50 Putnam

Howe, Mrs. Jemima (Sartwell)—Fiction (W) 41-5143

"A novel founded on the life and adventures of Jemima Sartwell, one of the first settlers in Vermont." Subtitle

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

"This book is excellent in many ways. The feeling for the land, for the river, the understanding of the Indians, the variety of characters who walk its pages, the pageantry of the historical scene, the consistency of manners and customs and language, are but a few of the things that call for special mention. And above all towers Jemima Sartwell, splendid as a woman and mother of men." Rose Feld

+ Books p7 Ap 20 '41 900w

Reviewed by Kathleen Satterthwaite

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 280w

"This is essentially a true story. To write it entailed much research, which has borne fruit in the authenticity of the vernacular and the folkways of the people. The characters, especially Jemima, are more vital than is usually the case with historical characters transferred to fiction. In the matter of composition, this good and exciting story could have been made still better by a more rigid selectivity of material, even at the cost of omitting some items of the actual history."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 10 '41 550w

"There have been few novels based on Vermont's early history. This comes appropriately in her one hundred and fiftieth year of statehood. Long, detailed, and interesting, the book conveys a lively sense of history and of pioneer conditions. Recommended for readers of Kenneth Roberts." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 50w

"This, if one may still dare to recommend a historical novel, is clearly one of the better ones."

+ New Repub 105:318 S 8 '41 60w

"A book which is close-packed with action and excitement and which gives as seemingly veracious a picture of life on the frontier as any historical novel I have read for some time. 'Not Without Peril' is, to be sure, no literary masterpiece. Its prose, though adequate, is somewhat colorless and pedestrian. Its characterizations are nothing to brag about and it is wholly destitute of subtlety. Somehow, nevertheless, it re-creates history in very moving terms and catches an echo, through Jemima, of that spirit to which we owe whatever we are and whatever we have." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '41 800w

"Jemima herself is perhaps over-romanticized, but the hard pioneer life she lived has force and meaning, the Indians are not always cruel and bloodthirsty savages, the speech seems authentic and the action credible."

+ New Yorker 17:90 Ap 19 '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 470w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 Jl '41

ALLOTT, KENNETH. Jules Verne. 283p il $3 Macmillan [15s Cresset]

B or 92 Verne, Jules [41-5795]

The purpose of this biography of the French novelist is twofold: to tell the story of Verne's career as a writer; and to paint a picture of the life and ideas of the nineteenth century, in which time he flourished. Bibliography. Index.

"A richly rewarding book: on every page there are epigrams crisp with thought and wit. . . . As a professional critic, I must condemn the work as a monster: a small well formed body—Jules Verne—carrying an enormous head—the cultural philosophy of the last four centuries. As a mere reader, I enjoyed the two incongruous parts. And so will you." Albert Guerard

+ Books p25 O 5 '41 1100w

"It is only fair to say that Kenneth Allott's biography has been warmly praised by some of the best and most careful critics in the British press. It is with diffidence therefore that I confess I think it a bad book. . . While he is describing the rather troubled early life of Verne, when all kinds of mental stresses disturbed him, Mr. Allott suddenly observes, 'Tennyson wrote "The Charge of the Light Brigade". . . Sebastopol did not fall till September.' A little later, when he notes that a three-act comedy of Verne's achieved some success, he remarks, 'Lesseps went on excavating the Suez Canal—just as though he might have been expected to stop. In other words, the entire book seems to me to be built up on the fallacy that contemporaneity and relevance are the same thing.' Harold Hobson

— Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 22 '41 160w

"This is an interesting book, in spite of its tendency to stray too far from its subject. Some of the illustrations are pleasing, but the captions underneath them are inexcusable." George Orwell

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:64 Ja 18 '41 1050w

"Verne has been fortunate in finding in Mr. Allott a fine, penetrating biographer and critic who obviously knows his science and his sociology and who places him on the stage of the nineteenth century against a décor of contemporary capitalistic romanticism." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 24 '41 1250w

"Verne biography in English, and a good one too. . . Sharp-witted and richly annotated, but the ideas occasionally seem strained. Victorian illustrations."

+ New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 30w

"Up to a point Mr. Allott focusses upon Verne with sharpness and nervous enthusiasm. He does not reel off Verne's life from birth (1828) to death (1905). He tells it in sections, and in between makes a relevant anthology of what else was happening in the world, and talks about science, romanticism, politics and the organisation and sanctions and compelling forces of European life. Here and there he makes comments which are shrewd and true. . . His book—in bits—is good enough to make one wish that his pomposities, scraps of pretension and cheapness (he comes down to writing 'We are not amused') had been smoothed away with still more industry and a more faithful regard for quality." Geoffrey Grigson

+ Spec 165:652 D 13 '40 1100w
Time 38:71 S 8 '41 450w

ALMEDINGEN, MARTHA EDITH VON. Tomorrow will come. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 343p $3 Little

B or 92 Russia—History—Revolution (W) 41-20777

Reminiscences of a gently bred Russian-English woman thru the bitter years of her youth in Russia during the early twentieth century, thru the Revolution, and up to 1922, when she escaped to England via Italy. She lived thru famine, near madness, loneliness, and near death, and now is established in England where she has become a translator and medieval historian.

Booklist 38:94 N 15 '41

"This book, which has won the 'Atlantic Monthly' prize, is mined out of the bedrock of experience with a craftsman's care and an artist's deep reserve of feeling. But, more than the shape of the book, more even than the experiences recorded, its underlying philosophy is important. After what she has seen, Miss Almedingen is still able to say, 'Tomorrow will come.' These words alone are like a firm hand stretched out to save us when the flood tide has reached our door." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p3 N 9 '41 900w

Cath World 154:508 Ja '42 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

"Miss Almedingen has the sensitive, distinguished style of a good poet and the humble, long-range view-point of a good Christian. Of the simple stuff of a young girl's every-day reactions to chaos she has made a story that is at times beautiful, at times profoundly moving, at all times interesting and significant." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 35:298 Ja 9 '42 350w

"Absorbing picture of what can happen in war and revolution to noncombatants not directly involved. Enthusiastically recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:998 N 15 '41 120w

New Repub 106:29 Ja 5 '42 90w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 22:429 N 15 '41 220w

"This reviewer, certainly, knows no more poignant, finely tempered, capacious and illuminating personal record from the Russian Revolution. 'Tomorrow Will Come' tells its story with a novelist's restraint and vitality, a student's directness." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p11 N 9 '41 1300w

"A human document of a type much in vogue some few years ago, when anti-Soviet sentiment was at its peak, it is an honest, unrecriminative, pathetic record of the calvary of a humble intellectual. . . Her narrative is personal, perhaps too much so, and is only rarely tangential to the giant historical events of which she was a part. I found it interesting but hardly arresting." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:94 N 8 '41 200w

"This book is rich, abundant, and poetic—and it fully merits the $5,000 prize it has been awarded by the judges of the Atlantic Monthly Non-Fiction Contest." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 22 '41 450w

"It is a quiet and very sincere narrative, almost too resolutely confined to the small and personal side of things at a time of shattering historic change, but even in its lack of comprehension and unconscious bias not without illumination."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p570 N 15 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

ALSOP, GULIELMA FELL, and MCBRIDE, MARY FRANCES. She's off to work; a guide to successful earning and living. 276p $2.50 Vanguard

396.5 Woman—Employment. Young women. Conduct of life (W) 41-8441

A second book by the authors of She's Off to College (Book Review Digest, 1940). In this book, the authors combine chapters of practical suggestions for the working girl with a story of two sisters who come to New York, find jobs, live in a Y. W. and a co-operative club, and solve the various problems that come up in the lives of young girls away from home.

Booklist 37:539 J1 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

ALTSCHUL, FRANK. Let no wave engulf us. 60p $1 Duell

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 41-5938

The author, an American banker, asserts that unless we want to live in a world dominated by National Socialism Hitler must be defeated, but that after peace has come we must set our own way of life in order, choos-

ALTSCHUL, FRANK—Continued
ing a middle ground, between the extremes of Right and Left, in economic planning. Toward this end he suggests the formation of a Supreme Economic Council to plan for the future now.

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

"Into a financial world which seems numb and paralyzed from the succession of blows dealt in the last few years Frank Altschul's call to action comes like a freshening breeze. Here is no visionary bureaucrat speaking, but a hard headed American banker, and his challenge is to the great company of the middle ground, the moderates who truly want to make democracy work." C. N. Stabler
+ Books p2 Ap 27 '41 850w

"This is a rather simple, stark book. That fact adds to its usefulness." R. H. Markham
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 28 '41 400w

"Those who like their tracts singularly free from emotion and distinguished by reason will find this one to their taste." Eleanor Van Allen

+ Current Hist & Forum 53:5 Je '41 360w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:870 Jl '41 60w

Reviewed by John Cournos
N Y Times p4 Je 8 '41 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p463 S 13 '41 120w

ALTSHELER, BRENT, comp. Natural history index-guide; an index to 3,365 books and periodicals in libraries; a guide to things natural in the field. 2d ed rev and enl 583p price on application Wilson, H.W.

016.57 Natural history—Bibliography
(W) 40-13655

"The first edition, copyrighted in 1936 and reviewed in the July and October 1937 Subscription Books Bulletin [Book Review Digest, 1937] was about half as thick as this new volume, to which 272 pages have been added. These additional pages have been used for a much-needed general alphabetical index to the topical entries, and also for the expansion from 10 to the present 15 sections, and from 14 to 23 divisions. All of these parts have been rearranged according to their interdependence. Periodical articles are now included as references as well as books. The general bibliography has been shifted to the end of the volume and its former location used for the new index. By consulting this index first, it is possible to find any common entry without knowing to what field of biology or geography it belongs, as was formerly the case." Subscription Bks Bul

"The volume has gained in usefulness by the addition of a general index, but little has been added by the inclusion of periodical references already well indexed in other common library tools. Some improvement is evident in organization and more exact classification of genera, but the details of entry remain uneven. The books selected for indexing are so uneven in value, substance, authority and edition that an indiscriminate use of the index is unwise. Many of the references are useless for factual or informative purposes. The volume is not recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:10 Ja '41 1200w

AMDUR, LEON HARNEY. Patent fundamentals. 305p il $4 Chemical pub. co.

608 Patent laws and legislation. Patents. Inventions 41-7699

"A well-arranged book covering the types of inventions, nature of a patent, how patents are classified, preparation and prosecution of applications, invention as defined by patent claims, what is invention, utility, immorality and frivolity, plant patents, and dealings in patents." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Met Eng 48:191 My '41 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:26 Ap '41

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. American youth commission. See Atwood, J. H. Thus be their destiny

AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION. Cultural approach to history. See Ware, C. F., ed.

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, A.L.A. catalog rules; author and title entries; prepared by the Catalog code revision committee of the Association with the collaboration of a committee of the (British) Library association. preliminary Am 2d ed 408p pa $6 A.L.A.

025.3 Cataloging 41-51914

"The revision, representing extensive co-operative work by committees and individuals during several years, will be of most use in large libraries following Library of Congress practice. The rules are primarily those dealing with choice of main entry and details of descriptive cataloging. There are new sections on geographic headings and on added entries and references, as well as data on authority cards, incunabula, maps, atlases, and music." Booklist

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

"Catalogers throughout the country will be studying this preliminary edition during the coming year. A special committee of the American Library Association has been appointed to make recommendations concerning it. Every librarian is urged to study it. No library, however, should change current practices until the final edition is issued, since it is still uncertain what form the final code will take." W. E. Wright

Library J 66:1085 D 15 '41 600w

"Whatever our reaction to the details of the new A.L.A. catalog rules, we can be unanimous in appreciation of the time and thought put into it and the fact that the new code is a realization and not just a dream." Alice Charlton

+ Library Q 12:118 Ja '42 4500w

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Board on library service to children and young people. Subject index to children's plays; comp. by a subcommittee, Elizabeth D. Briggs, chairman. 277p $3.50 A.L.A.

016.812 Children's plays—Bibliography. Children's plays—Indexes (W) 40-27255

Two hundred and two books of children's plays have been analyzed and indexed under 793 headings. Each entry gives name of play, indicates the book in which the play is found, the page number, the grades for which it is intended, number of characters, and of acts and scenes. Thirty-six of the books are starred for first purchase.

Booklist 36:299 Ap 1 '40

"It will be especially useful to teachers who want to know what plays are available on certain subjects, how many characters are required, where the book containing the play may be obtained, and at what price. It refrains from making any appraisal of the artistic quality of the plays, however, and from any selection of the effective from the ineffective. . . . The A.L.A. would do well, in this reviewer's judgment, to follow this book with another which might limit itself to a total of one hundred children's plays chosen because of their high quality. Such a list, especially if each play could be described in fifty to sixty words, would bring a chorus of grateful praise from teachers." Fred Eastman

Library Q 10:437 J1 '40 360w
Theatre Arts 24:764 O '40 20w

AMES, MERLIN M. Canthook country; il. by Harvey Kidder. 287p $2 Houghton

41-14044

A story of lumberjacks written for older boys. The youthful hero, Steve Adams, is destined to work on the family farm, but when his older brother, Gord, disappears from the lumber camp, Steve goes out to fill his place and to look for him. Steve has several adventures and many hard experiences before he finally finds his brother and starts on a career "better than lumberjacking."

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"The story unites mystery and stirring incidents of life and danger in a logging camp. Both strands are strong and the whole thing pulls. . . The life of a lumberjack appears in such detail that if a boy wants to be one he gets the equivalent of a vocational guide—though anything less like one than this story would be hard to find. Many small, strong drawings in the text keep up with the action." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 14 '41 210w

"Merlin Ames wields a vigorous pen when he writes of the breaking of a log jam and the terror of a forest fire. You feel that he knows. It makes exciting reading of a kind boys like." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:366 S '41 90w

"A good picture of lumbering and logging in Wisconsin thirty or forty years ago. The book is well written. There is suspense, mystery, and good characterization." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 120w

"In times like these when the world is rediscovering its dependence on courage and steadfastness, it is a matter of rejoicing to find among stories for older boys and girls a book with the integrity and clarity of vision of Merlin Ames's 'Canthook Country.'" A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 O 12 '41 460w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

AMOS, ALAN. Pray for a miracle. 297p $2 Duell

41-4019

Mystery story.

"A stirring mystery-adventure yarn nicely stuffed with tropical jungles, ancient temples, trade winds, the blue Caribbean, rumors of treasure, deep-dyed villains, murder and young love. Also, Señor Espinosa, Doña Beatrix and Cary Bergen, a girl with golden hair, dimples and purple-blue eyes 'framed with smutty shadows.' Picturesque and timely." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 30 '41 100w

"It has everything, from a beautiful American girl to hidden treasure in the wilds of Guatemala. There are murders, too, and an enemy (obviously German) broadcasting station to be located. Good characters and a fascinating background. Tops in anyone's language."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 50w

"The narrative of Steve's adventures has all the thrills that one could reasonably expect in a story of this sort, and there are two beautiful girls to add a touch of romance." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '41 130w

"Intrigue-infested Latin American towns and fastnesses mixed with Mayan treasure legend in slightly sketchy but sufficiently exciting proportions. Readable."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:36 Ap 5 '41 40w

ANDERSON, MRS BARBARA TUNNELL. The days grow cold. 277p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 41-15922

"Skillful portrait of a small town somewhere in the South, its heroine a wonderful old mansion, 'the most beautiful in the whole South,' fast falling into ruin and occupied by two famous beauties of their day who live on in proud, decayed grandeur, guarding a picture of fabulous value." Library J

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"Mrs. Anderson weaves her story with such sensitive nuances that [the] thoughts and feelings [of the characters] become one's own. Her prose is at times as rhythmical as poetry and her gift for interpreting the feeling of houses and gardens makes the little town of Macklin a living community." R. Y. Williams

+ Books p3 N 23 '41 650w

"With great skill and restraint Mrs. Anderson has revealed by half-flashes and shadows the clashes and tragedies in the families and groups of the city as they touch the home of Lucinda and her parents. The proud spirit of the old south, the squalor of the Negroes, the civic conservatism and narrow-mindedness, are illumined by this interesting study in the psychology of adolescence. The subtle unaffectedness of the narration carries a suggestiveness that gives a feeling of breadth, expanding as the story unfolds." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 58:1512 D 3 '41 190w

"An interesting portrayal of small town life." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 66:669 Ag '41 80w

"There are many fine things in this book besides the sensitive portrayal of a child. The mood and atmosphere of the South are here with its pride in old ways and intolerance for new, its beauty and its wretchedness. And in the portrait of Caj, the half-wit Negro boy who sings the spelling of difficult words, Mrs. Anderson introduces a unique and original character in fiction." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p28 N 23 '41 750w

"A delicately told tale."

+ New Yorker 17:110 N 22 '41 50w

"The novel has many faults; its theme is too large—and too important—not to lose dignity and emphasis by being presented through the eyes of a little girl, whose fears and fantasies, vivid and intense as they are, too often obscure the main issue. [Mrs] Anderson has, in short, failed rather conspicuously to decide between writing a social study and painting a portrait of a child and a family. But hers is, at any rate, a novel, alive and eager, by someone with something to say." Harriet Colby

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 N 22 '41 450w

"There is little sequential story since it is all the reactions of small Lucinda to the adult world about her, and the author seldom permits the child to witness more than fragmentary episodes. Impressionable, acute, the child tries to weave threads to make the story a whole. Even as the child does not clearly understand, so the whole theme is never quite clear to the reader who fails to understand precisely the point of the novel. The book is written with charming imagery, but incomplete interpretation and coordination mar the fragile tale." L. S. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 360w

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. High courage [il. by the author]. 125p $1.75 Macmillan

Horses—Legends and stories (W) 41-21733

Story of the training of a great race horse, by two understanding horse lovers—a girl and a groom. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

ANDERSON, C. W.—Continued

"The many action pictures are in Mr. Anderson's moving manner; respect and admiration for a noble horse gets into his drawings as much as into his words." M. L. Becker
+ Books p12 N 2 '41 200w

"For horse-lovers from ten up." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:1095 D 15 '41 80w

"The ending is not the routine one expected, but it is all that a true sportsman can ask, and the story as a whole is like that. It is rambling according to narrative rules, but [it is] a heart-warming portrait of a highly individual horse and of a groom very wise and understanding in the ways of horses in general, and in particular it will be thoroughly satisfactory to the 10 to 13 year olds to whom a stable is the proper center of the cosmos." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 18 '42 320w

ANDERSON, MARY DESIREE. Design for a journey. 140p il $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

914.2 England—Description and travel. Churches—England. Church decoration and ornament. Christian art and symbolism [A41-1470]

"The book is a series of little essays on various church subjects such as Easter Sepulchres, The Tree of Jesse, Carved Elephants in Devon, Wool churches, in various parts of England and Wales. . . [It] is written to interest the uninitiated in old churches and to keep a picture in the author's mind, and that of her readers, of English landscape." Spec

"The book can be read directly after Gardner's magnificent work on medieval sculpture in England, without a sense of let-down. The heightening of life in the months just before the war heightens also the atmosphere of books written then. This one is like taking a journey into the living past, with an eager, knowledgeable guide." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 Ap 27 '41 200w

Reviewed by Flora Grierson

New Statesman & Nation 21:94 Ja 25 '41 550w

"Miss Anderson clearly wrote the book out of delight in her subject, and not for money. That is one reason for the book having the right approach. . . The book has its defects. The illustrations are few and rather archaeological; the essays on the eighteenth century are a bit patronising." John Betjeman

+ — Spec 165:546 N 22 '40 1000w

"Our author is a very instructive companion with whom to potter about old churches. She is more than that; she is a charming companion. Her book is meant to do more than instruct. It is meant to help the reader, as it helped the writer, to 'draw upon the stored-up happiness and beauty which the past has given us, so that we may not stumble too badly on this path'—the dark and foggy path of our present hours. None who reads her account of the children at the harvest festival at Dunster, or of her journey to the Black Mountain and the Golden Valley—Llanthony, Partrishow, Rowlestone, Abbey Dore—will fail to recognize the beauty of her writing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p618 D 7 '40 280w

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Candle in the wind; a play in three acts. 116p $2.50 Anderson house

812 (W) 41-26226

Prose play based on the Nazi regime in occupied France. An American actress and the man she loves are caught by the Nazis in Paris. The man, who has been an anti-Nazi journalist, is imprisoned at once. The actress stays on in France, struggling with all her powers of persuasion, and all her money, to get the man out of the Nazi prison.

"The story merely as a story [is] genuinely if not really profoundly interesting. Mr. Anderson is also as successful as anyone else has been in trying to expose the chill horror of the Nazi philosophy, but I should hesitate to say that he has, any more than the others, actually made it any clearer or any more terrible; and like all the rest he depends, not wholly in vain, upon what we know from other sources to lend to his sheer melodrama a substantiality and a significance neither of which it would have if we did not bring into the theater with us information and convictions gained elsewhere." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 153:462 N 8 '41 1000w (Dramatic criticism)

"'Candle in the Wind' could not be called pretentious; Mr. Anderson is too sincere for that. It is only loose, relaxed, suffocating and glib, glib with the fluent movement of what is never penetrated, realized or created. It is embarrassing; and to the critic, moreover, it is baffling, because one does not know just what line to take with a thing that means so well, muddles into the most passionate urgency of our epoch and remains so mediocre, overexplicit, banal, and in its approach so entirely bourgeois. A certain lively melodrama is implicit in this plot and situation, but making it dull does not give it significance; it merely takes away whatever life may have been possible." Stark Young

+ — New Repub 105:621 N 10 '41 1500w (Dramatic criticism)

"'Candle in the Wind is a tale of romance and adventure, told very quietly, almost wearily. Its main effect is to create a mood of hypnotic despair. In the prison scenes it is as though a door were opened and a dank, miasmic breath swept forward across the footlights. Mechanized men jump up, salute, close and open doors, click heels, clank keys. The theories that come from their mouths are sterile parrotings. Distrust is in the air, terror and lying and an active sadism. Mr. Anderson has provided his chief Nazi, Colonel Erfurt, with a biting, perverted sense of humor that gives him a sort of ruthless vitality, which lessens his resemblance to a stage villain of melodrama. As a whole, however, the play is haunted by unreality—and this in the face of its obvious and all too devastating truth." Rosamond Gilder

+ — Theatre Arts 25:861 D '41 1350w (Dramatic criticism)

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Journey to Jerusalem; a play in three acts. 107p $2.50 Anderson house; Dodd

812 Jesus Christ—Drama (W) 41-51502

This play is "an attempt to tell the story of [the] Passover pilgrimage to Jerusalem and to take the child Jesus to the threshold of His mission as He walks alone through the corridors of the temple."

Booklist 37:238 F 1 '41

"A stimulating and provocative play to read." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p14 Je 1 '41 80w

"It is the raison d'être, the excuse for being, which seems most conspicuously lacking in 'Journey to Jerusalem.' Granted that an extraordinarily large proportion of those who write at all find themselves impelled sooner or later to write about Jesus, granted even that some sort of parallel between the oppressed Jews at the time of Augustus and the oppressed peoples of today is easy to draw, the fact remains that Mr. Anderson seems to have been singularly little inspired by an inspiring legend and to have found extremely little of even the obvious to suggest in drawing the parallel. He has sometimes in the past been annoyingly showy; he has never, it seems to me, been so flat and tame." J. W. Krutch — Nation 151:373 O 19 '40 650w (Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by Stark Young
New Repub 103:557 O 21 '40 1300w

ANDERSON, NELS. Men on the move. 357p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

331.137 Migration of workers. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Unemployment 41-451

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Men on the Move is a synthesis of the results of research studies of migrants made principally during the last decade, financed principally with federal funds, and oriented principally to administrative problems. In view of the sources of information and his purposes, the author has done an excellent piece of work." E. H. Sutherland

+ Am J Soc 47:237 S '41 500w

"Men on the Move is intended as a convenient summary of recent studies on the estimated two million workers who cross state lines yearly in search of jobs. Its presentation lies between the technical and the popular. . . . There are many excellent photographs from the seemingly inexhaustible files of the Farm Security Administration. The tables are not so commendable. They need titles, and several of them disagree with the text." H. S. Shryock, Jr.

Am Soc R 6:302 Ap '41 420w

Reviewed by N. L. Whetten

Ann Am Acad 214:250 Mr '41 600w

"As one who has known something of the life described, the unlovely world which is here so objectively yet movingly revealed, I sincerely recommend this volume. It does not offer panaceas. Anderson has succeeded eminently in understanding and presenting a difficult and complex problem. It is for an understanding and awakened society to find the solutions." L. C. Eiseley

+ Social Forces 19:580 My '41 450w

"Anderson's book demonstrates the vast amount of research and study which, during the past ten years, has been given to the subject of interstate migration. He presents nothing new, but correlates what has been learned about migrants and migration." R. E. Ryan

Survey 77:100 Mr '41 290w

ANDRE LE CHAPELAIN. Art of courtly love; with introduction, translation, and notes by John Jay Parry. 218p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

177.6 Courtly love

41-22782

A translation of a medieval work written by a chaplain at the court of Marie de Champagne. "The mode of life that inspired the writing was complex and somewhat artificial, but equally interesting and picturesque; and it was born of the impact of Ovid's love poems upon the imaginations of the French nobility in the petty courts of the Middle Ages—an influence exerted through two groups of poets, the troubadours in the south of France and the trouvères in the north. . . . So potent was their song that it imposed upon French gentles a strange social system, known as courtly love, that spread over Western Europe and has, to a certain extent, colored our modern conception of romance. . . . Andreas cast his book in the form of a homologue addressed to his inexperienced friend Walter." (N Y Times) Bibliography.

"It is because racial attitudes between men and women offer so infallible an insight into national psychology that 'The Art of Courtly Love'. . . is a book of major importance for any one wishing to understand medieval life and thought. It is, as a French scholar said, 'one of those capital works which reflect the thought of a great epoch, which explain the secret of a civilization.'" E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p28 N 9 '41 1450w

"To the casual reader, the book will be interesting as a reflection of its time and also because of the effect the philosophy which it embodies has had on society over a long period. For the scholar, it will be doubly interesting, and useful not only for its contents but also for its bibliography, which includes most extant editions of the book, as well as other literature of related periods."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 29 '41 300w

ANDREAS CAPELLANUS. See André le Chapelain

ANDREWS, CHARLES FREER. The good shepherd. 205p $2 Harper [6s Hodder]

253 Pastoral work

This book, finished shortly before the author's death, was based on a series of lectures given in Cambridge during the Lent term of 1937. The message of the book is the great "need of quiet devotion in the pastoral work of the Church."

"Its quiet message of inner peace comes, in more than one sense, as a message from far away."

+ Christian Century 58:532 Ap 16 '41 40w

"Dr. Andrews prepared his book shortly before his passing. Though it is based upon a series of lectures on Pastoral Theology, it is of much more value to the general reader than might be inferred from the use of this particular phrase. Indeed, the writer is not a theologian in any scholastic sense, but rather a sincere and humble Christian, one eager to share the practical lessons he has learned." T. L. Leishman

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 14 '41 600w

Churchman 155:35 Je 1 '41 110w

"This is a book written in the highlights of the devotional mood. These pages are appreciative literature of genuine merit, pages manifestly that come from the heart of a great Christian. Therefore, it is a volume containing bread for the hungry Christian soul." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 18:277 Jl '41 100w

"His book is full of hard, direct, personal experience. It is not the work of a scholar or of a theologian. It is the work of one whose aim was to do and to be as well as to do. Therefore it carries conviction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p472 S 14 '40 330w

ANDREWS, WAYNE. The Vanderbilt legend; the story of the Vanderbilt family, 1794-1940. 454p il $3.50 Harcourt

929.2 Vanderbilt family. Vanderbilt, Cornelius, 1794-1877 41-1643

Traces the story of the Vanderbilt family from 1794 to 1940, beginning with "Corneel" and the Staten Island ferry, thru the era of gingerbread villas, race horses, and steam yachts, to the present. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. B. Miller

Ann Am Acad 215:231 My '41 450w

Bookmark 2:12 Mr '41

"Perhaps it is asking too much, but this volume would have been considerably more valuable if the author had gone to some pains to infuse some life, and some more revealing detail, into the Vanderbilts of this and the past generation. They appear on the stage, but they are like pale wraiths from the library. Some of the fault must lie with the author, surely, for making them appear so dull and lifeless. . . . The author is simply not a smooth writer, and it is too bad, for here is a mellow and juicy subject fraught with not only social implications but with amusing and diverse personalities. . . But, for all this, if the reader can keep a cool head and not become too confused with the intricate Vanderbilt family tree and can be patient with the author's incessant back-tracking chronology and spavined prose style, this is a book eminently worth sitting up with." Stanley Walker

ANDREWS, WAYNE—Continued

— + Books p19 Ja 26 '41 1300w

"The book is carefully documented with a good index and a bibliography of 132 books. However, with the exception of the Commodore and his son, the Vanderbilts do not appear as flesh and blood people. This may not be entirely the author's fault for inherited wealth imposes many restrictions. . . Although he does not criticize, his attitude is one of flippant sarcasm which is not a satisfactory substitute for satire. The difficulty lies in the fact that he has no point of view. A reporter in a newspaper succeeds if he vividly describes an event, whereas in a book there must be perspective. It is not necessary to point out a moral, but the author must have a sense of the significance of his material. The Vanderbilts represented an economic and social phenomenon, but Mr. Andrews was only able to see them as subjects for a gossip column."

J. M. Forbes, Jr.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 850w
"One reviewer stated that 'this is a book eminently worth sitting up with.' We do not agree. It is a book that invites sleep after a half-hour's reading."
— Cath World 153:253 My '41 230w
Christian Century 58:463 Ap 2 '41 180w
"Not a pretty story—but a sound piece of writing on the robber baron days." E. W. M. Churchman 155:34 Ja 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by M. R. Werner

New Repub 104:377 Mr 17 '41 800w
"A most welcome addition to the growing gallery of those whose financial doings and social aspirations have meant so much in the development of America. . . One of the pre-eminent virtues of 'The Vanderbilt Legend' is that the author obviously set out neither to tear down a statue nor set up another in its place. He is content to let the facts speak for themselves. They speak eloquently. And so we see the cold-hearted, domineering, profane figure of the Dutch ferry boy from Staten Island as he really must have been." Karl Schrifftgiesser

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 26 '41 1600w
New Yorker 16:68 F 8 '41 50w
"Mr. Andrews's book is a piece of redoubtable research and skillfully masks the disjointedness of the family's later annals. The record is all that could be desired, the writing is lively, and the tone tolerantly satiric." Palmer Harman
+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Ja 25 '41 550w
"Wayne Andrews has written an entertaining book. . . [It] is to be taken as a robust, helter-skelter compilation of 19th-century Americana, not as a social or economic history in the serious sense, or even as a family history. Its material is largely unsifted, much of it is unverified, and the author has imposed upon it no high degree of organization or critical judgment. Yet the person who reads it as if he were obtaining all the factual data, interviews, conversations, gossip, anecdotes, comment hot off the griddle of the contemporary press will absorb the particular color and excitement of the 19th century almost as if he were transported back to its scenes and atmosphere." E. N. Jenckes

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 25 '41 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 37:33 F '41
ANGELL, ROBERT COOLEY. Integration of American society; a study of groups and institutions. 228p $2.50 McGraw 309.173 Sociology. U.S.—Social life and customs. U.S.—Civilization 41-6839
"The most important proposition Professor Angell advances in this book is that American society is undergoing a rapid breakdown of neighborhood relationships and a correlative multiplication of organizations. He clearly shows that in capitalist enterprise, in the 'struggle groups,' in governmental units, in 'benevolent groups,' in the family, the church, clubs, associations, and co-operatives—in all the major aspects of social life—face-to-face, relatively intimate, give-and-take relationships are giving way to organized structures, to indirection, to self-centered activity and conflict. The second proposition is that the breakdown just described constitutes or is contributing to the 'disintegration' of American society. . . The third proposition the author advances is that a society is integrated only when 'the people are intensively devoted to common ends and the achievement of common values.'" (Ann Am Acad) Indexes.

"A simply written description . . . not sufficiently integrated to live up to the promise of its title nor sufficiently profound to give much of an answer to the principal question raised, 'Is the development of free-standing groups in our society a threat to the hold of American institutions and values upon our people?' (p. 210). The chapters of most interest to economists, 4 and 5, dealing with corporations, labor unions and farm groups, are extremely superficial."

Am Econ R 31:369 Je '41 70w

"The weakness of the study lies largely in the fact that no adequate criteria exist for the determination of 'ultimate common values,' or for assessing their functions in creating a moral order or unifying a society. There is no sidestepping the charge that many of the estimates are arbitrary interpretations of the author. . . Yet it is against the magnitude and profound importance of its task that the achievements of such a work as this must be measured. Thus viewed, its contribution is a substantial one and altogether worthy of the name and tradition of Charles Horton Cooley, to whom the book is dedicated." C. D. Clark
+ — Am Soc R 6:582 Ag '41 550w

"In its definitions of basic terms and in its classifications of groups the book is open to question; but as a whole, it is an excellent presentation of an important phase of American life which is almost wholly overlooked." Constantine Panunzio

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:190 Jl '41 600w

ANTHONY, SYLVIA. The child's discovery of death; a study in child psychology; with an introd. by J. C. Flugel. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 231p $3.50 Harcourt [11s 6d Routledge]

136.7 Child study. Death A41-2434

"This study is based on two sets of collected observations. School-children, including a small proportion from those in special schools, voiced their unconsidered thoughts and fancies through a method like that of the intelligence test, and through a story-competition test; and a number of 'home records' of children's spontaneous talk were kept by a group of parents interested in this kind of research. Published studies of children's talk have also been drawn upon for suitable material." (Spec) Bibliographical list. Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Thouless

Nature 147:371 Mr 29 '41 550w

"The book is a fascinating piece of research, and its conclusions are both surprising and important." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:425 O 26 '40 1300w

"Writing in excellent English, and interpreting the observations in general accord with Freudian doctrines concerning the origin and development of mental life, [the author] carries the discussion through to such a logical conclusion that not only those interested in psychological theory will benefit by it but also any adults involved in the practical care and handling of children."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 F '41 460w

Reviewed by Kenneth Richmond
Spec 165:554 N 22 '40 400w

"Mrs. Anthony appears to be the first to have made a comprehensive study of her subject, and her book is a valuable contribution to child-psychology, even though the reader may conclude that the facts she has collected are a good deal less surprising than some of her explanations. The book is enriched with a copious index and a bibliography which ranges from the Bible and Shakespeare to Lewis Carroll and Struwwelpeter."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p628 D 14 '40 500w

APPELHOF, GILBERT. You can be happily married. 218p $2 Macmillan

173.1 Marriage (W) 41-7207

"The author, rector of an Episcopal church in Alma, Michigan, is the founder and director of the 'modern marriage clinic' which has been extended to other cities, largely under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. In this book he charts the course for a successful marriage, taking into account all phases of the relationship and the problems that grow out of it." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:485 Je 15 '41

Books p11 J1 6 '41 160w

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 50w

"This is the best book on the subject that has come to the reviewer's attention. Written by a clergyman of the Episcopal Church who has wide experience in marriage counseling, it is too bad it can't be placed in the hands of all those intending marriage. But it could also be read with profit by those already married and by those who give instruction in marriage." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 155:19 S 15 '41 140w

"It is the sort of book that ought to be in the hands of all young couples contemplating marriage—even better would it be, should classes of young people be organized in our churches to study these pages under competent and consecrated leadership." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 18:275 J1 '41 150w

J Home Econ 33:411 Je '41 60w

Reviewed by N. L. Tibbets

J Religion 21:326 J1 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:88 My '41

ARAGON, LOUIS. The century was young; tr. by Hannah Josephson. 575p $2.75 Duell

41-24624

Long novel of French life, beginning in 1889 and ending with the outbreak of the first World war. The central character is Pierre Mercadier, an introspective individual, married to a dull, but beautiful woman. His paltry love affair with another woman ends unhappily, and he becomes a solitary wanderer for ten years. He ends his life with an aged madame, who conceives for him a possessive passion.

"Monsieur Aragon's resources in character types are obviously rich, but there is, even in fiction-writing, a law of diminishing returns that ought not to be overlooked. 'The Century Was Young' has sweep, range and variety; this is its strength—a strength whose only danger is that of being excessive." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p2 N 16 '41 750w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:768 D 8 '41 420w

"Louis Aragon is more philosopher than novelist, a probing mind impatient of sound architecture. There are many who can tell a story better, but few who leave so much to ponder on. His novels, often seemingly dull, keep growing in one's mind long after one has finished them. . . . Despite all the curious, faddist variations of his technique, Aragon always returns to his primary philosophical concern—the road to war, the generation that made the first World War. It is best to cut one's own swath through his literary experiments and his digressions—some disturbing, some delightful, some dull." Harold Strauss

N Y Times p8 N 9 '41 1150w

"Aragon is potentially—and still, I think, only potentially—one of the most important of contemporary French novelists. He is very intelligent and conscientious, with deep social sympathies, a wide culture, and great lingual dexterity. I am not sure I can figure out why it all doesn't quite add up. . . . Possibly Aragon is trying in this book—which touches, always originally, on politics and the Dreyfuss affair and many other matters—to reveal how far back the roots of France's decay extend. All the characters are feeble, egotistic, incapable of carving out their own personal destinies, and apparently uninterested in the common destiny of all Frenchmen." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:86 N 1 '41 400w

"This new book is a pitiless portrayal of human stupidity, human corruption, human vanity, and of that astounding toughness which, in itself quite unmoral, may breed a strange nobility. . . . Pierre is a ruthlessly honest study of a third-rate man, of a man so ineffective that his weaknesses assume a positive quality. . . . With this portrait of Pierre is a whole gallery of others equally brilliant. I think perhaps Louis Aragon has been too generous. . . . I am reminded of Dickens and Dostoevsky more than of any other novelists. There is in it the same warm humanity, the same refusal to despise the most despicable, and the same note of warning to the smug and self-satisfied of the world." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 N 15 '41 700w

"Coincidence and the bedroom are in constant use. Aragon has a flair for the ironic or cruel anticlimax, for impaling passing figures on needle-pointed paragraphs."

Time 38:102 N 10 '41 400w

ARCHER, CHARLES STANLEY. Hankow return. 378p $2.50 Houghton [9s 6d Collins]

(W) 41-13223

A story of the war in China. The hero is an American aviator who has fought in Spain and Finland and now fights democracy's battles in China. He is disgusted with some of the things he encounters there, poor ammunition, unfaithful friends, red tape, and is on his way out when events occur which force him to return to the fight over Hankow.

"Mr. Archer has stretched the business of suspense far beyond its elasticity. That is the only fault of an otherwise sound tale. For his is not a story of false clues, leads into blind alleys, misleading characters. His people are real people and his situations real ones. Those who read this tale and like it as well as the reviewer liked it will be waiting for its successor, dealing, perhaps, with another front." F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p2 Ag 10 '41 1000w

"For a thriller the pace is altogether too slow, and not until the last two or three chapters when it brisks up a bit does it engage more than a languid attention." Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 My 9 '41 30w

Reviewed by Milton Hindus

New Repub 105:380 S 22 '41 240w

"C. S. Archer, an Englishman who knows China and flying, has fashioned from his knowledge of both a tale of adventure and mystery, spiced with humor and mild irony. Written in unpretentious prose, the narrative is swift and vivid, seldom permitting interest to flag." Thomas Lask

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 24 '41 490w

"It is a good story, well-told, unless one wishes to quibble over the rather unAmerican idiom into which the author's American characters lapse occasionally ('bloody,' 'kerb,' etc.) and the too-frequent nightgown and 'undies' episodes. The picture of foreign life in Hankow and the treaty ports is delightfully rendered. Mr. Archer's lively style and ability to delineate character indicate a promising new novelist. His treaty port foreigners are particularly authentic." Nym Wales

ARCHER, C. S.—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:17 S 13 '41 230w

"Actually nothing in the book is either overdrawn or impossible in Shanghai, notorious for the plotting by patriots and traitors which goes on within the underworld of the International Settlement. Yet, despite this, 'Hankow Return' somehow falls short of achieving absolute conviction. It remains, nevertheless, a first novel which rates relatively high on the melodramatic side, and frequently reveals Shanghai's demi-monde and underworld almost too nakedly."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 420w

"As yet, Mr. Archer has not learned the secret of transmuting detail, however careful, into atmosphere, or of making his characters either convincing or sympathetic, but his central theme of the substitution of 'dud' for real ammunition and of 'dope' smuggling is realistic enough to make a passable adventure story, more calculated to appeal to men than to women readers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p225 My 10 '41 300w

ARCHER, ROBERT. Death on the waterfront; pub. for the Crime club. 278p $2 Doubleday

Detective story.

41-22666

"There's an assistant D.A. with a faint trace of Philo Vance in him, and a bit of fluff who persists in tagging along at the risk of her neck, but her encounter with Big Edna in a chapter called 'Cat House' is something refreshing in the way of come-uppances for such young ladies. As a mystery the story is sturdy and satisfying, with some people in it who have real authenticity about them."

Mort. Post

+ New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 120w

"The attitude of the author is sympathetic to labor unions and to labor leaders who are straight, and definitely not sympathetic to racketeers who feather their own nests while ostensibly acting in the interest of organized labor. . . Mr. Archer's story, despite its many good qualities, is marred by a much-too-long explanation and by the careful withholding of the murderer's name until the very last page, by which time the reader is several jumps ahead of the author." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p20 N 23 '41 170w

"Troubles of N. Y. dockside unions given thorough, authentic, and thrilling airing in rather long-drawn-out but refreshingly different opus. Good enough."

Sat R of Lit 24:36 D 6 '41 40w

ARENSBERG, CONRAD MAYNADIER, and KIMBALL, SOLON TOOTHAKER. Family and community in Ireland. 322p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press [15s Oxford]

572.9415 Ireland—Social life and customs. Family. Community life. Ireland—Social conditions 40-14403

"This is a fascinating report by two cultural anthropologists on the social organization of the small farmers in County Clare, Ireland. The economy of the small farms is described and related to that of the big farms and is followed by an analysis of family labor and intra-family relations. Descriptive chapters summarize the observations of relationships between individuals and their communities under such chapter heads as: the relations of kindred, the kinship system, demography and familism, family transition at marriage, dispersal and emigration, the problem of the aged, the old in the community, familism and sex, occupation and status, and markets and the community." Am Soc R

"From the academic point of view the authors have written a classic of functional description. From a practical point of view, as the writers themselves point out, they have demonstrated the folly of any unilateral attack, including the economic, on matters as complexly interrelated as social systems. It is to be hoped that we shall soon have more of the County Clare data which the authors quote obviously have in their possession." Cora Du Bois

Am Anthropol 43:460 J1 '41 320w

"In a work otherwise so excellent, one surprising flaw appears. It is the absence of maps or cartographic devices for making clear demographic comparisons and ecological relationships. Since these aspects are treated in considerable detail, the patience of the reader is strained by having to wade through pages full of obscure place names and other geographic data which a few maps would vastly clarify. In contrast, statistical materials are conveniently summarized by graphs and tables." C. D. Clark

+ — Am Econ R 31:136 Mr '41 680w

Reviewed by C. W. M. Hart

Am J Soc 47:628 Ja '42 1450w

"This book contains methodological ideas of particular value for rural sociologists, students of the modern community, and individuals interested in American subsistence farming programs. Arensberg and Kimball have made a valuable contribution to the growing number of descriptive contemporary community studies." R. A. Polson

+ Am Soc R 5:977 D '40 340w

"That a book suggests further problems is, of course, a reason for commendation, not condemnation; and this is a very good book indeed. Besides its obvious interest to students of immigrant backgrounds and European folk cultures, it exemplifies one of the most fruitful contributions of anthropology to the sociological analysis of community structure and culture, equally helpful to scientific understanding and to practical intervention." G. P. Murdock

+ Ann Am Acad 217:219 S '41 600w

"It is impossible to speak too highly of the accuracy and diligence exhibited by the authors. They have not only studied every conceivable aspect of the economic life of the community in which they were interested, but have made a genuine effort to enter into the life of that community. . . It's a fine job—as far as it goes. But I cannot help asking, What is the point of it all? Supposing that it were possible to make a study as sound, accurate, sensitive as this is of every county and every town in Ireland. Would the reader or the research student know Ireland better? . . . You can learn more from the dozen short essays which Synge published as in 'Wicklow West Kerry and Connemara' than from all of this enormous book." David Grene

+ — Ethics 51:242 Ja '41 700w

"Sociologists who were impressed with Arensberg's The Irish Countryman, will welcome this larger and more definitive work dealing with essentially the same thesis but couched in a different theoretical formulation. Rural sociologists, both teachers and researchers, should find this study stimulating and challenging in its content and approach." V. J. Parenton

+ Social Forces 19:577 My '41 450w

ARISTOTLE. Basic works; ed, with an introd. by Richard McKeon. (Lifetime lib) 1487p $4 Random house

888.5

(W) 41-51734

"The entire texts of seven of the great philosopher's most important books are given, with selections from seven others. Of his works commonly considered authentic, only three are not included. Those reproduced completely are Physics, On Generation and

Corruption, On the Soul, Metaphysics, Nicomachean Ethics, Politics, and Poetics. Those given in part are: Organon, On the Heavens, The History of Animals, On the Generation of Animals, Rhetoric, and the short physical treatises. Bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

"The translators present the philosopher for what he means to us today and show him in full figure. Together, with the help of the editor, they accomplish what no one of them could begin to do alone. Their book is a long job for a reader to tackle, but every moment of perusal brings reward. As for Aristotle, he can occasionally be thrown by a good wrestler, though the contest is always liable to renewal." W. P. T.

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 6 '41 430w

"Random House is to be congratulated for having made it possible, for those whose intellectual interests outweigh their pocket-books, to have the bulk of Aristotle's writings, in the best available English translation, in their own libraries. While the dyed-in-the-wool Aristotelian is bound to regret the exclusion of any portion whatsoever of the Philosopher's works, he can not fail to be gratified by the way in which the selection was carried out." E. A. M.

+ J Philos 38:553 S 25 '41 700w

ARKLOW, DAMARIS. Just as I feared. 320p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Allen, G]

(W) 41-2802

A satire on life in Bolshevik Russia. The leading character is a young factory worker, Anna Polajeva, and the story follows the course of her love affair with a young Red Army officer.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 F 9 '41 240w

"[The author] regards the scene with ironic detachment, and [her] puppets—[she herself], I fancy considers them little else . . . give entertaining exhibitions of a variety of phases of the incurably inconsequent Russian temperament. The sense that impulses of an inherent barbarity are responsible for most of their antics may induce an occasional shudder, but [Miss] Arklow's manipulative agility generally manages to liquidate our horror and provoke a smile, however rueful." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 25 '40 150w

New Repub 104:286 F 24 '41 40w

"This book will get a good review in the Observer and a bad review in the Daily Worker, and in neither case will its literary merits have much to do with the verdict. Personally I found it amusing, and if I had to pronounce upon its accuracy, which I am not qualified to do, I should say that the descriptions of factory life are more convincing than the comic-opera scenes in which a parachute army lands in the wrong place and a young officer is acclaimed as a 'Soviet hero' for shooting a starving woman who has committed sabotage by eating a raw beetroot." George Orwell

New Statesman & Nation 20:384 O 19 '40 240w

"It is rather hard to define the nature of this novel about Soviet Russia. It is neither wholly realistic nor wholly satirical, but partakes of the qualities of both; to these is added a dash of extravaganza. It is an excellent mixture—that is, when it comes off; which is not always the case, by any means. The author seems to be in doubt which it is to be—a tale of fancy or of fact. So much of it is in broad outline, lacking the corroborative detail that stamps the legitimate novel. It has humor, however, of a dry economical brand; one wishes there were more of it." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p7 F 2 '41 600w

"This is a skittish satire on contemporary Russia. It is very lightly done, is nearly always amusing, sometimes in an ingeniously farcical fashion, but does not quite hang together or pull its satirical weight as successfully as one had hoped."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 330w

ARMSTRONG, EDWARD ALLWORTHY. Birds of the grey wind. 243p pl $3.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

914.15 Ireland—Description and travel. Birds —Ireland 41-7898

"This book, although it is largely concerned with the birds of Northern Ireland, deals also with the legends and landscape of that pleasant country. The author quotes frequently from his wide knowledge of Irish and English verse." Manchester Guardian

Bookmark 2:5 My '41

"Mr. Armstrong loves birds; the world in which he lives and through which he obviously has widely traveled; [and] his fellow human beings. He does not write of one without remembering and including the others. In 'Birds of the Grey Wind,' with its surpassingly beautiful photographic illustrations and some quaint (if unprofessional) drawings, he has made a real contribution to natural history. More than this, he has given us out-of-doors Ireland." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p4 F 2 '41 750w

"[The author] has gathered a fine collection of bird photographs, a number of them of his own taking. He knows his country intimately and discusses the extension of range of merganser, pintail and shield-duck, of greater black-backed gull and fulmar, and others. He has watched the wild swans in winter and the choughs breeding on the cliffs. And if in his enthusiasm he is rather apt to confuse the reader, as he touches on one thing after another, he has provided an excellent index and a map, with the help of which his facts relating to each bird may be easily assembled. A most attractive book." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 29 '40 130w

"It is said that no Nature book can be successful nowadays unless its illustrations are good. 'Birds of the Grey Wind' has a number of really excellent photographs." Seton Gordon

+ Nature 148:546 N 8 '41 660w

"Birds of the Grey Wind is a very courageous attempt to get atmosphere, but it cannot live up to its title. It is a chronicle; a log rather than a story, a photograph rather than a painting. All the same it is full of good stuff about Irish birds. Ireland is not rich in birds, but those it has are as wild and fine as Ireland itself. Mr. Armstrong has a great knowledge of birds and a good knowledge of history, and people will like to read about his experiences. Some of his observations are quite new." James Fisher

+ Spec 165:66 J1 19 '40 90w

"A book of this type on Irish birds is something of a novelty and certainly a pleasant one. The author . . . hopes to communicate to others the comfort which he himself has found in two wars from the birds and flowers, the scenery and the folk-ways of Ireland."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Ag 24 '40 450w

ARMSTRONG, GEORGE GILBERT. Why another world war? how we missed collective security. 224p $2.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen, G]

940.5 Europe—Politics. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Peace. League of nations [A41-3154]

"Collective security failed not on account of defects in the Covenant of the League, which in the author's opinion could have been remedied, but on account of the successive betrayals

ARMSTRONG, G. G.—Continued
of the principles of the League by cynical or stupid Tory politicians in Britain, seconded by a misguided France." Nation

Nation 153:166 Ag 23 '41 80w

"The statement of the problem and its solution is far too simple."

— Spec 166:686 Je 27 '41 320w

"Mr. Armstrong's analysis succeeds in the end only in showing that the one answer to force is force and that, when the time comes to give this answer, the greatest lovers of peace and collective security are the least willing to give it. Mr. Armstrong is not quite happy about the place of force in the world. It is indeed a subject which needs exploration, and the author might have been better occupied had he examined the proper functions and limitations of force instead of going over so much old ground again."

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 29 '41 390w

ARMSTRONG, MARGARET NEILSON. The Blue Santo murder mystery. 306p $2 Random house 41-22060

Detective story.

"If you read 'The Man With No Face' and thought it was rather a piffling achievement for the author of those likable biographies 'Trelawny' and 'Fanny Kemble,' start all over again and try this one, a different sort of thing altogether. Margaret Armstrong has gone to town this time and no mistake. 'The Blue Santo Murder Mystery' is one of the season's best, an item that must not be missed by those fussy people who are always yelling for a Grade A baffle of the literate school, and it's so loaded with basic mystery that it should panic the problem fans as well." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 O 26 '41 320w

"There are two solutions to this mystery and the true one is almost as farfetched as the false one which precedes it. The characterization is above reproach and so is the writing, but the story drags more than a little." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 120w

"Stick to it to end and you'll find a real surprise, but earlier going is slow and characters overdone. Could be better."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 25 '41 40w

"It gets off to a slow start; the detective is too completely the gentleman sleuth, and the suspense, the taut fascination, the blood-tingling episodes of the best work of this kind are missing."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 110w

ARMSTRONG, MARGARET NEILSON. The man with no face. 279p $2 Random house

(W) 41-975

Detective story.

Booklist 37:293 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"Besides constant danger and considerable death, there's a well contrived genealogical interest and a big surprise on the last page. This makes easy reading and an elegant parlor game." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 Ja 26 '41 130w

"A very complex plot, so carefully woven that you won't find it a bit confusing. The conclusion is a little weak—Miss Armstrong doesn't seem as at-home in Florida as she does in other sections of the United States and Australia—but the suspense is so great that you won't mind." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 70w

"The beginning of the story is a trifle slow, but later on events follow each other more rapidly and the suspense is gradually augmented. The narrative does not follow the usual pattern of detective fiction, but it is all the more interesting for being so different." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 26 '41 250w

"Top drawer."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 F 8 '41 40w

ARMSTRONG, THOMAS. The Crowthers of Bankdam. 623p $2.75 Macmillan [9s 6d Collins]

41-4403

Chronicle novel of four generations of Yorkshire mill owners and woolen manufacturers. It covers in time from 1854 to 1921, with Simeon Crowther in possession of the Bankdam mills.

"The narrative is inexhaustible in incident; sometimes humorous, often exciting, always interesting. A novel of industry told from the employers' point of view and with sympathy is not common nowadays. This is a very good one." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic JI '41 120w

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

"As Mr. Armstrong succeeds only partially in animating his vast horde of characters, which increases in number as the generations succeed one another from 1854 to 1921, the adventures that befall some of them sometimes fail wholly to grip one's attention. Moreover, the good characters are such obvious favorites and the bad characters are so thoroughly contemptible that the sharp contrast sometimes palls. . . 'The Crowthers of Bankdam' too often approaches human caricature and is not wholly effective, but as a study of the good old ways versus modern business morality in pre-war England it suggests a moral which is far from insignificant or uninteresting." Iris Barry

+ Books p8 F 23 '41 550w

"It is a pleasure to relax with an unhurried story that attempts to solve no world problems—a story that tells of plain human beings, as unexotic as you and I and the nearest neighbor." V. B. Larsson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 600w

"Given a skillful writer, this type of novel is bound to be interesting. Mr. Armstrong is such a writer. Under his handling the story of the Crowthers seems to tell itself humorously, dramatically, tragically by turns. The villains are perhaps painted too black, but the heroes and heroines are genuine human beings, not completely virtuous but sound at the core."

+ Christian Century 58:629 My 7 '41 180w

"A massive and able performance. . . The ramifications are enormous, but considered as a novel of business this is brilliant work." Harold Brighthouse

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 18 '40 400w

"One hopes that Mr. Armstrong's first novel will not be his last. It is a big, strong, fighting book, tonic and laughter-swept, with an undertow of something finer than mere optimism." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 F 23 '41 750w

"Mr. Armstrong puts everything in, with a Troilopian insistence on the importance of money, a good eye for detail, and a knack with a big canvas. Well worth the time it will take you to read it."

+ New Yorker 17:83 F 22 '41 60w

"On the whole, 'The Crowthers of Bankdam' is a solid, we -constructed piece of work although stylistically it leaves something to be desired. . . A glossary of Yorkshire words and phrases would be helpful to the American reader."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 850w

"There was scope for a full and varied story in the material Mr. Armstrong has got together, but his is a markedly conventional treatment and in any case he is as yet not sufficiently practised a writer to do his best even on conventional lines. The story, in fact, though its industry is to be admired, is inclined to be heavily pedestrian and is much too sprawling and fragmentary."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 19 '40
390w

ARNOLD, ELLIOTT. Finlandia; the story of Sibelius; il. by Lolita Granahan. 241p $2.50 Holt

B or 92 Sibelius, Jean Julius Christian—
Juvenile literature (W) 41-3038

Biography of Sibelius for young people. It is "a full-length portrait of the man as well as the artist, his dark moods, his quick gaiety, his childlike impulsiveness, his utter sincerity and, as his spirit is so bound up with Finland's, there is an account of that indomitable little country's struggle to rouse the admiration of any lover of liberty." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 37:363 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 F 23 '41 310w

"This is a very readable and sympathetic biography of Finland's greatest composer, well suited to the youthful readers for whom it was written."

+ Cath World 153:254 My '41 270w

"Very timely and very moving is the story of Sibelius. Here is no written-down biography for the young, but an informed and readable life of the great musician who interpreted his country and her struggle for freedom to the whole world." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:100 Mr '41 330w

"Young music students will be stimulated through following the steps by which the distinguished composer achieved his technical skill. Young and old alike, who cherish admiration for the country Sibelius so truly represents, will feel closer to Finland through reading this fine biography. The enthusiasm of the author is well accompanied by striking symbolical pictures." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:105 Mr '41 100w

"The dramatic stories of talented Sibelius and spirited Finland are wedded in this warmly sympathetic biography. . . . If the reader is sincerely interested in music, Sibelius, and Finland, the journalistic style will carry him to the conclusion of the book." J. E. van Herwynen

Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 130w

"This is a biography written in the white heat of an enthusiasm which is contagious. Much of that part which deals with Sibelius's mechanical development as an artist will be of interest chiefly to young musical students, but its interpretation of the forces behind his music is invaluable for any appreciative listener." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 16 '41 440w

"A notable life of the composer who more than any other person has come to typify the spirit of the nation he celebrates in his music. The book gives a background of Finnish history and an inspiring interpretation of the Finnish national character."

+ New Yorker 17:91 My 24 '41 80w

"The book, attractively illustrated, will undoubtedly, and deservedly be enjoyed by young boys and girls, but it is hoped that it will not be used for serious music study." P. H. L.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 15 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

ARNOLD, HENRY HARLEY, and EAKER, IRA CLARENCE. Winged warfare. 265p pl map $3 Harper

358.4 Aeronautics, Military (W) 41-4752

Discussion of the organization of the American air force—its fighting planes, their design, production, crews, bases, strategy and tactics, and air defence. The authors, who are chief of the Army Air corps and a fellow-officer, suggest plans for coordinating the various phases of the national plan, and its expansion. Index.

Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:381 Ja '42 20w

"The focus is upon an explanation of what aerial warfare is, the weapons used, the men who use them, bases and organization, tactics and strategy, defense and production, research and, in the last chapter, 'Air Force for Us.' Within this focus the authors have produced an admirable work, clearly written, easily read, readily intelligible to any layman, despite its technicalities. . . . If it errs, it errs too much on the side of what one would least expect from an airman—conservative vision and over-optimism." H. W. Baldwin

+ New Repub 105:483 O 13 '41 800w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:3 Ja '41

"A well-balanced and easily digested diet on the whole subject of air power. Its framework is simple and direct. Without waste of words, it gets down to the fundamental requirements of an air force. . . . 'Winged Warfare' answers many of the questions about air power that are uppermost in people's minds today. It is must reading for any one who wants the real facts on military aviation from men who know what it is all about." L. E. Neville

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '41 1800w

"An authoritative, forward-looking job. Excellent photographs."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Mr 15 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

"A very useful textbook for the fighting forces and the layman alike. It covers the whole ground of organization, procurement, training, tactics, and strategy. The politician and the economist will find valuable data on the time lag in aircraft production." Kurt Lachmann

+ Yale R ns 31:194 autumn '41 900w

ARNOLD, MARY ELLICOTT. The story of Tompkinsville. 102p il $1; pa 65c Co-operative league of the U.S.A.

331.833 Cooperation. Housing—Nova Scotia. Labor and laboring classes. Tompkinsville, Nova Scotia 40-13969

"Cooperators in and about New York have long known Miss Arnold for her leadership of Consumers Cooperative Services and for her work in metropolitan cooperative housing. When Miss Arnold resigned as head of C.C.S. in 1937 she stepped into a new field of cooperative housing, and her experiences and work with the coal miners of Nova Scotia make up [this book]. This little book is, in part, a story of the work which was done and the difficulties overcome in building a cooperative housing community; and partly a textbook for similar groups to use." Survey

"The narrative which details this project step by step together with the appendix which comprises all manner of detail on costs, materials, financing, etc., provides complete data on how to go about a venture of this kind. The story is a convincing one considering the limitations of the printed page. It is hoped that it will fall into the hands of many American social workers, pastors and others vitally concerned with human rehabilitation." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 32:371 Ag 23 '40 600w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks

Social Forces 19:438 Mr '41 290w

"Other groups will benefit greatly by a careful study of the book, and cooperators in general may wish to read it as a description of a milestone in cooperative progress." Elliot Pratt

+ Survey 76:341 N '40 230w

ARNOLD, THURMAN WESLEY. The bottle-necks of business. 335p il $2.50 Reynal

338.8 Monopolies. Trusts, Industrial. Sherman antitrust law, 1890 (W) 40-27632

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"All in all, this is a very human and a very significant book. As a rallying cry to the consumers of the nation, it should have a wide influence. It is more than exhortation; it is filled with facts and illustrations of business practices and frustrations of fair competition little known to the public and to many students of economics. It might well, with certain cautions, be made required reading for anyone wishing to be informed, or assuming to have an opinion, on the merits of the Sherman act." F. A. Fetter

+ Am Econ R 31:160 Mr '41 1150w

Bookmark 2:4 Mr '41

"Mr. Arnold's attitude toward labor unions and the Sherman Act is open to very serious criticism. His hostility to unions is thinly veiled, and he sympathizes loudly with 'industrialists' who 'felt that they were being compelled' by the Wagner Act 'to deal with labor leaders who they knew were not interested in the legitimate objectives of labor.' This is nonsense. . . In conclusion, it should be pointed out that The Bottlenecks of Business, while lacking the sparkle of Mr. Arnold's earlier works, is, nevertheless, by far the clearest and most intelligible description of how the Sherman Act functions, and what is being done in its name, that has yet been published." P. M. Sweeney

+ Harvard Law R 54:530 Ja '41 1150w

"Possibly Arnold overrates the improvements taking place in antitrust enforcement. Against the present background of government control, it is easy to underestimate the upsetting effect of antitrust work. Certainly, he fails to emphasize the vacillation which the record discloses between enforcing competition and preventing unfair competition. After all these things are said, however, Arnold's book leaves the impression that a new day may be dawning in the enforcement of competition." E. C. Bratt

Management R 29:417 N '40 650w

"When Mr. Arnold deals with the interpretation and enforcement of the Sherman Act in the present administration, he writes interestingly, but when he ventures into the field of economics he is admittedly less at ease, and sometimes not too careful of the implications of his facts. There is also an unfortunate appearance of sensational exposé. On the whole his interpretation of the legal causes of present marketing difficulties is suggestive and well worth further study." W. H.

+ Special Libraries 32:24 Ja '41 210w

"There is to be found in The Bottlenecks of Business, Thurman Arnold's story of anti-trust law enforcement, much that is interesting and entertaining, much that is important, and much, sometimes combining these qualities, that is peculiarly Thurman Arnold. A stickler for detailed accuracy and precision can find a lot by which to be annoyed. . . It would be a great mistake, however, to write the book off as inconsequential because it is sometimes casually constructed around the edges." D. M. Keezer

+ Yale Law J 50:727 F '41 1100w

ARSEN'EV, VLADIMIR KLAVDIEVICH. Der-su, the trapper; tr. from the Russian by Malcolm Burr. 352p il maps $3 Dutton [15s Secker & Warburg]

915.7 Ussuri—Siberia. Hunting—Siberia. Scientific expeditions 40-29618

A popular account of travels in the Ussuri region of far eastern Siberia in the early years of the twentieth century. Much of the narrative is woven around the character and achievements of Dersu Uzala, a native, who acted as the author's guide, counselor and friend on two expeditions. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:268 F 15 '41

"The narrative is illuminated by a wealth of tiny pen-and-ink drawings, all good, all as vivid in character as the text. A first-rate map clarifies each of the three trips, and a glossary and an index are both adequate. I enjoyed the book from beginning to end."

William Beebe

+ Books p2 Ja 26 '41 750w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 14 '41 750w

"Dersu was a hunter, belonging to a dwindling native tribe. . . Gorki once compared him to the Pathfinder, and, indeed, Hawkeye has nothing on him when it comes to solving the mystery of the bent twig, or the case of the frightened birds. But I found Dersu even more delightful than Cooper's hero; for he is full of odd and endearing inconsistencies. He is brave and yet timid, a hunter with much of the sensitive feelings of a 'Grey Owl,' wise yet startlingly superstitious; but altogether, a very chivalrous wild gentleman of the woods." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 17 '40

280w

N Y Times p18 Ja 19 '41 440w

New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 50w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore

Springf'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 750w

"This book is for leisurely and meditative reading. For the summary it is essential to set down that the setting is the taiga of Ussuria—the forested hinterland of Vladivostok. Of the author it hardly suffices to state that he was styled by such an expert as Fritjof Nansen 'the great explorer of Eastern Siberia,' for the surveying primarily associated with the word exploration was but one of the several branches of scientific inquiry that he was equally qualified to undertake."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p722 D 9 '39 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

"'Dersu the Trapper' is so good a book that one wonders who Arseniev is and why this book had not been translated from the Russian before. Zaplicka does not include him in his bibliography of 'Aboriginal Siberia,' nor does Arseniev's American publisher have any biographical information about him, except that he is dead. 'Dersu the Trapper,' however, is a classic that will keep both Arseniev and Dersu alive in our hearts." C. H. Leonard

+ Yale R n s 30:833 summer '41 650w

ARTHUR, SIR GEORGE COMPTON ARCHIBALD, 3d bart. Concerning Winston Spencer Churchill. 184p $2 Kinsey [6s Heinemann]

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer 41-8912

Sketch of Winston Churchill's life in which "the intention was clearly not to write a biography: the book is an essay in revelation rather than a chronological record—revelation of how rich and varied Mr. Churchill's life has been and how stern and salient the apprenticeship he served in preparation for the supreme duty now committed to him." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

Reviewed by Frank Kelley

Books p16 Jl 27 '41 60w

"Sir George Arthur's friendly and artless narrative seems to lose interest in its subject as soon as the General Strike is over. 'Concerning Winston Spencer Churchill' is an eminently readable book. Nevertheless, its truncating the most vital part of Mr. Churchill's career seriously impairs its value. This, if not 'Hamlet' with the Prince of Denmark left out, is certainly the Prince of Denmark without the soliloquies." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 8 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '41 10w

"Sir George Arthur protests in his preface that his book has no claim to literary merit or inside information. He is too modest. He writes with a vivacity that never flags, and if he brings nothing much new to light about Mr. Churchill, he assembles a good deal of little-known information and anecdote about persons, mostly the great of the land, whose lives have intersected or influenced Mr. Churchill's at one time or another." H. B. + Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 21 '41 350w

"Writing biographies of the Prime Minister is a popular diversion in these days, and if anyone is making a collection of these publications there is no reason why Sir George Arthur's book should not have a place in it. It is an extremely discursive production—but that has its merits, since it allows several good stories of no real relevance to be dragged in—and very strangely proportioned. . . There is a fine crop of misprints, but when a reference to such a person as Burke occurs in the text we are obligingly told in a footnote that this means 'the Rt. Hon. E. Burke, 1729-1797.' Similarly with Bright. This is very helpful."

— + Spec 166:22 Ja 3 '41 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 170w

"Sir George Arthur's book goes far to satisfying the public interest, here and elsewhere, in the man who leads inspiringly its crusade to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p638 D 21 '40 330w

ARVEY, VERNA. Choreographic music; music for the dance. 523p il $3.75 Dutton

781.5085 Dance music 41-3039

A history of dance music including primitive and ritualistic forms as well as the classics and modern jazz. Indexes.

Booklist 37:384 Ap 15 '41

"For the student, 'Choreographic Music' is a valuable book. The very lists, which make for dull reading, offer him exhaustive data on his subject, while the bibliography and the chapter notes guide him to the sources of the author's material. Miss Arvey's range of information is broad and her scholarly book covers the function of music in primitive dance rituals, dance music in the Middle Ages, ballet music of the European composers, dance movements in symphonies, opera, problems of the dancer, problems of the composer and many other aspects of this age-old union of two great arts. Those paragraphs of the book which present Miss Arvey's own commentary on her subject are thoroughly rewarding, for she is clear of thought and fair of judgment." Walter Terry

+ Books p13 Ja 18 '42 270w

"Were the author less opinionated, less enchanted by picturesque but irrelevant detail, better grounded in the history both of dance and music, and more critical of the judgments she relies upon as authoritative, the book might have contained those brilliant aperçus of the intuitive historian which later research only serves to justify. As it is, Choreographic Music has done the first essential job—that of opening the door upon a new field of study, with a ringing challenge to enter."

+ — Theatre Arts 25:320 Ap '41 300w

ASCH, SHALOM. What I believe; tr. by Maurice Samuel. 201p $2 Putnam

296 Jews—Religion. Christianity. Religion (W) 41-5567

The Jewish author of a recent fictional life of Christ, the Nazarene (Book Review Digest, 1939) here states his own confession of faith, reviews the history of two religions, Judaism and Christianity, and their status in a world that is today made hideous by a force opposed to both of them.

Reviewed by A. J. Nock

Atlantic My '41 100w

Booklist 37:401 My 1 '41

"Shortly after the publication of 'The Nazarene,' Sholem Asch said in an interview: 'I live more in the time of Christ than today . . . and that now is my reality.' It is this reality, which weaves back and forth over a period of two thousand years in his present book, that accounts for its strength—its agelessness—and for its great weakness as well. It is a vastly disturbing book, but the threads between it and today are loose and incomplete." Milton Lehman

+ — Books p23 Ap 6 '41 700w

"Every sensitive person who reads this book will weep, not only for the Jews but for himself and for his children. . . Here is another Moses for a suffering people. Here is another Isaiah calling for repentance. Here is a latter-day Jewish saint who knows the contribution of Judaism and would have this contribution meaningful in our day. Because of the book's beauty of expression and its prayerful spirit many will take its message to heart." A. H. Behrenberg

+ Christian Century 58:625 My 7 '41 750w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:18 Ap 15 '41 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

ASHBROOK, HARRIETTE. The purple onion mystery. 247p $2 Coward-McCann

41-13224

Detective story.

"This is a speedy and amusing item, suitable for all kinds of fans, complete with playful chapter headings and funny gambits wherever they will do the most good." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Je 15 '41 160w

"This is about the best of Miss Ashbrook's mystery stories, and that is no faint praise." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Je 8 '41 190w

"Plots, within plots in this recommended mystery."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 7 '41 50w

"Copious action and much amusing dialogue. Spike, tho' still unpredictable, shows real talent for painstaking deduction. Pleasant."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 14 '41 30w

ASHTON, HELEN. See Jordan, H. R.

ASKINS, CHARLES. The art of handgun shooting. 219p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

799.31 Pistols. Shooting (W) 41-12405

"This book is profusely illustrated and discusses in detail the fine points of the sport of revolver and pistol shooting, including stance, grip, trigger pull, sight adjustment, training in slow and rapid fire, and match psychology. . . There are also discussions of the principal American guns, of personal defense and of the ballistics of revolver ammunition." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Booklist 38:5 S '41

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 190w

ASPINWALL, MARGUERITE. The desert calling. 280p $2 Greystone

41-19634

Pamela Strong had spent her childhood with her grandmother in Chicago, while her grandfather traveled all over the earth gathering material for his books. After her grandmother's death, Pam's father came to Chicago bringing an attractive young stepmother to Pam and the promise of a house in the Arizona desert as Pam's sixteenth birthday present. This story is of Pam's happy summer in the adobe house, getting acquainted with her family and making new friends. For girls twelve to fifteen.

ASPINWALL, MARGUERITE—Continued

"There is a nice appreciation of the desert and the book is better written than most. It is hard to explain the disappointment felt upon finishing it. Perhaps it is because the attractive surface has little depth beneath it." Eleanor Kidder

+ — Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 140w

"Balanced diet for young romantics." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:180 N '41

ASSOCIATION FOR CHILDHOOD EDUCATION. Childhood; the beginning years and beyond. 5v $13 to libraries and schools; discount of 5 percent for cash to all purchasers c1936-37 Houghton

649 Child study, anal. Children—Care and hygiene. Play. Nature study. Children's literature—Collections. Children's songs

"This set was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin July 1937, p.34-36 [Book Review Digest, 1937]. P. F. Collier & son corporation have taken over the subscription sale. Although this company reports a difference in paper, it is not evident in the sets used for comparison. Whether the binding is identical cannot be stated as the earlier set used for comparison differed from the description given of the previous copy examined for review in being a non-waterproof book cloth. The present set is bound in a light-weight washable book cloth, but has not been definitely identified as Dupont PX." Subscription Bks Bul

"The set is unusual in its uniform excellence and is recommended for purchase by parents, public and normal school librarians."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:19 Ap '41 160w

ATHERTON, SARAH HENRY. Mark's own. 492p $2.75 Bobbs

41-2202

"Eighty years in the life of a coal mine, beginning in 1849. Also, the story of the mine-owner, his wife, son, and granddaughter, with many instructive details on the mining of anthracite coal, the drama of the rise of the union, the way the anthracite industry changed the lives of the people in a Pennsylvania valley, and what happened when coal was no longer a profitable industry." New Yorker

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

"To the reviewer, it is a sentimental novel attempting a task which calls for sterner treatment, whether, while remaining a woman's novel, in detachment or in passion. But the mood of the tale is a very familiar one and I do not doubt that many readers, perhaps a majority, would prefer it this way." F. T. Marsh

Books p4 F 16 '41 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"'Mark's Own' is a first novel of great distinction. . . [It] is an impressive work on many scores. Miss Atherton is obviously at home in this realm of industry and portrays splendidly the dark and cruel pageantry of coal. Bias she has none and tells her many faceted story with respect and sympathy for all involved in the personal and economic struggles. Occasionally the weight of her material and the complexity of her pattern demand greater craftsmanship than she yet possesses, but this does not mar the strong tones of the picture as a whole."

+ N Y Times p6 F 16 '41 900w

"Serious, a touch heavy, and almost too educational."

New Yorker 17:81 F 15 '41 90w

ATKINS, ELIZABETH. Holy suburb. 348p $2.50 Dutton

41-1123

Life in a suburb of Lincoln, Nebraska, some forty years ago. Father Admire, a prosperous farmer hungry for learning, decided to move near to a college town, so that his children could get the education he himself lacked. The story is told from the viewpoint of the women of the Admire household: Mama, a quiet little person with a love for poetry; and her three daughters, Averil, Susanna, and Ted.

"'Holy Suburb' is written with such unforced and even undirected intimacy of every-day incident, individual character and tender humor as plainly bespeaks personal memory. It is as if the author had turned back the years and blotted out the distance, to show a human family she knows well, in a generally unsung but probably not uncharacteristic American existence of forty years ago. And, with her, we laugh at it and love it." John Patton

+ Books p10 F 16 '41 600w

Nation 152:676 Je 7 '41 110w

"'Holy Suburb' is by no means a perfect novel—toward the end, for instance, it falters rather markedly—but it is fresh and alive and amusing and it rings very true. No one should be put off by either its title or its theme. This is genuinely an engaging book." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p7 F 16 '41 750w

"The novel suffers somewhat by too much attention to the whimsicalities and cute sayings of the children; whenever scene and incident are turned over to the adults the book becomes more pithy and interesting. As a period piece it successfully recreates the denominational college community of forty years ago, with its gossip, its revivals, its evangelical approach to all problems, the clerical strategies and politics. The humor is rich and not at all patronizing, for the gaiety in the Admire family equals its piety. It is not a momentous novel, but it is fresh and cheerful." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 F 22 '41 410w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

ATKINSON, RAYMOND CUMINGS. Federal role in unemployment compensation administration; a report prepared for the Committee on social security. 192p $2 Social science research council. Com. on social security

331.2544 Insurance, Unemployment 41-7791

"This is the final volume in a series of studies dealing with the administrative organization and methods of the existing federal-state system of unemployment compensation, undertaken in the four years ending in 1940. The earlier reports were directed toward the improvement of the administrative procedures and practices on the state level. This volume is a general appraisal of the present system. The author's conclusion, presented in the final chapter, is that we should scrap the present system and come to a national system of unemployment compensation." (Survey) Index.

Reviewed by Blair Stewart

Am Econ R 31:669 S '41 600w

"A most valuable book not only for teachers and practitioners of public administration, but also for students of American federal theory and practice. Although the author's primary concern is administrative practices and procedures, and the legislation upon which they are based, the broader implications of his study are never lost to view." A. N. Christensen

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1193 D '41 380w

"Although this volume is primarily concerned with the problems that have grown out of nation-region-state control of employment security, it is packed full of information on unemployment insurance that can be of immense aid to both its friends and its enemies." Charles Aikin

+ Ann Am Acad 217:197 S '41 400w

"This book does not present everything that is to be said on the subject but it is a very able presentation of what might be called the Washington side of the case—which is, indeed, a strong one." E. E. Witte

Survey 77:132 Ap '41 450w

ATTAWAY, WILLIAM. Blood on the forge. 279p $2 Doubleday

41-13929

Story of three Negro brothers, who leave their Kentucky farm to go to western Pennsylvania to work in the steel mills during the first World war.

"Mr. Attaway has a rich vein of human experience to explore, and he has, I think, the equipment to do so. 'Blood on the Forge' is only a beginning." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p8 Ag 24 '41 750w

"This novel portraying life in the raw is not for those who shun the unlovely aspects of human nature, who have a distaste for bloodshed and the cruder manifestations of sex. Indeed one of its chief claims to literary distinction consists in its author's refusal to sentimentalize his earthy men and women. The artistic integrity Mr. Attaway evinced in his first book, 'Let Me Breathe Thunder' [Book Review Digest, 1939] is equally evident in the faithful depiction of the primitive approach to life of a social group on whose laborious efforts the whole scheme of modern industrial life is based." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '41 750w

"Mr. Attaway writes of his people knowingly and with warm appreciation. They are humorous, bewildered, stout-hearted, likable, and in no sense quaint. Their speech sounds completely authentic. A fine, sincere book."

+ New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 40w

ATTLEE, CLEMENT RICHARD, and others. Labour's aims in war and peace; with a pref. by Lord Snell. 153p $1.75 Rand school [pa 3s 6d Lincolns-Prager, ltd, 10 Drake st, London, W.C. 1]

940.53 Labor party (Great Britain). European war, 1939—Great Britain. Russo-Finnish war, 1939-1940. Peace [A40-3357]

"This book is composed partly of declarations, spoken and written, made by responsible leaders of the British labor party and its national executive." (Spring'd Republican) Partial contents: Is this an imperialist war? by H. J. Laski; For the rights of man, by Herbert Morrison; End the terror! by B. A. Gould; Messages to the German workers, by Philip Noel-Baker; The peace we are striving for, by C. R. Attlee; International government, by Leonard Woolf; The war and the future, by H. J. Laski; Peace must be won for humanity, by Hugh Dalton.

Reviewed by W. H. Wickwar
Am Pol Sci R 35:1206 D '41 230w
Booklist 37:402 My 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:881 Jl '41 10w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 140w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 20 '41 700w
Time 37:92 Mr 10 '41 450w

ATWATER, MONTGOMERY MEIGS. Flaming forest; with ill. by R. Farrington Elwell. 212p $1.75 Little

41-19198

A young forest ranger, discharged from the service for supposed neglect, takes a job as guide on a dude ranch. While on a trip he discovers a forest fire, renders efficient service, apprehends a criminal, and is reinstated into the forest service. For ages twelve to sixteen.

"It may seem simple to an amateur to write a boy's book about forest fire-fighting that makes a boy think he is there, but it takes skill to keep it going as fast as this does without using the tricks of the Westerns." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 N 2 '41 240w

"Good picture of forest fire fighting and of the courage and heroism necessary for this branch of government service." E. A. Babcock

+ Library J 66:1001 N 15 '41 80w

ATWOOD, DASCOMB. Unfinished tapestry. 312p $2.50 Liveright

41-5217

The "unfinished tapestry" is the life of an understanding woman, Anne Preble, wife of a Boston Brahmin, and mother of three grown up children. In her middle forties Anne transferred the family to New York, so that all of them could have a wider horizon. Her gentle guidance of the whole family thru the next few years makes the story.

"The story is not told with much skill, but it is written with sympathy and some shrewdness."

+ Books p12 Mr 9 '41 240w

Reviewed by E. B. Gulick

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 440w

"Here is a novel on a theme of universal interest treated with a nice balance of humor and seriousness. Considerable skill is shown in the character portrayals. One remembers these people and sympathizes with them, and most particularly with Anne, who has learned how to give fair requital to the claims of the flesh and the spirit." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 9 '41 650w

"Mildly thoughtful in tone, this book does not cut deep enough into experience to be significant. Like its heroine, Mrs. Preble, it is a little faded in coloring. Unfortunately for its interest, the kind of life it deals with, its travels of the day before yesterday, seem at this moment remote and unimportant. . . . There are curious lapses of taste, which stand out glaringly against the quiet-colored background, and the author has made crude use of touches of superstition which cast no forebodings over the reader's mind, but merely add to the book's effect of slightly amateurish craftsmanship." C. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 Je 21 '41 230w

"The warp of the Preble tapestry is the understanding of the mother and her desire to shield her husband from the shocks of modern life; the exciting happenings in the lives of the two daughters, the son and the respective in-laws are clashing tones which well meaning and honest living have to accept in the weaving of a consistent pattern which might be the setting for any family of wealth and prominence in this country. Every reader for- sees the marriage of the mother and the brother-in-law in the event of Alfred Preble's death, but to make that happen six months after the husband's death detracts from the story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 450w

ATWOOD, JESSE HOWELL. Thus be their destiny; the personality development of Negro youth in three communities. 96p maps pa 75c Am. council on educ.

325.26 Negroes—Youth problems 41-13041

"An account of the problems, aspirations and chief frustrations of a group of Negro young people who are growing up in certain sections of the American environment. Individual though their cases are, they are presented in sufficient detail to throw interesting light on the problem of personality development as it is manifested among Negro girls and boys in widely separated communities." (School & Society) Contents: Negro youth in Milton, Pennsylvania, by I. D. Walker and V. J. Davis; Negro youth in Greensboro, North Carolina, by D. W. Wyatt; Negro youth in Galesburg, Illinois, by J. H. Atwood; In conclusion, by R. L. Sutherland.

ATWOOD, J. H.—Continued

School & Society 53:712 My 31 '41 60w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 20w

Reviewed by F. B. Washington
Survey 77:310 O '41 300w

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH. The double man. 189p $2 Random house [7s 6d Hogarth]

821 41-6863

"The title of Mr. Auden's new volume is based on a passage in Montaigne: 'We are, I know not how, double in ourselves, so that what we believe we disbelieve, and cannot rid ourselves of what we condemn.' The book is divided into three sections. The first is a poem of some 1,700 lines, written in the form of a New Year letter to a friend about some of the significant implications of current events. The second, and longest, section consists of a series of short poems, anecdotes, essays and quotations, through which various points in the long poem are elaborated, illustrated and explained. The last section is a sonnet sequence about man's search for a just and reasonable personal and social life." Publisher's note

"I believe 'The Double Man' will have a greater effect on contemporary poetry than that of any poem since 'The Waste Land.'" Lloyd Frankenberg

+ Books p5 My 11 '41 550w

"As an artist possessed of a mind capable of the keenest analysis and the assimilation of the toughest materials, Auden is, of course, preeminent. What Auden has to say will become of first rate importance as soon as he has thought his critique through, when he has the full support of reason and conviction. Above all he must escape the English tradition in which the poet usurps the place of philosopher and theologian and becomes something of a secular prophet with the respect and impunity once attached to the medieval fool. This is very nice, but it gets in the way of exact thinking." W. J. Grace

+ Commonweal 34:279 Jl 11 '41 1750w

"New Year Letter seems to me, within certain limits, a great success. It is thoroughly readable: Auden handles with easy virtuosity humorous and serious material—sometimes his method of joining them verges on simple Byronic alternation, but they tend to be swept together by the tone and verse-movement, rapid, informal, and completely adaptable. The poetry, strained through so many abstractions, is occasionally a little pale; but it is poetry. Auden has accomplished the entirely unexpected feat of making a successful long poem out of a reasonable, objective, and comprehensive discussion." Randall Jarrell

+ Nation 152:440 Ap 12 '41 1000w

"W. H. Auden's new poem is the most ambitious he has so far written, and in many ways the most successful. People who haven't followed his recent development will find on reading it that they are entering an unfamiliar and uncomfortable but stimulating world of ideas." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 104:473 Ap 7 '41 1450w

"In the present volume he is writing again at his best, in a mixed series of letters in rhyming tetrameters, prose commentary, and sonnet form. It is Audenesque in the sense that an expansion of heated emotion and idea will suddenly contract in a few lines of hardened and enduring poetry." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p4 My 25 '41 1400w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 17:83 Ap 12 '41 200w

"The poem is nearly always interesting, not least as an instance of the intellectuals' trend toward religiosity, with its concomitant sense of guilt and desire for penance, though Auden wears his rue at different slant from T. S. Eliot. It is sometimes wise, often witty, and occasionally, especially when the passage has to do with music, delightful poetry, but it remains more engaging as ethics than as verse. A long poem made up entirely of couplets in iambic tetrameter palls on the ear, and when it deals largely in abstractions there is little room for imagery that will compensate for the lack of melody. One could wish that Auden had found a new style of architecture to house such pertinent ideas, yet one cannot but welcome so entertaining an argument for a change of heart." Babette Deutsch

+ Poetry 58:148 Je '41 1000w

Pratt p16 autumn '41

"'The Double Man' displays the multiple Auden: the bravura performer and the careful craftsman, the lively iconoclast and the studious wit. 'The Double Man' is a poem of some seventeen hundred lines which is already being hailed as a phenomenon, a landmark, a Return to Order. The most experimental of contemporary poets has gone to school to Pope, and the result of his exercise in discipline may be a turning-point for the 1940s, the long-awaited and reasoned reply to the Wastelanders. It is not quite a great poem. In spite of the far-ranging couplets and the air of clarity, it does not (manifestly cannot) resolve the poet's confusions." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 17 '41 700w

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH. New year letter. 192p 10s 6d Faber [English publication]

821

[A41-3652]

"The main part of Mr. Auden's new poem consists of a letter written in America to an American friend in fresh-flowing but always highly allusive octosyllabic couplets. Accompanying these to enrich rather than to elucidate them is a section of notes and references, which include verse and prose fragments by Mr. Auden or quotations from other authors—Rilke, Kafka, Goethe, Blake, Baudelaire. The general idea is to trace the processes of the poet's mental development in recent years and to define his reaction to the jarring world in which he finds himself. Another section consists of a sonnet sequence, idiomatic, hard-hammered, called 'The Quest'; while, enclosing all, we have a prologue and epilogue, at once conversational and cryptic." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 18 '41 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 11 '41 210w

"New Year Letter isn't all pretentiousness. There are passages (the prayer towards the close of the Letter, and one or two sonnets besides) which show that Auden can still be a fine poet despite quirks and riddles." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:16 Jl 5 '41 1250w

"Quite apart from its sources and philosophy, 'New Year Letter' is a pleasure to read. It is full of the aphorisms proper to, and charming in, the rhymed couplet. It runs to straight, unadorned nouns and verbs, so the occasional epithet comes as an accent and surprise where recurrence would only create a mannerism. The poem has two climaxes of real power. One of these is a lyric burst, an actual emotional passage of a kind Auden has not up to now been given to." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:84 Ap 12 '41 410w

"There is no denying the wit and the learning of Mr. Auden's poem. . . . For our aid and refreshment there are eighty pages of footnotes, some of them in verse, many of them quotations . . . and a few of them—in my own opinion, the most valuable part of the book, original comments on life by Mr. Auden himself. It does not seem to me that any very clear philosophy emerges from the book. . . . But [Mr. Auden] represents the modern intelligence in all its acuteness and confusion, and his present misuse of a medium (misuse rather than abuse, for it is fundamentally a failure in communication) does not affect our faith in his genius, and our expectation of its eventual expression either in verse that is 'simple, clear and gay' (his own demand), or in prose that is clear, simple, and serious." Herbert Read

+ — Spec 166:613 Je 6 '41 900w

"Ironic, bitter, sad, despairing, brilliant, dull, obscure—all these adjectives fit this strange 'Letter.' But what the poem ultimately resolves is Mr. Auden's secret. He would appear (but we are not too sure about this) to endorse Kierkegaard's comment: 'All are in the wrong.' The dilemma, the reader's and Mr. Auden's, is partly his fault for using the medium of 'Hudibras,' a medium directed by a man of genius to a special but limited purpose, for a purpose beyond its scope. There is a comment in 'Hudibras,' from which Mr. Auden took no warning, about a 'party-colour'd dress' of patched and piebald languages."

Times [London] Lit Sup p302 Je 21 '41 800w

AUDUBON, JOHN JAMES. The birds of America; with a foreword and descriptive captions by William Vogt. $4.95 Macmillan

598.2 Birds—North America. Birds—Pictorial works (W)

"The 1937 edition [Book Review Digest, 1937] is reprinted, with 435 of the fine color plates. The 65 illustrations from the octavo edition of 1840-1844, which were included in the 1937 edition, are omitted." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

"There is no need to review Audubon at this late date, so the reviewer can only exclaim with admiration over the beauty and price of this new edition of 435 plates in full color with William Vogt's foreword and descriptive captions. In a famous colophon the great Renaissance printer, Aldo Manucius, stated that it was his ambition to make his books 'accurate, beautiful and cheap.' He would approve of this Audubon."

+ Christian Century 58:1306 O 22 '41 170w

"When one critically examines the Audubon plates and sees certain birds badly colored, in awkward pose, or against impossible backgrounds, he must remember that this pioneer artist worked under tremendous handicaps at all times. Much of the work had to be done in the field and after hours of fatiguing tramping through virgin wilderness in rain, snow, or extremes of temperature. Also much of the water-color painting had to be done with those dead birds he or his traveling companions had shot, for a wild bird will not strike an attitude and keep it for the convenience of the artist. It is sincerely hoped that the success of 'The Birds of America,' which is virtually assured, will prompt some publisher to undertake the reproduction at a popular price of Audubon's mammal and miscellaneous paintings which are in all ways comparable to his birds."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 420w

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Leif the Lucky [il. by the authors]. [56p] $2 Double-day

Leif Ericson—Juvenile literature (W) 41-22780

The story of Leif the Lucky, as a boy and as a man, and the Viking discoveries in Greenland and America, told for young readers. The illustrations are lithographs, many of them in color.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

"Picture-books come and go, but some are permanent. This one will be. If the vocabulary is 'older' than in most D'Aulaire books, so that children well beyond picture-book age will take it, the lithographs are so brilliant and humorous that the littlest will love them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 N 2 '41 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk M 17:458 N '41 60w

"The d'Aulaires have here a subject close to their hearts and they have done it full justice in their most beautiful book. Such a portrayal of the days of the Vikings has long been wanted in libraries and schools, to make vivid children's impressions of the days of the discoverers. . . . Imagination and humor and a feeling for the details that children enjoy are combined with sound historical accuracy in a book that has lasting value for American children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:469 N '41 150w

"A short, simple narrative sketching only the main points of Leif's life, but illustrated so beautifully as to give any child a vivid picture of the vikings and their adventurous lives. . . . An almost perfect blending of color and technique with subject matter. For children seven to eleven." Marian Farquharson

+ Library J 66:1048 D 1 '41 80w

"In 'Leif the Lucky' Mr. and Mrs. D'Aulaire are at their enchanting best. . . . The brief text is direct and spirited and childlike; the authors use a style that children enjoy. . . . 'Leif the Lucky' is an ideal first history book, for to young children records of the past mean most when centered upon a personality. Adults as well as children will enjoy the brilliance and beauty of these pictures. All school and public libraries will want it and it will be a volume of lasting interest for a child's own library." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p6 N 2 '41 260w

"Probably the most beautiful in the long line of distinguished picture books by these two author-artists. The glowing color, the wealth of authentic detail, the happy combination of humor, charm, naïveté without pose, and historical perspective make this story of Leif Ericson and the Vikings one no child reader from six to ten should miss."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 80w

"A delight to own." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 40w

AUMANN, FRANCIS ROBERT. The changing American legal system; some selected phases. 281p $2.25 Ohio state univ.

347 Law—U.S.

40-34949

"Professor Aumann traces the development of the American legal system from its beginnings through 1935. He confesses that the study does not attempt to 'explore all of the materials in areas with which it is concerned.' . . . The book is divided into four parts as follows: Part I, 'The Period of Colonial Beginnings, 1608-1776'; Part II, 'The Formative Period of American Law, 1776-1865'; Part III, 'Some Problems of Growth and Development during the Period of Maturity of American Law, 1865-1900'; Part IV, 'Some Problems of Growth and Development in the Present American Legal System, 1900-1935.'" Am Pol Sci R

"One is impressed with the wealth of material analyzed and the excellent documentation of the subject-matter. . . . Professor Aumann's attitude toward the legal system as it has developed is a friendly one—some may think too friendly." P. S. Sikes

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:358 Ap '41 600w

AUMANN, F. R.—Continued

"The book is well documented and there is an extensive and well-prepared bibliography. Altogether it is an excellent book." C. N. Calender

+ Ann Am Acad 217:210 S '41 410w

"In a survey as courageous in scope as this, other students are likely to disagree with the author on one point or another, whether of presentation, selection, or emphasis. Nevertheless this volume provides a useful and suggestive view of a field notably devoid of comprehensive studies." R. B. Morris

+ Columbia Law R 41:370 F '41 2200w

"Professor Aumann explains that he has attempted nothing more than a presentation of familiar materials in a form suitable for the bar and public; he insists that 'the purpose throughout has been to follow the main-travelled roads as closely as possible.' Yet, written in an undistinguished style, his book so seldom shows a spark of brightness that it cannot be expected to hold the general reader; nor is it likely to attract the lawyer, whose interest in problems of history needs to be quickened by a sense of their contemporaneity. The principal interest of this book is, indeed, derived from the fact that the author does follow the 'main-travelled roads' of his subject. It is almost worth plodding along these roads with Professor Aumann to see the oppressive barrenness of the landscape." D. J. Boorstin

Harvard Law R 54:1420 Je '41 900w

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. Barney's adventure; il. by [the author]. [42p] $1 Dutton

(W) 41-306

Picture-story book about a very small boy who could not afford a ticket to the circus, and was too small to earn one, but who succeeded in capturing an accommodating clown, and realized his heart's desire.

"[Mrs] Austin can draw children with instinctive tenderness, and animals with a child's sense of humor. . . . The pictures are large and some of them too crowded, but they have some of the most popular elements in books for babies—little children of appealing smallness, animals, clowns and the circus, also just enough of the dark woods to show what a brave boy Barney would be if it were really necessary." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 2 '41 190w

"An appealing story for three to five-year-olds with delightful black and white pictures in lithographic crayon." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 66:143 F 1 '41 90w

"The artist-author draws her characters and the forest setting with an engaging drollery, and the details which she herself has so evidently enjoyed, the bluebells and daisies, the snails hurrying for once, the ladybirds seeking a point of vantage on the top of a toadstool, have genuine charm and an imaginative quality that makes us hope Mrs. Austin will try her hand at another picture-story book." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 J1 13 '41 200w

New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:78 Ap '41

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. Peter Churchmouse; il by [the author]. [41p] $1 Dutton

(W) 41-9382

Picture-story book about a small, hungry churchmouse, and the kitten who was supposed to clear the church of rats—but not Peter Churchmouse. Their adventures in attempting to get cheese for Peter will interest three to six-year-olds.

"Spontaneous fun, the kind that is truly funny to little children, is rare enough to be worth collecting. Take this book along if you are spending the week end with a family including a young child. You will probably have to read it aloud several times, but the family will have to go on reading it many times more after you are gone." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 20 '41 330w

"There is humor and originality here." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:372 D '41 80w

"The sort of mouse one would expect to find around Rose O'Neill's house, Dutton set too high a standard for whimsy when they published Milne, illustrated by Shepard, to admit of unbiased judgment on this latest book." Warren Chappell

— Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 30w

"This is an imaginative story of the type which has a certain appeal for children from four to seven. It is obviously contrary to the natural instincts and behavior of mice and kittens, and may be objected to by those who feel that only authentic information should be given to little children. The illustrations are attractive." E. G. Mullan

Library J 66:619 J1 '41 150w

"Here is a picture-story book for which to be very grateful. It follows no stereotyped pattern; it has the spontaneity of the child's own make-believe and a friendly bubbling humor. . . . It is hard to say whether Peter Churchmouse will be more of a joy to the adult who reads it aloud or to the child who listens. For 3 to 6 year olds." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '41 500w

"Should be perennial favorite."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 D 6 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. Willamette way. [44p] il $1.50 Scribner

(W) 41-5101

Illustrated story for second graders, describing how two children, their parents, and the dog Bigger journeyed to the Willamette valley in Oregon, in a covered wagon.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p14 My 11 '41 220w

"This is the most rounded and full-bodied story that Margot Austin has done so far. . . . We have no book for younger children that uses this theme, and this is simple enough to be read to pre-school children, or read by a good reader in the second grade. The illustrations are the most attractive Miss Austin has done, but they are marred, as others of hers have been, by a tendency to sentimentalize. Her children are always a little oversweet, without sufficient robustness to make them wholly real. However, the book as a whole has appeal and is recommended." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 80w

"Although the book is not very distinguished in style, it presents a happy method for making aspects of the past vivid and real to the quite young. The effectiveness of the pictures is blurred too often by muddy, unpleasant colors, but the characters wear an air of surprise and delight at the surroundings and activities which seems highly suitable for a story of a new country." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '41 140w

"The pictures, in tans, blues, and greens, are pleasing, but for such a theme the story is almost too innocuous even for a reader of tender years; all the Indians have kind hearts and all the cougars run away."

— New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:78 Ap '41

AYDELOTTE, DORA. Across the prairie. 267p $2 Appleton-Century

(W) 41-51732

A story of small town life in Kansas in the eighties. The principal character is the Widow Travis, still young enough to have a promise of future romance, experienced and competent enough to be the central force in church and community affairs and the guide and counselor of others in trouble.

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

"The appeal of the story is in its characters rather than plot. In addition to Tenny and her twin daughters you get well acquainted with the preacher and his spinster sister, with an old bushwhacker who likes his bottle and glories in the full name of Return Again Lafayette Coon ('Pappy,' for short), with Seth Carpenter and his daughter Nora, who could ride and shoot as well as any man; with Captain Payne, the valiant leader of the Boomers. They're just folks, and, as Tenny says, 'folks ain't just good or bad, but both kinds mixed together.'" Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 Ap 20 '41 200w

"The setting and historical background are accurate and well done, incidents, atmosphere and characters might have been taken from the life in any one of a dozen Kansas towns in the 1880's." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 My 8 '41 550w

Reviewed by Katharine Shorey

Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p24 Ap 20 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

AYER, ALFRED JULES. Foundations of empirical knowledge. 276p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

152 Knowledge, Theory of. Perception [A 41-128]

"The philosophy of perception is Mr. Ayer's principal subject, but he finds room for various methodological discussions and for a general treatment of causality. Philosophers interested in solving (sic) problems have long suspected that a number of controversies in the theory of perception are verbal in character. Mr. Ayer, converting the suspicion into a formulation, shows convincingly that the problem of sense-data, for instance, is not an empirical question but one of choosing an epistemological language." J Philos

Am Soc R 6:770 O '41 70w

"If Mr. Ayer's new book is more modest in scope than his Language, Truth and Logic, [Book Review Digest, 1937] its achievement is more solid. The zeal which before so picturesquely legislated the borders of philosophy is absent, and problems which once might have been excommunicated as void of significance are here analyzed and answered." J. B.

+ J Philos 38:219 Ap 10 '41 650w

"Within the limits he sets for himself, he thinks with extreme clearness and expresses himself admirably. The book is a real pleasure to read. There is nothing here of the nebulous incomprehensibility which one often finds in philosophical works, and which one can only hope is a sign of profundity of thought. A sentence of Mr. Ayer's means one thing and one thing only, and you know what that thing is. Sentences are not repeated needlessly, and they succeed one another in perfect logical order. Apart from the rather annoying fact that the references in footnotes to other pages are usually wrong, there can be nothing but praise for Mr. Ayer's presentation of his case." Herbert Dingle

+ Nature 147:287 Mr 8 '41 3550w

"Mr. Ayer is in a direct line of descent from Occam; he does not, that is to say, want his universe cluttered up with unexperienced and unexperienceable entities such as material objects, and he uses his exceedingly acute reason as a pruning knife to excise them. The discussion is highly technical and the book is not one for the layman, but it is an important contribution to recent philosophical theory." C. E. M. Joad

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:627 D 14 '40 390w

"Nearly five years have gone by since the appearance of Mr. Ayer's Language, Truth and Logic; and the considerable company of philosophers to whom the force and vigour of that work appealed will be eager to welcome a further exposition of the tenets of Logical Positivism from the same able pen. Whether, if Logical Positivists, they will in the event feel themselves justified in the faith is perhaps not equally clear, for there has, within the intervening lustrum, been a certain change in Mr. Ayer's point of view, or at the least in its orientation, which has led him now to lay a diminishing stress on the more negative and pyrrhonic side of that creed. However this may be, the gratitude of philosophers should be freely accorded to Mr. Ayer for his successful effort to confine the ramifications of the sense-datum controversy within proper bounds, to protest against the heresy which would make the sense-datum a novel kind of material thing and to expound the sense in which that datum should be regarded as 'incorrigible.' His analysis of the 'egocentric predicament' and of the concept of causality are no less valuable, though the very mention of their secular battle-grounds is perhaps sufficient to justify the suggestion that Mr. Ayer's solutions are in this case less likely to win general acceptance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p552 N 2 '40 650w

AYLING, KEITH. R.A.F., the story of a British fighter pilot. 332p il $2.50 Holt 940.544 Great Britain. Royal air force.
World war, 1939—Aerial operations (W) 41-7545

Journal of a R.A.F. fighter pilot between June and October, 1940. It is an imaginary, composite picture of the methods, organization, social life, bombing routine, and squadron operations in action of the Royal Air Force. The author is a former Royal Flying Corps pilot.

Booklist 37:512 Jl 1 '41

"R. A. F.' might have been a better story had Mr. Ayling avoided the rather self-conscious effort to reproduce faithfully, in Kenneth, the extremes of sentiment and reserve, of boyish slang and poetic fancy always considered characteristically Anglo-Saxon. Wherever women enter Kenneth's diary there is a note of awkward virtue which rasps on the reader's ear. But these are minor lapses. Mr. Ayling's picture of life in the R. A. F. keeps its integrity because of his undoubted knowledge of planes and battles. He has pinned down the terrible facts of man's ingenuity against man and then redeemed them by showing the spirit of sacrifice which makes man, in spite of everything, a noble creature." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p11 My 4 '41 600w

"Keith Ayling was a flier himself in the other war and knows enough about present aviation to cover the subject. He knows better, in fact, but he doesn't write better, and so his overtones of persiflage in the mess, thoughts of girls and mother and duty never bring his airmen to life." Otis Ferguson

— New Repub 105:196 Ag 11 '41 240w

"This book comes very close to fulfilling the author's purpose of showing the life of a representative fighter pilot on the ground and in the air. It is based on actual episodes, and there are very few paragraphs that do not have the ring of reality. It shows the British airman at his magnificently effective work, and it is one of the high spots among the books that have come out of the present war." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p18 My 25 '41 400w

"[Told] in a way that seems movingly true to both fact and feeling. The most striking and also the most informative book on the subject we've had so far."

+ New Yorker 17:91 My 10 '41 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 390w

AYMAR, GORDON CHRISTIAN. Start 'em sailing; phot. and diagrams by the author [foreword by Alfred Stanford]. 131p $2 Barnes, A.S.

797.124 Sailing (W) 41-6884

Concise, well-illustrated instructions for the amateur in sailing a small boat. Partial contents: The essential knots; Before casting off; Sailing to windward; Putting the boat up; Emergencies; Rules and signals; Care of the boat; Glossary of sea terms.

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

"One of the best, if not the best book, for the beginner in small-boat sailing. . . Really fine photographs illustrate every important technic in tacking, reaching, running and good boatmanship. The text is concise and understandable. The mass of nonessentials usually dealt with in a work of this kind have been omitted."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 60w

B

BABCOCK, DWIGHT VINCENT. The gorgeous ghoul. 276p $2 Knopf

Detective story. 41-20721

"There's plenty of action and some real excitement when Mr. Babcock forgets about love and the demon rum. . . With rigorous, blue-pencilling, Dwight V. Babcock ought to be an item for the carriage trade." Will Cuppy

Books p36 D 7 '41 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 N 2 '41 160w

"Lives up to fantastic title for tough stuff. Also a well thought-out and forthrightly written yarn with stunning finish. Tops—in its class."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 1 '41 40w
Spring'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 50w

BABCOCK, DWIGHT VINCENT. A homicide for Hannah [Eng title: Murder for Hannah]. 334p $2 Knopf [8s 6d Hale, R]

41-1049

Detective story.

"Speaking for ourself alone, we found this glaring example of the back-fence school of thought not quite our dish. But you, gentle reader, may be able to take it with a straight face and unruffled gizzard." Will Cuppy

Books p22 F 9 '41 100w

"Lots of fun in spite of a too obvious villain." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 70w

"The story abounds in thrills and adventure, but we regret to say that it is not one to be recommended to your maiden aunt unless she is fond of dirt." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Ja 26 '41 150w

"A yarn calculated to keep the reader wide awake and on the edge of his chair until the last word."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '42 110w

BABCOCK, FRANKLIN LAWRENCE. U.S. college graduate; herein a statistical report on the status of living U.S. college alumni (and alumnae). 112p $1.50 Macmillan

378.01 College graduates

"The living college graduates in this country number approximately 2,700,000. This book is a statistical report, based on research conducted by Time magazine, of what its title page sums up as the 'status' of these alumni and alumnae —that is, 'who they are, how and where they live, what they earn and at what work.' . . . The tables begin with age and sex, go on to family status, and then show the graduate bloc as a working body, in variety of economic detail. The book's second section offers a 'close-up' of the kinds of colleges attended and of degrees received and also of the 'residential geography' of the graduates. Further minutiae fill nearly one-third of the book with a supplement of tabulations." N Y Times

N Y Times p42 N 9 '41 320w

"This study for the most part leaves evaluation of its findings to you and me. If one derives comfort from the fact that college graduates get on better, one is still left with unanswered questions about relative 'psychic' incomes of total life-satisfactions. Is the process too expensive in time and money? Or should we spend far more? Could results be better and more surely attained? Why doesn't the exposure 'take' more often and more deeply? These are today pertinent questions, but they are not yet susceptible to quantified study." Ordway Tead

Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ja 17 '42 550w

School & Society 54:452 N 15 '41 40w

BACHELLER, IRVING. The winds of God; a tale of the north country; il. by John Rae. 318p $2.50 Farrar

41-19639

The story of a Vermont boy's experiences many years ago in his own state and upper New York state. After his mother's death the boy had to make his way, so he started out with only a faithful dog companion, and tried to make a living singing at country fairs. It ends with his days at St Lawrence college.

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p14 N 16 '41 320w

"The United States was . . . a much happier place then than it is now, but this may be partly because Mr. Bacheller, going as Leonard Merrick's Conrad once did, 'In Quest of His Youth,' sees it all through glasses somewhat tinted by his own faint nostalgia. However, it is pleasant to turn away from discussions of national defense and fifth columnists, sabotage and the Neutrality Act to a time when a boy and a dog could wander far afield and create no small amount of interest, not to say excitement." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p22 O 19 '41 750w

BACON, FRANCIS LEONARD, and others, eds. Youth thinks it through; modern readings for thought and discussion. 416p $1.40 McGraw

136.7354 Youth 41-14450

"This book of readings on 30 topics in which young people feel vital concern is intended to help them clarify their thoughts and apply the results to their own personal and social problems. Under each topic there is a brief statement of the problem, one or more articles presenting significant points of view, and a colloquy in which the principal points are summarized for critical consideration." (J Home Econ) Partial contents: Aren't parents queer! by Undine Dunn; The youth hosteler, by D. P. Merrill; A date with the boy friend, by Elinor Brewster; You, by E. W. Bok; Courage is salable, by Lowell Thomas.

J Home Econ 33:605 O '41 150w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

BACON, MRS JOSEPHINE DODGE (DAS-KAM). The world in his heart. 388p $2.50 Appleton-Century

41-14658

This story of Winty Motherwell, born in 1909, carries him thru the years of childhood and adolescence, to college and early and unexpected success in the family publishing business.

"The unraveling of the plot is deliberate but ingeniously managed. It might have been more crisply accomplished, however." Lisle Bell

+ — Books p16 S 21 '41 230w

"The novel is a great deal too long, and at the end it seems as if much ado has been made, if not about nothing, at least about a situation which could have been cleared up with comparatively little difficulty and a reasonable amount of common sense. But it is pleasantly written, has some shrewd bits of comment on various phases of New York life, and is often amusing." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p27 S 21 '41 750w

BAER, MARIAN E. Rain or shine; the story of weather; il. by Hiram Hurd. 292p maps $2 Farrar

551.5 Weather. Climatology (W) 40-27718

Explanations of the phenomena of the weather, for junior and senior high schools. It describes cycles of cold and heat, ocean currents and prevailing winds, hurricanes and tornadoes, and also the hardships of the scientists who secure the information and records about the weather. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 26:44 J1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:58 Mr '41

BAGBY, GEORGE A., pseud. Here comes the corpse. 272p $2 Doubleday

41-5976

Detective story.

"Regular in the best sense, crammed with criminous stuff and written in what looks like the author's settled style, a satisfactory one having little or no truck with the rubber-stamps of the hard-boiled school. We'd call it one of the more pleasing mysteries of the spring crop." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 Ap 20 '41 160w

"You will like Midge and several of the other characters, but there are others whom you will not like so well. It is all very mysterious and very well worked out. In our opinion, this is George Bagby's best detective story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 27 '41 150w

"Breezy bunch of life-like characters—with sleuth well in lead—carry story along to highly unusual ending. High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 My 3 '41 30w

BAGBY, GEORGE A., pseud. Red is for killing. 266p $2 Doubleday

42-937

Detective story.

"'Red Is for Killing,' [is] a smooth, amusing, exciting tale of violent death in the offices of 'Tidings,' a weekly news magazine whose contents are always laconic, lucid, alert." Will Cuppy

+ Books p31 N 23 '41 200w

"You will probably get a lot of fun out of the book in addition to some high-class detecting." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 D 7 '41 200w

"Plot is secondary to the magnificent description of a high-powered organization running at full speed. Recommended for those readers who have never discovered why a red memo is more important than a green one."

+ New Yorker 17:108 N 29 '41 60w

"Primarily interesting for hilarious portrayal of temperamental geniuses working under high pressure. Schmitt's handling of case well up to standard. Diverting."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 22 '41 40w

"A pleasant though unexciting time will be had by all." B. I.

Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 160w

BAGGER, EUGENE SZEKERES. For the heathen are wrong; an impersonal autobiography. 370p $3 Little

B or 92 World war, 1939—France. Civilization, Occidental 41-10631

The author of this "pseudo-autobiography" was born in Hungary, a half-Jew, who early in life became a convert to Catholicism. He came to America and was for a time a journalist. During the last six years before 1940 he lived in southern France, reading and writing on the philosophy of history. His book opens with the fall of France and his flight across the border to Spain, but thereafter he goes back to relate the events of earlier years and to show why he and others should have known France would fall. Index.

"It is replete with ideas and epigrams, and with an epicurean discriminating appreciation of many things in France, of wines and foods and architecture and Riviera sunsets and the writings of Stendhal, on whom Mr. Bagger is an expert. And it is written in an uncommonly fine English style." W. H. Chamberlain

+ Atlantic Ag '41 230w

"All Mr. Bagger's elaborations still leave me unconvinced as to why France fell. Yet as a picture of the complexities and bewilderments of the strange age in which we live, this 'pseudo-autobiography' not only has many good things in it, but brings a not unilluminating evidence of its own to the general scene." Walter Millis

+ — Books p6 Je 15 '41 650w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 153:761 S '41 410w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 11 '41 220w

"The author has some profound thoughts, and, when need be, he is not above using a hammer to drive them in. He is, by turns, brilliant, dull, militant, amusing, personal, objective, egotistic, persuasive. He instructs, irritates and entertains; on one page he ruffles your feathers with the very good opinion he has of himself; on the next, he smooths them down with the imparted conviction that what he has just said holds a goodly residue of truth. You cannot remain long angry with him, because you realize that as 'manners maketh the man,' so manner is also, surely, the truest form of autobiography." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 22 '41 1100w

"Mr. Bagger is rigidly honest in his description and analyzing of his mental and spiritual journeyings. Because of this very honesty, his book cannot be dismissed as merely the religio-biased account of a non-participant in the struggles of today." J. H. Smyth

Sat R of Lit 24:14 J1 19 '41 500w

"This is essentially the work of a thinker, of a man for whom the primary duty of every human being is to think, and in this respect it comes as a refreshing challenge to an age which is so largely prepared to accept its thoughts ready made. It is a little curious in a writer who was born a Hungarian and who has travelled widely in Europe that he should slip so easily into the American school that makes a rather ostentatious parade of its learning. There is no doubting the charm and power of Mr. Bagger's writing, but he is not without his irritating mannerisms."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p538 N 1 '41 850w

BAILEY, CAROLYN SHERWIN. Homespun playdays; with lithographs by Grace Paull. 216p $2 Viking

(W) 41-25308

Stories of the good times of American children before the days of the movies and the radio. Partial contents: The maypole; The spelling bee; The country fair; The dancing master; The barn party; The balloon ascension; The circus; The sugaring-off; The Sunday-school picnic; The country store; The play-party; The singing school; Thanksgiving day.

BAILEY, C. S.—Continued

Booklist 38:178 Ja 15 '42

"In the most varied and exhilarating of the Bailey-Paull books on early American crafts as they affected child life, we see a fine assortment of merry-makings that kept Jack from being a dull boy. . . Each episode is a complete little story with action enough to make good material for school dramatization. In that case, the brisk drawings would be a real help in costumes and furniture of these periods." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 18 '42 290w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
 Horn BK M 18:40 Ja '42 150w

"Teachers of children of ten and eleven will find this book as useful as the author's Children of the Handicrafts and Tops and Whistles to give the authentic atmosphere of early days." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:1095 D 15 '41 90w
 New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 40w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. The bishop's crime. 309p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 41-301

Detective story.

Booklist 37:242 F 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"There is a feeling in certain quarters that this Reggie Fortune number is just about the best in its long and honorable line. At any rate, it is topnotch H. C. Bailey stuff, with some of Reggie's finest detection, a plot that sounds reasonable all the time, a grand anti-quarian interest." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Ja 12 '41 200w

"A neat number about hidden church treasure with nary a bomb or a black-out to show it all takes place in England. For Fortune fans only." Marian Wigglin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 50w

"The story is as ingenious as well told, and as exciting as his readers have come to expect from Mr. Bailey." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 10 '40 130w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:390 O 19 '40 220w

"If H. C. Bailey has ever written a better Reggie Fortune story than this one, we have forgotten what it is." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '41 200w

"All fair and aboveboard, but don't let the title mislead you."

+ New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 40w

"Elegant."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 25 '41 50w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake

Spec 165:424 O 25 '40 60w

Time 37:76 F 3 '41 40w

"At times Mr. Bailey may break into vers libre . . . which ends as prose, but his style generally has a gracious liveliness that comes like balm after the awkward-squad English of most specialists in crime. At the same time he constructs a plot that twists and turns like an electric eel: it gives you shock upon shock and you cannot let go."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 19 '40 240w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Orphan Ann. 307p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-13492

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"The story is smooth as silk, with its full quota of modish and other people, curious London slang, slightly mannered prose and all else you look for in this author's invariably pleasing output, including a whiz of a plot." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Ag 10 '41 150w

"Clunk is not a person one would care to meet, but he is amusing in his own peculiar way. This is by far the best of Mr. Bailey's stories about the wily old lawyer." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '41 190w

"Fine reading, with no loopholes."

+ New Yorker 17:68 Ag 23 '41 50w

"Ever-helpful Clunk out-smarts angry Scotland Yarders in solving mystery of orphanage, murder, and treacherous intrigue in navy. Hard to beat."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Ag 23 '41 40w

BAILEY, HILEA, pseud. See Marting, R. L.

BAILEY, TEMPLE. The blue cloak. 300p $2 Houghton

41-4130

This is the story of Erik Thoresen, born and bred in America's midwest, but the inheritor of a consuming love for the sea. It is the story of how this love of the sea confused Erik in his choice of a mate, but of how in the end he came to realize the true values of the goddess-like-creature from New York and the little nun-like Amelie who had been his childhood sweetheart.

"Miss Bailey has omitted none of the elements which her readers cherish, and this narrative of family ties and first loves 'is one of her best.'" Lisle Bell

+ Books p21 Mr 23 '41 240w

Christian Century 58:463 Ap 2 '41 70w

"Temple Bailey has pulled off such a disarming job here that any one who did not like it and said so must feel like the hangman's daughter. If a child came running to you, wide-eyed, with a long tale of the wonderful animals and ships and fairies down in the orchard, you would be a brute not to believe and enjoy every word of the fantasy. If the real world is not really that of this charming novel, so much the worse for the world." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 Mr 16 '41 470w

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

BAINTON, ROLAND HERBERT. The church of our fathers. 248p il $2.50 Scribner

270 Church history—Juvenile literature (W) 41-6145

History of the whole movement of Christianity, from the birth of Christ to the present, told for young readers from the ages of nine to seventeen. Illustrated in black and white. Index.

"The necessarily sketchy outline of major events is filled in with well-chosen stories—either historically accurate or carefully identified as legendary—which bring the different periods to life and awaken the interest of the young student. Controversial topics are not evaded but are treated with scrupulous fairness. . . The only two major criticisms which might be made are that the author ignores European Christianity after the Counter Reformation and that he ends his narrative in the middle of the nineteenth century, giving no account of recent developments." W. W. Manross

+ Am Hist R 47:175 O '41 250w

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Ag 3 '41 500w

"Never before, so far as this reviewer can remember, has a book for children been made the 'book of the week' in these columns. But this book is unique. There have been efforts to present the history of Christianity to the child mind, including some that are not bad as textbooks for classes. But never before has it been done with equal scholarship, artistry of style and piquancy of illustration." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:499 Ap 9 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder

Churchman 155:19 Je 15 '41 160w

"Though written for the young, the book can be read with profit by their elders. Its quotations from rare sources, its happy wit, and above all its spirit of sympathetic appreciation and loyalty to the stream of Christian faith commend it to all." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 18:350 O '41 160w

"The author of this book has told the story of the Christian Church in a fashion which will interest and enlighten young people. It is very well done though too much has been attempted. The book is especially to be recommended to parents whose knowledge of church history is nil, who could not possibly be persuaded to read a scholarly work on the subject, but who, 'to see if it is a book "Junior" would like,' will read it with enjoyment and profit." Ben Roberts

+ Horn Bk M 17:294 J1 '41 160w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey

J Religion 21:486 O '41 50w

"The style is for the most part satisfactory. Sentences or phrases that annoy an adult will not disturb the audience for whom it is intended. The numerous illustrations scattered through the text are taken from materials contemporary with each period treated and are a valuable part of the book. Will probably be used chiefly by Protestants, although there is no bias." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 66:619 J1 '41 100w

"All too often church history has been doled out to the young in fragmentary fashion, in dull little books which give no hint of the great sweep of drama through the centuries. I do not know of any other volume so wide in its scope and so completely integrated as this one. . . . The prose is a little uneven, as the author has attempted to reach a wide range of readers from 9 to 17, so that occasionally there is sharp discrepancy between subject and style, but on the whole it is simple, clear and direct." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 13 '41 320w

"While this is not a book for advanced students of church history it is commended for the use of Sunday school teachers and other teachers of youth, for its clear and accurate presentation of the story of the Christian church."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:205 D '41

BAIRNSFATHER, BRUCE, and DALRYMPLE, IAN. Old Bill and son. 269p il $2 McKay [5s Hutchinson]

41-9804

One of the most famous fictional characters of the first World war is to be found once more in action, in France, during the first months of the present war.

"Like most sequels, this edition of Old Bill doesn't seem to have quite the sparkle of the earlier ones. But it is a joy to meet the old walrus again, still grousing, scrounging and carrying on in the best British tradition." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '41 600w

Spring'd Republican p12 Je 5 '41 230w

BAITSELL, GEORGE ALFRED, ed. Science in progress; by L. J. Stadler [and others] second series. 317p il $4 Yale univ. press

504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures (39-14778)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"One would never expect to discover behind such a title as 'Science in Progress' the most exciting collection of detective stories of the year. . . . All the ingredients of good detective fiction are here—suspense, excitement of discovery, the thrill of following a 'master-mind' through induction, hypothesis, deduction, and analysis of confirmatory and contradictory evidence to a conclusion or a postulate." Jeanetta Lyle

+ Nation 152:536 My 3 '41 270w

"No series of disconnected lectures, however distinguished, can produce the reintegration of science, so much to be desired. Yet the present volume stimulates the hope that such a reintegration is possible. Through all the diversity of topics one becomes aware of a unity of purpose, a unity of method, and a unity of thought much closer than one had imagined." J. A. Crowther

+ Nature 148:385 O 4 '41 1200w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:12 Ja '41

"The volume has a purpose in addition to that of popularization to a rather large public. It aims at making one scientist's work clear to another. It tends to break down a vicious isolationism between the sciences. One of the authors, Douglas Johnson, goes still farther and presents his work on the mysterious craters of the Carolina coast merely as an illustration of scientific method in general. The result of such informality is very instructive to the layman too. He gets thereby a better synthetic view of what scientific effort is about and how interchangeable parts of experience may be whether they originate in science proper or in the other doings of men." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 12 '41 850w

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg

Survey 78:30 Ja '42 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p362 J1 26 '41 360w

"Even the most recondite of these essays contain some surprisingly comprehensible and interesting matter for the intelligent general reader. By and large, they offer a wealth of up-to-date information on such phenomena as atoms, chromosomes, hormones, vitamins, and cosmic rays, well expressed and well illuminated by photographs and diagrams. Anyone who cannot find much to interest him in this volume is missing some of the fun of living in an age of science." J. H. Bradley

+ Yale R n s 30:615 spring '41 280w

BAKELESS, MRS KATHERINE (LITTLE). Story-lives of American composers. 288p il $2.50 Stokes

327.8 Musicians

(W) 41-51859

"The fourteen composers here represented are called American, although two, Victor Herbert and Irving Berlin, were born in Ireland and Russia, respectively. . . . From Stephen Foster to Aaron Copland, these men have produced distinctively American music. The biographies are made interesting with incidents and anecdotes chosen for their appeal to young people. There is an introductory chapter on music in the United States covering the red man's music, religious music, and Negro music. There is also an interlude on 'Changing Fashions in Popular Music.' . . . Two appendices: representative records and suggestions for reading." Library J

Booklist 38:17 S '41

"Like the author's Story-Lives of Great Composers [Book Review Digest, 1940] this will be useful in connection with music study courses but will also find favor for the story interest with 'teen age readers.' Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

BAKER, CHARLOTTE. A sombrero for Miss Brown. 285p $2 Dutton

41-12239

A mystery romance of modern Mexico in which a prim American school teacher, hunting

BAKER, CHARLOTTE—Continued

for a lost younger brother, becomes involved in a whole series of adventures. Angela loses her princess and finds romance.

"Everything turns out very well. The author has created an engaging character and given her a colorful late blooming." Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 S 7 '41 130w

"A sombrero, and a wedding ring, for Miss Angela Brown, and our hats lifted to Miss Baker for turning out a sweet mystery romance to make your blood run cold in warm weather. . . A lot of simple Spanish is worked into the story, deftly, so that even if you do not know a word you will lose none of the meaning, and if you do know Spanish your pleasure in the book will be increased by the color and richness thus added." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '41 130w

"A first novel which entertainingly combines adventure and romance against a colorful Mexican background. . . This is a light, gaily compelling story."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 220w

BAKER, FRANK. Miss Hargreaves; a fantasy. 308p $2.50 Coward-McCann [9s Eyre]

41-51588

Two young men on a holiday in Ireland invent, in a spirit of fun, a Victorian poetess named Constance Hargreaves. One of them writes inviting her to visit him in his home in England. Oddly enough, Miss Hargreaves materializes, complete with dog, parrot, harp and bathtub. She remains to haunt her inventor and almost to ruin his life.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:13 My '41

"If you enjoy a mild flirtation with the supernatural, you will find this a lively and amusing fantasy." Page Cooper

+ Books p8 F 23 '41 400w

"Miss Hargreaves"—pronounced Hargraves—is at once eerie and immensely funny. The author has an amusing, graceful style and a soaring imagination that always comes back to earth and never gets lost in the mists of fantasy. The story is ingeniously written from the end and when the final paragraph is reached, it is almost impossible to keep from turning to page one and reading it right through again." M. E. Prim

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 440w

"Miss Hargreaves is simply a few hundred pages of wasted talent. Conceivably it was written as a literary exercise. It is one of those books which toy with magic while remaining realistic in tone. . . It is the kind of thing that might make a good short story but is merely tiresome as a full-length book. Mr. Baker could write a much better novel than this." George Orwell

— New Statesman & Nation 20:384 O 19 '40 80w

"The book is funny, rich in musical learning, slightly on the supernatural side and never whimsical. It makes you forget all about this troubled world for a couple of hours." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 F 23 '41 500w

"Mr. Baker develops his bizarre situation with imagination and wit."

+ New Yorker 17:58 Mr 1 '41 40w

"In his treatment of the extravagant, the fantastic, and the sinister, Mr. Baker comes nowhere near the mark set by John Collier in the same field. He lacks the appalling matter-of-factness with which Mr. Collier presents the wildest of his inventions. But for all that 'Miss Hargreaves' is deftly handled and in several of its more macabre scenes it is as scary and disturbing as anyone could wish." Frances Smyth

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 8 '41 400w

"Mr. Baker has written a ridiculous story and has written it extremely well. It is as funny as it is tragic, as charming as it is pathetic, as plausible as it is incredible. One even closes the book wondering just where among its fantastic pages, truth may uncomfortably be lurking!"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p545 O 26 '40 300w

BAKER, GEORGE CLAUDE. Introduction to the history of early New England Methodism, 1789-1839. 145p $2.50 Duke univ.

287.0974 Methodism. Methodist church in New England 41-19015

"Mr. Baker's study—a thesis, one suspects, from the thoroughness of its documentation, its direct dependence upon source material and its fifty-page bibliography—traces the development of Methodist churches and circuits in New England during half a century, the attitudes of the Methodists toward such social questions as war and temperance, and the part which they played in bringing about the disestablishment of the New England churches." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 58:1146 S 17 '41 130w

Reviewed by C. F. Price

Spring'd Republican p6 N 22 '41 650w

BAKER, HOWARD. A letter from the country, and other poems. 32p $1; pa 35c New directions

811

41-7562

First book of poems by an American metaphysical poet. Some of the poems have already been published in magazines.

"Beautiful archaic work, not without a certain competence, it is exactly what a modern poet cannot afford to write. The music is mostly iambic, the philosophy faintly fugitive, the originality nil. . . I don't know how far away all this is from life, but certainly it's miles from real insight." Oscar Williams

— New Repub 105:410 S 29 '41 90w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 110w

"Baker has a rich sense of landscape—though in the manner of academic painting—and a deep alliance with the generations—philosophy and formal orthodoxy of American 'regional' literature. . . It is true that the campus gong is always heard in the background of Baker's cool, solemn pastorals. . . Yet Baker's work proves that the impulse towards a stability founded on old values can in poetry, result in pleasure, charm, and calm beauty." Harold Rosenberg

+ Poetry 58:266 Ag '41 330w

BAKER, JOHN HOPKINSON, ed. The Audubon guide to attracting birds. 268p il $2.50 Doubleday

598.2 Birds

(W) 41-7061

Collection of papers on the various aspects of attracting wild birds. The first seven chapters, by Roger T. Peterson, are on identifying, photographing, and banding birds, and attracting them by planting, artificial feeding, providing nesting boxes, and providing water areas. The remaining five chapters are by various authors, and discuss the work of the National Audubon society, its camps, tours, maintenance of sanctuaries, etc. An appendix lists plants attractive to birds in the northeastern states. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:486 Je 15 '41

"Practical rather than literary, this book is a guide to what we may call 'bird success.' The several authors tell us precisely what we want to know about such diverse matters as bird boxes, plants that will furnish bird food and shelter throughout the four seasons, the control of carnivorous species, the creation of sanctuaries and the posting of lands." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p7 Ag 31 '41 500w

"The volume furnishes much information for all interested in bird life and especially in its preservation." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 28 '41
310w

BAKER, MARGARET, and BAKER, MARY.
The Bakers' big book [il. by Mary Baker]. unp $2 Dodd

(W)

An omnibus volume containing six stories for children eight to twelve. All are illustrated with silhouettes. Contents: The dog, the brownie and the bramble patch; The sad princess; The lost mermaid; The leprechaun; The little girl who cursed; The princess and the beggar maid.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ap 20 '41 150w

"This omnibus presents the same charming combination of picture and story that marks the separate publications. . . Print, paper, and general make-up are excellent." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:308 Ap 1 '41 50w

"The Bakers' Big Book' will make the six stories it contains accessible to a still larger audience of boys and girls. Libraries will find it a practical and economical way of adding Baker stories to their shelves and it will prove highly acceptable to the young reader who feels that the slim volumes containing one Baker tale each are far too short." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '41 150w

BAKER, RAY STANNARD (DAVID GRAY-SON, pseud). Day of pleasant bread. 25p
50c Doubleday

Short story describing a country Christmas, when invited guests failed to appear, and the author had a wide idea about replacing them.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 D 14 '41 60w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p25 D 14 '41 60w

BAKER, RAY STANNARD (DAVID GRAY-SON, pseud). Native American; the book of my youth. 336p $3 Scribner

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-51934

Sketches the years of the author's boyhood and youth on the frontier, his education, and his experiences as a budding author in Chicago.

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"Mr. Baker's book stops, properly, before the great days of his fame came to him. . . And this reader of autobiographies always finds the pre-ball-dress days of Cinderella the most interesting. . . His is the history, as he says, of thousands of American families; his pride is that it is typically American. It is true, honest, decent, moral, earnest and sham-hating. And if that is not typically American I am three Hindus." F. P. Adams

+ Books p4 O 5 '41 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p22 O 22 '41
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

"Mr. Baker won't keep you awake at night even though he tells you of meeting unawares a man with a hammer, or a potato boy. His experiences and his wisdom ring true. They are vivid and convincing, not always significant or profound. . . There is charm and friendliness in 'Native American,' and the vague spirituality of a good man whose parents prayed from conviction and subjective necessity." Johanna Doniat

+ Commonweal 35:272 Ja 2 '42 490w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson

Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 140w

"A sketchy and unpretentious but generally readable record of one man's approach to maturity."

+ New Repub 105:517 O 20 '41 60w

"Though this volume is not announced as the first in an autobiographical series, its readers will hope that the narrative will continue. Mr. Baker says that the most thrilling praise he ever received was the comment of the assistant night editor of the News Record—'a stocky, rather grim, slow-spoken man' named Armstrong—on his first labor story. It was Armstrong said, 'great stuff.' Much of this book is great stuff. There should be more of it." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 O 12 '41 1200w

"Warm, penetrating, and genuinely alive, especially in its portrait of the author's doughty father."

+ New Yorker 17:103 O 11 '41 40w

"[This volume is] simple, warmly human, philosophical and thoughtful in temper, and winning." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 O 11 '41 1100w

"The book is filled with domestic and other anecdotes. It is written in a vein of nostalgia for his early life. It has a light touch, a wistful wandering from the subject in hand. It is not quite what one would expect from what has been so vigorous a pen." M. D.

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

BAKKE, EDWARD WIGHT. Citizens without work. 311p $3 Yale univ. press

331.137 Unemployment. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Social surveys 41-449

"A study of the effects of unemployment upon the workers' social relations and practices." (Subtitle) Index.

"Professor Bakke has written in an engaging and attractive style. While they might be read with pleasure and advantage by any literate person unfamiliar with the technical language of experts, these volumes are of especial value to the expert students of labor, of relief, and of the social insurances." W. S. Hopkins

+ Am Econ R 31:412 Je '41 450w

Reviewed by Mirra Komarovsky

Am Soc R 6:593 Ag '41 650w

"If this book does nothing else I hope it will furnish middle-class Americans with a realistic picture of the circumstances which furnish the actual content of the background from which a worker comes to face any one of the numerous problems which beset his struggle for existence. . . One closes these books with a certain sense of incompleteness. Yet one wonders whether the value of such a study would not have been much greater had the author devoted attention to the controlling groups in New Haven who were manipulating the forces which had such a drastic effect upon the lives of these workers. Such a study, in the vicinity of Yale University, might not be entirely a healthy undertaking. It would, however, round out a picture which is as yet incomplete." C. E. Warne

+ Ann Am Acad 217:196 S '41 320w

Booklist 37:263 F 15 '41

"Useful and informative." Martin Cohn

+ Canadian Forum 21:26 Ap '41 550w

Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 60w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 11 '41 230w

Management R 30:114 Mr '41 120w

Reviewed by Willmoore Kendall

New Repub 105:227 Ag 18 '41 100w

"Written lucidly and with obvious feeling, the volume sheds new light not only upon the unemployed but upon every institution of life as well as the various individual and social provisions so far set up for the jobless." Abraham Epstein

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 26 '41 330w

BAKKE, EDWARD WIGHT. Unemployed worker; a study of the task of making a living without a job. 465p $4 Yale univ. press

331.137 Unemployment. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Social surveys 41-450

Sociological study of unemployment, stressing the attempts at self-help, the use of savings and other resources. Index.

Reviewed by W. S. Hopkins

+ Am Econ R 31:412 Je '41 450w

"These two companion volumes represent one of the most thoughtful studies of the effect of unemployment upon the worker and his family. Not the least of their value lies in the light they throw upon the worker's world prior to unemployment." Mirra Komarovsky

+ Am Soc R 6:593 Ag '41 650w

Reviewed by C. E. Warne

Ann Am Acad 217:196 S '41 230w

Booklist 37:263 F 15 '41

Reviewed by Martin Cohn

Canadian Forum 21:26 Ap '41 550w

Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 80w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 11 '41 280w

"For the executive, the student, and the statesman, here is an opportunity to obtain real enlightenment on the unemployment problem, for Professor Bakke has traced this blight on the American economy in all its ramifications."

+ Management R 30:114 Mr '41 360w

Reviewed by Willmoore Kendall

New Repub 105:227 Ag 18 '41 100w

Reviewed by Abraham Epstein

Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 26 '41 330w

"Here and there, the author makes specific suggestions for improvements. The most important contribution of this study, however, is the very clear understanding it conveys of what unemployment and relief are like from the point of view of the individuals directly affected, and what results they produce upon these fellow human beings. Conscientiously scientific and wholly unemotional, this is, indeed, a study worthy of the Institute of Human Relations." E. E. Witte

+ Yale R n s 30:841 summer '41 1050w

BAKST, AARON. Mathematics; its magic and mastery. 790p il $3.95 Van Nostrand

793.74 Mathematical recreations. Mathematics 41-20133

"This book is designed to make mathematics interesting. The subject is not treated formally; abstract conceptions and 'uninteresting and abstruse procedures are completely avoided'; yet at the same time the book is sufficiently complete to give a broad picture of mathematical fundamentals. 'Mathematics, in order to be appreciated by those who do not have a flare for the intangible, must be seen in the light of its versatility in the various fields of human endeavor.' This is very much the central theme of this work." (School & Society) Index.

"This is a rich dish of enjoyable study, well stocked with mathematical parlor tricks and other ingenious problems. Dr. Bakst's book is a part of, and will help further to mold, a new trend toward the humanization of mathematics." H. M. Davis

+ N Y Times p9 N 16 '41 440w

School & Society 54:311 O 11 '41 90w

BALCH, JACK S. Lamps at high noon. 416p $2.50 Modern age

41-9960

"[This] first novel tells the story of Charlie Gest's career as an editorial supervisor on a W.P.A. writers' project. Charlie was a young man of twenty-four who had had a couple of short stories published in quality magazines. He is jobless when the book opens, living at home with his immigrant Russian-Jewish parents and two younger sisters. . . Balch tells the story of Charlie on two planes: first, Charlie the son of a heckling but lovable mother, and, second, Charlie the troubled observer of a humanitarian idea turned into a political tool." Books

"While there is much that is good in this book, 'Lamps at High Noon' comes off better on the score of its writing than it does as a novel. The two backgrounds, the home and the office, do not fuse or complement each other properly. And one wishes, among other things, that Balch had done more with the girl, Elizabeth, whom he provocatively introduces early in the book and then drops without explanation." Rose Feld

+ — Books p8 My 25 '41 480w

"Amusing and revealing." R. B. Rankin

+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 90w

"An uneven work, with patches of unnecessary sentiment, fine views of some very odd characters, and bits of home life that could slip easily into a Clifford Odets first act."

+ — New Repub 104:898 Je 30 '41 50w

"An improvisation of considerable virtuosity, often entertaining but frequently offending, a medley of stunt passages, occasional scherzos of imagination, bits of mad waggery, stretches of crudeness and thunders on the left, echoes of everything from everywhere, witty and tender, blatant and blah by turns, at the same time by no means without serious intention. Mr. Balch's first opus shoots the works. The total effect is more appealing than appalling. Mr. Balch is a beginning novelist of talent whom, for his wit and sense of comedy and fundamental sensibility, it is easy to forgive many things." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 1 '41 950w

"Excellent family background, including the hero's bewildered and hard-working Jewish mother, who emerges as a full-length and touching figure."

+ New Yorker 17:70 My 31 '41 90w

"There are many faults of structure and proportion in this novel, and many echoes of other, older novelists. None of these faults seems permanent nor dangerous, and if Mr. Balch can keep his feeling for the flow of human speech and his affectionate rueful regard for human activity, he doesn't have to worry about what comes next." Frances Smyth

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:10 Je 14 '41 490w

BALDWIN, EMMA VIRGINIA, and MARCUS, WILLIAM ELDER. Library costs and budgets; a study of cost accounting in public libraries. 201p $3 Bowker

025.116 Library finance. Cost accounting (W) 41-8339

"Thirty-seven libraries took part in the study of cost accounting in public libraries, on which this book is based. These libraries vary in size, serving from 25,000 to 150,000 population. Appendixes give many statistics and charts. Individual work sheets." Booklist

Booklist 37:509 Jl 1 '41

"This volume will be especially useful to trustees, public officials, and laymen. It presents the obstacles inherent in library organization and management which make cost analysis difficult, and thus puts the librarian less on the defensive when his budget is studied and attacked. Further, on the positive side, it does furnish approximations of real cost information in some directions and thus makes it possible more effectively to justify budget requests. We need more studies of this kind, I hope, however, that like this one they may be made by investigators aware of the essential impossibility of valuing in unit costs a service whose purpose is to educate and to inspire." Carl Vitz

+ Library J 66:652 Je 15 '41 1250w

"Library administrators and trustees will welcome this book for its wealth of practical suggestion and advice and for the cost averages and 'standards of reasonable accomplishment.' One might raise reasonable questions about the latter and about some of the inter-relations made by the authors. . . While the study is valuable in its own right as the first well-defined investigation of library costs in a fair sample of comparable libraries, it is also valuable for the list of further problems of management and operation that have forced themselves to the authors' attention. Further study must follow if the library profession is to have a body of fact and knowledge on budgetary and cost control. The final value of this study rests with the profession. It is not enough to have costs reported and standards proposed. Administrators must use these facts continuously in the management of their individual libraries to improve their institutional performance and to evaluate the efficiency of their staff members." R. A. Miller

+ — Library Q 11:512 O '41 750w

BALDWIN, ERNEST JOY. Principles of inorganic and analytical chemistry. 506p il $3.25 Van Nostrand

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Chemistry, Inorganic. Chemistry, Analytic 40-31083

"Intended as a textbook for courses in second-year college chemistry, this volume is in two parts: properties of atoms and molecules, and theory of reactions. Starting with the gas laws, Part I continues with discussions of properties of liquids and vapors, the periodic classification, matter and radiation, photochemistry, atomic structure, nuclear chemistry and other concepts of modern physical chemistry. Part II, applications to qualitative and quantitative analysis, considers reaction velocity and equilibrium, solutions of electrolytes, solution and precipitation, gravimetric analysis, oxidation-reduction reactions and other subjects pertaining to the two sub-divisions of analytical chemistry." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

"Both students and teachers using this book of principles will be pleased by its breadth of view, by the style in which it is written, and by the illustrative problems worked out in detail in the more important sections, but they will regret that the treatment is not more extensive in some cases and they will be downright confused or upset by those sections that are incorrect or not clear." D. M. Yost
+ — Am Chem Soc J 63:887 Mr '41 600w

"Actually, it seems to us, the volume is really two textbooks in one; an elementary treatise on physical chemistry and a text on analysis. In use, one part will probably serve as reference material for the other. It will remain to be seen whether or not such a combination of textbooks will prove successful."

Chem & Met Eng 47:655 S '40 120w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). And new stars burn. 303p $2 Farrar

41-303

The story of Lani Aldrich and the two men who loved her. Tho the story begins in Washington with the meeting between Lani and Dexter Warren, sophisticated, wealthy—and married, the greater part of the tale is laid in the Hawaiian Islands.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 F 2 '41 200w

"The tropical setting is glowingly described and the eruption of the volcano is made to fit neatly into a plot which also maintains a mean temperature in the nineties. It is altogether one of the author's most blazing novels." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '41 200w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). The heart remembers. 311p $2 Farrar

41-18106

When Carol Reid joined the staff of the publishing house of Maynard and Hall, she found to her dismay that her ex-husband, Andrew Morgan, was one of the editors. For a time the two attempt to get along on a friendly, co-worker plane but complications arise, a pretty authoress tries to entangle Andy, a child-prodigy wins Carol's heart, and in the end Carol and Andy come together again.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p36 N 2 '41 140w

"Miss Baldwin once more commands respect by giving a new background an authentic air and by telling an interesting story with humor and intelligence." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p34 N 23 '41 210w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Temporary address: Reno. 389p $2.50 Farrar

41-13057

Interwoven stories of half-a-dozen women who have come to Reno to get divorces. Among them are a career woman, a woman with grown children, an ex-glamor girl, and others.

"Sometimes the ending is happy, sometimes not. The plots are varied and skillfully developed, and some of the characters are so interesting that readers will wish that a long book were even longer." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Ag 10 '41 180w

"This comes close to being a handbook for prospective visitors to Reno. Of course, it is fiction, but Miss Baldwin used her eyes and ears and she knows how to report on detail." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '41 190w

BALDWIN, GANSON JAYNE, and CLARK, JOHN KIRKLAND. Legal effects of military service under the Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief act of 1940. 44p $2; pa $1 G. J. Baldwin, 72 Wall st, N.Y.

355.22 Military service, Compulsory 41-10097

"A concise booklet on the legal problems of the draftee, designed also to interest the employer, banker, insurance man, landlord, etc. Covers such points as: postponement of suits; judgments; attachments; evictions; mortgages; repossessions; etc." Management R

"Valuable to draftee and civilian lawyer as well." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 28 '41 550w

Management R 30:116 Mr '41 30w

BALDWIN, HANSON WEIGHTMAN. United we stand! defense of the Western hemisphere [Eng title: Defense of the western world]. (Whittlesey house publication) 364p maps $3 McGraw [8s 6d Hutchinson]

355 U.S.—Defenses. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 41-6740

A comprehensive survey of the military strength and weaknesses of the United States, written by the military expert of the New York Times. The author, writing before February 1941, summarizes the mistakes already made in this Great War by the European nations, and then goes on to show what the United States is prepared for, what we should prepare for, and our chances of success. Bibliography. Index.

"This study of American defense in all its aspects, of its present status and its future problems, is very nearly perfect of its kind. The author, one of the most distinguished and one of the most accurate of our military experts, achieves an admirable balance between the technical facts about our Army, Navy and Air Force which he has at his fingers' tips and those broad considerations of policy which should shape our defense plans." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic JI '41 600w

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

BALDWIN, H. W.—Continued

Bookmark 2:6 N '41

"This is in many ways, the best book which I have seen on current American military affairs. And for that very reason, I can only regretfully add, it also seems to me one of the most pernicious. For it places its authoritative weight of knowledge constantly at the service of a basic (though not always frankly stated) attitude which to me seems paralyzing in its uncertainty, confusion and timidity. . . . Embedded in its facts and detailed analyses there is the author's personal and more questionable general thesis. The United States must not and cannot enter the war." Walter Millis

+ — Books p5 My 4 '41 1100w

Cath World 154:125 O '41 320w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 58:623 My 7 '41 350w

"Should be read by everyone who desires to obtain a succinct and well-presented idea of the military problems confronting the United States at the present time, and what is being done to meet them. . . . The chapter entitled 'For What Should We Fight?' contains a careful summary of past, present, and possible future problems confronting the country, and an excellent résumé of the Japanese situation." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 My 28 '41 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:876 Jl '41 60w

"Baldwin's criticism of current American military policy is constructive. His call for 'aggressive defense' of the Western Hemisphere should not remain unnoticed. The book is written for the intelligent citizen. It will have wide appeal because it presents a complex technical topic lucidly." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 110w

"At a time when the American people are on the brink of making probably the most momentous decision in the nation's history, Mr. Baldwin's matter-of-fact survey and résumé of American strength may be described as obligatory reading. It is not short of an ultimatum." L. M.

+ Living Age 360:388 Je '41 500w

"It is vain to hope, in the trite phrase, that 'United We Stand' will be read by 'every intelligent citizen.' It is too serious, too closely reasoned, and too replete with facts, figures, and tables to be an outstanding popular success. But those who are making or who are neglecting to make decisions that will prepare or fail to prepare this country should ponder Mr. Baldwin's 300-odd pages. . . . His book will add further to the high reputation he has made for himself in the field of military and naval analysis—a department of American journalism in which he and a few other practitioners of his art are doing excellent service. Would that they were more frequently read by those in the seats of the mighty!" Lindsay Rogers

+ Nation 152:561 My 10 '41 900w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:732 My 26 '41 1500w

"Naturally, Mr. Baldwin has not, and does not presume to have, all the answers; but with enviable perspective, and with considerable eloquence, he propounds most of the questions. To say that he has made a clear-headed, dependable analysis is merely to say, 'Hanson Baldwin has come through again.' But this time he offers something more, a guidebook to a sound, effective, long-range military policy, and a handbook of useful military information for a bewildered people about to decide their own destiny—and duty." S. F. Williamson

+ N Y Times p1 My 4 '41 1200w

New Yorker 17:87 My 3 '41 100w

"United We Stand! includes some plain talk about the plight of national defense, the present state of defense industry. Some of Baldwin's statements may be challenged though it seems unlikely that many will be challenged successfully. Some of his openhand slaps at the Administration may start thunderheads crashing in high places. Some readers will be dismayed by his reports of defense lags during a year that has seen Europe conquered from Norway to Greece because of inadequate defenses. But most readers reading his book and the war news will find his viewpoint realistic, sturdy, fearless."

+ Time 37:88 Ap 28 '41 600w

"There are matters which invite criticism, but as a factual statement of the conduct of the war so far and as an estimate of the opposing forces and resources it is a stark, unbiased and invaluable document."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Ag 2 '41 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

Reviewed by Kurt Lachmann

Yale R ns 31:196 autumn '41 1050w

BALDWIN, HANSON WEIGHTMAN. What the citizen should know about the navy; ill. by André Jandot. 219p $2 Norton

359 U.S.—Navy (W) 41-51649

Graphic information about our navy, the use of the fleet, naval bases, different types of fighting ships and planes, equipment and communications and careers in the navy. Glossary, bibliography, and index.

Booklist 37:381 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:4 My '41

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Books p2 Je 1 '41 320w

"Baldwin is informative and interesting and his volume answers a multitude of questions asked by those who have had little direct contact with the Navy." P. J. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 60w

Nation 152:481 Ap 19 '41 10w

"A book which leaves the American citizen with no excuse for not understanding his country's naval defense and how it works."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '41 400w

"Mr. Baldwin has an English prose style that allows him to be informative without didacticism, and energetic without inaccuracy; and he has a mind which allows him to hunt the essential fact through forests of detail and bring it back alive." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 My 17 '41 270w

BALDWIN, LELAND DEWITT. The keelboat age on western waters; with chapter decorations by Harvey B. Cushman. 268p maps $3 Univ. of Pittsburgh

977 Mississippi river—History. Ohio river—History. Transportation—Mississippi valley. Boats and boating 41-10342

"The rivers of the West, the Red River, the Arkansas, the Missouri, the Illinois, the Wabash, and dozens of smaller streams formed a laborious highroad for the pioneers who settled the West early in the last century. Little has been written about the flatboat and rafts which were poled with incredible labor upstream to new lands and which floated back bearing furs and produce from newly broken soil. The keelboat men and bargemen who spent their lives aboard their primitive craft, the farmers and trappers who spent half their time on these incredibly clumsy craft were the hardy, free men who helped to build the new expanding nation. [This book] is an epic narrative about this great river migration." Sat R of Lit

"This entertaining volume has good pictures, a number of interesting chapter decorations, a competent index, and for its end papers a fine map." C. B. Firestone

+ Books p10 S 14 '41 450w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 26 '41 600w

"Mr. Baldwin's book deserves a place on any bookshelf dealing with American history. It is handsomely decorated by the drawings of Harvey Cushman."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 28 '41 150w

BALMER, EDWIN. The torn letter. 296p $2
Dodd

41-12240

Mystery story.

"Mr. Balmer provides quantities of what appears to be authentic courtroom procedure, much inside stuff about those on the jury, and a solution that should set you back on your heels. He relies not so much upon clues and detection as upon 'the clash of human emotions.'" Will Cuppy

Books p16 S 7 '41 180w

"Here is a mystery novel which owes everything to the novelty of its situation. . . The story is completely sentimental, however, and offers full enjoyment only to uncritical seekers after romance." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 160w

"Identity of criminal evident from beginning, but well handled court-room scenes and copious injections of emotion keep it alive. Fair."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 Jl 26 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41
180w

BALTHIS, FRANK K. Plants in the home; il. by Tabea Hofmann. 172p $2.50 Macmillan 635.9652 House plants (W) 41-15949

Discussion of all phases of the problem of raising plants in the house. The author, who is horticulturist of the Garfield Park conservatory, Chicago, suggests plants suitable for various environments, gives directions for growing many house plants, warns against diseases and pests, suggests arrangement, and tells how to treat cut flowers. Indexed by English and botanical names.

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon
Books p32 D 7 '41 140w

"The author writes in language that will be clear to people who have little or no botany but like to see things grow."

+ Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 80w

"The text is written in a brisk, simple style that invites one to experiment with less familiar plants. Charming and extremely well-done illustrations by Tabea Hofmann add greatly to the appearance and value of the book."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 1 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

BANDEIRA DUARTE, ESTRELA MARGARIDA. The legend of the palm tree; il. by Paulo Werneck. unpag $1 Grosset

393.2 Folklore—Brazil

"Printed in Brazil, this handsome, oversize picture book which last year won an award by the Brazilian ministry of education, gives the English translation of the ancient legend of Carinauba, who, through her noble sacrifice, was changed into a palm tree that she might save the stricken. Bold type, with full-page colored illustrations which have authentic Indian atmosphere. Will need reinforcing, but for its price merits general purchase." Booklist

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41

Bookmark 2:3 Ag '41

"The legend of how the palm tree came to sustain the Indians in a time of famine is beautifully told, and the full-page pictures are lovely in color and simplicity. Such a fine book would at any time find a warm welcome here, but in these troubled days its arrival has a special significance." Lena Barksdale

+ Horn Bk M 17:63 Ja '41 120w

"The Horn Book wishes to give its warm endorsement to this beautiful Indian legend with its richly colored pictures from Brazil." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:206 My '41 30w

"The text is impressive in its grave directness, and the illustrations, which introduce here the work of a Brazilian artist, are strong and beautiful. With a receptive simplicity of pattern and a brilliant use of color they convey with a burning intensity what one feels to be the very essence of the country." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 16 '41 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:94 My '41

BANDOLIER, STEPHEN. Murder mañana. 307p $2 Duell

41-1124

Detective story.

"'Murder Manana' is a dandy case which manages to tie the plain and fancy murder to international affairs. Great complications, good detective work, nice characters, and you should read it if for nothing more than to discover the charming ways of killing South Americans possess." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 70w

"There are so many persons involved, all playing at cross-purposes, that the story becomes slightly wacky at times, although it is all logical enough once one knows all the answers. You may guess the identity of the chief villain, or you may not. In either case you will have a good time reading about Bruce Windward, his fellow-correspondents, and his girl friends, to say nothing of the persons responsible for the dirty work." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 12 '41 200w

"Wild and woolly."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 18 '41 50w

BANGS, FRANCIS HYDE. John Kendrick Bangs, humorist of the nineties. 315p il $3 Knopf

B or 92 Bangs, John Kendrick 41-7103

Biography, written by his son, of this American humorist of a generation ago, the author of The Houseboat on the Styx. Bangs was editor of Life and later of Harper's Weekly, friend of William Dean Howells, Richard Harding Davis, Mark Twain, and others. Index.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic Jl '41 260w

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

"Bangs's son, Francis Hyde Bangs, a teacher of English, has collected in this biography a vast amount of material, much of it fascinating even though trivial, and has re-created for us the lively and amusing world in which his father moved. It is, naturally enough, a friendly portrait, but that is no fault. The author makes no extravagant claims for his subject. It is a smoothly-turned job, and done with admirable taste." Stanley Walker

+ Books p2 Ap 13 '41 500w

"The Gay Nineties were made gayer by the existence of John Kendrick Bangs whose books included some of the best sellers whose widely quoted bits of verse caused many smiles, and whose appearances as a lecturer were enjoyed all over the country. So it is with pleasure that one welcomes this book by his youngest son. . . The author has a quiet wit of his own and the book is enlivened by his comments." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 300w

"Mr Bangs's son is his sympathetic biographer. He has shown devotion and a proper appreciation of the untiring and usually successful efforts of his gifted forebear to persuade the American people to smile at their own peculiarities and shortcomings." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 19 '41 330w

BANGS, F. H.—Continued

"The biography is remarkable for the detachment with which one so close was able to appraise him. There are certain obvious reticences, which a biographer unrelated to him might have treated otherwise. But nothing basic in Bangs's career is omitted, and all who have an interest in the humors of the Nineties and, indeed, in the literary scene up to the first World War are sure to enjoy this well-considered and well-written book." H. J. Forman

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 27 '41 1000w

Pratt p5 D '41

"The biography is written by Bangs's youngest son, whose filial piety has been implemented by much recourse to contemporary comment on his father's writings—an obvious residue from a large collection of clippings. Out of it all emerges a lovable figure, of a period which ended with the first World War, even as his own life was hastened to its close by over-exertion in unselfish labors for reconstruction in France. Bangs cannot be counted among the major figures of American letters in his time, but he was completely of that time, and this book makes an essential contribution to the study of his period." M. A. D. Howe

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 19 '41 950w

Time 37:99 Ap 14 '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

"The story of this busy life is told with commendable detachment. There are a few episodes that one might wish treated in greater detail. Though the book naturally abounds in humor, it never becomes a mere string of anecdotes. Nor is all the entertainment supplied by John Kendrick Bangs, for the wit of the father shines again in his son." G. S. Haight

+ Yale R n s 31:407 winter '42 550w

BANKS, POLAN. There goes Lona Henry. 301p $2.50 Morrow

41-19300

Lona Henry was a Virginia girl, the daughter of an ambitious dressmaker of good but impoverished family, and a lusty ferryboat captain. Lona's ambition to succeed in life made her unscrupulous in her rise to fame, and brought her even to the governor's mansion, as the first lady of Virginia, before a valiant gesture ended her career.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 O 12 '41 280w

"It is all very well for Mr. Banks to know his heroine and her background thoroughly. If it is true that to know all is to forgive all he is admirable, there, too. But it seems too bad that he loves her so much. This creature of his swept him off his feet, just as she triumphantly carries away most of the men in his story of her. Feminine readers, who will undoubtedly greatly outnumber his men readers, are not likely to accept the author's estimate of Lona merely because of one heroic gesture at the end. They may well see that final act as the ultimate cowardice in a long series of follies, indiscretions and downright crimes." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p28 O 19 '41 460w

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN).

Salud! a South American journal; with drawings by Raffaello Busoni. 372p $2.75 Harper

918 South America—Description and travel (W) 41-14813

Entertainingly written study of the political and economic conditions in South America. It is based upon a journey made during the last six months, when the author visited several South American countries, and talked with prominent men and women. Her experiences have been reported in this book.

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

"'Salud' is more than a series of interviews, and the conclusions drawn from them. It is also a traveler's diary, packed with vivid description and animated personal detail. The reader becomes a fellow companion to the writer, with her book box and typewriter and her problems about 'what to wear,' and with her young daughter, Mary, pursuing her course of bullfights and beaux and color photography. Mrs. Banning has a woman's interest in clothes, costumes and food, and a writer's instinct for a story, so that her account is as chattily readable as one of her own pieces of fiction." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p7 Ag 10 '41 600w

"An author of popular fiction takes a six weeks' course in goodneighboring and recounts her experiences in a pleasant, chatty style, sometimes witty, never boring, generally superficial. The reviewer is somewhat disarmed by Mrs. Banning's frank admission of her complete unfamiliarity with the subject and her evident goodwill and desire to learn and understand all that she can about South America—a gigantic task for anyone in six weeks." L. V. Vila

+ Commonweal 35:99 N 14 '41 460w

"Mrs. Banning's book is a light, easy-to-read travel book as well as a serious study of political and economic conditions. It is ... a delightful book, humorous, thoughtful, shrewd in its comments on places and people, and not too long. Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 66:613 Jl '41 130w

"Mrs. Banning has said nothing offensive in itself; she brings out the points of view of people in various South American nations with honesty and impartiality. It is the blitheness and shallowness of her treatment which are troublesome. South America justly takes itself seriously. Some editing of her 'Journal' might have helped Mrs. Banning and contributed more to inter-American understanding." Nona Baldwin

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 17 '41 1100w

"I sincerely hope that Mrs. Banning's book may inspire some of her readers to visit South America themselves—which would be all to the good. But I cannot help hoping too that, for the sake of better inter-American understanding, those readers will leave her book both physically and mentally behind, and perhaps stay a little longer and dig a little deeper than did Mrs. Banning in the course of her six-week junket." Katherine Rodell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 16 '41 750w

"'Salud' is an absorbing travelog. It is serious, gay, whimsical, personal and contains much solid thought. It slips in historical facts about that country, and makes one South America minded as few books on the Latin countries do. Many of her suggestions are worthy of consideration by our own government, and also by those who would have better cultural relations with these people south of us. It is a book to reread and to keep on the bookshelves for frequent reference." M. D.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN). A week in New York. 316p $2.50 Harper

41-21271

"It's the story of several people from Overland, a small city four or five hours' flying distance from New York, who find themselves, for various reasons, in the metropolis for a week. Against the glittering background of the city they exhibit many characteristics which they had never revealed at home." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 S 21 '41 330w

Reviewed by Margaret Donaldson

N Y Times p34 O 5 '41 650w

BARBER, JOSEPH. Hawaii, restless rampart. 285p maps $2.75 Bobbs

996.9 Hawaiian Islands (W) 41-51589

"The complicated tensions in Hawaii, stronghold of our Pacific defence. The author believes that Hawaii's future will be determined by a 'triangle of forces': the Big Five (five corporations said to control most of the islands' sugar business), the anomalous Japanese population, and the great Army and Navy establishments centred at Pearl Harbor." (New Yorker) Index.

"A sound, readable, entertaining yet reliable picture of an American overseas possession that will certainly be more and more in the news if storm clouds continue to thicken over the restless Pacific." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 220w

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:9 My '41

"Hawaii: Restless Rampart" is a much needed book for it presents not the 'Paradise of the Pacific' of tourists but rather the real everyday Hawaii with its baffling problems. In addition to being a competent journalist, the author is a serious student of sociology and economics as well as a gifted amateur in military matters. He searches far below the surface and brings a keen, analytical mind to bear upon what he finds. There is no pretense of finality, no definite solution of dilemmas that have vexed many minds for many years and so far with no terminal result. The entire volume is an illuminating, study of human beings and their inter-relations in our most important territory." P. J. Searles

+ Books p16 Mr 23 '41 950w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '41 800w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 153:503 J1 '41 240w

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 22 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:200 O '41 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Smyth

Living Age 360:292 My '41 260w

Reviewed by Albert Horlings

New Repub 105:228 Ag 18 '41 650w

"This fascinating and, in places, amusing book presents a vivid picture, documented and convincing, of Hawaii. . . Both the exotic charms and the familiar Western luxury are there, oddly juxtaposed, somewhat overadvertised, yet jointly contributing to the demonstrable attraction of the islands." Harold Calender

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 2 '41 1300w

"Straightforward, readable journalism."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 60w

"Hawaii, Mr. Barber maintains, is the strongest defended sea-fortress in the world, but it is not yet impregnable. His book is an urgent footnote to the headlines, well-written, thoughtfully conceived." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 Mr 8 '41 650w

"Not the least interesting chapter of 'Hawaii, Restless Rampart' is that dealing with the activities of the dynamic Sydney S. Bowman and his campaign to publicize the islands. The account serves to give an understanding of why Hawaii has been, until very recently at least, best known for hula dancers, floral necklaces, romantic beaches, palm trees and pineapples. [This] book does an effective job of providing a more realistic picture."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 Mr 7 '41 800w

BARBER, WILLETTA ANN, and SCHABELT, RUDOLPH FREDERICK. Pencil points to murder. 304p il $2 Doubleday

41-7855

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p11 Je 8 '41 130w

"We have yet to be convinced that this is a better way of presenting a mystery story than is the straight narrative, but it is different and interesting." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 8 '41 210w

"Much emotion, plenty of action, solution that doesn't jell 'til last minute, and scads of good sketches. Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Je 7 '41 30w

"Even without the illustrations this would be a satisfactory mystery book, and with them the entertainment value is excellent, although sticklers for form might object to the weakness of some clues. It is admittedly pleasant to find one detective story without the usual pother about fingerprints, but it must be noted that a good fingerprint man could have solved the first murder on page 50."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 180w

BARBOUR, RALPH HENRY, and SARRA, LA MAR. How to play better basketball. 11lp $1.50 Appleton-Century

796.32 Basketball

(W) 41-20297

"A book on basketball for boys of junior and senior high school ages giving practical instruction in fundamental skills, dribbles and pivots, shooting, offensive and defensive play. There is a chapter on team management and officials. A list of player hints, a glossary, and numerous diagrams add to the usefulness of the book." Booklist

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

Reviewed by Emily Hutson

Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 90w

BARDON, MINNA. Murder does light house-keeping. 250p $2 Phoenix

41-7856

Detective story.

"The author of this tale gets off to an excellent start and has an engaging narrative style, but the solution of the mystery is not up to the standard set by the opening chapters." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 My 25 '41 130w

New Yorker 17:80 Je 7 '41 30w

"Grand Guignol shocker with corpses in every room, thunder and lightning, and other gruesome stage effects. Lurid."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 24 '41 30w

BARKER, MRS CATHERINE (SWEAZEY). Yesterday today; life in the Ozarks. 263p il $3.50 Caxton printers

917.67 Ozark mountains. Arkansas—Social life and customs 41-18974

A case worker's picture of life in the Ozark mountain region. Partial contents: Architecture; Agriculture; Ancestry; Personal appearance; Marriage; Children; Education; Family life; Health problems; Superstition. No index.

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught

Canadian Forum 21:253 N '41 480w

"Though these might be called 'case studies' they are no cold sociological reports but constitute a warm and moving document."

Christian Century 58:1305 O 22 '41 330w

"Will probably be read mostly by Ozark visitors, Americana collectors, or workers in the field." H. S. Taylor

Library J 66:729 S 1 '41 90w

"There is much that is 'picturesque' in 'Yesterday Today'; there is much that is deplorable; there is a shock to national complacency and a challenge to the need for real 'progress' among men and women who well deserve a better chance."

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '41 550w

BARKER, CHARLES ALBRO. The background of the revolution in Maryland. 419p $3.50 Yale univ. press

975.2 Maryland—History 40-35904

Traces the social, economic, cultural, and political development of Maryland thru the century which led up to the Revolution. Bibliographical note. Index.

"The subject of this book invites comparison with Mereness's Maryland as a Proprietary Province, which covers much of the same ground but with a different approach. Both studies show competent use of printed and manuscript sources; but Professor Barker's work was simplified by the printing, notably in later volumes of the Maryland Archives, of much material which Dr. Mereness had to work through in manuscript. On the other hand, the present volume has profited, on the economic side especially, by the use of such additional unpublished sources as the Galloway Papers in the Library of Congress and important mercantile correspondence preserved, curiously enough, in a diocesan library." E. B. Greene

Am Hist R 47:136 O '41 850w

Reviewed by A. H. Kelly
Ann Am Acad 214:238 Mr '41 190w

"Mr. Barker does full justice to the special flavor of Maryland while remaining objective. It is not for the casual reader, but specialists will find it highly readable."

+ Nation 152:26 Ja 4 '41 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p339 Jl 12 '41 360w

BARKER, ERNEST. Ideas and ideals of the British empire. (Current problems ser), 167p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

354.42 Imperial federation [A41-3387]

"Dr. Barker's approach to [his] topic is not historical or governmental, but rather philosophical. He is concerned with pointing out just what has distinguished the British Empire from other empires past and present; just what imparts to it the vitality and tensile strength it is now exhibiting; and just what makes it significant for the future of the world." Spec

"Dr. Barker has written a valuable essay. He shows keen insight into contemporary imperial problems. He glosses over no British mistakes, and he presents his claims in behalf of the Empire with becoming modesty." E. D. Graper

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1205 D '41 260w

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel
Ann Am Acad 218:207 N '41 260w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '42 10w

"Dr. Barker gives an admirable picture of the strength of the Empire and of the ideas and experiments that have made that Empire a unique phenomenon in the history of the world." J. L. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 15 '41 300w

"Dr. Barker's wise and stimulating book, the fruit of much thought and research, is, as we have said, not for those who seek a historical or a governmental treatise. It is a study of general forms, and of those basic ideas which create forms. It does not attempt to look into the future, and perhaps one fault is that it does not explore the question whether the idea of libertas, as applied to a wide-flung and steadily maturing empire, is not in the end a suicidal idea. But if the Empire does in time cease to exist and be but a splendid memory of the daughter-nations, it will have played its part. The true nature of that part is nowhere better indicated than in this small book." Allan Nevins

+ Spec 166:556 My 23 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson
Survey G 30:481 S '41 260w

"Whether criticism sustains or modifies Dr. Barker's judgments, it is impossible to read his essay without having vast territories of imperial history, past and contemporary, broadly illuminated by beams of penetrating light."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p222 My 10 '41 1000w

BARKER, EUGENE CAMPBELL, and COM-MAGER, HENRY STEELE. Our nation; maps by Raymond E. Craig; color copies by Donald Mills. 1032p il $2.48 Row

973 U.S.—History 41-6257

"A well-balanced, eleventh or twelfth grade history based on a flexible unit-topical plan." (Social Studies) Includes problems for oral or written discussion. Index.

"Those teachers of our national history who want a rich offering within the covers of one book and who wish to avoid the textbook which squeezes out the life and color of history to provide numberless vague generalities may well consider Our Nation for their classes. These features, combined with the excellent standards of selection, scholarship, style, and illustrations, will doubtless make this book a useful and popular textbook in the senior high school." R. E. Keohane
+ School R 49:632 O '41 700w

"Our Nation is stimulating, well worth your inspection." William Van Til + Social Educ 6:46 Ja '42 800w

"Clarity is not sacrificed for brevity; source materials are well-coordinated with the text."
+ Social Studies 32:288 O '41 30w

"The source material included in the body of each chapter is excellent. The selections are, for the most part, graphic, and they should stimulate interest in supplementary reading and research." E. B. Fincher
+ Social Studies 32:333 N '41 360w

BARKER, GEORGE. Selected poems. 149p $1.90 Macmillan

821 41-18748

Selections from the writings of a young English poet who has been living in this country since 1939. "Mr. Barker's images are remarkably rich and various. They may derive from allegory or history; they also draw freshly from the mechanisms of contemporary life. But some of the poems make difficult reading because of the intricate phrasing and the too deliberate dissonance. This affects one, on first reading, like certain 'modern' orchestrations in music. The lines are hard, clipped, nervous, strong and irregularly accented. The heavy drum beat of vowels contrasts strangely with a contrapuntal brassy assonance of slant or half-rhymes." (Books)

"The already solid achievements of Mr. Barker would not suffer by future simplification in form and treatment. This may seem banal criticism: it has so often been said of the work of young moderns. Yet the charge stands. Only those who have nothing to say need be brilliantly difficult. Barker does have something to say. Because his insight is sharp, his understanding of his generation and his time so sure, he can well afford to write closer to the bone." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p27 O 5 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg
Nation 153:617 D 13 '41 850w

"His 'Selected Poems,' are not selected enough; the book is full of pieces which Barker will some day be glad to forget. Especially when writing about public themes, as he often does, he has a habit of moving in the wrong direction. . . . But I don't want to give the impression that Barker is a negligible poet. On the contrary, his visions at their best are powerful, even overwhelming—as, for example, in his poem about England before Munich, and in his dream about the Amazons of death. Even his weaker poems make exhilarating reading, simply by their freedom and their wealth of images; his horse is Hyperbole rather than Pegasus, but it carries him through the clouds. And he has, moreover, a gift for making final statements." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:625 N 10 '41 360w

"George Barker is certainly not dull; he has poetic force, but he is disorderly. His rhythms are jagged, his words are wild and whirling, and even when they are not so wild they make our heads go round and round. . . . However, the poem on the death of Yeats and the one entitled 'O Who Will Speak From a Womb or a Cloud?' show a striking poetic gift. Now if we might be so bold as to make a suggestion, we would like to ask George Barker to lock himself up in a cell for a year or so and come to terms with himself and his muse, and not publish another book until he has been able to put some shape on this wildness." M. M. Colum

N Y Times p5 D 21 '41 360w

"At his best—and he is at his best some of the time in all of his books—there are only a handful of living poets to rank with him. One might profitably select from his lyrics, his satires, his ballads and his experiments a collection to stand with almost any of his contemporaries. And some of the poems from this book would be in it." Weldon Kees

+ — Poetry 59:159 D '41 1450w

"George Barker's 'Selected Poems' rewards the reader anew with each fresh perusal. In other words, there is nothing ephemeral about this verse. It has depth that is worth searching for. . . . Much of the poetry now coming out of England is highly national, even nostalgic—as would be expected. This young Englishman, now in this country, has written with a different kind of vigor—a sort of fighting, defiant spirit. On the whole, it is refreshing." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 13 '41 190w

"If this poet lacks the color and intensity of Dylan Thomas, to whom he is obviously indebted, he is clearer and more elocutionary—louder if not funnier. Barker uses every traditional and experimental device. He assaults the eye as well as the ear; he drives home his jagged point with unrelenting insistence. But the reader who misses the shorter poems—such poems, for example, as 'Third American Ode,' 'Letter Replying to S.S.,' 'I am that Face about which Fire Fell,' and 'In the Blue Amphitheatre of Summer'—will miss poetry which stimulates the senses even as it disturbs the mind." Louis Untermeyer

+ — Yale R n s 31:376 winter '42 210w

BARKER, ROGER; DEMBO, TAMARA, and LEWIN, KURT. Studies in topological and vector psychology [v] 2, Frustration and regression; an experiment with young children. 314p $1.70; pa $1.35 Univ. of Iowa

150 Psychology

"The researches here recorded 'are important in demonstrating the generalized character of the phenomenon of regression: frustration leads to primitive behavior even in areas not connected to inaccessible goals. Behavior is confined in a central fashion. For the child, constructive play is one of the best indicators of normality and adjustment.'" School & Society

J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 60w

School & Society 54:144 Ag 30 '41 50w

BARNARD, JOHN LAWRENCE. Revelry by night. 273p $2 Doubleday

41-14541

A story of life among the young married set in a Long Island town not far from New York city. The drinking, dancing, and flirting festivities of one week-end bring Park Cushing, and his wife Lynne, a long way toward maturity, after Lynne is nearly killed in an accident.

"Mr. Barnard has an easy command of sophisticated talk and his characters behave consistently in accord with their superficial endowments. 'Revelry by Night' is a first novel of considerable vitality." Lisle Bell

+ Books p6 Ag 10 '41 500w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '41 260w

"'Revelry by Night' is an eminently readable and frequently amusing first novel. Although it starts out to be very bright and gay, it develops a meaning and a moral toward the end, but these don't have to be taken too seriously. On the whole it is an unpretentious and entertaining example of light summer fiction."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 300w

"The end of the book is corny. But Revelry by Night is fluently readable, at times masterfully comic, and—for a first novel—a surprisingly deft study of a way of life that seems doomed to perish, as those in The Sun Also Rises, The Great Gatsby and Appointment in Samarra already have."

+ — Time 38:84 S 15 '41 350w

BARNE, KITTY (MRS ERIC STREATFEILD). Visitors from London; with 40 drawings by Ruth Gervis. 262p $2 Dodd [6s Dent]

(W) 41-51685

An English family of boys and girls are spending a vacation in the country with their aunt. Word comes that a relative has lent his nearby home to evacuees from London, and the aunt is to have charge. The business of settling unwilling Londoners in the country makes a thoroughly exciting summer for the Farrar family.

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"[There are so many emergencies] that an older person enjoys the book quite as much as the ten-year-olds to whom it is addressed; it is a veracious history of an experiment that worked out better later on, one that seldom reaches print and very seldom in so gay and sympathetic a spirit. . . . The best and bravest stay on; one boy will be a real farmer in time; meanwhile a reader has laughed and been helped, by laughing, to see both sides of a situation for which nobody in all the world was in the least prepared. The pictures are funny without being at all caricatured." M. L. Becker

+ Books p3 Ap 20 '41 320w

"Delightfully amusing story. Adults, as well as children from eight on, should enjoy this book with Miss Gervis's clever pencil sketches greatly adding to its life and sparkle." Ruth Hadley

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 90w

"Well-drawn characters and lively conversation make entertaining reading to which the delightful drawings are a happy accompaniment." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:208 My '41 110w

"While the situation is timely and interesting, and the characters well-drawn, there is a question as to children's reaction to the story. There are so many characters, some of their problems are of more interest to adults than to children. However, the book is of enough importance to try in larger libraries. Numerous drawings in black and white by Ruth Gervis add interest to the story." Marian Herr

Library J 66:308 Ap 1 '41 130w

"This is the first story for boys and girls of their contemporaries in wartime England and one which may be unreservedly recommended, for they will find in it much of the gay courage and matter-of-fact acceptance of conditions which their parents have

BARNE, KITTY—Continued
found in 'Mrs. Miniver' and 'Letter from England.' E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '41 360w

"Perfect for family reading aloud. Miss Barne is equally good on small cockney ruffians, Southdown shepherds, and chirpy lady volunteers. Nice pencil illustrations."

+ New Yorker 17:89 My 24 '41 90w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER; BECKER, HOW-ARD, and BECKER, MRS FRANCES (BEN-NETT), eds. Contemporary social theory.
947p $5 Appleton-Century

308.22 Sociology. Social sciences. Sociology —Bibliography 40-33642

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Am Econ R 31:118 Mr '41 40w

"The volume has a real value and a definite field of usefulness. Once the student realizes that the book is organized to present one conception of sociology rather than to give a doctrinally neutral survey of the discipline in its relations, he can swear allegiance to the doctrine or he can ignore it. In either case, he can read the essays for what they are—independent papers on various aspects of social science reality. For the most part the essays reach a fairly high degree of scholarly competence and they direct the student's attention to sources of information in many social science specialties." E. B. Reuter

+ — Am J Soc 46:908 My '41 1900w

"It may be said at once that this is a useful and discouraging volume. It is useful for those students who wish to be informed in a convenient and generally authoritative fashion of recent theoretical developments in sociology and cognate fields. It is discouraging to those who seek systematic accounts of integrated theoretical analysis involving clearly stated postulates, unambiguous concepts, fruitful and feasible hypotheses, authenticated theorems, and compelling bases for scientific prediction.
In these respects, the various essays are clearly uneven. Yet this may be conceived not as a failing of the editors but rather as an indictment of so much that currently passes as 'theory' in the social sciences." R. K. Merton

+ — Am Soc R 6:282 Ap '41 2500w

Foreign Affairs 19:677 Ap '41 10w

Reviewed by W. E. Gettys

Social Forces 20:117 O '41 500w

"I think a better book on this subject could be written in fewer words with fewer names.
Hundreds of these names will be forgotten, except by antiquarians, and the sooner the better. Certainly they have little place in 'contemporary' sociological theory." Read Bain
Survey 77:195 Je '41 850w

BARNES, ROSWELL PARKHURST. A Christian imperative; our contribution to world order. 196p $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

261 Sociology, Christian. Missions. War and religion 41-6076

"The 'imperative' here stressed is one of attitudes and principles, not of specific policies having to do with matters now in the headlines. Highly controversial issues are avoided. . . But there are so many things for the churches to do that churches alone can do that there is ample need for the quickening and guidance of the Christian conscience." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p13 Je 29 '41 100w

"Dr. Barnes, now associate general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, writes wise and timely words."

+ Christian Century 58:500 Ap 9 '41 110w

"This book contains much of practical worth to all who are willing to review this present situation with the desire to help solve humanity's problems." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 16
41 900w

"The book suffers from a timid desire to be on the conservative side, and it takes a good deal for granted in feeling that the Christian world as is can meet the needs of this chaotic world. One feels that the organization mind has dimmed the insight and weakened the hand of the writer, and there is a strange lack of lift in the book. It might have been written forty years ago." H. J. S.

Churchman 155:35 Je 1 '41 120w

"Dr. Barnes has carefully avoided committing himself concerning the immediate issues of foreign policy growing out of the war or even on the pacifist issue. In one way this apparent evasion of such urgent problems makes the book rather artificial. On the other hand, the fact that the author does limit himself to the area in which pacifists and nonpacifists in the church can work together and plan together has now the value of showing how large and important that area is. I should add that there is a profoundly religious quality running through this book which should help laymen who still keep their religion in a compartment separate from their business and politics to realize that there is a Christian imperative that we pay whatever price is necessary for the development of an international order which will undercut the causes of war." J. C. Bennett

+ — J Religion 22:121 Ja '42 230w

BARNETT, ALBERT EDWARD. Paul becomes a literary influence. 277p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

227 Bible. New Testament—Epistles. Paul,
Saint 41-17714

"In spite of a title which suggests a discussion, at least semi-popular, of Paul's influence in literature, the book reports the findings of a highly technical and scholarly piece of research into one phase of the formation of the New Testament canon. There was a time in the first century when Paul was known to the churches only by his personal visits. Somewhat later, every other Christian writer seems to have known him as a writer. Dr. Barnett's project was to collect, by a detailed examination of texts, the specific evidences of Pauline influence." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1083 S 3 '41 160w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 155:22 O 1 '41 300w

"This is one of those valuable studies for which there will unfortunately be a very restricted sale. This is not due to any lack in the book but to the linguistic deficiencies in the equipment of the average modern minister. . .
The book is well done and will be of permanent value quite irrespective of whether all the points of the initial hypothesis be eventually considered valid or not. Many of Barnett's incidental lexicographical observations are highly interesting (to the student of Greek)." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 19:72 Ja '42 700w

"This book will be indispensable to every worker in the New Testament." John Knox

+ J Religion 22:122 Ja '42 210w

BARNETT, JAMES DUFF. A more co-operative democracy; a book for the general reader. 179p $2 Smith, Richard R.

339.4 Economics. Consumption (economics).
Cooperation 41-11883

"Our present competitive economic system is, the author believes, wasteful of things and men and harmful to democracy. The usual remedies proposed are mere palliatives. A healthy development of consumers' coopera-tives, both voluntary and government-sponsored, will give control by consumers (i.e., everybody) over producers, will produce an efficient national economy and will safeguard the future of democracy. The author is professor of political science in the University of Oregon." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:935 J1 23 '41 80w
 "Prof Barnett is no extremist. He is distinctly a 'middle-of-the-roader' and advocates the Swedish type of consumer cooperatives, which exist along with government-operated and private businesses." M. L. Warren
Springfld Republican p7e J1 20 '41 440w

BARNETT, ROBERT W. Economic Shanghai: hostage to politics, 1937-1941. 210p il maps $2 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council
 330,9511 Shanghai. Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. Japan—Economic policy

"The siege of Shanghai is itself a part of Japan's larger campaign in East Asia which had to meet two tests of success. It had to be converted, economically, from a destructive to a constructive New Order before fatally sapping Japan's strength. And it had to avoid arousing the open and determined opposition of the Great Powers for whom Japan is ultimately no match. On the first count the campaign is a dismal failure, thanks to the determined resistance of the Chinese and the ineptitude of Japanese imperialism. On the second, too, the odds are increasingly against Japan. . . . Meanwhile, the workers, the housewives, the bankers, merchants and industrialists of Shanghai have faced an extraordinary set of conditions. How have they fared during these four years of war? Where does economic Shanghai stand after the battering it has taken? These are the questions which Mr. Barnett seeks to answer in this [book]." (Pacific Affairs) Index.

Reviewed by E. B. Price

Am Pol Sci R 35:1210 D '41 300w

"This book is another product of the Inquiry Series sponsored by the Institute of Pacific Relations, and is an excellent addition to an already significant list of studies dealing with the problems of the Far East." W. C. Johnstone

+ Ann Am Acad 218:204 N '41 450w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 11 '41 130w

"A first-rate piece of analytical reporting based on first-hand study, a realistic picture of the fortunes of a great urban center whose future is still of importance to China, Japan, and the Western Powers alike." W. W. Lockwood

+ Pacific Affairs 14:364 S '41 1700w

BARNES, MRS MARGARITA. The Indian press; a history of the growth of public opinion in India. 491p $6 Macmillan [21s Allen, G]
 079.54 Press—India. Public opinion—India [41-5025]

"In this volume the author, a seasoned journalist and research worker, has given us a well-documented and reliable study of the development of public opinion in India and its expression in the press. In fact it is a study of the spirit of the British rule from the days when the East India Company acquired political power to the present day and of the attitude of Indian nationalism, which has been fostered by the Indian press. This study has been carried on in India as well as in England. It is based on early newspaper accounts, government reports, debates in the legislative assembly, and other original sources and trustworthy works of importance." Am Hist R

"A valuable addition to the growing literature on modern India." Taraknath Das + Am Hist R 46:651 Ap '41 750w

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 13 '40 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:203 O '41 10w

"For a history of the Press in India there is a great deal of material, as Mrs. Barnes shows in her book. She has made diligent use of that material, but seems to write without any inside knowledge of any of the leading papers in India."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 24 '40 60w

BARON, SALO WITTMAYER. Bibliography of Jewish social studies, 1938-39. 291p $3; pa to members of Conf. on Jewish relations $2.25 Jewish social studies, 1841 Broadway, N.Y.
 016.296 Jews—Bibliography

"This is an extensive list of books, pamphlets, and articles in various languages. The author's careful classification and frequent annotations conduce to the practicability of the bibliography." Am Soc R

Am Soc R 6:926 D '41 30w

"The mechanical arrangement of the book is excellent. Each section begins with a list of cross-references which enables the reader to track down all items. The additions to the original list have, besides their regular numbers, numbers in parentheses indicating their proper place according to section and alphabet in the original list. One can only be thankful to Professor Baron for this publication." Walter Rothman

+ Library Q 11:524 O '41 750w

BARON, SALO WITTMAYER, ed. Essays on Maimonides; an octocentennial volume. 316p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

181.3 Maimonides (Moses ben Maimon ben Joseph) 41-7154

Commemorative volume, containing the addresses delivered at Columbia University during the celebration of the eight hundredth anniversary of the birth of Moses ben Maimon. In addition there are five essays by scholars on various aspects of Maimonides' economic views and his medical work. Index.

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin

Crozer Q 18:275 J1 '41 160w

"The volume is well printed and edited, and includes a general index covering all the essays. It forms a valuable addition to the literature of 'Guides to the Guide,' if only because its diversity of interpretation almost forces the reader to seek the true significance of Maimonides' work by reading it for himself." E. A. M.

+ J Philos 38:582 O 9 '41 1200w

BARRES, PHILIPPE. Charles de Gaulle. 260p $2 Doubleday

B or 92 Gaulle, Charles André Joseph Marie de (W) 41-22873

A French journalist, son of the statesman Maurice Barrès, writes this account of the Free French forces and their leader, setting De Gaulle against a background of French politics and military policies in the pre-war years.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"Those who are interested in the Free French movement will find in M. Barrès' book much useful information concerning the public career of General De Gaulle as well as a description of the economic and strategic importance of the French colonies that have gone over to him and brief biographical sketches of his principal associates. The author, however, hardly succeeds in penetrating behind the outer facade of the leader of the Free French forces who appears to the outside world to be a cold

BARRES, PHILIPPE—Continued
and rather colorless figure. And the story of the disastrous attack on Dakar about which we should all like to know more M. Barrès says he cannot now tell for reasons of military secrecy." John Elliott

+ — Books p5 Ja 25 '42 1350w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer

Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 130w

"This book, by the one-time chief editor of Le Matin and foreign editor of Paris-Soir, is badly needed. The Free French leader has no ball-of-fire personality. American news-reel audiences see more of the nose and the man's excessive, nearly freakish height than of his inner genius. . . M. Barrès, it must regretfully be added, has been betrayed by his translator and editor. Slovenly is the word for the English version. Gallicisms run riot in a translation monumental for its ineptitude." Hal Lehrman

+ — Nation 154:17 Ja 3 '42 2000w

"The good faith of the book cannot be doubted, and if the author is over-optimistic it may be laid to wishful thinking, for any conquered people desire a hero to liberate them and it is easy to invest de Gaulle with the appurtenances of such a role." L. S. M.

+ Springfield Republican p6 D 15 '41 700w

BARRETT, HELEN MARJORIE. Boethius; some aspects of his times and work. 179p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Boethius [41-8046]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The noble aim of this little volume, written as it was for the general reader, is to 'rescue Boethius from being generally forgotten', to which task the author brings the qualifications of enthusiasm for her subject, a clear and attractive style, an adequate grasp of the sources used, and a talent for summarizing. Her sins are of omission rather than commission. The main problems are lucidly surveyed, and enough references are given to enable those who wish to pursue the subject further to do so. No knowledge of background is assumed, and much space is devoted to supplying this wherever necessary." R. B. Pegram

+ Am Hist R 46:875 J1 '41 600w

"This study of the life of Boethius and of his last book, The Consolation of Philosophy . . . is admirably done; and Miss Barrett is a good scholar who has read widely in reference to her subject. She seems, however, to underestimate the political difficulties in which Theodor found himself just before Boethius was arrested. . . The Consolation of Philosophy is very well summarized by Miss Barrett. Here, however, another criticism may be made. She continues the old controversy about the 'Christianity' of Boethius, without giving any indication of what she means by Christianity." C. D. B.

+ — Ethics 51:250 Ja '41 220w

"A new book to bring this astonishing figure out of the obscurities of his period demands that the writer of it shall have full knowledge of the philosophical and historical background and of the violent political and personal forces that have gone to shape his mind and to decree his fate. Miss Barrett is a classical scholar who has devoted the years of her retirement to this brief but well-packed volume, which can hardly fail to absorb the general reader and attract the learned. She reveals a mastery of her material which enables her to move freely within her field of study." J. M. Lloyd Thomas

+ Hibbert J 39:218 Ja '41 1100w

BARRETT, JAMES WYMAN. Joseph Pulitzer and his World. 449p $3.75 Vanguard

B or 92 Pulitzer, Joseph. The World. New York (W) 41-21082

"An ample biography, covering the distinguished newspaper owner's Civil War experiences, his journalistic beginnings in St Louis, the public-service crusades of his New York World newspapers, his tragic illness, and so on. Much new material, including a fresh account of those papers' decline and fall." (New Yorker) Index.

"The book resorts to some irritating Hearst-paper mannerisms in its thick-and-thin pursuit of vividness; there is, for example, a chronic excess of the historical or hysterical present tense. But the vividness is achieved, and achieved throughout." Wilson Follett

+ — Atlantic D '41 350w

Booklist 38:94 N 15 '41

"Mr. Barrett's biography of Pulitzer and history of The World would have been a more interesting book if he had resisted the temptation to make anachronistic asides and ephemeral allusions which have little relevancy to his subject. The book is filled with trite metaphors, bad plays on words and sour remarks about the newspapers of today in comparison with those of yesterday. The most interesting part of Mr. Barrett's book is the account of The World under Herbert Bayard Swope's direction and afterward until its sale to the Scripps-Howard interests. . . Mr. Barrett's evidence on this last phase of The World is particularly valuable because he was one of the leaders in the movement to save that paper from the anonymity of merger." M. R. Werner

+ — Books p18 N 16 '41 1050

"The story of Joseph Pulitzer and The World is one of the most colorful in the annals of daily journalism. The tale has been told before, and Mr. Barrett adds few revelations but brushes in a generous supply of color. . . The style of Mr. Barrett is reminiscent of the staccato paragraphs of a typical World story. His narrative of the younger days of J.P. in St. Louis and of his entry into New York is vivid, but emphasizes the eccentric. There must have been more solid qualities to the journalism which succeeded on the Post-Dispatch than Mr. Barrett's account indicates." C. M. Puckette

+ — N Y Times p3 N 16 '41 360w

"Told in crisp news-room detail, with some practically unavoidable sentiment, by the last city editor of the Morning World."

+ New Yorker 17:98 O 18 '41 70w

"Into this incisive, opinionated, and richly anecdotal volume the last city editor of the World has packed an immense amount of office legend and inside information. The book is above all else outspoken. . . The final chapters of this gossipy, journalistically amusing book, dealing with the days of H. B. Swope, Heywood Brown, and Walter Lippmann, will interest the present and passing generations of newspaperman." Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 24:27 O 18 '41 800w

"I wish sincerely that Mr. Barrett had made more of a critique and less a catalogue of his book. He could have done it. He is a competent and experienced practitioner of journalism. For ten of the paper's last fifteen years he was its city editor. During the gallant, forlorn fight of its employees against the trustees' determination to shake off the dead hand of their father he revealed a passionate and crusading devotion to The World that had been, and could have continued to be. He could have assayed The World, and written as swift-paced a narrative as he does in this book. I wish sincerely that he had." W. P. Beazell

+ — Survey G 30:708 D '41 550w

BARRETT, RICHMOND BROOKS. Good old summer days. 338p il $3.50 Appleton-Century 917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs, Summer resorts

An informal, anecdotal account of the famous American summer resorts of the years before the first World war. Newport is given nearly a third of the book, with another long section devoted to Saratoga, and briefer accounts to Narragansett Pier, Long Branch, and Bar Harbor. Index.

"The author, although not exactly an old-timer, has been around long enough to have absorbed a vast amount of incident, as well as the color and feeling of the strange world of which he writes. What he has to say, though never brilliant or penetrating, is authentic." Stanley Walker

+ Books p18 N 30 '41 700w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p9 D 21 '41 1300w

"The author has a nice eye for the changing fashions in manners, amusements, personalities, dress, and whatnot. Intelligently written and appropriately illustrated."

+ New Yorker 17:107 N 29 '41 30w

"Newport, Narragansett Pier, Saratoga, Long Branch, and Bar Harbor are here chronicled. With Newport, Mr. Barrett really goes to town, if so inelegant an expression may be permitted in connection with that haunt of the elite. He knew it when. He was born and raised there and there he still dwells. In spite of or because of that, he writes about it with a nice balance. To him it is neither to be pitied nor scorned nor worshipped. He does his full duty by Newport as a social historian, neglecting neither the glamour nor the 'dirt.' His anecdotes are interesting, his character sketches deft."

Fairfax Downey

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 13 '41 400w

BARRINGER, LEWIN BENNITT. Flight without power; the art of gliding and soaring. 251p il maps $3.50 (17s 6d) Pitman

629.13333 Gliders (aeronautics). Gliding and soaring 40-27427

Manual on motorless flying. Seven chapters are by Lewin Barringer, manager of The Soaring society of America; five are by other specialists. Contents: History of motorless flight, by N. H. Randers-Pehrson; Aerodynamics, by Paul Schweizer, assisted by Milton Stoughton and Ernest Schweizer; Types of gliders, by L. B. Barringer; Design, construction and maintenance, by Paul and Ernest Schweizer; Launching methods, by L. B. Barringer; Soaring meteorology, by K. O. Lange; Instruments, by C. H. Colvin; Flight training, by L. B. Barringer; Soaring technique, by L. B. Barringer; Soaring sites, by L. B. Barringer; Clubs, by L. B. Barringer; Future of gliding and soaring, by L. B. Barringer. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:361 My 15 '40

"It is well written and is perhaps the most clear, concise and up-to-date exposition on the structure of the atmosphere that has yet been specifically written for the sky-sailing pilot. . . 'Flight Without Power' is essentially a book for the potential cross-country sail-plane pilot, and as such it can be recommended as one of the best volumes yet produced." C. H. Latimer-Needham

+ Nature 147:38 Ja 11 '41 1250w

BARROWS, CHESTER LEONARD. William M. Evarts, lawyer, diplomat, statesman. 587p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Evarts, William Maxwell 41-21621

Biography of a nineteenth century American lawyer, orator and statesman. Evarts was a charter member of the Republican party, one of the lawyers who defended President Johnson in the impeachment trial, attorney general in Johnson's cabinet and secretary of state under Hayes. In his private practice he handled cases for public service corporations and railroads, and cases involving international law. Bibliography. Index.

"In spite of the apparent admiration of the author for his subject, the book may stir in the average reader only a limited enthusiasm for a man who, however able, was concerned primarily with building a private fortune by the adept use of the tricks of his profession, largely without reference to the public welfare. Because of the connection of prominent lawyers with railroad builders and manipulators and with men in other fields of business and industrial activity responsible for the development of modern enterprise, clinical studies of their activities are well worth making. Apart from the services which they rendered in public office, however, it may be seriously questioned whether they are entitled to the praise of the thoughtful historian." C. B. Swisher

Am Pol Sci R 35:1196 D '41 340w

"Mr. Barrows makes no attempt to depict his subject in heroic colors. He shows him as one of the foremost lawyers of a period that explains the man. He does not, however, go far enough in presenting the period itself—the background against which Evarts stands." G. S. Hellman

+ — N Y Times p4 N 23 '41 1750w

BARROWS, MARJORIE. comp. Pulitzer prize poems. 202p $2.50 Random house

811.08 American poetry—Collections

(W) 41-51888

Collection of American poems, selected from the books of poetry which have won the Pulitzer prize, from Edna St Vincent Millay in 1923 to Leonard Bacon in 1941 inclusive. No index.

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"What should be said about the taste shown here is that, a little more refined, a little higher up the ladder, it is the same thing that devotes itself to queries on the book page of the New York Times on Sunday. . . The Pulitzer-prize award, on the evidence before us, is the apotheosis of this taste. The attitude it reveals toward poetry is utterly bourgeois, in the worst sense of the word. It is all so refined and respectable: the poems 'are not the highly difficult poems appreciated by the few'; the poets are nice, wholesome college graduates, with decent jobs and summer places in the country. None ever seems hateful or jealous, subject to acedia or mood-swings; none ever seems bothered by the unadulterated plain or complicated fancy kinds of hell that poets get into. None sounds a bit like Rimbaud or Rilke. Perhaps not; but is it fair to lead people to think that American poets and poetry are as simple as all this?" Rolfe Humphries

Nation 153:283 S 27 '41 100w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

N Y Times p9 Ja 25 '42 280w

New Yorker 17:111 S 20 '41 40w

BARRY, JEROME. Murder with your malted. 275p $2 Doubleday

41-25660

Detective story.

"A gangster, an old miser, three young women and several cops are among those present in this toxicological puzzle. Mr. Barry delays his murder quite a while in the interest of drug store background and jargon. A 'bromo' is strictly a non-tipper. Here is optional reading for a slowish mystery week." Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 21 '41 150w

"This is a thoroughly enjoyable yarn, written in a breezy manner befitting the lunch-counter background." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p11 D 21 '41 150w

"Brisk, pleasant first mystery, but watch that tuna-on-white!"

+ New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 220w

"Soda-fountain argot and wise-cracking Broadway dialogue add zest to the well-tangled plot."

+ Time 39:72 Ja 5 '42 50w

BARRY, PHILIP. Liberty Jones. 167p $2
 Coward-McCann
 812 41-13086

An allegorical drama in which America is represented as a beautiful young girl, Liberty Jones, who is dying from lack of democracy. The young men, her defenders, are able to cure her after all the old remedies have failed.

Booklist 38:6 S '41

"Critics and audiences differed as to the dramatic values of both the author's arguments and their theatrical effectiveness. Personally I found them of high merit. Recommended for limited general purchase as it is unlikely to receive as wide amateur production as it should." George Freedley
 Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 140w

"As for the meanings and symbols in Mr. Barry's play, it seemed to me that he ends by being both too explicit and not explicit enough. For example, it is made so clear that Liberty Jones is a symbol and what she is a symbol for, that we are led to wonder more than ever what some of the other characters symbolize, and thus are left the more puzzled. This confusion, or sense of confusion, which is the same thing in the theatre, and the failure in both play and production to establish one dominant tone for the whole thing, are the two main causes for the play's failure to come off." Stark Young

— + New Repub 104:276 F 24 '41 1600w
 (Dramatic criticism)

BARRY, RICHARD HAYES. Father and his town. 299p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Barry, George A. Santa Ybel, California (W) 41-51860

The author's father spent the first twenty years of his life in Pennsylvania, the next forty in Wisconsin, and the last twenty-five in California. It is the last period which is dealt with chiefly in this volume of reminiscences of the life of an editor of a small newspaper in a small California town.

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"The son tells a warm-hearted tale, well written, occasionally veering toward an understandable sentimentality. Like most books written by sons about their fathers, it borders on ancestor-worship. But it is genuine stuff, full of revealing anecdotes, and it presents an engaging picture of a quaint character and the people of his town." Stanley Walker
 + Books p6 Ag 3 '41 400w

Reviewed by H. P. Bolman

Library J 66:667 Ag '41 90w

"Small towns, country editors and fathers have had somewhat of a vogue of late, probably because they take our minds off more gloomy subjects. Mr. Barry has combined all three of them in what seems to be a truthful book, and which is certainly an interesting, if not precisely distinguished, product." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 10 '41 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

BARSIS, MAX. Barsis at Snow valley [il. by the author]. [90p] $1.50 Daye

741 Caricatures and cartoons. Skis and ski running 40-29763

"The author of 'Bottoms Up: An Unreliable Handbook for Skiers' . . . comes through with another hilarious book of ski sketches. . . The black and white cartoons are the result of Max's two-month sojourn at Sun Valley, Idaho, and are somewhat characteristic of life at the famous Sawtooth Mountain resort." N Y Times

Books p16 Mr 23 '41 80w

Reviewed by Frank Elkins

N Y Times p14 D 22 '40 60w

BARTHOLOMEW, NILES CLARK. Aircraft inspection methods. 131p il $1.25 Pitman
 629.13 Airplanes 40-27778

"The prime purpose of this book is to instruct the beginner, the student and the mechanic in the essential requirements of an airworthy airplane as well as in methods of determining when such conditions are met. No attempt will be made to describe the methods used in fabricating, assembling or repairing airplanes except where required to describe properly inspection routine." (Intro) Index.

Booklist 37:132 D 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:43 O '40

BARTIMEUS, pseud. See Ricci, L. A. da C.

BARTLETT, SIR BASIL HARDINGTON, 2d bart. My first war; an army officer's journal for May 1940; through Belgium to Dunkirk. 131p map $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Chatto]

940.54 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Campaigns—Belgium 41-7880

Journal of a young English actor and playwright who was serving in France as a liaison officer during the Battle of Flanders, and the evacuation of Dunkirk. The journal covers the month of May, 1940.

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 90w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:196 O '41 10w

"A first-class piece of vivid reporting, full of observations and reflections which help one to understand the collapse of Belgium and France." E. A. Montague

+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 26 '40 550w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 40w

"Basil Bartlett is alive and fresh and grown-up. Besides, he has an eye for character, an ear for conversation, and a nose for incident; so that his account has the sort of lively vivacity of a good gossip column." T. C. Worsley

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:522 N 23 '40 300w

"This is a diary of uncommon interest, and the author's reflections abundantly testify to his sound judgment and keenness of observation. He also possesses a sense of humor which at times becomes something very like sarcasm." A. M. Nikolaieff

+ N Y Times p2 Je 8 '41 440w

"An amusing book about what off-hand doesn't seem to be a very funny subject, flavored with genuine English nonchalance."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Ap 26 '41 40w

"It is all fascinating and funny and a little sad, told with an exquisite skill one expects of the translator of Asmodée." Graham Greene
 + Spec 165:614 D 6 '40 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p587 N 23 '40 310w

BARTLETT, FREDERIC CHARLES. Political propaganda. (Current problems ser) 158p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

301.1523 Propaganda [41-2115]

"This is the first of the 'Current Problems' series edited by Ernest Barker. It is intended for general reading, as are the others in a series prepared by experts. Professor Bartlett examines totalitarian and democratic propaganda and shows how propaganda works differently in different groups." Commonweal

"This volume not only tells about political propaganda in an able way; it is in itself political propaganda of the highest type. . . Believing that Bartlett had provided in this book an excellent example of the very type of democratic propaganda just described, the reviewer urges this thoughtful volume upon his colleagues and upon their students." J. G. Jenkins

+ Am J Psychol 54:616 O '41 700w

"The tiny volume is an objective warning against absolute statements and easy generalizations concerning human nature and the ability to persuade men to any position simply by employing subtle or magnificent falsehoods. There is no magic to propaganda, no mesmerism based upon some esoteric knowledge of the black art. Undoubtedly propaganda has been much over-propagandized and is sadly in need of being debunked. Intelligent books like Political Propaganda should be prophylactic as well as curative." J. B. Shannon

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:600 Je '41 300w

"An excellent study, recommended especially to those who think that we should imitate Hitler's method of propaganda if we are to lick him. The author's analysis and reasoning would sober them."

+ Commonweal 33:261 D 27 '40 70w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:871 JI '41 10w

Reviewed by Tom Harrison

New Statesman & Nation 21:464 My 3 '41 130w

"Professor Bartlett is a professional psychologist, and his little book in the new Current Problems series is a valuable study of some of these problems. The reader who seeks comfortable generalisation and picturesque example will be disappointed. This is a thoughtful, cautious book. It provides the pleasure of logical argument, concisely but always clearly expressed. . . The book suffers slightly from compression. Specific examples which might have illumined the argument have had to be excluded. I make this criticism not as one who suspects indigestion, but as one left asking for more." David Thomson

+ Spec 165:394 O 18 '40 600w

"The professor of experimental psychology at Cambridge University outlines the elements of political propaganda with calm good sense." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:87 F '41 320w

"Professor Bartlett is a scientist, and his examination of political propaganda is conducted with the cautious spirit of the experimental psychologist. . . There is something particularly refreshing about Professor Bartlett's exposure of the falsity of some of the German leader's fundamental precepts."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p466 S 14 '40 330w

BARTO, MRS EMILY NEWTON. Chubby Bear; drawings by [the author]. unp 75c Longmans

41-18055

Picture story book for very young readers, describing the adventures of a very small bear, some bees, and some canned peaches.

"Story told in verse, and all quite charming." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

"Since children love bears, there is always room for one more bear picture book on the market. Chubby Bear is not so very different from other little picture book bears, but his story is told in catchy rhyme, and Emily Barto's amusing drawings make him particularly lovable to quite small people." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:676 Ag '41 50w

BARTON, FREDERICK BUSHNELL. Music as a hobby; how to have fun with music as a performer and as a listener. 157p pl $2 Harper

780 Music (W) 41-51985

Chapters on music as a hobby for the ordinary amateur written in a friendly manner.

Partial contents: You can be musical; Keep healthy with music! Selecting your instrument; How to organize a neighborhood orchestra; Singing is a lot of fun—and you can do it! How to play by ear; How to get more fun out of listening; Make intelligent use of the radio; How to get your son interested in music; A list of music publications. Index.

Booklist 38:109 D 1 '41

"There is more common sense and actual stimulus in this businesslike boost for a hobby than in many a more stately explanation of 'how to listen to music.' For this citizen of the Republic knows that you don't actually experience music until you make some of it as well as listen."

+ Books p35 N 23 '41 120w

Reviewed by Milton Berliner

Springf'd Republican p6e N 9 '41 130w

BARTUSEK, LIBUSHKA. Happy times in Finland [il. by Warren Chappell]. 146p $2 Knopf Children in Finland (W) 41-10782

Describes the visit of a twelve-year-old American boy scout to Finland, where his father and mother had lived. Juhani spends a year with relatives, and discovers how the Finns live, work, and play, before he returns to his home in Chicago.

"Second of a series that led with Czechoslovakia [Book Review Digest, 1940] this account of a boy's visit to Finland is less colorful than its predecessor in text and pictures, but quite as full of news of what life is like in city and country." M. L. Becker

Books p16 N 2 '41 200w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:376 D '41 90w

"Excellent." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41

"Written definitely with the purpose of introducing Finland to American children, this book is not distinguished in any way; it will, however, serve to give the reader a feeling for the Finnish people and an understanding of their life and customs. Not essential." J. E. Stromdahl

Library J 66:676 Ag '41 60w

BARZUN, JACQUES. Darwin, Marx, Wagner; critique of a heritage. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 420p $2.75 Little

920 Darwin, Charles Robert. Marx, Karl. Wagner, Richard. Materialism (W) 41-8024

The thesis is that these three "intellectual imperialists," who were all collators rather than originators of ideas, really, established the mechanistic, pseudo-scientific "system" which is the root of all Communism and Fascism. Indexes.

Am Soc R 6:928 D '41 40w

Booklist 37:543 JI 15 '41

"This is the mature work of a free spirit, and should be enjoyed by all free men." Albert Guerard

+ Books p5 Je 8 '41 1600w

"One or two minor cavils might be uttered about Mr. Barzun's analysis of ideological myth. First, it is wittily written but not simple enough, and therefore will not be read by many who could profit from it. Second, it takes for granted too much knowledge of the books he discusses. . . But on the whole, Darwin, Marx, Wagner is a sound, stimulating and timely book." Strang Lawson

+ Christian Century 58:1211 O 1 '41 1600w

"In 400 pages of brilliant writing and clear thinking, Dr. Barzun develops his thesis and makes a terse analysis of these three men and their ideas. The volume is vital, provocative, and scholarly in the best sense of the word." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:20 Ag '41 200w

BARZUN, JACQUES—Continued

"Much of the book consists of highly entertaining and edged pictures of these three teachers and their doctrines, their personal histories and the sources of many of their alleged originalities in thought. These provocative sketches do not add, and are not intended to add, cubits to the stature of any of the three men. But the book is in a high sense a tract for the times." Irwin Edman
+ Nation 152:618 My 24 '41 1200w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden

New Repub 104:861 Je 23 '41 1400w

"Mr. Barzun has written a vital, full-bodied, thought-provoking book." H. J. Forman
+ N Y Times p1 My 18 '41 1900w

"Well documented and generally well written. Somewhat involved here and there, but a rewarding, fresh, and often profound interpretation."

+ New Yorker 17:94 My 17 '41 80w

"A thought-provoking and stimulating book. . . The implications of Dr. Barzun's new philosophical trinity are intriguing. We should like to know how God, Will, Consciousness, and Purpose can be theoretically re-established throughout the universe. It would be interesting also to discover the precise pragmatic tests for determining their re-establishment as scientific facts. Finally we should like to discover concretely what good this re-establishment would do us individually and socially. Meanwhile Dr. Barzun has left us with a provocative sketch of his philosophy of the future." Rubin Gotesky

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 My 24 '41 1250w

Time 37:88 Je 16 '41 1500w

BASSETT, SARA WARE. Cross currents. 278p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-9275

Story of Cape Cod folk, of a young romance and an old one, of an injustice done but made right again before the ending of the tale.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p12 Je 8 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 170w

BASSO, HAMILTON. Wine of the country. 381p $2.75 Scribner

41-19301

When young Tait Ravenwill returned to New England to report on his two years' work in the South seas he met the three daughters of his sponsor, Dr Prescott, and their cousin, Ellen. Tait at first was drawn to Catherine, eldest of Dr Prescott's daughters, but he fell in love with Ellen, married her and carried her away to his home in the South. Ellen's past held unhappiness, and the strange life and loneliness of her new home finally brought her tragedy.

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"'Wine of the Country' is a full-bodied book, completely of these times, which is to say it holds heartbreak and anguish against the sound of laughter and the rhythm of swing." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 O 5 '41 850w

"Considerably more interesting than the average American novel."

+ Commonweal 35:77 N 7 '41 100w

"It is evident that Mr. Basso works in a rigidly determined pattern, but within this his specification of phenomena is abundant and true, especially in the Southern part of his story. It is when he steps out of his scheme that his hand shakes. The fact that Prescott and Ravenwill are in anthropology, the current occupational disease of intellectuals, gives excuse for philosophic musings, in which Mr. Basso is entitled to indulge himself, but for the minor characters of the New England period there is no excuse whatever." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 105:835 D 15 '41 360w

"The theme is both vital and timely, and it is refreshing to come upon a counsel of courage when the fungus of what's-the-use is unmistakably present in the literary atmosphere. But the worst of themes, backed by the most admirable of philosophies, obviously cannot of themselves make a good novel. . . The theme of the novel makes it necessary for Mr. Basso to discuss Life with a capital letter, and his meditations do not seem profound or original." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p7 O 12 '41 1100w

New Yorker 17:101 O 11 '41 60w

"The seriousness with which Mr. Basso always approaches his task must be respected. He knows that a novel asking for attention from selective readers should offer not merely entertainment—though goodness knows that is a great deal in a world of so many dull books—but point, living characters, sound style and, if possible, lasting enrichment and illumination. He tries very hard to supply all of these in his newest work. He tries too hard. So that, instead of enjoying the result, one thinks only of how much effort has gone into it." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 1 '41 600w

"The story itself, which is a vivid one, is often held up by discussions of what life really means. . . But the love story comes back again and again into its own and is splendidly told. The writer's characterizations of Dr Prescott's daughters, Dr Prescott himself, Ravenwill's half-mad brother, Ned, and other people who move through the story, are sharply drawn, discriminating and consistent. It is written in the excellent style for which Basso is distinguished." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41

"A book that does not come off in spite of sensitive writing and one interesting character study." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:xii winter '42 30w

BAST, HERBERT. Easy-to-make slip covers. 62p il $2 Bruce pub.

645.48 Slip covers

(W) 41-17188

Photographs and clear instructions on the cutting, fitting, and finishing of slip covers for different types of chairs and couches. Index.

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"The illustrations are not only clear and helpful but suggest practical ways of getting workmanlike effects even for fairly intricate covers."

+ J Home Econ 33:745 D '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:198 D '41

BATES, ALFRED. Gardener's third year; trees, vines, and shrubs; il. by the author. 310p $2.50 Longmans

635.9 Gardening. Trees, Shrubs

(W) 41-22901

This third in the author's series of books for the amateur gardener discusses types of woody plants, ordering the plants, planting plans, preparing the soil, care after planting, diseases and pests, pruning, propagation, hedges, vines and wall-shrubs. Index.

"Apart from his accuracy and soundness, Mr. Bates writes with marked clarity and charm. He knows the problems and objectives of amateur gardeners from long personal experience and appreciates to the full their earnest search for useful information. So, whether your garden is in its third year or not, you'll like his latest book and find it genuinely helpful." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p32 D 7 '41 110w

"The author uses a conversational style throughout the work, which emphasizes correct gardening procedures. While much helpful advice is dispensed, the reader may find himself at times feeling rebellious toward the text, which sounds too much like a monotonous routine of 'follow the leader.'"

+ — Spring'd Republican p10 O 30 '41 220w

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST. The seasons and the gardener; a book for children; 51 il. by C. F. Tunnicliffe. 70p $2 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

635.9 Gardening—Juvenile literature

[A41-2892]

"There are, as the title promises, four sections: the first describes spring in flower garden, rock garden, greenhouse and vegetable garden, and shows the sowing of seed. In summer it deals with weather changes, insects and weeds considered as friends and as enemies, and birds. In autumn it notes the change in light, in garden color, in the duties of the gardener as he prepares for frost and garners seeds. In winter it talks of tools and catalogues and flowers of the season, carrying the narrative around the year to spring again." Books

"Children anywhere should have it, but it would make a fine gift to any one who knows what gardens mean to England. It shows that 'gardening and the need for growing flowers in the earth are instincts so deeply rooted in us that they are as natural as laughing.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 16 '41 280w

"Because it was written for English children its audience will be limited in this country, but in spite of the difference in seasons and conditions there is for the child who is actively interested in the subject much sound, fundamental advice on planning and planting their own plots, which with some help from adults could be adapted to American climates." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 16 '41 280w

"This is an excellent piece of work, and Mr. C. F. Tunnicliffe's drawings suit it most happily." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 165:618 D 6 '40 60w

BATESON, FREDERICK NOEL WILSE, ed. See Cambridge bibliography of English literature

BAUER, MARION. Musical questions and quizzes; a digest of information about music. 268p $2 Putnam

780.76 Music—Examinations, questions, etc. (W) 41-8306

This collection of questions and answers on musical subjects is divided into six sections: the first part is general; the second concerns musical history; the third is on jazz music; the fourth is about the orchestra; part five is on essentials about the elements of music, and part six contains suggestions for books and recordings for readers and listeners. Index.

Books p14 J1 6 '41 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

BAUER, WILLIAM WALDO. Americans, live longer! 219p $2 Bobbs

613 Middle age. Hygiene. Longevity 40-27797

An American doctor discusses the diseases and bodily mechanisms of the forties, shows how life may be prolonged by a few sensible precautions, and suggests a program of watchfulness and sane living.

"The book is especially recommended to the specialist in geriatrics, to the clinician who is adviser to middle and older aged patients and to the public health man interested in the prolongation of life and prevention of health accidents in our aging population." C. E. Shepard, M.D.

+ Am J Pub Health 32:99 Ja '42 140w

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

Books p14 Mr 30 '41 80w

Reviewed by Logan Clendening, M.D.

Sat R of Lit 24:15 Ag 9 '41 550w

BAUM, VICKI. Christmas carp. 28p 50c Doubleday

"Offers a contrast between pre-Nazi days and the present for a middle-class family in Vienna. The earlier festival was full of savory smells and foods, while the later one blends comedy and pathos in the adventure of Adalbert, the bootlegged carp, lovingly nourished for weeks in the family bathtub, and so ingratiating that the hungry family finally had no heart to eat his golden brown carcass." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 D 14 '41 120w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p25 D 14 '41 100w

BAUM, VICKI. The ship and the shore. 275p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-4404

The events of one night on a South Sea island change the lives of six of the passengers on the Tjaldane, a small passenger boat plying between Singapore, Manila and the East Indies. The six include Anders Anderson, a rubber planter; the ship's doctor; a taxi-dancer; a Dutch capitalist and his daughter; and the wife of a Dutch overseer on a rubber plantation.

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

"For sheer invention and climax piled on climax, 'The Ship and the Shore' is one of Vicki Baum's best performances." Lisle Bell

+ Books p21 Mr 23 '41 280w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 160w

Reviewed by Catherine Van Dyne

Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '41 80w

"An entertaining tale." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '41 250w

New Yorker 17:91 Ap 5 '41 40w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 130w

"This is the sort of thing that Vicki Baum can do with one hand tied behind her back. It is practised stuff, neat, entertaining and often nearly lifelike, but it gives the genuine novelist in this author little opportunity... It is all extremely expert, as readable as can be—Vicki Baum seldom makes a mistake in these matters—and sometimes a little more than readable. But this author can do a great deal better."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p485 S 27 '41 420w

BAUMER, WILLIAM HENRY. He's in the army now. 255p il $2.50 McBride

355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life (W)

"A comprehensive picture of Army life in all its phases. Attractive photographs." Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 38:151 Ja 1 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

BAYNE, SPENCER, pseud. The turning sword. 339p $2 Harper

41-7645

Detective story.

"Mr. Bayne's style is excessively wordy, not to say windy." Will Cuppy

— Books p28 My 11 '41 120w

"Van Kill wears an imposing amount of erudition less flossily than most savant sleuths, and works with the police without swank or condescension. One of Mr. Bayne's virtues as a story-teller is that he is quite as much at home with a surprising variety of human, intelligent and efficient police detectives as he is with more out-of-the-way characters like Homeric Greek restaurateurs, philosophic dealers in rare books, titled lady novelists, midgets and boy prodigies. And he can be funny. He weaves his plot so tightly and tells so much of it allusively that you can't read him with one eye straying to other matters." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 104:802 Je 9 '41 200w

"If you have the patience to read the book, you will eventually learn who did what and why, but we do not advise it." I. A.

— N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 200w

"Basically interesting and timely plot so befogged by details, characters and erudite tag-ends that, as sleuth says, 'murder becomes monotonous.' Soporific."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 24 '41 40w

BEACH, JOSEPH WARREN. American fiction, 1920-1940. 371p $2.50; text ed $1.90 Macmillan 813.09 American fiction—History and criticism. Novelists, American (W) 41-6464

"A penetrating analysis of the work of Dos Passos, Hemingway, Caldwell, Faulkner, Steinbeck, Farrell, Wolfe, and Marquand, which evaluates their social attitudes as well as their literary methods and considers them as indicative of the trend of modern thought. Sufficiently popular in style for the average reader with literary interests. Includes chronological list of works of the writers discussed. Will be needed by most college and public libraries." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

"It is an extremely amiable, perhaps too amiable, book; but the generosity of many of Professor Beach's appraisals seems to spring from a desire to be generous and interested rather than from any deep sympathy or conviction. He overrates Caldwell, takes Marquand much too seriously, repeats a good many commonplaces on Hemingway and Thomas Wolfe; but his reading of their works is generally very shrewd, despite the obviousness of his method and a certain lecture-hall tempo." Alfred Kazin

+ — Books p12 Ag 24 '41 320w

Reviewed by B. M. Kelly

Cath World 153:763 S '41 420w

"Beach's book is practically indispensable to anyone who wants to make a serious study of contemporary fiction as a mirror of the social forces of our time. Because my admiration for its critical acumen, its scholarship and its effective linking of literature to life is unstinted, and because he himself freely and justly criticizes the diction of some authors whom he greatly admires, especially Faulkner, it seems not an impertinence to say that at times Mr. Beach writes with appalling carelessness." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 58:863 Jl 2 '41 420w

"Mr. Beach is at his best when he is clarifying the ingenious but obscure narrative technique of William Faulkner and the cinematic slice of life method of John Dos Passos. Unfortunately he is as much concerned with the message of his authors as he is with their manner, and it is in this department that he fails not only to state their position adequately but also, and here his blunder is egregious, to estimate the value of the various messages directly stated or clearly implied in the books under discussion. This double failure flows, I believe, from a paucity of information on the one hand, and a disguised but perilous dogmatism on the other." F. X. Connolly

— + Commonweal 34:353 Ag 1 '41 1250w

Reviewed by Isabel Douglas

Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 90w

"The point is not that Mr. Beach approaches writing in a naive manner, or that he lacks the equipment to place the art object within the right perspective. The essays in this volume on Faulkner and Farrell, in which he does not follow the beaten track of current popular opinion, show him in a different light. The trouble is, rather, that all too often he fails to make any real use of the considerable equipment he has at his disposal. After all, it takes only a modicum of literary sensitiveness to realize that Steinbeck is at present the most overrated novelist in America, and that Caldwell, despite his great gifts as a story-teller and as a symbolist of rural abandon, is fatally limited to plowing up over and over again the same small patch of ground. Nor does Thomas Wolfe, who is so wholly symptomatic of the traditional dilemma of the American artist, present any inexplicable critical problems." Philip Rahv

+ — Nation 152:646 My 31 '41 800w

"For one who hasn't read much of, say, Wolfe, Farrell, or Steinbeck, it is hard to imagine a better introduction to the purposes and methods of the novelists. For one who has read Hemingway or Faulkner or Dos Passos but hasn't felt that he quite understood what it was all about, these essays should do an excellent job of pulling together stray threads, clearing up obscurities, making plain the underlying and motivating values. For those who feel that our American novelists have forgotten or forsaken the moral values we are all supposed to be brought up on, he demonstrates that the driving force of these books is a desire to see precisely these values recognized and made workable." John Lydenberg

+ New Eng Q 14:585 S '41 420w

"The rewarding core of Professor Beach's studies is really in the wise and revealing things he notes about each writer. There can be little doubt that, with the exception of Marquand . . . Professor Beach's choices are the major American novelists of today. And no critic, to my knowledge, has made a saner and better balanced and more perceptive summary of their total significance." Edgar Johnson

+ New Repub 105:414 S 29 '41 500w

Pratt p16 autumn '41

"Mr. Beach's latest volume is an amiable exercise in academic criticism. I use the words 'amiable' and 'academic' without patronage but as expressing both a certain strength and a certain limitation. . . His criticism is criticism of the second class, not criticism of the first class—criticism which, in a perfectly decent sense of the word, is derivative rather than primary. And because much of what is written about contemporary literature is of the same persuasion—hortatory, explicatory, edifying (even when it pretends not to edify)—American criticism, wonderfully as it has developed in the twentieth century, has a long way to go before it achieves a true independence." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:8 Ap 26 '41 1400w

"Despite their evanescence, Prof Beach's commentaries are very interesting and make an excellent introduction to the most promising of contemporary American writers."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 900w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

BEACH, REX ELLINGWOOD. Personal exposures. 303p $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-51733

Robust, lively reminiscences of the author's life in Wisconsin, in Florida, in Alaska and the tropics, showing the backgrounds of his many novels.

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

"Although few persons would argue today that Rex Beach has any great eminence as a purely 'literary' figure, he was for a long time one of the most successful of American writing men. For all his literary faults he had one great virtue, that highly salable knack of being able to tell a forthright, stirring tale of action. His memoirs, although diffuse and mostly anecdotal, indicate that he has not lost his ability to tell a story." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Ap 27 '41 850w

"Not the least pleasure of the book is Mr. Beach's delightfully human inconsistency. In his earlier chapters he describes the unrestrained looting of Alaska in gold-rush days. The later chapters are full of annoyance against the Government for stopping the looting." Delancey Ferguson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 230w

"Mr. Beach is an almost perfect example of the philistine exploiter of an artistic medium. But no matter how shocking this may seem at first, reflection engenders a reluctant admiration for Mr. Beach. For he does not consider himself an artist and this absolute lack of pretension is refreshing and honest. Had the author of The Spoilers and Flowing Gold felt the working out of such stories merited analysis, it would be another matter entirely. . . . Personal Exposures is written in a facetious cum rough-and-ready style that would make H. W. Fowler wince. But if you have ever enjoyed an old timer telling stories you might enjoy this." Eleanor Godfrey

+ Canadian Forum 21:92 Je '41 320w

"The author takes his readers into the background of his stories which have proved so popular. The style is breezy, and the book is sure to prove popular with the average men to whom it will be nostalgic reading. A sense of humor and a lack of boasting; add to the appeal of the book. Recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 60w

New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 70w

"All in all, this is a record of a life that a man can be proud that he's lived, and I can think of few men I know well who wouldn't enjoy reading it." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 20 '41 1150w

"Good reading for all extroverts."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 19 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p6 My 12 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

BEALE, HOWARD KENNEDY. History of freedom of teaching in American schools. 343p $2 Scribner

378.121 Teaching, Freedom of. U.S.—Social conditions. Education—U.S. 41-5920

"Mr Beale, who is a professor of history at the University of North Carolina, confines his attentions here to American schools below the college level. Beginning with the earliest years of the nation's history, he gleans from all sources he has been able to discover a mass of information about restrictions imposed on teachers, and the reasons for them. He concludes his volume, and brings it down to the present, by analyzing the results of an exhaustive questionnaire on academic freedom which he circulated among teachers in the nineteen-thirties." (Springf'd Republican) This is part sixteen of a Report of the Commission on the social studies in the schools of the American historical association. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:509 Jl 1 '41

"Mr Beale's book is an informative and thought-provoking one, presenting a scholarly and impartial consideration of a perplexing matter. It is an essential introduction for those who desire an intelligent understanding of the age-old question of the responsibilities of educators to the public, and of the public to educators."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 28 '41 700w

BEALS, MRS HELEN RAYMOND (ABBOTT). The river rises. 473p $2.50 Macmillan

41-4910

Pictures the life in a New England village which is on the verge of being demolished and flooded as part of a huge reservoir supplying water for Boston. The central characters are David Meade, a minister, and his beautiful and courageous wife, Hollice.

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

"The River Rises' gives the lie to those who hold that New England is necessarily pinched and dour, for this town, even when nearing its end, has many moments of racy humor. . . . 'The River Rises' will have special interest and pleasure for those who love New England, but it is assuredly not 'a New England novel.' The situation in which it is laid is both original and dramatic. The distinction of the book, however, is derived from more subtle qualities—from the vitality and sensitiveness of the author's portrayal of the people of this town in their relationships to change and to one another and from her gift as a story-teller." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 Mr 16 '41 800w

"Miss Beals's vivid and authentic account of the gradual destruction of the town and the building of the huge dam never becomes journalistic. . . . In her next story we hope Miss Beals will have only the rural new Englanders she characterizes so warmly. Any tale peopled with Snouty's, Aunt Adeline's, Grandser Batchelder's, and such funny old reprobates as Aunt Ab and Aunt Belle would be as jolly as a square dance." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 420w

"All lovers of New England should be grateful to Mrs. Beals for her sympathetic, understanding interpretation of a town that is to be sacrificed to modern economic demands. . . . The objective treatment of the plot and the keen insight into character make this novel a worthy picture of the human side of the small town, and of the minister as hero." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 58:463 Ap 2 '41 170w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 23 '41 450w

"The author has a knowledge of family psychology, the New England temperament and the locality. Probable and at times humorous tale that holds the reader's attention." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 70w

"Miss Beals has succeeded admirably in bringing to life the essence of a town doomed to death." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '41 600w

New Yorker 17:86 Mr 15 '41 40w

"This is recommended to all Harold Bell Wright, 'One Foot in Heaven,' Marie Corelli, Lloyd Douglas audiences—as an antidote. It is also recommended as a great picture of Massachusetts New England in transition and as a fine, rich drama, with about as good invention, structure, struggle, and humor as anyone is likely to find in a story of modern New England. If this seems enthusiasm, make the most of it; i.e., read the book yourself." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Mr 15 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

BEALS, RALPH ALBERT, and BRODY, LEON. The literature of adult education. 493p $2; to members gratis Am. assn. for adult educ.
374 Education of adults. Education—U.S. (W) 41-11553

"Adult education as it appears in books, bulletins, magazine articles, and reports, most of them published between 1929 and 1940. The information thus collected is presented under such heads as purpose, clientele, personnel, media of communication, areas of activity, and agencies both public and private." (J Home Econ) Index.

"A polite testimonial, albeit unwitting, to the weakness and confusion in the mass (or mess) of activities called adult education. Very little is said about critical literature."

Am Soc R 6:927 D '41 20w

J Home Econ 33:605 O '41 40w

"Readers' advisers will find a most valuable reading course on adult education between the covers of this compact and readable little volume. . . Like all good books (and good reading courses), this one furnishes just rewards in the form of an excellent guide into many byways to further reading and bookish understanding, this being especially true of the chapters on 'Media of Communication' and of the arts in particular. The final pages contain a good index." V. C. Brubeck

+ Library J 66:991 N 15 '41 700w

Pratt p10 D '41

School & Society 53:792 Je 28 '41 30w

BEAN, LOUIS HYMAN. Ballot behavior; a study of presidential elections; introd. by Charles E. Merriam. 102p $1.50; pa $1 Am. council on public affairs

324.73 Presidents (U.S.)—Election. Public opinion—U.S. 40-34491

"Dr. Bean does not claim that he has found a formula for infallibly predicting what voters will do at the polls. He does show, however, in this non-technical little volume, that a knowledge of voting behavior over a considerable period of time greatly narrows the sphere of unpredictability. His conclusions are based on a statistical analysis of relationships between the voting behavior of the country as a whole since 1896 and the voting behavior in each of the forty-eight states; between trends in business conditions and voting behavior; and between voting behavior, electoral votes, and the political composition of Congress. Numerous charts and tables add greatly to the clearness of presentation." Am Pol Sci R

"As Professor Merriam states in his introduction, this study deserves the careful consideration of specialist and layman alike. Although the past will always remain a somewhat uncertain guide to the future, because of the unpredictable role of new influences, it is really surprising to discover how persistent known trends and relationships in political behavior really are." H. L. Childs

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1199 D '40 420w

Reviewed by Claude Robinson

Ann Am Acad 214:240 Mr '41 500w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. Public policy and the general welfare. 176p $1.50; college ed $1 Farrar

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history (W) 41-12073

"The relation between public policy and the general welfare has become, during the past decade, one of the central issues in American government. Legislative, executive, and judicial interpretations have given new life to a phrase in the Constitution which had for more than half a century lain dormant as an instrument of public policy. . . Professor Beard here illuminates the conflicts over its interpretation. . . He shows us that any broad and humane conception of the general welfare as a positive dynamic in legislative and administrative action is rooted in the view of the nature of man and of the state which has, for more than two centuries, nourished the democratic faith. How that view can be made effective in our own time is here examined—and reanimated." (Editor's foreword) Index.

Reviewed by Charles McKinley

Am Pol Sci R 35:1162 D '41 900w

"Written with the author's usual felicity of expression, the book is particularly stimulating in its stress on the dynamic potentialities of democracy and in its judicious balance in dealing with democracy's noneconomic as well as economic foundations. . . So far as the contribution of scholars and students of public affairs is concerned, it is particularly to be hoped that political scientists and economists will take heed to the lessons here suggested, and relinquish their vain effort to perpetuate jealous distinctions between disciplines which should be devoted to a common purpose." Lincoln Gordon

+ Ann Am Acad 218:195 N '41 500w

Booklist 38:29 O 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 10w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Sat R of Lit 24:12 Ag 2 '41 600w

BEARD, JAMES. Cook it outdoors. 200p il $1.75 Barrows

641.5 Cookery (W) 41-11545

"Practical suggestions about equipment for barbecue and picnic meals and terrace cooking and for preparing not only novelties in the way of appropriate foods but also appetizing yet simple variations on the old stand-bys." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 38:3 S '41

J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 30w

BEARD, WILLIAM. Regulation of pipe lines as common carriers. 184p $2 Columbia univ. press [10s Oxford]

338.2 Petroleum—Transportation. Carriers. Gas, Natural—Transportation 41-8335

"This study was presented as a doctoral thesis at Columbia University. The book is a factual study, with some interpretation on the part of the author. . . In the course of his study, Professor Beard has found that pipe lines were impressed by legislation, federal and state, with the legal characteristics of common carriers, as a result of monopolistic practices in certain fields of business, such as the oil industry. The independents sought legislation of this character in order to gain access to markets. In his third chapter, the author surveys the extent to which pipe lines have been declared to be common carriers, and explains why some types of lines, such as gas lines, have not come under such regulation as much as others, such as oil. Succeeding chapters deal with the familiar public utility topics of rate regulation, service regulations, control over affiliations, and regulation as a phase of general public utility regulation in the transportation field." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by R. A. Prewitt

Am Econ R 31:658 S '41 650w

"The reviewer would be unfair if he did not close on a more encouraging note. Professor Beard has done a useful piece of work; but he has illustrated how far both engineers and political scientists must travel before a unified work in the field of technology and social science can be written. The author is to be commended for this beginning, but it is definitely only a beginning." O. P. Field

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:794 Ag '41 1300w

Reviewed by Reford Bond

Ann Am Acad 217:191 S '41 500w

"This monograph has been very interesting to one member of the legal profession who is entirely inexpert in the field covered, and should be interesting to all persons who feel the need for governmental control of a business which touches so closely the one essential of our mechanical age—oil. . . [It] is a good foundation for a more detailed study of the problems by both lawyers and laymen." C. W. Taintor
+ Harvard Law R 55:314 D '41 1700w

"While the book furnishes a resumé of the problem of public utility regulation, it is somewhat technical and likely to be of interest primarily to specialists." Harvey Pinney
+ Social Forces 20:286 D '41 320w

BEATON, CECIL. Time exposure [photographs] with a commentary and captions by Peter Quennell. 136p $3.75 Scribner [12s 6d Batsford]

779 Photographs

Examples of the work of an English photographer arranged according to subjects: Personalities; beauties; backgrounds; travel; ballet; the last year. They cover the beauties and fun and frolic of the 1930's, and end with important personalities of the present in England; bombed London; and the R.A.F. Running comment is supplied by Peter Quennell, English poet and critic. Index.

Books p27 N 16 '41 110w

"Mr. Beaton's selections seem to be mostly obvious. They are about what many of the sitters for the earlier pictures would have selected. . . The scope of this Beaton collection is widish in a way: personalities, beauties, backgrounds, travel, ballet—in the Silver Age of the Ballet—and the past year of war. On the whole it has the profundity of talent combined with flippancy of intention, or shall we say, with some congenial shallowness considerably mixed with charm and the snobbery of British getting on. . . Once we declare war, of course, everybody in the book will be wonderful or else we should be pro-German. I say, nevertheless, and without a single shoulder chip, that photography is photography, and brains and character are brains and character, and great England, England, whatever her Grace may have remarked." Stark Young

New Repub 105:552 O 27 '41 900w

"This curiously important book contains more entertainment to the square inch than a year's issues of any illustrated paper, more beauty than the average picture show and more cleverness than a whole clubful of barristers." Edward Sackville West

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:237 S 6 '41 950w

New Yorker 17:99 O 18 '41 40w

"It was a singularly happy thought to build this book around the fascinating character of Cecil Beaton, an elusive figure about whom too little is known but who occupied in relation to his age much the same position as did the Comte d'Orsay in the preceding century. The innumerable photographs taken by this talented man, excellently reproduced, do much to make those old bones live again, and as we turn the pages the past springs to life once more until we can almost believe that we knew these personages, attended their routs and walked in their company through the distant streets of that vanished London. . . Now that this rich vein of social history has been so expertly opened up one looks forward to the appearance of more specialised works dealing with particular aspects of the subject." Osbert Lancaster

+ Spec 167:110 Ag 1 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 360w

"Altogether it is an interesting mixture, entertaining for all, and instructive for the photographer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Ag 2 '41 550w

BEATTY, CLYDE, and WILSON, EARL. Jungle performers. 320p il $2.75 McBride

791.3 Animals, Training of, Animals, Habits and behavior of. Circus (W) 41-26878

Memoirs of a famous animal trainer, which records his years with the circus, in vaudeville, and in his own animal college, but especially his adventures in the training cages. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42

"Clyde Beatty, animal trainer, begins his memoirs with the excitement of an 'outlaw' tiger's escape; and he keeps the note of excitement throughout his book. . . The book is illustrated with a great many animal photographs. Needless to say, most of these are exciting, too."

+ N Y Times p39 N 30 '41 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 500w

BEATY, JOHN YOCUM. Nature is stranger than fiction; il. by H. G. Rose. 286p $2.50 Lippincott

574 Nature 41-7776

Collection of curious facts about insects, animals, birds, plants, fish, and geological formations. Material is in paragraph form, with headings in italics, and fully indexed.

"It is said that all the curious facts in this book are well attested, and so far as I know there are no errors in the ordinary sense, among all these curiosae. So that it is not at all a case of believe it or not, for you will probably have to believe most of the fancy-tickling little details. But you are not obliged to accept all the presentation and wording." D. C. Peattie

Books p14 Je 29 '41 280w

"The author writes in a style that will hold the attention of any boy or girl old enough to enjoy browsing through encyclopedic books of general knowledge. This book will be an addition to the nature study classroom library, whether in the grades or high school, and will interest many adult students of nature. . . Recommended for larger libraries, but not a 'must' book." Alice Brown

+ Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 140w

BEAUMAN, ERIC BENTLEY, ed. The airmen speak, by the officers and men of the Royal air force; pref. by the Viscount Trenchard [Eng title: Winged words]. 299p il $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

940.544942 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. Great Britain. Royal air force

41-14012

Seventy-five radio talks by members of the R. A. F. and members of the Women's Auxiliary air force, selected from approximately a hundred and fifty broadcasts, and edited to show the range of this arm of the British war machine. The articles are arranged chronologically. Illustrated with photographs.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic S '41 270w

Booklist 38:7 S '41

"The selection has been made so skillfully that repetition, although inevitably present, is not apparent. We end the book with the comfortable feeling that we know a good deal more now of the reasons why the R. A. F. won the Battle of Britain in the great days of last autumn." J. M. Minife

+ Books p2 Ag 3 '41 750w

"To talk with a Royal Air Force flying man is to witness the maximum in self-effacement. The corps is the thing, the individual nothing. You have to sense the bigness of the job he and his kind have done. For 'shooting a line,' as these men call it, is the unpardonable sin in the R.A.F. . . Therein lies much of the value—but therein lies the danger in reading the book without full realization of this fact. For the reader with imagination these stories have almost unlimited possibilities. The tales transcend the words at every turn. For the factual reader they may be just casual anecdotes." V. D. H.

BEAUMAN, E. B.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 30 '41 300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 6 '41 120w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 105:196 Ag 11 '41 90w

"'E.B.B.' who arranged these broadcasts has done what must have been an extraordinary job with extraordinary competence. He has somehow managed to conjure from these men scripts which are lucid, vivid, true and full of character." Barrington Gates

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:66 Jl 19 '41 280w

"The book will repay reading. If one can get between the lines one can at least imagine the terrific realities of war in the air. One can let one's self imagine more than the gallant soldiers who guard Britain's skies are able to do. The poetry of flight is not for them, nor too much attention to the ever-present hand of death." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '41 900w

"Amazing stories, most of them, very laconically told."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Jl 26 '41 50w

"Although much of the material is of first-rate interest, it is a perfunctory, not to say slovenly piece of bookmaking. Forty or fifty broadcasts are included, but there is no list of contents nor index, let alone an introduction to draw together the variegated threads of narrative. The broadcasts certainly justified themselves as broadcasts on the occasions when they were delivered, and many of them survive the test of print. But if they were to be reprinted—and it is debatable whether much is gained by having them reprinted as a collection at this stage of the war—they should have been paid the compliment of a little more ceremony in the details of their publication." Derek Verschoyle

+ Spec 167:92 Jl 25 '41 110w

"The reader searching for great writing and colorful descriptions sometimes attempted in books about the R. A. F. will be disappointed. The modesty praised by those who have already written about the R. A. F. will be found here, and in such overwhelming quantity as to leave much of the color associated with fighting fliers to the imagination."

+ Springfield Republican p6 Jl 28 '41 300w

"Not all the stories told are exciting, but each depicts some essential part of the work of the Royal Air Force. An exceptionally fine series of photographs and a short foreword by Marshal of the Royal Air Force Viscount Trenchard complete a highly entertaining book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p270 Je 7 '41 390w

BECHDOLT, FREDERICK RITCHIE. Hot gold. 273p $2 Doubleday

41-22667

Western story.

"Lady-like Western." Will Cuppy
Books p10 D 21 '41 100w

"Packed with action, excitement and suspense, it is told with a distinction of style that few writers of Western fiction today can match." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 D 7 '41 250w

BECHDOLT, FREDERICK RITCHIE. Riot at Red Water. 269p $2 Doubleday

41-2088

Western story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 F 2 '41 50w

"A short, swift, hard, tense narrative, excellently written and altogether a work of distinction." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 23 '41 240w

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST. The vanishing hounds; pictures by Decie Merwin. 154p $1.50 Oxford

41-18121

Forty years ago two boys, Tad Carpenter and Shrimp Curtis, were spending their summer vacation in a little New England fishing village. A traveling troupe playing Uncle Tom's Cabin invades the village peace, and Tad and Shrimp get caught up into the excitement. They attempt to kidnap the great Danes, booked as "Siberian bloodhounds," to keep them from being sold, and plenty happens. Ages nine to twelve.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 S 7 '41 240w

"[The] adventures of the two boys are amusing and delightful, and give a picture of life in a town forty years ago. The entertaining illustrations are by Decie Merwin. Boys and girls of nine to eleven who like humorous stories will enjoy this tale. Not an essential item, but recommended if funds allow." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 100w

"The story is delightfully human and genuinely funny. The author, writing in easy, effortless fashion, not only provides plot interest and ingratiating, convincing characters, but gives us an authentic glimpse of life in a New England village forty years ago." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 11 '42 360w

BECK, JAMES MONTGOMERY. The Constitution of the United States; rev. and with add. material by James Truslow Adams. 319p $2.50 Doubleday

342.73 U.S. Constitution (W) 41-7210

"James Truslow Adams has revised the book slightly, condensed the three final chapters into one, and added in an epilog, his own opinion of President Roosevelt's attitude toward the Constitution, as indicated in his effort to increase the Supreme Court and reorganize some governmental departments." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1924. Index.

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

"With the additional chapter on its development from 1916 to date, this volume [is] the most valuable short book on the subject for the student or casual reader."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 10 '41 70w

BECK, WARREN. The blue sash, and other stories. 198p $2 Antioch press

41-12684

A volume of short stories, first published in such American magazines as Story, North American Review, The Writer's Forum. Contents: The blue sash; Shadow of a green olive tree; No nightingale; Jake Boyd; "Unity, coherence, and . . ."; Not without dust and heat; Needle's eye; Where the apple reddens; Encounter on a Parnassian slope; Generations; The little Jap; Between two worlds.

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"Most of the stories in this collection first appeared in the 'little' magazines and the literary quarterlies and, like these media, follow no conventional formula or easy pattern. Warren Beck's is a personal and serious art in which every story is made to seek its own special form. . . . The 'Blue Sash' reveals, in sum, a writer of considerable range, craft and sensitivity but one in whose work there is still lacking that pressure, that special urgency necessary to make a short story a vivid, lingering experience." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p12 O 5 '41 280w

"The Blue Sash" is as exciting and excellent a volume of short stories as any I have come across in quite a while. Warren Beck is a genuinely modern writer. He has extracted the best, for example, from the Hemingway tradition, yet has molded it to his own contemporary uses without any servile copying. His prose is clean, close-whittled, distinguished. Once one has read one of his stories, one looks forward with the sharpest anticipation to what he will make of the next. That he disappoints one occasionally seems to me irrelevant." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p12 Je 8 '41 700w

BECKER, CARL LOTUS. Modern democracy. 100p $2 Yale univ. press

321.8 Democracy (W) 41-51689

"Tracing the idea of democracy as it was formulated in the eighteenth century . . . the author shows how democracy as we know it came into being and brought about the contrast we witness between the ideal and the reality. . . . The volume is based upon three lectures delivered at the University of Virginia on the Page-Barbour Foundation, November, 1940." Publisher's note

"These three lectures, delivered recently at the University of Virginia, have a timeliness and cogency which demand more serious consideration than is ordinarily accorded much larger books." J. P. Nichols

+ Am Hist R 47:307 Ja '42 700w

Reviewed by B. F. Wright

Am Pol Sci R 35:976 O '41 350w

"This book is worthy of a far wider reading public than it is likely to get." R. F. Harvey

+ Ann Am Acad 216:179 Jl '41 550w

Booklist 37:401 My 1 '41

"It should be announced as emphatically as is possible in type of this size that these three lectures by Cornell's eminent professor of history constitute very nearly as great a book as a book of 100 pages can be. . . . The verbal felicity of these lectures is such that the reader will rob himself of a pleasure if he does not read them aloud—to himself or to others."

+ Christian Century 58:594 Ap 30 '41 160w

"A scholarly work written in flowing, distinguished prose." Eleanor Van Allen

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:62 My '41 160w

"Any reader of Professor Becker's writings will know in advance that it contains many good things well, even brilliantly, said. . . . A careful reading of the volume reveals no trace of effort at any kind of humor or of outright propaganda for any political position or ideology; and certainly Professor Becker is not to be accused of deliberate misstatement of fact—at least where the facts are easily accessible and well known. Yet we read (p. 53) that two results of the technological revolution were the following: 'As machines are perfected and become more automatic, man power plays a relatively less important part in the production of a given amount of wealth in a given time' and 'Under the system of private property in the means of production and the price system as a method of distributing wealth, the greater part of the wealth produced, since it is produced by the machines, goes to those who own or control the machines.' As a competent historian Professor Becker must know, in one sector of his mind, that all this is absurd." F. H. Knight

+ Ethics 51:470 Jl '41 1900w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:193 O '41 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 130w

"None of his conclusions are altogether new nor is the analysis which leads to his conclusions novel. The value of the book lies in the clarity and economy of thought and word with which the problem of democracy is analyzed so that one feels oneself carried toward his conclusions by an irrefutable logic." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 152:441 Ap 12 '41 700w

"A brief, pregnant book, and as levelheaded an introduction to a slippery and abstract subject as I have yet encountered." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:89 Ap 5 '41 180w

Reviewed by William Habberton

Social Educ 5:469 O '41 700w

"The student who would follow a reading of Ralph Barton Perry's 'Shall Not Perish From the Earth,' with this most recent volume of Professor Becker's lectures will be well grounded in a philosophical grasp of the hazards and outlook of democracy today."

+ Survey G 30:350 Je '41 380w

Wis Lib Bul 37:88 My '41

"Wise, brilliantly written, and deeply moving little book." Leo Gershow

+ Yale R n s 30:839 summer '41 900w

BECKER, CARL LOTUS. New liberties for old. 181p $2 Yale univ. press

320.4 Democracy. War 41-21585

A collection of essays written during the last six years and published in the Journal of Social Philosophy and the Yale Review. Contents: New liberties for old; Loving peace and waging war; Afterthoughts on constitutions; When democratic virtues disintegrate; Some generalities that still glitter; The old disorder in Europe.

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"Carl Becker, professor of history at Cornell, is always informing and stimulating but never more so than when he writes on democracy and liberty. The six separate papers here collected have a unity derived from their dealing with these subjects and from a consistently liberal point of view."

+ Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 60w

Reviewed by R. H. McDonough

Library J 66:791 S 15 '41 130w

"Professor Becker is not only an able historian but one of the most urbane and lucid essayists of our day. In this volume he gives us a series of essays previously published in journals. It is a testimony to the author's wisdom that while some of them are a little 'dated,' they are never completely so, for his historical perspective is too broad to allow him to succumb to the mood of a period without reservations." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 153:430 N 1 '41 480w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 20 '41 500w

"It is a pity that Professor Becker should seem to adhere to the School of the Paretics, and strengthen the cult of those half-philosophers who disseminate the confused belief that one conception of 'the good life' is as good as another, for it is clear that he has not only candor and learning but moral convictions that are supported by his experience and reflection." R. B. Perry

+ Yale R n s 31:408 winter '42 1350w

BECKER, CHARLOTTE. Hello, Judy! [32p] il 75c Scribner

41-5150

Picture story book for two and three year olds, about Peggy and Michael, who spend a day playing with Judy and her dog, Tippy.

"The book will be taken into the very lives of very little folks." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 4 '41 150w

BECKER, CHARLOTTE—Continued

"This little book is a jolly addition to the 'here and now' stories that youngest readers find exciting. . . The flimsy cardboard cover makes the book an expensive item for library use, but it is recommended where needed."
M. F. Potter

+ Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 60w

"Just the book mothers will like their youngsters to have. From the 'hello' of the first page to 'goodby' of the last, it's a gem of a book which literally reads itself, and small enough to tuck into many handbags or coat pockets."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 60w
Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

BECKER, CHARLOTTE, and others. Stories for fun; with il. by Charlotte Becker. [64p]
$1.75 Scribner

(W) 41-18720

Five gay stories for first and second graders, and for story tellers. Contents: The sad little sea serpent, by Charlotte Becker; The old woman and her basket; The lost key, by M. G. La Rue; Christopher, by Marjorie Flack; The giant is lost, by Alice Dalgliesh.

"The book is an encouragement to reading."
M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 21 '41 200w

"Five perfect stories. Delightful humor, with appeal to both boys and girls. . . Recommended." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 100w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON), ed. Growing up with America; an anthology. 339p il $2.50 Stokes

Children in the U.S. (W) 41-21549

Collection of stories for young readers, illustrating seven periods of American history: Colonial child life, Youth in the Revolution, Young pioneers, Children in the Lincoln years, Youth westward in the seventies and eighties, Growing into the twentieth century, Youth today. "The stories in this collection were written by men and women with special reason to know what life in America was like at the time of which they were writing. Some of these tales are based on personal experience, some on family tradition, some on special interest in place and period that has led the author to find out all he can about it, and write as if he himself had lived there then. Sometimes a story comes out of a forgotten book of the past, and sometimes from one that though new, has already become a favorite with children." (Foreword)

"It is, on the whole, the sunnier aspects of American life that Mrs. Becker recalls, and with understandable nostalgia. Her stories illustrate if not the heroic the wholesome character of American life. They remind us of our democratic heritage—our conquest over the wilderness, our fight for freedom, religious and racial toleration, social equality and economic well being, our great public school system, our inventiveness and ingenuity. It is a goodly heritage." H. S. Commager

+ Books p12 N 2 '41 500w

"Mrs. Becker, in making her fine compilation, which begins with tales of colonial New England and ends with stories of the present day, has performed a service which boys and girls and their elders will appreciate. Young readers will discover this volume for themselves and enjoy it; it will also serve to enrich the supplementary reading shelves." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 25 '42 650w

"An imaginatively conceived and selected collection of prose. . . An excellent book for family reading." K. W. S.

+ New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 60w

"An excellent anthology." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 30w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON), ed.

Home book of Christmas. 746p $3.50 Dodd

394.268 Christmas (W) 41-52036

Collection of stories about Christmas. Beginning with the Bible story, the stories and verses are grouped under the following headings: Christmas eve; the shepherds; the magi; the preparations; the great day; the stockings; the tree; Santa Claus; reading aloud to young people; food and fun; songs and verses; carols; how they spent Christmas; there'll always be a Christmas. Indexes.

Booklist 38:125 D 15 '41

"There is something in the book for every taste. If you are merely greedy read the recipes for roast goose a la Cratchit, roast pig and chicken pie according to Martha Washington, King George I's Christmas pudding, olykoek as made in New Amsterdam and Dickens's tripe and cowheels stew from 'The Old Curiosity Shop.' If you are sullen about Christmas read how Cromwell's Parliament abolished such observances and then find by reading further how often Christmas Conquers All. The range is from reverent devotion to hilarious fun. If Mrs. Becker has not included any good arguments against Christmas it is only because there are none."

+ Books p46 D 7 '41 550w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 100w

"It is a varied and richly packed Christmas stocking that Mrs. Becker has thought up, containing both prose and poetry, satire and sweetness, the familiar and the refreshingly unknown. There is no preface or introduction (which this reviewer regrets as Mrs. Becker writes charmingly) but the reader is allowed to plunge knee-deep in Christmas, which, after all is the age-old experience of all of us. Not just a book for December 25, this, but a year-round joy."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 240w

BECKETT, GRACE LOUISE. Reciprocal trade agreements program. 142p $2 Columbia univ. press

337 U.S.—Commercial policy. Commercial treaties. Reciprocity 41-7532

"Based on a doctoral dissertation written at the Ohio State University, this volume discusses the considerations and precedents leading to adoption of the program, describes the principles and procedures followed in negotiating agreements, analyzes the concessions obtained and granted by the United States, and concludes with an appraisal of the significance of the program for American foreign trade through the year 1939. How to secure material concessions on the exports of one's own country without at the same time granting reductions on imports on a scale likely to cause dislocations in the home economy, and meanwhile to insure that the indirect effects of any bilateral pact on the total movement of world trade will be of salutary character—this is a problem of vast complexity; and Miss Beckett throws a strong beam of light upon it." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

"The chief value of this book lies in the fact that Miss Beckett has succeeded in collating an enormous mass of material published by the Departments of State, Commerce, and Agriculture and by the Tariff Commission. Although great industry has been shown in this painstaking task, most readers would have welcomed some statement of a few of the more important theoretical implications of the trade philosophy underlying the Hull program." Carl Kreider

+ Am Econ R 31:635 S '41 270w

"For those who, like this reviewer, had until the outbreak of the present World War expected from the enlightened international economic policies sponsored by Cordell Hull much larger benefits than were realized, Grace Beckett's study will be both useful and welcome." J. A. Vieg

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:806 Ag '41 400w

Reviewed by H. J. Tasca

Ann Am Acad 216:193 Jl '41 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 10w

BEDIER, JULIE. Long road to Lo-Ting; pictures by Louise Trevisan. [31p] $1 Longmans 41-10148

Simple little story about two Chinese orphans who found refuge with the Maryknoll Sisters at Lo-Ting.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:373 D '41 40w

"A Maryknoller tells a tale of the missions for very young readers, and tells it with sympathy, charity and easy style. . . Such productions are more often on the wet side; this one is a glorious exception." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 40w

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). Remember today; leaves from a guardian angel's notebook. 266p $2 Duell

(W) 41-1057

Two children, one a shy, lonely boy from the East, the other a girl brought up on a western ranch, meet on the day the girl is twelve (the boy just a month younger). The two fall instantly in love, a love childish and innocent but persistent and inevitable. As the years go by they are separated for long periods, meeting again accidentally from time to time, and each time experiencing again their first love. The story is told as if by the girl's "guardian angel," a spirit who makes the records for the Recording Angel.

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"The trouble with guardian angels, on the evidence presented in 'Remember Today,' is that they merely hover around, powerless and invisible, hoping for the best. They add a fairytale touch to a story that is none too realistic to start with." George Conrad

Books p8 Ja 12 '41 320w

"'Remember Today,' is as young and joyous as Fred Astaire's dancing and as sophisticated and carefully contrived as his steps. It leaves one feeling happy and ten years younger, even though war does intrude, eventually, its dark shadow on the springtime setting." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 360w

"A gay and tender story with war intruding only as it affects the personal fortunes of two exceedingly likable people, this should have a general appeal." Esther Johnston

+ Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 130w

"'Remember Today' is a refreshing and amusing love story. It is modern without being hard and sentimental without being soft. Its lovers are engaging characters, a cut away from the standard patterns (particularly the girl)." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 19 '41 500w

"A charming love story, told with amiable lightness."

+ New Yorker 16:79 Ja 18 '41 60w

"To be quite temperate about it, 'Remember Today' is a lifeless melange of all the little stock bits of business which have been filling out pulp fiction for years; and calling it 'a modern love story' on both sides of the dust cover doesn't help matters any." N. L. R.

— Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 25 '41 230w

BEEBE, RALPH. Who fought and bled. 329p $2.50 Coward-McCann

41-7646

Historical novel of the time of the War of 1812. The action centers around Detroit, and the hero is one Roderick Hale, who came out from Harvard to work on his farm at Dayton, Ohio, and joined up with General Hull. There is no love story; the most prominent feminine actor is a red-headed twelve-year-old.

Booklist 37:515 Jl 1 '41

"Ralph Beebe's forte is narrative anecdotes, but there are all too few of these. If they had been more liberally sprinkled throughout the morass of dates and detailed repetitive enumerations the result would have taken on more color and less of the tinge of the textbook. Nevertheless, as it stands, 'Who Fought and Bled' offers an authentic account of the War of 1812." Stella Hargrave

+ Books p10 My 4 '41 280w

"Mr. Beebe writes with the gusto of an action writer who knows his craft. His characters are well defined and the account of their exploits hold one's interest to the end." D. De K.

+ N Y Times p16 Je 15 '41 480w

"Lively and interesting."

+ New Yorker 17:94 My 17 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

BEEBING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. Eleven were brave. 269p $2 Harper [8s 3d Hodder]

41-3417

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

"Here's a special treat for lovers of international intrigue, a hum-dinger of a Beeding thriller about persons and events in France following the retreat of the allied armies from the Meuse in May of last year." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 F 23 '41 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 110w

Reviewed by Alexander Werth

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 14 '41 120w

"The thrills, the spies, the traitors and Gestapo are much as usual, but the account of the exodus from Paris must have been written out of personal experience and is the most exciting feature of the book." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 21:117 F 1 '41 60w

"Our chief concern here is with the merits of the book as a mystery thriller dealing with international intrigue. In that respect it is fully up to the high standard set by Francis Beeding in the other stories published under that pseudonym. But the reader should be warned that what seems to be history in this book may be fiction and what seems to be fiction may be history. It is significant, however, that the book is dedicated to Prime Minister Churchill with his consent." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 16 '41 240w

"Absorbing."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 8 '41 40w

"The author has very ingeniously mingled fact and fiction to fashion a story that admirably reproduces the suspense of those anxious days of last June and as many thrills as the most exacting reader could want."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 21 '40 130w

BEER, THOMAS. Hanna, Crane, and The mauve decade; with an introd. by Leonard Bacon. 643p $3.75 Knopf

920 Hanna, Marcus Alonzo, Crane, Stephen. U.S.—Intellectual life. U.S.—Civilization

41-15022

Omnibus volume containing three of the author's best known works: Stephen Crane

BEER, THOMAS—Continued
(1923); The Mauve Decade (1926), and Hanna (1929). There is a critical and biographical introductory essay by Leonard Bacon.

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

"Beer had his weaknesses. Some of his imagery tarnished fast in the open air and some of his stands were exasperating. . . But he remains individual and monolithic in the '20s. I cannot accept Mr. Bacon's finding that his novels are unsatisfactory and his stories outworn. It is to be hoped that some one will ransack 'The Post's' files and issue an omnibus volume of them; for if you know better stories of the decade, name three. They add to the shadow he casts, which grows longer." Bernard De Voto

+ Books p6 Ag 24 '41 1550w

Reviewed by Mina Curtiss

Nation 153:676 D 27 '41 700w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:409 S 29 '41 420w

Springf'd Republican p6 S 13 '41 650w

BEHRMAN, SAMUEL NATHANIEL. The Talley method. 197p $2 Random house 812 41-8550

"The play revolves around the contrasting characters of a humanely intelligent woman and a great surgeon. She has fallen in love with him because, as a patient, she had observed in him a scientific competence which seemed to implement humane impulses like her own. But it presently becomes evident from his relations with his two rebellious children that both his skill and his apparent good will are strictly limited to his profession. He can and he will save a life with what looks from the outside like benevolence—but only if that life is threatened by way of the duodenum, the twelve-finger-broad segment of man to which alone the Talley method is applicable." Nation

Booklist 37:543 JI 15 '41

"If all the characters had been treated as individuals, and not been forced into symbols, a more successful comedy would have resulted." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p28 O 5 '41 180w

"Mr. Behrman sees that materialism is the death of life, and steps down from his ivory tower to combat it. Unfortunately, however, he is only as yet half armed. He knows his adversary, but he hasn't the weapons to kill him. He possesses irony, but irony is after all a form of self indulgence, a sop to one's stultified moral revolt; and when Mr. Behrman is indignant he turns not to words that sear, but to this irony." Grenville Vernon

+ Commonweal 33:519 Mr 14 '41 450w
(Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch

Nation 152:277 Mr 8 '41 1200w

Dramatic criticism by Stark Young

New Repub 104:340 Mr 10 '41 1500w

"After three diffuse acts, the attentive observer finds that he has come out by the same door as in he went. Mr. Behrman's idea has failed to take on flesh and blood. The 'thin line of communication' which Enid says that she, as a poet, has tried to set up between herself and the world at large is never established between play and playgoer, between actor and audience." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 25:256 Ap '41 500w
(Dramatic criticism)

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY), and BEIM, JERROLD. Blue jeans; il. by I. B. Hazelton. 239p $2 Harcourt

41-3682

Story of a timid city boy whose wise parents sent him to a farm to grow strong and develop self-confidence. Grades four to six.

Booklist 37:363 AD 1 '41

"It is an honest farm story, such as we need with all the farm boys in our country." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Mr 16 '41 320w

"There is a wholesome tone about the book, and it may be used with a boy who has an inferiority complex, though it will, perhaps, not be popular. . . Recommended for ages nine to eleven." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:222 Mr 1 '41 70w

"This is one of the best farm stories for younger children which I have read, because it is not only a sympathetic and realistic account of a boy's growth and adjustment, but also because it describes in human terms a farmer's way of life and its immediate relation to those who need his produce." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '41 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 90w

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY), and BEIM, JERROLD. The little igloo; pictures by Howard Simon. [72p] $1.50 Harcourt

41-15460

A little Eskimo boy, worried about his puppy, learns to build a small igloo, fashioned after the family one, and there the puppy sleeps cozy and warm. There comes a day when Tipou and his puppy are caught in a blizzard, and the knowledge about building a little igloo comes in very handy.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 S 7 '41 120w

"A very simple story which will appeal especially to second grade children when they study Eskimo life. Younger children would enjoy having it read to them." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 90w

BEIN, ALEX. Theodore Herzl; a biography; tr. from the German by Maurice Samuel. 545p il $3 Jewish pub.

B or 92 Herzl, Theodor. Zionism 41-2558

"Theodore Herzl, uncrowned King of the Jews, dreamed of a restoration of his people to Palestine and went through a remarkable odyssey to fulfill his dream. . . Bein begins with a detailed description of the assimilationist origins of Herzl, a racy, witty journalist in Vienna who was at first little concerned with the fate of the Jewish people. . . It was the Dreyfus case, which he went to report in Paris in the early 1890's, which roused his intense Jewish consciousness. . . and made Herzl feel that Jewish self-respect could be possible only if there were some place in the world which Jews could call their own. Once this had become his conviction, Herzl threw himself into the work of translating it into a political reality. He launched the Zionist movement, whose purpose it was to win a legally secured and publicly assured home for the Jewish people in Palestine." Books

Reviewed by Joshua Starr

Am Hist R 47:334 Ja '42 490w

"This is [an] unusual story which is brought together by the author. Each diplomatic adventure has all of the excitement of a romance. And it is lit up by the personality of Herzl himself, whose warmth and poise and imperturbable humor enthralled his followers and impressed even his opponents. It should be added that the volume is enriched by the work of the translator, Maurice Samuel, whose felicitous handling of Bein's material has created a biographical classic." A. L. Sachar

+ Books p13 Je 15 '41 900w

"All the movements that touched Jewish life in the past century or two are echoed in this book. The reader's sympathies will not always be with Herzl, however fascinated he may be with the man's tremendous capacity for work and self-sacrifice. Alex Bein's biography, originally published in German in Vienna, is scholarly and well documented, but written in a highly readable style. Mr. Bein shows us the man through his labors and accomplishments. The book is a good history of the Zionist movement." B. D. Cohon

+ Christian Century 58:625 My 7 '41 650w

BELDEN, HENRY MARVIN, ed. See Missouri folk-lore society. Ballads and songs

BELFRAGE, CEDRIC. South of God [Eng title: Let my people go]. 346p $2.50 Modern age [7s 6d Gollancz]

B or 92 Williams, Claude C. 41-51650
"Though composed somewhat in the style of fiction, this 'biography of a great man' is evidently biography. The subject is a Presbyterian minister in the American South, Claude Williams, who seems to have gained attention first of all by a flow of revivalist oratory, and who in the past few years has attained further note through his Socialist interpretation of Christian doctrine and through his championship of the negro and of the miners and tenant-farmers of Arkansas and neighbouring States." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:386 Ap 15 '41

"On the one hand, to be sure—but on the other, however, we must remember—" No, Belfrage doesn't write that way, and his hero doesn't act that way! 'I had a rare experience. I had met a Christian,' says the author of his encounter with Claude Williams. So it is a partisan biography? That's right! And it is as alive as the story of sensational old Amos or the tactless dramatic Isaiah. You won't fall asleep reading it. You will be amazed, angry, disgusted, depressed, ashamed—possibly inspired. It is a book that will either harden your heart and soften your will, or soften your heart and stiffen your will." J. P. Jones

Christian Century 58:459 Ap 2 '41 800w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 10 '41 900w

"The author and his hero see life in terms of the class struggle. One may feel the incompleteness of this concept, yet acknowledge a validity in the book and in the life which it records." Spear Knebel

Churchman 155:18 Ap 15 '41 140w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson
Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 5 '40 150w
New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 70w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 19:372 Mr 16 '40 70w

"It is an exceedingly interesting and movingly human story, and it is excitingly suggestive from several points of view."

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 27 '41 600w

"Here is a provocative, disturbing book, absorbing as a novel, more real than some of our headlines." Edwin Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 Jl 12 '41 350w

"Got up like a squat and blurless novel, this is in fact a most interesting and painful biography. There is a complete lack of documentation, but even though some of the personal details may be imaginative, the broad outline of the story and its background is indisputable. . . The account of conditions among the share-croppers is appalling, though not, one suspects, exaggerated. This book is recommended to all who like to read true stories of heroism in the midst of darkness."

+ Spec 164:668 My 10 '40 170w

"The book is energetic and very informative and makes no secret of its revolutionary or near-revolutionary sympathies."

Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Ap 20 '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

BELFRAGE, CEDRIC. They all hold swords. 343p $2.50 Modern age

B or 92 41-24749

"Cedric Belfrage's autobiography . . . is an arraignment of sociological forces, world politics and, particularly, of England's corrosive caste system before it began to disintegrate under Nazi bombs and the common battle for preservation. . . It is because of his rebellion at being born an English 'gentleman' that Mr. Belfrage is able to assay so pertinently his social grooves." Springf'd Republican

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 330w

BELING, MRS MABEL ASHE. The wicked goldsmith [and other] tales of ancient India; with pictures by Owen Smith. 144p $1.75 Harper

Folklore—India 41-4809

Seven tales from the Indian epics, the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, retold for children of nine to twelve.

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"Story-tellers always on the lookout for new material should at once mark down for their repertoires these tales from the Ramayana, the Mahabharata and other sources of ancient Indian legendry. They are greatly diversified. . . The pictures are unusually dramatic and convincing, without being too terrifying." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 6 '41 190w

"The striking pictures of beasts and demons, men and gods, strong in Oriental atmosphere are probably not intended for young children." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:207 My '41 130w

"These legends are full of the spirit of living; strong, vigorous tales, tinged with horror, wonder, and beauty. They are to be placed with our Greek myths and the Arthurian romances." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 170w

"The book is better suited to the reader of 12 years and on than to the younger boys and girls. The demon in 'Look at Your Coachman's Feet,' who cleft the eyes of his enemies with claw or fang, or ripped eyeballs out of their sockets, while it may please the occasional child who loves a horror story, is, on the other hand, quite as likely to disturb a sensitive reader, especially since the text is so vividly reinforced by the illustrations. Some of the pictures, however, have a fine imaginative and epic quality which suits the tales. . . On the jacket [is] a somewhat lurid representation of the Wicked Goldsmith, which cheapens the appearance of the book and is unworthy of its context." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '41 440w

"Five of the seven legends of this volume are good to read aloud; they are a compound of humor, beauty, and a pleasant amoral earthiness and are set in that curious world where djinn, demons, holy men and fallible humans intermingle freely. The two longer stories are harder going."

+ New Yorker 17:89 My 24 '41 70w

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. Still shine the stars. 74p $1 Harper

248 Civilization. Religion 41-23748

"Dr. Bell's purpose is to show that civilization's predicament is no mere accident, but rather the logical result of a hopelessly wrong outlook. How this came about and how the responsible man in the street can reverse the trend toward a new Dark Age is [here] stated." Publisher's note

BELL, B. I.—Continued

Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41
20w
N Y Times p26 N 9 '41 440w

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. Understanding religion; an introductory guide to the study of Christianity. 249p $1.90 Morehouse 268.62 Religious education—Textbooks
41-11138

A textbook for senior classes in Episcopal church schools. The book is composed of lesson outlines, suggested readings, etc. on such topics as: What is religion? How does man know what God is like? How does man come to know Jesus, the Incarnate God? The atonement, God the Holy Ghost, The work of the church, Disunity and reunion, Is there any future life? The path to certainty in religion.

Christian Century 58:886 JI 9 '41 20w
"Dr. Bell faces frankly the fundamental problems; he is well aware of the questions that perplex our young people; and he provides an abundance of material, probably more in each lesson than any one teacher could use, which provides ample scope for the needs of particular groups. The course provides for discussion, home-work, outside reading, examinations, and personal interviews. It seems in every case to dig down to the essential and elemental truths. Dr. Bell endeavors to avoid any partisan bias, and is fairly successful, but of course it is natural that, being an Anglo-Catholic, he presents Christianity largely in those terms." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 155:21 Ag '41 210w

BELL, CAROLINE DERVORQUILLA, and BELL, EDWARD ARTHUR BENJAMIN. Thank you twice; or How we like America; ed. by Alden Hatch. 112p $1 Harcourt

940.53161 Refugees, Child. Children as authors. World war, 1939—Children. U.S.—Social life and customs 41-14013

Eddie and Caroline Bell, aged ten and twelve, are the youngest children of an Oxford professor, who was one of the organizers of the movement to send the children of English university professors to America in the early stages of the War. This is a simply written account, by the children themselves, of their adventures on their way to Canada and after they arrived. Later they came to the United States and settled down with an older, married sister, living in Connecticut.

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41
Reviewed by George Conrad
Books p10 JI 6 '41 320w
Christian Century 58:912 JI 16 '41 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 20w

"Good." Zoë Durrell
+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

"A charmingly naive account of present day adventure which will please young readers, who will take it at its face value, and older readers, who will see more deeply into the occasional hints of loneliness and brave whistling in the dark."

+ Springfield Republican p7e JI 6 '41 700w
Reviewed by Helen Chamberlain
Survey 77:247 Ag '41 160w

BELL, ENID. Practical wood-carving projects; il. by the author. 144p $2 Harper 736 Wood carving (W) 40-14547

"The book is arranged so the beginner can commence at once with simplified steps and go to work after the preliminaries onto actual projects. It is illustrated with many photographs and detailed working drawings. In addition to the carving of wood the book contains much useful information on tools, woods, finishes." School Arts

Booklist 37:64 O 15 '40
N Y New Tech Bks 26:29 Ap '41
School Arts 40:6a Ap '41 60w
Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

BELL, HOWARD MITCHELL. Matching youth and jobs; a study of occupational adjustment; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 277p il map $2 Am. council on educ.

371.425 Occupations. Profession, Choice of 40-27829

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by Read Bain
Am Soc R 6:432 Je '41 500w

"The book is well written, interesting, and extremely practical." J. H. Bentley + Ann Am Acad 216:213 JI '41 450w

J Home Econ 33:265 Ap '41 100w

"As an auxiliary manual for people who are actively dealing with unemployment this book might have its uses. But the average person wishing to gain a clearer understanding of the situation, will find it bewildering."

+ Nation 152:417 Ap 5 '41 50w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
+ Social Educ 5:238 Mr '41 200w

"Vocational guidance is a responsibility that every community must face realistically. In this volume you have the ground work for planning a sane program. Mr. Bell has again produced a fine piece of work on a subject [upon] which he writes as an authority." J. J. Flynn

+ Social Studies 32:187 Ap '41 180w

BELL, KENSIL. Coast guard cadets; il. with official U.S. Coast guard photographs. 232p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-22367

A career book for boys of twelve to fifteen, dealing with the United States Coast guard academy at New London, Connecticut. Jim Steele, the hero, completes his training and graduates as top man. Football, training cruises, and a rivalry for leadership between Jim and another boy provide the plot.

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 Ja 4 '42 180w

"A good story. [It also] is an accurate picture of life at one of the nation's great service schools." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:379 D '41 20w

"Should be good to use with boys who read little and are hard to interest." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 100w

"Good in its field." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 40w

BELL, THOMAS. Out of this furnace. 413p $2.50 Little

41-5144

"In 1881 George Kracha, a Hungarian immigrant, arrived in New York and, shortly after, reached his destination in Pennsylvania where he became a worker in the steel mills at Homestead at 10 cents an hour. A little over half a century later John Dobrejcek, grandson of Kracha, electrician in the steel mills, helped organize his co-workers in the Committee for Industrial Organization. Thomas Bell in his new novel tells the story of the immigrant family through the five decades and makes of it a saga of brave and humble folk that is typically American." Books

"Mr. Bell knows his people and his background and he uses his knowledge in the telling of an absorbing tale." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Ap 6 '41 800w

"A significant, sociological novel, gripping and realistic, with a few episodes which may offend conservative readers. For adults only. Recommended." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 50w

"On its economic side 'Out of This Furnace' is a simple, perhaps too simple, plea for the dispossessed. But it is not, for all his earnestness, Mr. Bell's rough-hewn, black-and-white economic views which will remain with the reader. The Krachas and Mike Dobrejcek go deeper than that. So do the frankness and humanity which make Thomas Bell a memorable story teller." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '41 850w

"If Mr. Bell's hard-working, lively, struggling people were as interesting as the fiery background against which he poses them, his book would be better than it is. It has its points, however." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:89 Ap 5 '41 150w

"Of all the writers who have come out of our so-called 'new immigration,' that from Southern and Southeastern Europe, none deserves more hearty acclamation than Thomas Bell, author of the novel 'Out of This Furnace.' Of Slovak ancestry, he is as important in fiction as is his brother Slav, Louis Adamic, in non-fiction, and for the same reason: both portray the America of the newcomer for those who sometimes forget that at one time they too were newcomers. . . . At first one marvels at the courage of the author in choosing characters that seem nonentities. The wonder is all the more keen because though a Slav, Bell writes with the restraint of a frigid Anglo-Saxon. No abandon here, either in mood, situation, or style. Yet like the waters in a deep and quiet stream the story flows on and on." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 My 3 '41 650w

BELL, VEREEN. Swamp water. 263p $2 Little

(W) 41-1942

The scene of the tale is the Okefenokee Swamp, and a little town nearby. Like all of the natives young Ben Ragan feared the black sluggish waters of the swamp, and its panthers, alligators, and deadly snakes. Nevertheless, Ben braved its dangers to hunt for his lost hound dog, and thereby came in contact with another and unsuspected danger lurking in the swamp.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

"'Swamp Water' is a simple story and one told with a naturalness which gives it charm and color." Robert Wilder

+ Books p4 Mr 2 '41 750w

"Mr. Bell knows his background, and his descriptions are remarkably evocative. He knows the birds and animals by name and by habit; he has an ear for the native vernacular. Yet he keeps this knowledge subordinate to his plot, as Cecile Matschat and others who write of this region have not often succeeded in doing. . . . This is a fine, artistic, and virile first novel, and we think that you had better put Vereen Bell down as a writer to watch." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"'Swamp Water' is, in a sense, melodrama—a fast, taut, somewhat lurid yarn rather than a closely studied novel of character. Mr. Bell, however, knows his people and his background so thoroughly, writes with so much simplicity and directness and such a complete lack of sensationalism, that his story is lifted above the category of the merely thrilling and picturesque. 'Swamp Water,' in fact, is not only a very good tale but very nearly a brilliant one." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 F 23 '41 800w

"The boy, his old father, his young step-mother, and his girl are likable folks. Even the killer is a pleasant enough fellow. A capable job all round."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 90w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 167:270 S 12 '41 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Ag 30 '41 900w

BELLAMY, EDWARD. Religion of solidarity; with a discussion of Edward Bellamy's philosophy by Arthur E. Morgan. 43p pa 25c Antioch bookplate co, Yellow Springs, Ohio

110 Philosophy 41-9487

"This hitherto unpublished fragment states the essence of Bellamy's philosophy, a sense of the individual's dependence upon, and ultimate absorption into, the universal. This, he held, was in no way inconsistent with belief in a personal God." Christian Century

"This fragment, and the introductory essay by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, will whet the reader's interest in the forthcoming biography of Bellamy by Dr. Morgan."

+ Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 70w

"Despite its obscuring religious jargon, this essay could well serve today as an admirable statement of man's need to think and act as part of the larger whole which is society." J. L.

+ New Eng Q 14:417 Je '41 110w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Cautionary verses; illustrated album ed; with the original pictures by E. T. B. and Nicolas Bentley. 407p $3 Knopf [10s 6d Duckworth]

827

(W)

Omnibus volume of the famous nonsense verses. Contents: Cautionary Tales for Children; New Cautionary Tales; The Bad Child's Book of Beasts; More Beasts for Worse Children; More Peers; A Moral Alphabet; Ladies and Gentlemen.

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

"Children crave pickles as well as sweets, and the tang of this acid is wholesome." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 16 '41 50w

"I can only advise you to get the book. I promise that every member of the family will want to read it. It is one of those books which make one want to buttonhole everyone else and repeat this or that verse to him. I think I can offer no better praise than that." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 34:497 S 12 '41 360w

Reviewed by Theodore Maynard

Commonweal 35:12 O 24 '41 3600w

"Recommended for library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 66:613 Jl '41 40w

"All the joyously ridiculous illustrations by B. T. B. and Nicolas Bentley that appeared in the original editions are included and, in combination with the tart and whimsical verse, make an irresistible book." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p30 O 19 '41 300w

"A grand omnibus."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 30w

"A volume that is a victorious combination of polite language, inspired rhyming and delicious tom-foolery. Buy and read it!" W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 S 13 '41 400w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. On the place of Gilbert Chesterton in English letters. 84p $1 (3s 6d) Sheed

B or 92 Chesterton, Gilbert Keith 41-6978

"Belloc gives what he considers the essential characteristics of G.K.'s writings. Chesterton was essentially national, his Englishry was his leading characteristic. He also possessed extreme precision of thought; had an extraordinary capacity for parallelism, but his work was literary rather than historical. And it was charity and joy that suffused his thought, not bitterness and invective. Lastly the acceptance of the Faith fashioned still further his approach to the men and movements of the day." Commonweal

BELLOC, HILAIRE—Continued

"This fascinating little book has more value than would have the usual tribute of a man to the talents of his friend. The deep, controlled emotion in it never spills over; it contains a clear-cut and unbiased statement of Chesterton's literary faults and a frank, humble appreciation of his genius. . . . A not unnatural abhorrence of Mr. Rudyard Kipling's ideas seems to have blinded Mr. Belloc to any excellence his writings may have; to say of Kipling that he was 'wholly ignorant' of English letters seems to smack of perversity, unless we are to accept the word, ignorant, in some highly restricted definition. This, however, is but one blemish amid many beauties." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ — America 64:611 Mr 8 '41 210w

Cath World 153:122 Ap '41 250w

"Incisive writing, clear and brilliant. Yet it leaves the impression of being but a slight treatment of the place of Chesterton in English letters."

+ Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 120w

"The value of this short essay is to recall the cohesion of Chesterton's philosophy, his belief in the spread of proprietorship and his belief in smaller and more co-operative communities both for social and productive purposes. It is odd that no critic has examined all this in detail." B. I. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 18 '40 300w

Reviewed by Hugh Kingsmill

New Statesman & Nation 20:386 O 19 '40 550w

"A lot of hatreds appear here in this labour of love—hatred of Parliament and Press, of the monopolies and the banking system. . . . Most of the book indeed—with its political dogmatism, its unhappy prejudice and its uneasy conceit—seems to the outside reader to have little to do with the author of The Man Who Was Thursday, The Ballad of the White Horse and 'I think I will not kill myself today,' just as Mr. Belloc's harsh Catholicism seems to miss the spirit of the man who wrote The Thing. Chesterton was a much happier man than we could gather here and lived at a more profound level." Graham Greene

— Spec 165:370 O 11 '40 400w

"It is a singularly arid little essay that Mr. Belloc has written about one with whom he enjoyed, as he says, 'a permanent and active personal friendship, through which we were very close companions for more than 30 years.' He finds room for the parade of many of his own more or less familiar ideas. . . . These views, or some of them, Chesterton came to share, but their defiant reiteration helps very little to fix his place in English letters."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p535 O 19 '40 440w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. The donkey inside; il. by the author. 224p $3 Viking

918.6 Ecuador—Description and travel (W) 41-51518

Fitting together the material gathered on several trips to South America, the author has fused them into a picture of Ecuador. The result is an amusing philosophical book, with penetrating and presumably true implications about that country, and some guidebook material included. No index.

Booklist 37:269 F 15 '41

"For the most part Mr. Bemelmans writes with a delightful yet appreciative detachment. There is not a soupçon of egotism in the whole book, yet the artist's personality permeates it as a Scotch and soda is flavored to the last drop with the penetrating smoky taste of the Scottish peat. . . . But why, I wonder, didn't Mr. Bemelmans provide us with a map?" F. H. Bullock

+ Books p3 Ja 19 '41 700w

"Bemelmans' brilliantly apt descriptive writing occasionally becomes the copy for a new Lily Dache hat as seen through the eyes of 'Vogue' but usually you are conscious of no straining for effect, for what he describes is itself beyond the wildest dreams of fantasy. This is a most readable book." Graham McInnes

+ — Canadian Forum 21:28 Ap '41 600w

"Like his wry, winsome drawings, his prose combines the fresh vision of an imaginative child with a sly, civilized shrewdness. His latest volume is about Ecuador—an Ecuador you and I, unhappily, will never discover, but which he brings to life with a reality beyond mere literalism."

+ Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 110w

"When an artist writes a travel book and knows how to write as well as how to draw, as Bemelmans does, the result is irresistible. This little book on Ecuador does for South America in its more informal aspects what Charles Flandrau's Viva Mexico did for that country years ago."

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:61 Ap '41 130w

"Its cynical humor, its sophisticated charm, and the highly personal angle from which it is written segregate it from the travel guides which public libraries find yield 100 per cent on the dollar. At the moment, however, when popular books on Ecuador are practically nil it is a 'must' for libraries which wish to supply up-to-date material on this country. It is also a thoroughly original and well-written narrative to recommend to a reader," who wants a breezy, tongue-in-cheek yarn." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:79 Ja 15 '41 130w

"Like the illustrations, the text does not belong to the school of photographic realism, but of logical, superbly humorous, and enchantingly colored impressionism, which is somehow right as far as it goes—not quite as far as to be a contribution to the Good Neighbor policy."

+ Nation 152:108 Ja 25 '41 110w

"Ludwig Bemelmans is no more at his best in travel than anyone else; but he is a contagious sort of fellow, a writer with precise and vivid prose, love and knowledge, and his book of several journeys about South America becomes one of the best in the field. Being a man who could just naturally be turned loose in a morgue for deaf mutes and come out with more living, articulate people than I have been able to find in four novels by Henry James, he gets into his book explorers, petty officials, Indians, exiled diplomats, everybody. . . . He simply should not be encouraged to squander on timetables this kind of talent, a way with the written image and a set of humors just different enough to be a little miraculous." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:93 Ja 20 '41 1300w

"There's a good deal here that is inimitably amusing. But if almost everything in the book is unexpected, some of it is anything but funny. There is nothing funny in the swift, merciless incident from which (by the rather far-fetched misuse of a quotation) the volume gets its name. A land of surprises, he calls it; and so it is. . . . The 'beautiful madness of this lovely land' sings like a refrain in the traveler's mind as he starts homeward. That beautiful madness is through all this vivid and beguiling book, and in its pictures. Ludwig Bemelmans is not like any one else who has ever written about South America. His kinship is less with the travel writers than with the troubadours." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 19 '41 1150w

"It is characteristic of the Bemelmans mind to describe Quito as 'a kind of penal colony for diplomats.' It is fitting and proper that when he arrived in Ecuador, a local newspaper should print a picture of James Cromwell and label it 'El Señor Bnelemaas.' This sort of thing might make you think 'The Donkey Inside' all gossamer whimsy. There is plenty of whimsy (as well as a modicum of conventional travel description), but it is the whimsy of wisdom rather than of self-indulgence. When Bemelmans portrays an eccentric, it is out of love and understanding and not because the eccentric gives him a chance to exhibit his powers of fancy. I don't mean to get too solemn; I would merely suggest that the root of real humor—always a serious thing—is in him." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:77 Ja 18 '41 1050w

"In the present performance Bemelmans is, time and again, at his brilliant best. . . You can't put your finger on the secret of it, but the prospective reader should at least be warned in advance that, if Bemelmans makes the human race seem irresistibly endearing, like a collection of pet rabbits, he also makes it look more foolish than ever before." L. J. Halle, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Ja 18 '41 600w

"The Donkey Inside is written with beauty, sympathy and control. Its essential quality is the gentle courage of comedy. Blending facts and imagination at the author's fancy, it is incidentally as deft and intimate a portrait as a country could ever hope to sit for."

+ Time 37:80 Ja 20 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:vii spring '41 100w

"Everything that earlier reviewers have said about the skill and charm with which this book is written is true. From the first memorable portrait of the S. S. Mesias, parading up and down 'like a submerged old woman carrying above water only a garish hat decorated with banana leaves,' through the author's experiences in Ecuadorian city and jungle, here is Bemelmans at his best—a deft observer and a brilliant translator of observations into language. He has a style that seems absurdly easy to imitate until one attempts the imitation." J. I. B. McCulloch

+ Yale R n s 30:614 spring '41 700w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Hotel Splendide [Il. by the author]. 192p $2.50 Viking

818 Hotels, taverns, etc. (W) 41-52059

Inside view of the lives of bus boys, waiters, dish washers, and maitres d'hotel, of that institution designated as the Hotel Splendide, with humorous glances at some of its strange guests. Most of the stories have appeared in the New Yorker.

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"The amazing thing about this collection of fantastic incidents and characters is that it makes a kind of surrealist sense. . . However thin a few of the pieces are, they still contribute to the pattern as a whole. The best sketches in the book are those dealing with Mespoulets. His final appearance is one of complete triumph over M. Victor, his despised enemy." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 D 7 '41 700w

"The stories are told with a warm kindness, understanding, and humor that will appeal to any reader. As is usual with other books by Mr. Bemelmans, the illustrations are a fine accompaniment to the tone of the narrative." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 90w

"His facts read as brightly as fiction, and I believe by now that many of them are. In clarity of scene and character, he has always been a story-writer at heart, and this—as well as his sharp painter's eye—explains the success of his seeming artlessness. In truth he is a careful artist, and until he gets sick of that hotel of his, he can people it infinitely with as many out-of-focus and into-the-heart people as, say, Dickens." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:369 D 22 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 40w

"The cool high comedy of the earlier Bemelmans books is somewhat warmed in this volume by two or three of the stories. In one, for example, a character with an opportunity to humiliate a man upon whom he has long desired vengeance is appalled by the completeness of the humiliation that has already been accomplished with no aid from him, and holds his tongue. In another a maitre d'hotel becomes an unwilling benefactor—a story that O. Henry might have told. But in general Mr. Bemelmans has little kinship with even near contemporaries." Robert van Gelder

N Y Times p4 D 28 '41 1000w

"There is laughter, irony, pathos, a touch of the macabre, and much humor (the best sort, humor welling out of character) in the sketches composing 'Hotel Splendide.' Mr. Bemelmans as a writer to whom English is not the mother tongue, is a craftsman to shame native story-tellers." S. C. Gross

+ Sat R of Lit 24:22 D 27 '41 470w

BENES, VOJTA, and GINSBURG, RODERICK ALDRICH. Ten million prisoners (Protectorate Bohemia and Moravia). 180p pa 60c Czech-Am. nat. alliance, 4047 W. 26th st, Chicago

943.7 Czechoslovakia—Partition. Germans in Czechoslovakia 41-2429

"A brief recital of the historical facts concerning the German assault upon Czechoslovakia and, at greater length, the condition of the people in the occupied land." (Christian Century) "The author, once a Senator of the Republic of Czechoslovakia and a leader in the field of education, is also the elder brother of Dr. Eduard Beneš, second and last President of the state of Czechoslovakia." (Christian Science Monitor)

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 20w

"Certain of its pages ought to be splashed with tears and certain of its incidents are better left unread by the tender-hearted. But on the whole it is a calm, restrained, unemotional recital of events and their repercussions. If you want history in the raw, read this story as Vojta Beneš tells it." E. B. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 31 '40 700w

Foreign Affairs 19:472 Ja '41 10w

School & Society 51:720 Je 1 '40 10w

BENET, LAURA. Young Edgar Allan Poe; il. by George Gillett Whitney. 350p $2.50 Dodd B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan—Juvenile literature (W) 41-24202

Sketch of the early years of the life of Edgar Allan Poe, written for young readers. The author says in her preface "In writing this life, I have wished especially to keep to the facts of that extraordinary career, not to weave fiction out of them. However, I have decided to use material that is, by some people, considered legendary. Occasionally, I have resorted to a few lines of imaginary conversation."

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

"Poe is presented, with a sympathy that never slops over, as a genius. . . So many of us elders met Poe under Griswold's brutal handcap that we are glad to see him introduced to a new generation under this understanding treatment." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 D 14 '41 480w

"Laura Benet shows her full understanding of the difficulty of trying to fit such a disposition into the world of his day, or perhaps any day. Her well-drawn and entertaining pictures of Poe's Southern home, of his short college career, of his visit to Scotland, are enlivened by the color of imagination and the flash of humor. One reads the book with interest and enjoyment and closes it with an inevitable sense of depression." A. M. Jordan

BENET, LAURA—Continued

+ Horn BK M 13:32 Ja '42 120w

"Excellent life of Poe, dwelling on his best qualities; sympathetic, interesting, informative. . . Recommended for ages twelve and up." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 50w

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE. The dust which is God. 559p $3.50 Dodd
811 (W) 41-22160

An autobiographical novel in verse, beginning at about 1900 and continuing to the present. Some actual persons appear under other names. Raymond Fernandez is the poet's name for himself; he describes his early impressions, his years at Yale, his three marriages, as well as the social history of the last forty years, and its impact on his friends, as well as on himself.

"The main narrative is written in an impressionistic, staccato notation which is often very effective, interspersed with a variety of skillful and moving lyrics. Its weakness is a lack of intensity, of dramatic pressure and explosive force." Elizabeth Drew
+ Atlantic D '41 280w
Booklist 38:127 D 15 '41

"Mr. Benét sets forth objectively the folly and blindness of democratic leadership that led, perhaps inevitably, to Hitlerism. But partly because of his uncritical loyalty and affection for his friends and fellow writers, he is totally unable to evaluate the similar inadequacies of the literary set-up of the same years. And that is the weak spot of this novel in verse that otherwise fulfills its intention to be a 'detailed picture of a period.'" Ruth Lechlitner
+ Books p6 D 7 '41 1150w

"In this absorbing novel in verse William Rose Benét produces his most notable work. . . Told with heroic candor, in poetry that rises often to great beauty, this is an important book for the adult library." E. H. Crowell
+ Library J 66:729 S 1 '41 100w

"There is no reason to doubt that if the American audience would suspend their distaste for poetry for just one book, and begin to read this one, 'The Dust Which Is God' would go through the country like prairie fire. I have read it in one gulp, finding it difficult to tear myself away from it." Maurice Swan
+ N Y Times p4 D 14 '41 1100w

"Its importance lies in Mr. Benét's sincerity, in the fact that he—or his hero—is a very likable fellow, human, intelligent, and prone to err; and in the verse itself, sometimes very fine indeed."

+ New Yorker 17:109 N 15 '41 60w

"First, let me say, and emphatically: Mr. Benét's fictionalized autobiography in verse, is one of the great documents of our time. Like other such documents—Mr. Sandburg's The People, Yes, Mr. Stephen Vincent Benét's John Brown's Body, Mr. Auden's The Double Man, it belongs with the most extensive, and most courageous attempts made to achieve great poetry in our day. But that it remains when all is said and done, not great poetry except incidentally, and apart from its main purpose, is manifest to anyone who has read through all its more than six hundred pages. And the reason is chiefly due, not to any lack of skill on Mr. Benét's part, but to insuperable difficulties implicit in the theme, which attempts to cover the age itself." J. G. Fletcher
+ Poetry 59:213 Ja '42 1200w

"The reader, of today or tomorrow, will pare and strip 'The Dust Which Is God' to his own liking; but, however it is stripped, poetry will be found in all its veins and at the heart." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 15 '41 1250w

BENHAM, FREDERIC CHARLES. Great Britain under protection. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Commercial and tariff history) 271p $2.50 Macmillan

337 Great Britain—Commercial policy. Tariff
—Great Britain. Great Britain—Economic conditions 41-6316

Study of British commercial policy since 1931, with emphasis upon Great Britain's abandonment of her traditional free trade, and on the protectionist program. The author, a professor at the University of London, is an internationally known expert on trade relations. Statistics included in appendix. Index.

"The reader will regret that only two major industries are subjected to detailed examination; and that Mr. Benham made no substantial attempt to apply his wealth of factual material to the perplexing problems centering around the general theory of protection and free trade (for example, under quasi-monopoly conditions, as in steel). The frequent unqualified implication that exchange depreciation checks imports permanently, actually true only under rigid price and income conditions (as Mr. Benham once states himself), is also unfortunate, but minor. The book as a whole is an admirable contribution to the study of international economic relations." J. W. Angell
+ Am Econ R 31:374 Je '41 1050w

"Professor Benham has maintained a fine standard of objectivity in his study and has not hesitated to criticize Britain's pre-war external economic policies." H. J. Tasca
+ Am Hist R 47:335 Ja '42 700w

"This is a very scholarly and valuable book." M. A. Heilperin
+ Am Pol Sci R 35:386 Ap '41 300w

Reviewed by A. R. Upgren
Ann Am Acad 217:186 S '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:881 Jl '41 10w

"This book is not written for the layman. It is meat for students of economics." Géza Schütz

Library J 66:31 Ja 1 '41 180w

"A clear and first-rate comprehensive survey. . . Excellent for general reader and specialist."

+ New Repub 104:285 F 24 '41 50w

"This book is one of the few good and critical accounts of British history in the period between wars. It is encouraging to come upon it in the welter of sentimentality and polemics now being written about Britain. It should be studied by all who are interested in the problem of British survival." Francis Williamson
+ Survey G 30:354 Je '41 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p485 S 27 '41 800w

BENJAMIN, ROBERT SPIERS, ed. I am an American, by famous naturalized Americans; with an introd. by Archibald MacLeish; foreword by Francis Biddle. 176p $1.50 Alliance bk. 325.73 U.S.—Foreign population, Democracy (W) 41-51894

This book is made up of radio broadcasts given on a program prepared by the Immigration and naturalization service of the United States Department of Justice. Among the contributors are: Ludwig Bemelmans, Thomas Mann, Albert Einstein, William Knudsen, Louis Adamic, Ferdinand Pecora, Tony Sarg, Ales Hrdlicka, Emil Ludwig, Walter Damrosch, and Gaetano Salvemini.

Booklist 38:29 O 1 '41

"It is rather cheering in the midst of all the warnings to find one commentator after another declaring that the American temperament makes a totalitarian rule impossible. . . The stories of these actresses and scientists, industrialists and artists do add up to something valuable and good which we must all work to improve still more, which we may all have to fight to preserve. The stories add up men in details." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p20 S 28 '41 800w

"Here is a book to show the vitality of American democracy and also to suggest its present tasks."

+ N Y Times p10 S 7 '41 600w

New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 50w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 27 '41 360w

"Next time you are in a bookstore, remember the title 'I Am an American.' Just pick up the book and open it anywhere, grasping it with one hand and hanging firmly to your pocketbook with the other. As you read, if your reactions are normal, the hand holding the pocketbook will come up while the feet automatically move toward the nearest sales-girl. This book is something you can't afford to miss. You need to own it so that you can read a little at a time, and so that you can show it to your friends." D. C. Coyle
+ Survey 77:340 N '41 450w

BENNETT, E. F. A review of driers and drying; forewords by J. S. Long and William Krumbhaar. 90p il $1.75 Chemical pub. co.

667.6 Drying oils 40-28979

"A particularly complete and suggestive compilation of the information on drying oils, the fundamental principles of the drying phenomenon, and the influence of metallic driers thereon, as worked out through many years by many investigations all over the world." Foreword

"The book offers a wealth of quickly available information on drying oils and driers and could well be recommended as a text for groups or classes desiring fundamental and practical information. Many controversial views of this subject have been given new lines of thought which may lead to investigations among workers in protective coatings laboratories." P. E. Marling + Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1095 D 10 '40 300w

Chem & Met Eng 48:176 S '41 240w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:10 Ja '41

BENNETT, JOHN COLEMAN. Christian realism. 198p $2 Scribner

201 Christianity—Philosophy 41-8450

"This book is an attempt to think through some of the most important problems of Christian life and thought in the light of insights which have come from recent developments in theology and in the light of the events that haunt our minds. The first chapter is a diagnosis of the existing situation and the chapters that follow are essays in theology. . . . [The author] writes as a liberal who tries to take seriously the contribution of such thinkers as Barth, Brunner, and Reinhold Niebuhr; and as a Congregationalist who believes in the central importance of the ecumenical Church." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p13 Je 29 '41 100w

"Written simply and clearly, but with competent knowledge of the wide field that is involved and with clear insight into underlying principles, this volume maintains the author's reputation for helpful and illuminating discussion, and should be welcome to many who are seeking guidance in a time of confusion." H. F. Rall
+ Christian Century 58:752 Je 4 '41 800w

Reviewed by T. L. Leishman

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 28 '41 550w

"The book as a whole reflects the best of contemporary theology, and the balanced conclusions reflect the sensitive and Christian mind of the writer." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:16 My 15 '41 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

"There is something fresh and stimulating in these lectures."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 N 29 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:133 Jl '41

BENNETT, MARGARET ELAINE. College and life; problems of self-discovery and self-direction; [prepared] with the editorial co-operation of Lewis M. Terman. 2d ed 503p $2.75 McGraw

371.8 College students. Conduct of life. Study, Method of 41-51842

"Revised, partly rewritten, and enlarged by several new chapters." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933.

Booklist 37:548 Jl 15 '41

School & Society 54:16 Jl 5 '41 70w

BENNETT, WHITMAN. Whittier, bard of freedom. 359p il $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Whittier, John Greenleaf 41-23513

Analysis of the life and work of the Quaker abolitionist and poet, John Greenleaf Whittier. The emphasis is on his early years and activities—his work as a newspaper editor, magazine writer, and his crusade for freedom of the slaves and women's rights. Index.

"A study of Whittier which, without being in the least stodgy or old-fashioned, almost perfectly recaptures the 'climate of opinion' of the poet's day. In restoring an admiration that was as genuinely bestowed as it was fully deserved Mr. Bennett has rendered a valuable service to the American tradition." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p26 N 23 '41 850w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 29 '41

"Recommended for college libraries and for large libraries where comparative research is being done." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 70w

New Repub 106:93 Ja 19 '42 40w

Reviewed by Herbert Gorman

N Y Times p1 D 28 '41 1000w

"Unnecessarily anxious to prove that his is not a two or three year rush job for a degree, the author leans over backward into a practice that throws doubt on his reliability at certain points. The remarks on the sources consulted suggest that much essential material was not used—notably the Weld, Birney, Emerson and Stowe letters, and several important monographs on the antislavery movement. This leads, for example, to disappointingly vague notes on Whittier's relations with Harriet Beecher Stowe and Theodore Dwight Weld, his 'interest' in the ideas of Robert Dale Owen, utopian socialist, and his 'friendship' with Emerson. . . . Let it be said, nevertheless, that this biography is a rollicking good one. Whitman Bennett has strong opinions and voices them with gusto. More frequently than not he is right." S. L. Jackson
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 N 12 '41 950w

BENSON, GEORGE CHARLES SUMNER. The new centralization; a study of intergovernmental relationships in the United States. 181p $1.50; college ed $1 Farrar

353 U.S.—Politics and government. Federal government 41-11628

"Centripetal and centrifugal forces in the federal system are Mr. Benson's subject. Years ago Elihu Root warned the states that unless they played their roles more competently they would have fewer lines to speak. The part of the federal government would become fatter and fatter. That has happened, and under the impact of defense preparations, the tendency is likely to be accelerated. What has happened Mr. Benson discusses in detail." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

BENSON, G. C. S.—Continued

"The author scarcely succeeds in his avowed purpose, i.e., to 'present new points of view to others'; but at least he discusses the old points of view in an ingratiating manner."

A. F. MacDonald

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:981 O '41 650w

"The book on the whole is well done; its author has rendered a real service in presenting an over-all view of the problems currently existing in the field of intergovernmental relations. The survey is of value not only to members of the profession, but also to that increasing number of intelligent citizens who want to know about their government and understand its problems." W. B. Graves

+ Ann Am Acad 218:218 N '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ag 2 '41 50w

BENSON, MRS SALLY. Junior miss. 214p $2
Random house

(W) 41-51772

The heroine of this collection of short stories reprinted from the New Yorker is little Judy Graves, aged twelve, a pupil at a private school for girls in New York city, and a source of irritation, amusement and wonder to the members of her family.

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:15 N '41

"A great number of people have certainly enjoyed these tales of Judy and her family and friends as they appeared in 'The New Yorker'. Slight as they seem superficially, they prove to be the contrary of ephemeral and distill new delights upon rereading. It would be practically self-sacrifice never to have read them at all." Iris Barry

+ Books p5 My 25 '41 450w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by Muriel Burns

New Repub 105:28 Jl 7 '41 160w

"Any one who is familiar with Sally Benson's work will know how deft and subtle and amusing 'Junior Miss' is. Though she has forsworn the sophisticated wit and irony for which she is so noted, these seemingly simple sketches still bear her hallmark and are no less adroit than her earlier stories. In writing of Judy Graves's minor adventures, Mrs. Benson is as pithy and concise as ever, as much a master of the perfect phrase, with an added quality of warmth and gentleness which, until now, she has rather conspicuously lacked." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 My 25 '41 650w

"A gentle family altogether, very New York and quite human too, and presented by Mrs. Benson with great wit and wisdom and even considerable heart."

+ New Yorker 17:71 My 31 '41 50w

"Sally Benson has an uncanny accuracy in catching the exact detail of description which will bring a whole personality to mind with the sharpest effect and in touching upon the one incident which will recreate the whole of a childish tragedy. If you put these tales aside as children's stories simply you will miss some extremely shrewd comment on human nature in general and our own day in particular." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 My 24 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 390w

BENTLEY, GERALD EADES. Jacobean and Caroline stage; dramatic companies and players. 2v $15 (42s) Oxford

792 Theater—England

"Sir Edmund K. Chambers carried his massive and authoritative history of the Elizabethan stage [Book Review Digest, 1924] down to the death of Shakespeare in 1616. . . Professor Bentley of the University of Chicago now takes up the story at the point where Chambers let it fall and carries it on to September, 1642, when on the outbreak of the Civil War the theaters were closed. The two volumes now published are only the first installment of the history. They deal with the dramatic companies in London and with the lives of the individual actors. There are to be later volumes on the playwrights and dramas of the period and on the theatres and the prevalent conditions of play production." Books

"This arduous piece of work has been accomplished in accordance with the best traditions of American literary scholarship. It is a worthy successor and invaluable supplement to Chambers's great work and, like those volumes, will be the standard authority for many years to come. It may be recommended without reservation to all students of our literature." S. C. Chew

+ Books p13 S 7 '41 800w

Reviewed by Ivor Brown

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 15 '41 400w

"It would not have been difficult to have made these two volumes, packed with learning which was the result of long and careful research, a very dull affair. Mr. Bentley, however, has skillfully leavened the whole loaf with a wealth of entertaining quotation, which is never introduced except to make a point or stress an argument. Both the first volume, which deals with the companies, and the second which tells us about the players, are extremely readable, especially as Mr. Bentley does not always deny himself an aside of his own, though he sticks to his matter with a scholarly abnegation which is almost heroic." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 166:583 My 30 '41 600w

"Mr. Bentley's book is for scholars, by a scholar. When he has completed his mighty undertaking, every detail of English stage history from its beginnings as described by Chambers to its long closing in 1642 will have been sifted and made available for the interested student." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 26:140 F '42 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p288 Je 14 '41 1900w

BENTLEY, JOHN. Mr Marlow chooses wine. 261p $2 Houghton

41-1969

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 30w

"If you like your detective stories to be fast and rough, then this is the book for you." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p23 F 9 '41 200w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Manhold. 413p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 41-51735

The present novel in the author's series depicting Yorkshire history in fiction form from 1625 to 1936, covers the years 1720 to 1805. The characters are mostly cloth weavers and dealers. Manhold is the great house built by Sam Horsfall, a successful cloth merchant, part of whose success depended on a cruelly wronged brother-in-law. The latter's daughter, Ann, grew up to become the main factor in the ruin of Sam's spineless son, Richard.

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:15 N '41

Reviewed by Iris Barry

Books p2 Ap 20 '41 700w

Cath World 153:507 J1 '41 120w

"Manhold will add distinction to the already impressive literary stature of the author and will increase the library of the modern novel by another volume prima qualitate." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Christian Century 58:934 J1 23 '41 500w

"A mixture of precise historic detail and of heavy melodrama characterizes the novels of Phyllis Bentley, and 'Manhold' is a more vigorous example of this than its predecessors. While the characters never seem quite convincing as creatures who think and feel as well as talk and move, their progress through experience is what grips the reader. The problems of daily living are presented in a manner realistic enough."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 12 '41 220w

"In her unerring sense of the relation between character and event and quiet narrative style Miss Bentley reminds one a good deal of George Eliot. The great success of the story is Ann, who, introduced as a singularly attractive child, turns into a thoroughly wicked woman and the chief cause of the fall of Manhold." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 24 '41 150w

"Miss Bentley recaptures the flavour of traditional unabashed melodrama which seemed to die with the passing of the silent movie serial. . . [She] does it all with great gusto and a very efficient command of the rudiments of story telling. The background of Yorkshire industry is interesting, and the plot is such an old and well-tried favourite that the casting of a doubt upon it would almost amount to an attack on national morale." Desmond Hawkins

New Statesman & Nation 21:113 F 1 '41 490w

"In 'Manhold' Miss Bentley has written her finest novel. Less purposefully historical and less wide in scope than 'Inheritance'—outstandingly the best of her previous books—'Manhold' far surpasses it in emotional depth, in the sustained integration of its aim, in strength of characterization and in mounting interest. . . In none of her previous novels has Phyllis Bentley risen to such a height of pure passion as in this; a controlled passion that has enabled her to present humanity's excesses against a wild harmonizing background of untamed country and unpredictable storms." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '41 900w

"A melodramatic tale of a family quarrel, the ambitions of a wool merchant, and an estate fought over for three generations. Pretty gloomy."

New Yorker 17:90 Ap 19 '41 30w

"Miss Phyllis Bentley can always be relied on to tell a story swiftly and coherently: one is never left not caring what will happen next. . . The story itself is grim enough, a story of greed, ruthlessness, and maniacal revenge." Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 166:126 Ja 31 '41 340w

"The moral of the story is admittedly never in doubt, and in elaborating it Miss Bentley has her moments. But she has handicapped herself all through by the choice of stock characters and stock situations. This is not, indeed, practised though her touch is, one of the best of her books; the writing tends to be inert and flaccid, and the love passages in particular carry little conviction. She has evidently gone to some pains to acquaint herself with the intricacies of the woollen industry during her period, but for the rest her sense of the 'industrial, social, economic and human history' of her eighteenth-century scene seems a little flat and unilluminated."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 25 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

BENZ, MRS MARGARET GILBERT. Family counseling service in a university community. 125p $1.60 Teachers college

362.8 Family

40-34860

"A description of the organization, work, and some of the findings of the Family Consultation Bureau conducted by the Child Development Institute of Teachers College, Columbia University, from 1933 to 1936 under the general direction of Dr. Lois Hayden Meek, who writes the introduction. The problems most commonly presented by the families that used the service are analyzed and classified, and their significance is discussed for the benefit of parents and of workers and students in child guidance. Several of the more frequent problems deal directly with home management and other home economics topics." J Home Econ

"Viewed in terms of research standards, the work is a fact-finding study. It proceeds from no hypotheses, involves no theoretical framework, and arrives at no theoretical conclusions." R. F. Winch

Am J Soc 47:258 S '41 120w

J Home Econ 32:631 N '40 110w

BEOWULF. Beowulf; retold by E. V. Sandys; il. by Rolf Klep. 93p $2 Crowell

41-27326

Dramatic retelling of the Beowulf legend, for children from ten to sixteen.

"If small boys can escape from today into the highly problematic future world of the comics, why not give them a slight shove in the other direction, back to these tumultuous adventures? Rolf Klep's talents as illustrator are for the monumental, the grim, the terrible that has also an element of calm." M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 18 '42 130w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:375 D '41 50w

"A beautifully printed and illustrated adaptation of a great classic that is seldom read. This makes it easy and agreeable."

+ Christian Century 58:1412 N 12 '41 20w

"The beautifully dramatic pictures are as stirring as the old tales and in the distinctive style of Rolf Klep. Useful for additional material on the subject." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 80w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. It's the gypsy in me [autobiography]. 337p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-24040

This Rumanian born American describes his varied life in terms of people he has known; countries he has visited or lived in, and social revolutions he has experienced. "Growing up in Rumania, Konrad Bercovici learned to weave baskets, play the violin and speak Calo, the language of gypsies, as well as German, French and Greek. . . In Paris he allied himself with the Dreyfusists, studied music, worked in a furniture factory, traveled for a clockmaker, did a paint job on the Eiffel Tower, sold pictures and married Naomi, like himself an exile from Rumania." (Books)

"As the outline of one man's literary apprenticeship, its early chapters constitute a lively Baedeker. . . With undeniable shrewdness, the author has made capital not only of his talents but of the Romany cachet—down to his muf-flers and his mustache. Having worked with his two hands and his imagination, he has given equal attention to the cultivation of another asset which rates high in America. He is a good showman." Lisle Bell

+ Books p6 D 14 '41 650w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD—Continued

"Here is an autobiography full of punches, none of them pulled. The gypsy in Konrad Bercovici makes him write with great gusto. There is a devil-may-care, take-it-or-leave-it attitude about the book, which by turns gives pleasure and exasperates." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p8 D 28 '41 1050

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 24:5 D 13 '41 850w

BERGER, JOHN A. The Franciscan missions of California; il. with phot. by Karl Obert. 392p map $3.50 Putnam

979.4 Missions—California. Franciscans in California 41-51651

In the early chapters the story of the Californian missions as a whole is told; the Indians and their customs are described, and the aim and achievements of the padres discussed. The remainder of the book takes up the separate missions in "Father Serra's rosary," one by one, from the establishment of San Diego de Alcalá in 1769, to the last and most northern foundation, San Francisco Solano, in 1823. Index.

Reviewed by P. L. Blakeley
America 66:190 N 22 '41 210w
Booklist 37:381 Ap 15 '41

"It is a vivid, carefully documented and yet entertaining study written without any froth or gilding or fake romance." Ruth Gruber
+ Books p5 Mr 30 '41 800w

"Written with a view to superseding G. W. James' classic but now somewhat antiquated treatment of this ever fascinating theme, Mr. Berger's admirable book seems well suited to that role. Higher praise is unnecessary."

+ Christian Century 58:984 Ag 6 '41 340w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 21 '41 340w

"This latest work on the California missions deserves to be classed among the best of its kind." F. B. Steck

+ Commonweal 34:90 My 16 '41 480w
N Y Times p3 Mr 30 '41 440w
Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

BERGER, JOSEF (JEREMIAH DIGGES, pseud.). In great waters. 282p map $2.50 Macmillan

639.2 Fishing. Portuguese in New England 41-51736

Story of the fishermen of Portuguese stock who have sailed from Provincetown, Gloucester, and New Bedford, and continue to ply their dangerous trade in spite of war and weather. In semi-fictional form the author writes of life on the Grand Banks fishing boats, storms, fog, wrecks, superstitions, and German submarine raids on fishing boats off Cape Cod in 1918.

"The material of Mr. Digges's sixteen chapters is abundantly worth preserving, some of it as history, some as folklore, and all as the composite portrait of a lovable, valiant people committed by an innate talent to a precarious and highly specialized way of life." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic Je '41 130w
Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

"It is a splendid addition to our fast-growing literature of the American fisheries. . . . 'In Great Waters' is not an historical or ethnological treatise, or anything of the sort. It is a charming book of a semi-fictional nature, about contemporary life and people. . . . It is a highly successful method, and he has handled it with rare effectiveness. The writing is strong and true, at times deeply moving, always sincere and restrained." Lincoln Colcord
+ Books p2 Mr 30 '41 900w

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 40w

"An excellent addition to recent books on phases of New England life. Recommended." J. A. Sohon

+ Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 40w

"Apart from the historical section, which is an attempt to prove that the Portuguese discovered North America, and a number of nautical solecisms, owing to the author's unfamiliarity with sail, this is a pleasant and entertaining book, on the border line between history and fiction." S. E. M.

+ New Eng Q 14:777 D '41 130w

"There is much wit, mainly of a sardonic nature, in this book. Mr. Digges appears not to be convinced that all good Yankees, although they may have arrived there, were certainly destined for heaven. But he is not meanhearted. And he loves his 'portygese.' And why shouldn't every one, reading these tales of bravery and endurance, agree with him? 'In Great Waters' is a moving and finely balanced bit of work."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 6 '41 550w

"Jeremiah Digges has presented nothing strikingly new in his book on fishermen, but he has avoided the stock stories of heroism and danger on the Grand and Georges banks. Most of his stories, although easily identifiable with the type of yarn that has been coming out of the fishing fleets for years are not too familiar, and make enjoyable reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 15 '41 500w

BERKMAN, SOPHIA, and EGLOFF, GUSTAV. Emulsions and foams. 591p il $8.50 Reinhold 660 Emulsions. Foam 41-12921

"This volume consists of five parts or chapters. The first chapter deals with the theory of emulsions and foams; the second, with emulsification; the third, with demulsification; the fourth, with practical knowledge of emulsions, more especially with asphalt and bitumen emulsions and with lubricants and lubricating-oil emulsions; the final chapter is devoted to laboratory methods used in the examination of emulsions. Thus it is apparent that the book is concerned primarily with the theory and applications of emulsions. Of the 563 pages of text only 40 deal chiefly with foams." News Edition

N Y New Tech Bks 26:42 Jl '41

"The book is written more clearly and entertainingly than most comprehensive monographs of this type. The volume will be found useful to the general student interested in this special field of colloid science; it would appear to be indispensable to the technologist concerned with the theory and applications of emulsions." H. B. Weiser

+ News Edition 19:1166 O 25 '41 330w

BERKMAN, SOPHIA; MORRELL, JACQUE CYRUS, and EGLOFF, GUSTAV. Catalysis, inorganic and organic. 1130p il $18 Reinhold
541.39 Catalysis 41-582

Aims to arrange "the findings of various workers in the field and their original interpretations into a systematic presentation of the subject with some consideration of its historical evolution. The material is so divided as to permit the reader to acquire a knowledge of each specific branch of the subject and perhaps to visualize a logical thread running through the field of catalytic chemistry, thereby simplifying and facilitating a critical analysis of the available experimental facts." (Pref)

"'Catalysis' is not a book which one sits down to read from cover to cover, but is rather a book which is first perused and then placed on the reference shelf to be consulted whenever a problem in catalysis presents itself. Undoubtedly the book will go a long way in helping to fulfill the authors' own prediction that 'future research in the field of catalysis may be logically derived from the systematically presented facts instead of from the empirical methods used at present.'" M. E. Clark
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:882 D '40 700w

"The indexes are unusually detailed and complete, and the bibliographies are very inclusive. A monograph well worthy of the attention of both student and research worker."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 25:45 O '40

BERNHARD, HUBERT JAY; BENNETT, DOROTHY AGNES, and RICE, HUGH SMITH, eds. New handbook of the heavens. (Whittlesey house publication) 299p il maps $2.50 McGraw

520 Astronomy—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-5270

"Previous editions [Book Review Digest, 1935] were made up of chapters written by individual members of the Junior astronomy club; the book now appears in a more unified form, entirely rewritten by the former editors." (Booklist) Glossary, Index.

Booklist 37:443 My 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:37 JI '41

BERNSTEIN, MRS ALINE (FRANKAU). An actor's daughter. 228p $2 Knopf

B or 92

40-29640

Mrs Bernstein, a leading scenic designer, writes this autobiographical sketch of her childhood and girlhood lived among theater people in New York of the nineties.

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

"History deals with outlines. It is given life and dimension by personal account. This New York so recently vanished is as remote as Carthage. A changing economic structure shuffled by two wars has buried its sights and sounds too deep for excavation save through a lively and affectionate pen. . . We shall not see its like again, but for the moment it is recaptured in this exuberant stageset by an actor's daughter." Dorothy Hillier

+ Books p5 F 9 '41 1250w

"Mrs. Bernstein is one of the great designers of the working stage. Her second book assures her another and less ephemeral career as a writer whose gorgeous literary expression comes as naturally to her as breathing." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 420w

"Set down in smooth, quiet prose that makes nice reading even when it's just prattle. This is your dish if you care to know how a sensitive child responded to the environment of a clamorous, New York theatrical boarding house and the emotional crises of her high-strung family."

+ New Repub 104:286 F 24 '41 40w

"The author has sought in these recollections of family life in New York before the turn of the century to play up the human values. Shunning the nostalgic mood, she has placed her emphasis on a vivid and often humorous evocation of character and incident." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p5 F 9 '41 460w

"Mrs. Bernstein recreates the period with quick strokes, like stitches, almost as if she were sewing rather than writing. Her account of her childhood has no 'importance,' but it has charm, which is rarer." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:64 F 8 '41 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Breuning

Sat R of Lit 23:13 Mr 8 '41 550w

"The narrative is written with a swift, light touch, with dashes of bright color, and a happy undaunted spirit. One finishes it with a feeling that his own spirit has been lightened, made gay, and maybe a little mad. It is as if one had been enjoying a spirited stage play." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 5 '41 500w

"It is hard to put the book down, once you have begun it. For, through all the details of the unlovely story, there shines the glowing affection of the child for her father, for beauty in all its forms and for the devotees of beauty, which casts a warmth over the pages that has something the power of a spell." Frederick Morton

+ Theatre Arts 25:319 Ap '41 480w

"Aline Bernstein's writing combines a theatre worker's feeling for mannered grace in gesture and interiors with the lithe conversational style of a skilled manual worker, a cultivated peasant. Hers is sentimental writing, but it is good enough to melt in the mouth."

+ Time 37:98 F 17 '41 300w

BERNSTEIN, MRS ANNA RUTH (EPSTEIN) (ANN TODD, pseud), and SLOCUM, ROSALIE. Timothy came instead. 47p il $1.25 Oxford

Pictures and story describe a small American girl, and Timothy, an English boy of her own age who came to live at her house, and what happened when the children went to school and to the zoo. For six- and seven-year-olds.

"Rosalie Slocum's big, bright pictures accompany this action, true to life all the way through." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 D 14 '41 220w

"Miss Slocum's many pictures in color help to make this an attractive book for the 4- to 7-year-olds who want a story of real life." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 11 '42 140w

BERNSTEIN, BLANCHE. Pattern of consumer debt, 1935-36; a statistical analysis. (Financial research program. Studies in consumer instalment financing) 238p $2.50 Nat. bur. of economic research

332.7 Credit, Instalment plan 40-34852

"This is an analysis of 60,000 expenditure schedules of non-relief families for the year 1935-1936. One-fourth of the families during this period had a net change in instalment debt. This increase is attributed largely to a higher standard of living in anticipation of larger income in an expansion year. The author traces the changes in instalment debt for furniture, automobiles, electric equipment and radios. The data used in this study were based on a Works Progress Administration project of 1936 for 51 cities, 140 villages and 66 farm counties in 30 states." (Am Econ R) Index.

Reviewed by C. O. Fisher

Am Econ R 31:422 Je '41 120w

Reviewed by W. C. Waite

Ann Am Acad 214:262 Mr '41 430w

BERNSTEIN, JACOB L., and ARRIN, DAVID JOSEPH. The citizen in a changing community. 636p il maps $1.80 Longmans

300 Social sciences. Citizenship 41-19552

"A core of basic materials for ninth year social studies, viewed both as an orientation and a terminal course." Social Studies

School & Society 54:423 N 8 '41 30w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 20w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A.

BERRY, ROBERT ELTON. Yankee stargazer; the life of Nathaniel Bowditch. (Whittlesey house publication) 234p il $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 Bowditch, Nathaniel (W) 41-28345

Biography of the New England astronomer, mathematician and navigator, who was born in Salem, Massachusetts, in 1773, and died in Boston in 1838. "The purpose of this biography is to tell the complete story of his life, drawing on memoirs by his sons and his friends, on his sea journals, on diaries and records of his Salem and Boston contemporaries, and on scientists' studies of his writings on navigation, mathematics, and astronomy." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

BERRY, R. E.—Continued

Booklist 38:188 F 1 '42

"The author has told the story faithfully, with charm, humor and dignity. He evidently is not a seaman himself, and there are lapses of a minor nature. . . But these are beside the point; the book in general runs true to the scene. Mr. Berry delved diligently into extant Bowditch material, has given us many a pleasant and illuminating incident, and has drawn his chief character fairly and well." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p3 D 28 '41 850w

"Not only the man but his period comes to life. The book is well documented and a long list of sources is appended. . . Recommended." H. A. von Urff

+ Library J 66:998 N 15 '41 70w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 106:123 Ja 26 '42 600w

"Since modest Biographer Berry has had the good sense to let Bowditch's story tell itself with a minimum of literary asides and insights, the result is a simple, readable, well-researched life of a remarkable American."

+ Time 39:72 Ja 12 '42 1650w

BESSIE, ALVAH CECIL. Bread and a stone. 346p $2.50 Modern age

41-24401

Portrait of a man whose whole life was a steady process of defeat. Ed Sloan began life as the convenient object to be beaten by a cruel stepfather. He knew reform schools and penitentiaries, but little of human kindness until he met and married Norah Gilbert, a well educated school teacher. For her sake Ed was willing to risk everything; and the end was inevitably tragedy.

"This story of Ed and Norah Sloan is rich and sympathetic, deeply moving and deeply significant." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p10 N 30 '41 550w

"'Bread and a Stone' like 'An American Tragedy,' is somewhat longer and more like a case history than it needs to be, but like the earlier book it successfully creates sympathy for its central character as a victim of environment and his own ignorance rather than a vicious enemy of society."

+ Nation 153:649 D 20 '41 120w

Reviewed by Stanley Hyman

New Repub 105:834 D 15 '41 800w

"Norah rarely comes alive. Her hunger for companionship is easy to understand, but the gulf the author has presented as existing between her and Ed is too wide for crossing, especially when one remembers the existence of the child Katey. . . It would seem as if Mr. Bessie had used all the vitality at his command to create the one individual about whom he really cares, in whom he is really interested; Ed Sloan, not merely underprivileged, but not privileged at all. . . It is the intense, even passionate sympathy with which Mr. Bessie has drawn Ed, obviously intended as a symbol of the oppressed and unjustly treated everywhere, which gives the novel the power and value it certainly possesses." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p7 N 16 '41 650w

"As an accurate reporter of the underside of American life, it seems to me that Alvah Bessie is to our period what Stephen Crane was to his own." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 6 '41 700w

"Like many modern liberal writers, Alvah Bessie has now attempted to probe the fates or forces that make a defeated clod out of a man. Very, very partially successful is 'Bread and a Stone', yet his ability as a craftsman is evident. His novel avoids formula, so much so that it is difficult to review." G. F. P.

Spring'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 420w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) (ERICK BERRY, ANNE MAXON, pseud.). Whistle round the bend; pictures by the author. 267p $2 Oxford

(W) 41-17944

The third in a trilogy concerned with transportation, written especially for young people. This story is of the building of a railroad in the first half of the 1800's. Grades six to eight.

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"Whistle Round the Bend is rich in both incident and character." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 80w

"The story is informative in the best sense. After careful study of the records of old New Haven and early railroading, the author not only tells us what happened but re-creates successfully the life of a town and a period. A book that both boys and girls from 11 to 14 will find exciting and absorbing."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 25 '42 320w

BEST, HARRY. Soviet experiment. 120p $1.25 Smith, Richard R.

947.084 Russia—Politics and government.
Russia—Economic conditions. Communism
—Russia 41-24289

"From extensive reading upon the subject, conversation with persons holding different points of view who have been in Russia and from observations made when the writer visited Russia, this book aims to answer such questions as, How did Soviet Russia become what it is? How has socialism or communism worked out in practice in the USSR? What is the social philosophy underlying the Soviet experiment? What does the Soviet experiment promise for the world in general?" School & Society

"The author gives a fair and balanced estimate of merits and defects."

+ Christian Century 58:1579 D 17 '41 80w

School & Society 54:535 D 6 '41 80w

BESTON, HENRY, pseud. See Sheahan, H. B.

BESTOR, GEORGE CLINTON. Corpse came calling. 256p $2 Phoenix

Detective story. 41-9387

"Although fantastic, involved, and certainly undistinguished, it is by no means the worst of its kind; and the taxi-dancer's murder may well hold attention through an idle hour." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p17 Jl 15 '41 150w

"Private operative and luscious red-head keep story moving through scenes that strain credulity to cracking point. 10-20-30."

— Sat R of Lit 24:15 Jl 5 '41 30w

BETZNER, JEAN, and MOORE, ANNIE EGERTON. Everychild and books. 174p $2.13; to schools $1.60 Bobbs 028.5 Children's literature (books about).

Books and reading 40-11546

"In the Introduction the authors state their point of view clearly: It would seem that every minute feature of the entire field of reading, at least in its earlier stages, has been dealt with repeatedly and exhaustively, except the one aspect which we believe to be the most fundamental and important. The culminating point of the whole process—the development in childhood of a genuine enjoyment of books and of a finer taste in their selection—has received relatively little attention from professional educators." EI School J

Booklist 37:211 Ja 15 '41

"Everychild and Books is a real contribution to the field of children's reading. It is a book for parents, teachers, librarians, and others interested in guiding children's reading, and it will be of great value in teacher-training classes. A scholarly piece of work, it treats a vital subject in an understanding and a revealing manner." Evangeline Colburn

+ EI School J 41:308 D '40 900w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

BEVERLY, BERT IRA. In defense of children; introduction by Hughes Mearns; decorations by Margaret Freeman. 233p $2 Day

136.7 Child study. Children—Management (W) 41-15702

A book of advice on the rearing of children from infancy thru adolescence, stressing the psychological aspects. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"The effect of the book on prospective parents may be more deterrent than stimulating, but they will not read it as much as teachers in progressive schools or students preparing for that profession."

+ Books p17 Ja 18 '42 140w

"Sensible, readable, authoritative, and well organized, this book is as good [as] anything on the subject and should have a wide use." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 66:729 S 1 '41 110w

BEVIN, ERNEST. The balance sheet of the future. 303p $2.75 McBride

330.942 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. World war, 1939—Economic aspects. Trade unions. Great Britain—Economic conditions (W) 41-52008

This book contains materials gleaned from speeches made by England's minister of labor over a period of years. "Part one consists of statements made since Mr. Bevin was appointed to his position in the Government; Part Two of those made before that appointment, during his career as a labor leader and Secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union." (Editorial note)

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"The interest and the importance of Bevin's contribution lie in the fact that next to the Prime Minister he commands the affection and admiration of England. His views of the nature of the peace must, therefore, command attention." J. M. Minifie

+ Books p14 N 30 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. D. Minnich

Library J 66:998 N 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by Patricia Strauss

Nation 153:533 D 6 '41 550w

"One of the most important books of the season."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 700w

BIANCO, MRS MARGERY (WILLIAMS). Franzi and Gizi [pictures by Gisella Loeffler]. [56p] $2 Messner

Children in Hungary (W) 41-15923

Picture-story book describing the adventures of two little Hungarian peasant children on a day's trip to the forest. They pick strawberries and mushrooms for Gizi's grandmother, have a picnic for themselves, and contemplate the joys of Easter and Christmas. For children of five.

"Two qualities make this one of the gayest, prettiest picture books of the year for little children: the natural charm of unspooled childhood, and the traditional folk-art of Hungary. . . . The story is not sentimental; there is too much food in it for that; Margery Bianco can speak like a little child; Gisella Loeffler's distinctive pictures have the spirit of little children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 2 '41 240w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:370 D '41 90w

"The continental and naive flavor is well maintained. If the black were warmer, the black and white pages would be more pleasing." Warren Chappell

+ — Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:459 N '41 70w

"It is the numerous illustrations which hold one's interest; very bright colors have been used or bold black and white drawings. The artist seems to use no plan in grouping the many details of the full-page pictures. This haphazard appearance adds to the gaiety of the book. There will be a difference of opinion regarding the book, I believe. The odd facial expressions, over-emphasized by slant eyes, give these fat doll-like children a strange, sly appearance." R. W. Stewart

Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:203 D '41

BIBLE. WHOLE. Bible for to-day; ed. by John Stirling; ill. by Rowland Hilder and other artists. 1255p maps $5 (21s) Oxford 220.52 41-19352

"[This work] is neither a new translation nor a volume of extracts; it is the time-honoured Authorized Version printed according to present-day requirements in respect of paragraphing, together with such other modern requirements as introduction, chapter headings, sectional headlines and notes. These are the work of Mr. John Stirling, the editor; and since illustrations have often accompanied Bibles in the past, this edition is also illustrated, again in a modern style by Mr. Rowland Hilder and other artists." Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is the purpose of this bold and brilliant book to present the spiritual discoveries of the Bible as 'news,' quite in line with the early Christians who called their message the 'good news.' Each book is preceded with a brief introduction, informed and intelligent, but chiefly concerned with the immediate bearing of the book on human life today. The longer books are interspersed with special introductions, skillfully designed to bring the deepest meaning of the section home to modern experience." E. J. Goodspeed

+ Books p4 Ja 25 '42 300w

"This really is exactly what it purports to be—a presentation of the Authorized Version, unabridged, in such a form as to heighten its appeal as living literature. . . . Except that it is, necessarily, a rather large book (1,255 pages) and not very light in the hand, this is a Bible superbly adapted to reading."

+ Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41 180w

"A picture of a girl in ski-ing kit to illustrate Corinthians, of a B.B.C. announcer to illustrate Job, of a broadcasting station as a general introduction to the Book of Revelations—this will give some idea of what the editor calls 'the news-message' he has found in the Bible. It is regrettable to see a book of this kind published by the Oxford University Press: the Oxford Group would have been a more appropriate parent."

— Spec 167:69 Jl 18 '41 340w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 220w

BIBLE. WHOLE.—Continued

"This may be truly called a suasive Bible; and it is no small thing to persuade men to read any long book of serious import. Mr. Stirling's achievement comes at an appropriate moment, when the unsatisfactory nature of much current Bible teaching is causing educational authorities to call for its radical reform. There should be nothing reactionary in any reform which is based on the classical view that the Scriptures were written 'for our learning,' and not for the gratification of our historical curiosity or our aesthetic tastes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p347 J1 19
'41 650w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. LATIN. Pages from the Gutenberg Bible of 42 lines. $3.50; to libs $2.85 Wilson, H.W.

655.125 Printing—History. Incunabula—Facsimiles. Gutenberg, Johann (W) 40-12911
Twenty-five facsimile pages reprinted from the copy of the Gutenberg Bible in the General Theological seminary, New York. They are published in commemoration of the five hundredth anniversary of the invention of printing from movable type. The introduction is by Otto W. Fuhrmann, of the division of graphic arts, New York university.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

"The heavy cream-white paper was produced as the nearest approach to the original handmade paper. Even the ink was chosen because of its similarity to that used by Gutenberg in the original book. The red and blue rubrications add a bit of charm to the extraordinarily attractive pages. . . Lovers of the Bible and students of the printing art as well will welcome this truly magnificent volume." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 17
'40 360w

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. GENESIS. In the beginning; being the first chapter of Genesis, from the King James version; with designs by James Daugherty. unp $2 Oxford 222.11

The first chapter of Genesis, printed in large type and illustrated with drawings and designs, for ages ten to twelve.

Books p8 N 2 '41 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:43 Ja '42 80w

"James Daugherty has truly caught a sense of the power, and some of the glory, of the creation in his vital drawings. The individual may not, according to his own thought and temperament, agree entirely with his choice of symbolism, but there is a progressive sense, from the first picture of a brooding Spirit clear through to the dateless interpretation of the Seventh Day, of order and life emerging from restless chaos." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 21 '41 160w

"Dignified and handsome." Amy Loveman
+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 30w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. The New Testament according to the Eastern text; tr. from original Aramaic sources by George M. Lamsa. 527p il maps $3 Holman

225.52 40-35455

"With the translation of Acts, the Epistles, and Revelation, Dr. Lamsa completes in this volume his translation of the New Testament. As the translation is made from a very early Aramaic text, a rare Bible, and early manuscripts in Dr. Lamsa's hands, it should present a version of the Scriptures through which breathes the spirit of early Christianity." Christian Science Monitor

"Lamsa asserts that the ancient Syriac version, the Peshitta, which has been in constant use in certain Eastern churches all along and has been known to Western scholars ever since there were any, is actually that 'original Aramaic' of which the Greek New Testament is a mere translation. Practically the whole weight of New Testament scholarship is against him. In any case, it is interesting and useful to have an English translation of the Peshitta, by one whose native language is Aramaic."

Christian Century 57:1617 D 25 '40
180w

"The reader of this book is impressed with the simplicity of the language, its directness and strength. It clarifies many passages which in the Authorized version seem somewhat obscure, if not incomprehensible. . . It is a version that one reads with ease, and upon many passages a new light is shed, the light of clarification. It seems assured that this notable work will add to the eminence already gained by the author as skilled both in the Semitic languages and with rare knowledge of the customs, habits, and speech of these Eastern races." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 8 '41
460w

"Mr Lamsa's translation of the New Testament from his native tongue is enlightening and, according to his introductory apologetic, his translation is authentic as to usages and as to sources." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:20 Ja 15 '41 100w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. The New Testament in basic English [ed. by S. H. Hooke]. 548p $2 Dutton [8s 6d; 3s 6d Cambridge]

225.5 Bible. New Testament—Texts. Basic English—Texts (W) 41-12428

"Fresh translation from the original sources in a selected vocabulary of less than a thousand words, the fruit of ten years' work by a group of English churchmen, Biblical experts, and Cambridge scholars. . . The verses are numbered, and the book is well printed and bound." New Yorker

Booklist 38:3 S '41

Bookmark 2:5 N '41

Reviewed by E. J. Goodspeed
Books p4 Ja 25 '42 700w

"Putting the New Testament into a vocabulary of 900 words, not counting proper names, requires a severe effort of simplification. The work was done by competent biblical scholars, but the 'Basic' version reads like a paraphrase of the King James, and in many passages it is no improvement in clarity or in accuracy. . . This reviewer cannot profess to have found much joy in reading the 'Basic' version, other than the satisfaction of a curious interest to see how so much could be said with so few words."

Christian Century 58:1241 O 8 '41 360w

"No one can doubt the aid of this simplified version to those to whom English is a foreign language, and to those who have but limited education. . . It is true that this version lacks somewhat in the stately and rhythmical language of the King James Version. Beauty and stateliness are sacrificed to direct and simplified expression; and while this form of expression of the Scriptures has many advantages, yet it will scarcely replace the Authorized Version. This version in Basic English, however, has strength, simplicity, and directness that cannot fail to make a deep impression." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 30
'41 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"The translation is dignified and far from being 'pigeon English.' Occasionally, apparently for no sufficient reason, the order of parallel clauses is altered, but on the whole the Greek is as faithfully rendered as the limited vocabulary allows. Undoubtedly many will find that the use of different words and the translation of ideas as well as of words cause them to pay new attention to pages too frequently scanned by the eye but not by the mind." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 18:339 O '41 800w

"Professor Hooke's academic background, research ability, and long experience in interpreting the Bible to formal and informal student groups especially qualified him for directing this translation. His colleagues are outstanding Biblical and literary scholars." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 66:613 J1 '41 140w

"Every reader of this review may well be recommended to purchase this New Testament in Basic English. Its simplicity, which goes down to the bare bones of meaning, makes it a useful and almost a necessary companion to the riches and the complexities of the great orchestra of the Authorised Version." Ernest Barker

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 6 '41 500w

"I am not now concerned with the value of Basic English apart from literature, but who can need to read in Basic the Bible, which has been translated into the remotest dialects? Literature is not a series of statements, but a method of suggesting to the imagination more than can be made clear to the understanding. By the poverty of its vocabulary, and still more by the ineptness with which it is used, Basic English has turned the New Testament into something which has not even the value attaching to a lucid exposition of fact. One can only wonder what further havoc its sponsors are planning." Hugh Kingsmill

— New Statesman & Nation 21:658 Je 28 '41 700w

"In spite of [certain] limitations, this Basic English version has surprising rhythm, beauty and richness of color. Of course it can never approach, far less replace, the King James translation; nevertheless, it has the dignity that comes from simple directness and it marches with an unhalting flow and a lack of impoverishment truly remarkable, under the circumstances. It will be a boon for children and foreigners." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 10 '41 420w

"Fluent, exact, modern prose, often clearer than the previous renderings, though it lacks much of the poetic and emotional charge of the King James Bible."

+ New Yorker 17:56 J1 19 '41 50w

"I am not converted to the idea of basic English, but this volume seems to me to be a wonderfully good rendering. It is scholarly, and musical. Naturally, there are many places where I should enjoy a discussion with the editors, especially with Professor Hooke, with whom I think I had some dealings some thirty years ago. But in general I like the translation." Kirsopp Lake

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 30 '41 600w

School & Society 54:112 Ag 16 '41 100w

"With all respect to a valiant struggle and ingenious tour de force, it is apparent that a thousand words is not enough. Lack of the right word leads to lengthy circumlocutions. . . Still, there seems no reason why this translation should not be liked by many. Its pocket edition is very handy." Rose Macaulay

— + Spec 166:504 My 9 '41 850w

"Altogether, as one contemplates this basic English version of the New Testament, it would appear to deserve honorable place in the religious literature of today. Parents will welcome it to put into the hands of their young people. And some persons who have never been interested in the Bible may find here that the Bible is a readable book." F. T. Steele

+ Spring'd Republican p7e J1 20 '41 900w

"Praise must be given, in the first place, to the print, paper and get-up generally of this volume: they are excellent; and praise must be given also to those who have been responsible for the text. . . Passage after passage reads with an astonishing freshness and dignity, but not everything can be satisfactory when the vocabulary is so strictly limited."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p243 My 17 '41 110w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. GOSPELS.

Christ Jesus; the authentic story of the founder of Christianity as told by Matthew, Mark, Luke and John in the four Gospels; tr. from the original Greek by John A. Dakes. 320p $2.50 Avalon pub. co, 8101 Woodlawn av, Chicago, Ill.

226 Jesus Christ

41-3980

"The translator of this version of the Four Gospels is a Greek, a native of the Island of Crete, where he grew up with the Greek language and had membership in the Greek Orthodox Church. So intense became his love for the New Testament that, after coming to America, he determined to translate the Greek manuscripts into English. Strong in the conviction that Greek was the original language of the Gospels, he believed that a translation by a Greek would shed a new light upon the most precious of all lives." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 80w

"Mr. Dakes has rendered a true service in his clear rendition of the Gospels and in the valuable historical chapters which accompany the translation." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 21 '41 700w

BIDDLE, MARGARET (THOMPSON) SCHULZE (MRS ANTHONY JOSEPH DREXEL BIDDLE, jr). Women of England. 99p il $1.75 Houghton

940.5315396 World war, 1939—Women's work, Women in Great Britain 41-19212

An account of what the women in various British wartime organizations are doing: women of the W.R.N.S. (Women's Royal Naval Service), W.A.A.F. (Women's Auxiliary Air Force), F.A.N.Y. (Field Auxiliary Nursing Yeomanry), etc. as well as women in factories, in the land army, as cooks, and as air wardens and canteen workers. The author is the wife of the American minister to Poland, now stationed in London.

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

"Apart from the information value of the book, it is also written with great charm and directness. The personalities, all nameless, that appear briefly are living people. And in the last chapter Mrs. Biddle suddenly breaks away from the plain statement of facts and blazes into a moving staccato impression of what all these women are doing all over London on the night of a big blitz." Diana Forbes-Robertson

+ Books p10 Ja 11 '42 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 27 '41 130w

"The book has a chart of women's war work as frontispiece and is illustrated with informative photographs. Its clear facts make it valuable as enlightenment and suggestive as a possible handbook."

+ N Y Times p8 D 7 '41 290w

BIDWELL, PERCY WELLS. Economic defense of Latin America. (America looks ahead) 96p 50c; pa 25c World peace

330.98 Latin America—Commerce, U.S.—Economic policy, World war, 1939—Economic aspects, Germany—Commerce—Latin America 41-10351

Short survey of the economic relations between the United States, Europe, and Latin America. Discusses the problem of what this country should do to counteract German infiltration, and the weapons of economic defense which we should use. Selected bibliography.

BIDWELL, P. W. —Continued

Reviewed by P. S. Peirce

Ann Am Acad 218:196 N '41 600w

"A clear, concise survey," F. H. U.

+ Canadian Forum 21:157 Ag '41 280w

"Long books are not necessarily good books, nor is brevity always a virtue, but small books can be mighty. Witness 'Economic Defense of Latin America,' by Percy W. Bidwell. In this compact volume, just 96 pages, Mr. Bidwell not only sifts out the few great essentials governing the economics of hemisphere defense, but documents them concisely and convincingly." R. H. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 16 '41 210w

Living Age 360:499 Jl '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 5 '42 220w

BIEGELEISEN, JACOB ISRAEL, and BUSENBARK, E. J. The silk screen printing process. 2d ed 225p il $2.75 McGraw

655.32 Silk screen printing (W) 41-51590

"The original material [Book Review Digest, 1938] remains unchanged, but there are new chapters on estimating, shop management, and technical developments." (Booklist) Indexes.

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41

School Arts 40:8a Je '41 110w

BILLANY, DAN. It takes a thief [Eng title: The opera house murders]. 323p $2 Harper [7s 6d Faber]

41-4370

Detective story.

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 Ap 6 '41 120w

"A brilliant ex-convict detective circumvents one of the most ruthless gangs in fiction. Gory murders and a terrific amount of punishment given and taken by both sides." M. E. P.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 40w

"An English version of the tough American style, with plenty of bashing, shooting and unscrupulous violence. Mr. Billany writes jerky, spirited prose, and tries his best to pretend that the English countryside and the English temperament lend themselves to criminal gangs who torture their victims with glowing cigarettes. But he does not neglect the detective side of his plot, and his master villain is as competently concealed until the last chapter as master villains can be." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:337 O 5 '40 50w

"Murders and murderous assaults come thick and fast, and none of the gory details are omitted. Except for those who enjoy homicide for its own sake and in its most revolting forms, there is not much merit in the book. Duncan, for all his sordid outlook, is a clever detective, but Scotland Yard's representative is incredibly stupid." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '41 140w

"Goriest item of year so far, with criminals who stop at nothing, numerous epic combats, plausible detective, and exceptionally good finish. Eminent."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:36 Ap 5 '41 40w

"There is more to this novel than the rough stuff: the dialogue has a certain zip, and the thrills avoid monotony." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 165:322 S 27 '40 50w

"The morals of the hero alone are worth the money. Was there ever a more unblushingly crooked detective?"

Times [London] Lit Sup p440 S 7 '40 160w

BILLETT, ROY OREN. Fundamentals of secondary-school teaching; with emphasis on the unit method. 671p il $2.90 Houghton

373 Teaching. Education, Secondary 40-32748

"This volume is concerned with the development of a general method of teaching at the secondary-school level. It discusses: (1) outstanding characteristics of the American secondary school; (2) human nature, including how human beings learn; (3) salient features of the social order in which the individual is expected to participate intelligently and in socially acceptable ways; (4) present practices of teachers in each of the major subject-matter fields; (5) what educationists specializing in one or another of the major subject-matter fields have advocated to improve practice in the fields of their specialties; (6) outstanding general methods of teaching which have been proposed and used more or less widely during the past 40 years." (School & Society) Indexes.

School & Society 52:240 S 21 '40 80w

Reviewed by C. C. Crawford

School & Society 53:61 Ja 11 '41 320w

"The excellent but necessarily condensed account of unit organization and teaching procedure which Professor Billett contributed nine years ago to the National Survey of Secondary Education under the title Provisions for Individual Differences, Marking, and Promotion has at last been expanded into a large and well-packed book. When a man has thought his way through the confusion which we call secondary education as systematically and as completely as this author has, he cannot be expected to tell about it in a vest-pocket edition. The style might have been racier, but the course to be run was bound to be a long one anyway." M. H. Willing

+ School R 49:390 My '41 800w

"Fundamentals of Secondary School Teaching will be of real value to teachers-in-service. As a textbook it is better adapted to advanced students. Its apparent love for detail, frequent page-long paragraphs, and mere size are likely to detract from its effectiveness for use by undergraduate students. The thinking is forward-looking. Constant reference to basic educational generalizations makes it particularly valuable in the development of a sound philosophy of secondary education and an understanding of what and how to teach in secondary schools." W. L. Wrinkle

+ Social Educ 5:630 D '41 750w

BINDRUM, ELSIE. The ant and the grasshopper sail away; il. by [the author]. [47p] $1 Lothrop

41-5702

The adventures of a red ant and a grasshopper on a small homemade boat. They sailed thru great dangers to the city, but found it no place for them, and they went back home as quickly as possible.

"Miss Bindrum is an excellent artist but a little too impersonal for children." E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:371 D '41 40w

"Unnatural history for the very young, with a sound enough moral." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 70w

BINGHAM, WALTER VAN DYKE, and MOORE, BRUCE VICTOR. How to interview. 3d rev ed 263p $3 Harper

150.13 Interviewing (W) 41-51917

"Sections on public opinion polls and on oral examining in civil service agencies have been added, and there are other slight changes in the material of the second edition." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1934.

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

"To those who have not studied 'How to Interview' in any of its editions, this book will prove an outstanding contribution in explaining the fine points of interviewing. It is the only available text which so completely covers the subject of the interview. . . . Those who are familiar with previous editions of 'How to Interview' are likely to be disappointed in this revision if they are looking for additional information. While it describes a few outstanding recent advancements, it does not indicate that there have been many significant developments in interviewing technique." E. F. Wonderlic

+ — Management R 30:430 N '41 360w
Survey 78:32 Ja '42 80w

BINING, ARTHUR CECIL; MOHR, WALTER HARRISON, and MCFEELY, RICHARD H. Organizing the social studies in secondary schools. 337p $2.75 McGraw

307.12 Social sciences—Study and teaching 41-12852

"This volume has been written for the express purpose of helping teachers—both those in training and those in service—to understand the underlying theories and principles for organizing the social studies on the secondary-school level. The problems of effective organization are first discussed in general terms and then in detail with particular reference to each traditional field. The objectives, content, materials, activities, procedures, and the desirability of a broad program of evaluating the outcomes of each subject are given special consideration. A survey and appraisal of such movements as correlation, fusion, and integration are also presented. These procedures and curriculum changes are shown in actual practice as they are being worked out in state-wide social-studies programs, as well as in specific school systems and in individual schools." (Pref) Index.

School & Society 54:48 J1 19 '41 30w

Reviewed by K. J. Rehage

School R 49:794 D '41 900w

"At a time when the whole curriculum is still in a state of chaos and reorganization, it is helpful to have a volume of this sort which analyzes trends, indicates accepted objectives for social studies courses, and studies the theories and principles underlying current trends." B. W. Phillips

+ Social Educ 6:51 Ja '42 750w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 30w

"This . . . is a sane, balanced, straightforward, and rather simplified presentation of the latest theories and practices in planning the social studies curriculum in secondary schools." N. D. Palmer

+ Social Studies 32:374 D '41 480w

BINNS, ARCHIE. Northwest gateway; the story of the port of Seattle. (Seaport ser) 313p il $3 Doubleday

979.7 Seattle, Washington (W) 41-10345

"How the ninety-year-old port of Seattle was born and raised, to the accompaniment of Indian fighting, railroad trouble, anti-Chinese agitation, the Yukon gold-rush boom, and other matters." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 38:7 S '41

"Mr. Binns' writing is always easy to take. A native of Puget Sound, he has a feeling for the place and he is never better than when discussing its waters and the ships which ply them. My one quarrel with the book is with its proportions—the first 270 pages bring the reader only to the fire of 1889, and a scant thirty-four pages are left to relate the roaring days of the gold rush and the far from sedate period since then—fifty-odd years in all. . . . Eleven illustrations and an index complete a book I read at one sitting with great enjoyment." S. H. Holbrook

+ — Books p3 J1 6 '41 950w

"By eastern standards, the history of Seattle is amazingly short, but its years have been full of action. Mr. Binns writes deftly, sympathetically, brightly of the city's growing pains. . . . Mr. Binns recaptures in his book something of the vision of Seattle, past and present." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 20 '41 440w

Commonweal 34:522 S 19 '41 210w

"Although this biography of a thoroughly American city has at times the quality of a dream, Binns' style keeps the narrative simple and vigorous, with commendable economy of irrelevant detail. Recommended for general library purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 100w

"The third volume in the Seaport Series does not possess the intrinsic fascination of its predecessor on San Francisco. Mr. Binns tells the story well, however."

+ — Nation 153:40 J1 12 '41 50w

"The best written and least informative volume of the Seaport Series. The chapters on early Seattle are excellent, especially those dealing with Indian troubles (no one has written more sensibly and sympathetically about the Indian than Mr. Binns). But the modern industrial Seattle with its vast commerce and its serious labor problems is unaccountably ignored."

+ — New Repub 105:286 S 1 '41 70w

"The story of Seattle is picturesque, with some rude episodes, some dramatic moments, many ironies and a good deal of humor. It was a late bit of pioneering, and correspondingly rapid. Mr. Binns has done an excellent job with it. In fact, it is this reviewer's impression that he has written as good a book about a city as has appeared since Henry Justin Smith let down Chicago's hair ten years ago. He is not patronizing or cheaply witty at the expense of dead people. He is realistic and convincing, aware of the fact that there are all kinds of details that count in a city's as in a person's biography." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 J1 6 '41 1000w

"Vivid storytelling, heightened by the author's intelligent eye for character and drama."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 21 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 J1 '41

BINYON, LAURENCE. North star, and other poems. 61p $1.25 (4s) Macmillan

821

[A41-3389]

"This volume contains poems written since the author's Collected Poems were published in 1931 (together with a few lyrics of slightly earlier date). The most recent group of poems is concerned with the war or conceived in the atmosphere of waiting before it broke out. Another group consists of poems inspired by experiences of travel in the Far East and in the Mediterranean. . . . The rest of the poems are lyrics chiefly of the English countryside and of the English inheritance." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 20 '41 320w

"Like his collected poems of ten years ago — 'The North Star' is the first volume of poetry from Mr. Binyon since then—the new poems show him standing well in the English tradition of Wordsworth and Arnold." C. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 5 '41 190w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

N Y Times p1 D 21 '41 360w

Reviewed by Kathleen Raine

Spec 167:268 S 12 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 31 '41 550w

BIRD, ZENOBIA. Muffy; the tale of a muskrat;
il. by Kurt Wiese. 48p $1.25 Whitman, A.
41-9384

Muffy was a baby muskrat, rescued after a flood, and kept as a pet by small Jean. Readers of eight to ten will learn about the habits and customs of muskrats from this story.

"The writing lacks distinction, except where Muffy is concerned. The conversation is stilted and none of the human characters stand out. However, the adventures and adjustments of the little muskrat make interesting reading, and the book will have appeal for children from eight to ten who like animals." E. G. Mullan

— + Library J 66:619 J1 '41 60w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 80w

BIRDSALL, PAUL. Versailles twenty years after. 350p $3; college ed $2.25 Reynal 940.3141 Versailles, Treaty of, 1919. Wilson.
Woodrow. World politics (W) 41-51558

Paul Birdsall, professor of history at Williams College, analyzes and interprets the diplomatic factors which shaped the general character of the Treaty of Versailles. He describes his book as "an appraisal of the forces, personal and political, which determined the outcome of the struggle between Wilsonian principles of a new world order and the principles of reactionary nationalism." Professor Birdsall strongly defends the Wilsonian principles and criticizes the reactionaries—American, French, Japanese, Italian, English and Australian—who fought against a reasonable peace treaty. Bibliography. Index.

"Birdsall's comprehensive discussion of the diplomacy of Versailles will prove an indispensable and valuable guide to every student of post-World War history. Whether his account of Wilson's heroic one-man struggle will encourage further attempts at a 'new diplomacy' based on universal moral principles that brook no compromise, history alone will tell." Arnold Wolfers

+ Am Hist R 47:305 Ja '42 800w

"The interpretation of the conflicts of claims and attitudes at Versailles which forms the kernel of the book is masterly. It is regrettable that the title of the volume seems to stress the somewhat less impressive reflections of the author on the later fortunes of the peace treaty. These reflections are not supported by any concrete examination of European history since 1920, and do not always rise above the commonplace. For instance, the contention that Germany could have been really appeased by timely economic concessions before Hitler took power is merely a repetition of a widespread but unsubstantiated notion." O. J. Lisitzyn

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:993 O '41 1050w

"The book is penetrating, stimulating, and sound; and it meets an urgent and present need." J. K. Pollock

+ Ann Am Acad 216:187 J1 '41 320w

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:8 My '41

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p5 F 16 '41 1000w

Cath World 153:638 Ag '41 270w

"This is an extremely valuable book just now. I can think of any number of Americans who ought to read it, including the members of the United States Senate. But it may be recommended particularly to those who do not understand why crusades in the name of righteousness don't necessarily lead to a righteous peace." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 58:321 Mr 5 '41 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:870 J1 '41 70w

"The book is excellent in conception and execution. If the definitive study on Versailles cannot be written until Colonel House's unpublished diary is made available to historians, nevertheless Professor Birdsall's Versailles Twenty Years After belongs in the library of everyone concerned in the peace to come." L. M.

+ Living Age 360:95 Mr '41 750w

"A well-documented and readable history of the Versailles negotiations. This excellent volume attempts a reappraisal of the forces which shaped the peace treaty." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 152:383 Mr 29 '41 360w

"On matters other than victories, defeats and draws, Mr. Birdsall frequently writes suggestively and sometimes incompletely and unconvincingly. He gives a more detailed account of what may have been behind the Wilson-House 'Break' than I have seen elsewhere and thinks that differences on principle may have been more decisive than pettiness on the one side and vanity on the other." Lindsay Rogers

+ New Repub 104:508 Ap 14 '41 900w

"Professor Birdsall's excellent book is, in its fundamental character, at once a historical study and a polemic. In both its phases it is absolutely first-rate. . . . The case for Wilson has never been better put and it is up to a Wilson opponent to make as weighty an answer." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 26 '41 1600w

New Yorker 16:66 F 8 '41 50w

Reviewed by René Albrecht-Carrié
Pol Sci Q 56:297 Je '41 850w

"Paul Birdsall's study of the Treaty of Versailles and its alternatives is a fascinating dramatic story of the complexity of issues involved and presents a lively picture not only of the lawless jungle of power politics and its intrigues, but also of national ambitions and diplomatic strategy. . . . The central figure of this clearly and sanely written book is Woodrow Wilson." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 F 1 '41 650w

"Prof Birdsall's book, which contains some new data, is obviously of interest to all students of the Versailles treaty." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 15 '41 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

Reviewed by S. F. Bemis

Yale R n s 30:612 spring '41 750w

BIRKLEY, DOLAN. The blue geranium. 310p
$2 Simon & Schuster

41-1970

Detective story.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

"This is lively and easy to read, with some lovely weather in it." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 F 16 '41 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 40w

"The Blue Geranium' is sufficiently gory and exciting to satisfy the most exacting seeker after thrills." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 F 23 '41 200w

"Smooth reading and big print, with the motives and alibis rather clearer than is usual in mysteries."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 40w

"Good melodrama."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 200w

BIRNEY, HOFFMAN. Ann Carmeny. 423p $2.50
Putnam

(W) 41-8918

Romantic tale of the American southwest in the 1860's. Ann Carmeny, on her way to California by wagon train, is left alone when her father dies at Salt Lake City. Mormon robbers, who are terrorizing California bound passengers, discover that Ann's father has left her $15,000 in gold. Only the intervention of a famous gambler saves Ann, and out of gratitude she marries him.

Booklist 37:515 J1 1 '41

"Hoffman Birney has taken the familiar ingredients of an oldtime formula—technically known as 'the Western'—and breathed life into it in a novel that does not miss a trick and is as wild and woolly as they come, but which, coming from an authority, is probably, also, as authentic as the tales from the historical and saga and epic-of-the-soil schools of fiction." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 J1 6 '41 700w

"Readable-adventure—better than the average thriller." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 70w

Nation 153:58 J1 19 '41 20w

"Not for a long time—not, perhaps, since Stewart Edward White concluded his series of novels about Andy Burnett—has any one turned out a more readable or more truthfully flavored novel about the American frontier. It is not easy to say why 'Ann Carmeny' scores over a host of other frontier novels, many of them conceived on a more elevated—or, perhaps, simply a more grandiose—scale. But Hoffman Birney convinces us, just as Stewart Edward White did, that he knows what he is talking about." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:78 Je 21 '41 60w

BISHOP, CARLTON THOMAS. Structural drafting. 287p il $3.50 Wiley

744 Structural drawing (W) 41-5583

"A companion volume to Structural Design [Book Review Digest, 1938] and like that, based on a 1920 book, Structural Drafting and [the] Design of Details, [Book Review Digest, 1920]. The author states that this textbook is entirely rewritten." (Booklist) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

Eng N 126:80 Je 19 '41 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:40 J1 '41

BISHOP, MRS. CLAIRE HUCHET, and WIESE, KURT. The ferryman. [64p] il $1.50 Coward-Cann

(W) 41-24254

Illustrated story for young readers, describing the adventures of the clever ferryman who outwitted the devil three times, and won his own freedom.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"Claire Huchet Bishop has a gift for discovering, inventing, or in some way providing folk tales of unusual snap and sparkle—such as her 'Five Chinese Brothers.' The present offering may go even further, for it starts children at a game with endless possible variations." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 2 '41 240w

"Excellent." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:30 Ja '42 70w

Reviewed by Marguerite Nahigian

Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 100w

"A high-spirited tale in which the fun rises steadily to a hilarious climax that children find immensely amusing and satisfying." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 14 '41 180w

"The author and artist who collaborated to make 'The Five Chinese Brothers' have done another merry picture book in much the same vein. . . . It is always a pleasure to see the Devil routed, especially with so little terror and so much humor as here."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 70w

BISHOP, JOHN PEALE. Selected poems. 99p $2 Scribner

811

41-5729

Presents the best of this American poet's published work, as well as a few poems which have not been printed before.

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:7 My '41

"John Peale Bishop has found much of what he set out to find, a poetry of great range, often beautiful, always distinguished. And in the consciousness of its intention, it has found a firm but ever-expanding basis from which to grow." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ Books p4 Ap 13 '41 600w

"Mr. Bishop's work has everything that taste, finish, and conscience can give it; it has what Mr. Tate has called 'a settled view of the nature of man which is essentially religious and committed to the belief that poetry must look at man under the head of eternity.' The virtues of that view are intelligence, seriousness, and a severe self-respect, but there can be no question about what keeps it from achieving a fully created and impassioned art. The poems that show the greatest delicacy and control of medium here are those that express most pointedly the subtle poise and aristocracy of Mr. Bishop's intelligence." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 152:447 Ap 12 '41 900w

"Mr. Bishop is a fastidious writer, with a nice sense of form, when he doesn't violate it out of a feeling of obligation to modernity; he uses many colors and styles equally well; it is hard therefore to say just why one doesn't like his poems better. They are very good, and yet they seem somehow a shade voulu, and, though pleasing in the item, to lack that vague thing we call character, the identifying voice." Conrad Aiken

+ — New Repub 104:831 Je 16 '41 160w

"The 'Selected Poems' of John Peale Bishop is one of the really good books of contemporary American verse. It has unusual variety and versatility, it is virtuoso in the way that it uses almost every style and form that has been invented, and still it is perfectly self-sufficient." F. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '42 550w

"Mr. Bishop is a technician of the first order and is incapable of falling into any kind of mawkishness or sentimentality. The poem which opens the book, 'Speaking of Poetry,' is one of the most exquisite and imaginative expositions of poetry's task and position ever formulated. Bishop's taste and feeling are always unimpeachable; he appeals, as his publisher says, at once to the senses and the intellect. . . . His one drawback is that his tone never varies. It approximates at times the stiffness of a code of manners which it would be unthinkable to break." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 17:57 Mr 1 '41 200w

Reviewed by Thomas Howells

Poetry 58:96 My '41 1000w

"One cannot, within the compass of a brief notice, do justice to these poems. They demand the careful, line-by-line analysis that is Richard Blackmur's method. To generalize about them, as one profitably may about much competent verse, would be almost meaningless; its only possible use might be to call them to the attention of readers of poetry who do not know John Bishop's work. Nearly all the poems in this book seem to me to be successful, and many of them are as brilliant as anything in contemporary writing." Dudley Fitts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ap 26 '41 400w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman

Spring'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 330w

Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

Reviewed by J. L. Sweeney

Yale R n s 30:819 summer '41 350w

BITTLE, CELESTINE NICHOLAS CHARLES. From aether to cosmos; cosmology. 498p $4 Bruce pub.

113 Cosmology. Physics—Philosophy. Aristotile 41-4436

"Professor Bittle here presents a scholastic treatise on cosmology. The second, third, and fourth parts deal philosophically with bodies in respect of their general qualities, their essences, and their concatenation in the universe. The first part, comprising a quarter of the book, gives a summary of relevant material from physics and chemistry and does this without philosophic or sectarian bias." Ethics

"The book is a text for classroom use and may be recommended as a model of its kind, having exceptionally lucid exposition." C. A. Berndtson

+ Ethics 51:498 JI '41 70w

"On the whole perhaps it is accurate to say that Father Bittle is as liberal intellectually as it is possible to be for one who must satisfy the imprimatur his book bears." J. B.

J Philos 38:362 Je 19 '41 240w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:39 JI '41

BLACK, ADAM and CHARLES, publishers. See R.A.F. in action

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON. The adventures of Dudley and Gilderoy. See Cothren, M.

BLACKWOOD, ANDREW WATTERSON. Preaching from the Bible. 247p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

251 Preaching 41-2887

"This is a book designed for beginners—an elementary textbook in homiletics—but more experienced preachers will find it interesting and often helpful. Some of the chapter titles will indicate the contents of the book: 'The Biographical Sermon,' 'The Preaching Paragraph,' 'The Chapter Sermon,' 'The Book Sermon.' The method of presenting these and other methods of using the Bible is by giving copious illustrations, presumably from sermons the author has preached or has heard." (Christian Century) Indexes.

"Countless sermon ideas are suggested in the course of the volume. Preachers who are looking for such ideas will find in this book a gold mine. It has less to offer more independent and original preachers. The major criticism I would make of the book is that it fails to deal with any of the fundamental questions involved in the use of the Bible in preaching—or, at any rate, to deal with them in any fundamental way... It does well what it undertakes to do but, in my judgment, it does not undertake enough." John Knox

+ Christian Century 58:322 Mr 5 '41 300w

"The reader strikes ore in the third chapter of this book. For the young minister it is a rich vein in its suggestiveness as to texts, subjects and treatment. For the older preacher, it suggests new modes of attack and the richness of Bible stories which have grown hackneyed through the obvious treatment." G. F. T.

+ Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 70w

BLAIN, WILLIAM. Home is the sailor; the sea life of William Brown, master mariner and Penang pilot; foreword by Shalimar. 253p maps $2.75 Sheridan [12s 6d Hurst]

910.4 Brown, William. Seafaring life [40-10953]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

"'Home Is the Sailor' is a well-nigh perfect sea biography. It covers a unique scene and era and presents a true cross-section of a modern seaman's life. All the people in it are real and the man whose tale is told is even more real." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p5 F 23 '41 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '41 470w

BLAISDELL, DONALD CHRISTY. Government and agriculture; the growth of federal farm aid. 217p $1.50; textbook ed $1 Farrar

630.973 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Agricultural administration—U.S. 40-34406

"After two brief chapters which show the Department of Agriculture as a seventy-year growth, slow growth, in response to simpler needs, the book takes up Agricultural Adjustment, Soil Conservation, Farm Security, and other expanding and whirling experiments in 'economic democracy' set going since 1933. The author's approach is strikingly expressed in the last sentence of his two-page preface: 'The growth of federal farm aid, the reasons underlying it, and the long steps which have been taken to harmonize technology with democratic institutions, hold lessons of value.'" (Survey) Selected bibliography. Index.

"The principal merit of the volume is that it brings within reasonable compass a description of all the federal agricultural programs, and makes this well-written description available at a surprisingly low price." J. W. Fesler

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:375 Ap '41 380w

"Mr. Blaisdell [tells the story] competently and thoroughly. He speaks with the familiarity of one who has been, not merely in the audience, but has had an important role on the stage (Administrative Assistant to the Under-Secretary of Agriculture). If one feels that he is too New Dealish and neglects to be objectively critical, possibly that adds to the flavor of the writing." Bernard Ostrolenk

+ Ann Am Acad 214:240 Mr '41 440w

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:877 JI '41 20w

"Government and Agriculture is well worth while, and I think a valuable contribution to the cause of American agriculture. It is doubtless worthy of more readers and much more careful reading than it is likely to get in our present war-fevered state—and it begins to look as if we will run that fever for some time to come." Arthur Capper

+ Harvard Law R 54:899 Mr '41 1500w

Reviewed by C. T. Schmidt
Pol Sci Q 56:475 S '41 210w

Reviewed by Russell Lord
Sat R of Lit 23:14 F 8 '41 490w

Reviewed by E. De S. Brunner, Jr.
Social Educ 5:316 Ap '41 1700w

"This is ... a good job of study and writing: concise, candid, stimulating." Russell Lord + Survey 77:70 F '41 380w

BLAKE, NICHOLAS, pseud. See Day-Lewis, C.

BLAKE, WILLIAM, 1757-1827. Complete poetry. See Donne, J. Complete poetry and selected prose of John Donne; and The complete poetry of Blake

BLAKE, WILLIAM J., pseud. See Blech, W. J.

BLAKELY, PAUL LENDRUM. Then Jesus said; simple reflections on the Sunday and feast day Gospels; second series. 140p $1.50 America press

242 Church year—Meditations 40-35358

"In many churches the number of Masses and Communions and an avalanche of announcements reduce to a minimum the time available for the sermon. To recommend solving this problem with a five-minute sermon in which the preacher chooses one point, explains it clearly, and shows how it can be applied to the lives of the hearers, is to recommend a counsel of perfection. For several years, America has printed each week the digest of a sermon meeting these requirements. The publication in book form of seventy of them, covering the Sundays and principal feasts of the year, reveals that Father Blakely is their author." America

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan
America 64:555 F 22 '41 300w
Christian Century 57:1618 D 25 '40 20w

BLAKESLEE, VICTOR FRANKLIN. Fighting ships of the U.S.A.; il. by Charles Rosner; with an introduction by William V. Pratt. 76p $1 Random house

359 U.S.—Navy. Warships (W) 41-21304
Description of life in the United States navy, and its ships and auxiliaries. Includes material on different types of ships and navy planes. Partial contents: The United States fleet; The backbone of the fleet; Navy wings; Smaller fighting craft; The navy life; The making of officers; The marines and the coast guard; Our merchant marine; Building a ship of the line. For young readers.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 28 '41 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 20w

"This informing book on the United States Navy, written by a naval lieutenant, will thrill the younger boys and answer many a question about the equipment of the Navy. . . The pictures are full of action, a little over-done in some instances, but colorful; and since they were done with the advice of a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve, presumably they are accurate in detail." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 140w

BLANKERTZ, DONALD FREDERIC. Marketing cooperatives. 488p il $4 Ronald 334.5 Cooperation. Marketing 40-35651

"A detailed description of different forms of cooperative organizations, including consumer farmers' cooperatives, credit unions, mutual insurance companies, housing societies and college cooperatives." Am Econ R

Am Econ R 30:911 D '40 20w

"The striking contrast between contents and title is indicative of the lack of unity that marks many sections of this book. . . Such treatment leads to confusion in the minds of students. . . The factual material has been edited and condensed from governmental, cooperative, and private sources. While adding little material that is not already available, these parts of the book should adequately meet student needs. . . A careful examination of the bibliography indicates that a number of books in the field are not included." A. E. Albrecht
— + Ann Am Acad 214:260 Mr '41 400w

BLANTON, SMILEY, and PEALE, NORMAN VINCENT. Faith is the answer; a psychiatrist and a pastor discuss your problems. 223p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

201 Psychology, Religious. Psychoanalysis 41-619

Personal problems discussed from two angles: that of the psychiatrist and of the pastor. Partial contents: The hidden energies of the mind; Fear, worry, and anxiety; Conscience and the sense of guilt; Self-criticism, failure, and success; Grief and sorrow; The company of the lonely. Dr Blanton is the psychiatrist; Norman Vincent Peale is pastor of the Marble Collegiate church in New York city.

Christian Century 58:26 Ja 1 '41 50w

"This seems to the reviewer to be the very best of all the recent books which attempt to bring psychiatry and religion together in meeting human problems." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 155:17 F 15 '41 250w

Pratt p21 D '41

BLECH, WILLIAM JAMES (WILLIAM J. BLAKE, pseud). The Copperheads. 741p $3 Dial press

41-24074

Long novel of the Civil war. The bulk of the action takes place during the years 1860 to 1865, but a brief epilog brings the story up to 1900. The scene for the most part is laid in New York city. Maria Meinhardt, daughter of a German immigrant is the heroine, and the three men who love her are Frank Doughty, a Union soldier; Jurgen Van Rensselaer, a wealthy financier and Copperhead, and Karl von der Weyde, a German socialist.

"Garbled, careless in diction and full of curious and annoying infelicities. The subject is a big and important one, and Mr. Blake is full of it. Any reader will find the work informative." F. T. Marsh

— + Books p20 D 7 '41 800w

"The thoroughness with which the novelist has treated his subject is one of the most remarkable things about this remarkable book, whose sheer exuberance, once the reader is launched upon the stream, takes him willy-nilly until he lands breathless in the post-bellum period. . . It is, perhaps, not too much to say that this novel contains enough material for three novels, and, in this reviewer's opinion, it possibly would have been more satisfactory as three than as one. . . The atmosphere of New York City during the Civil War is impressively re-created. Particularly impressive are the scenes descriptive of the draft riots. . . This narrative is uneven in quality, yet it has a comprehensiveness and a sweep that bear the unmistakable stamp of power; and in no small measure it should help us to understand the temper of our own time." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p6 N 16 '41 800w

"A sort of Jacobinical secret history of the Civil War cast in the most outlandish fictional form you can conceive. Mr. Blake is an original historian with a viewpoint that will be fresh and startling to most of us. . . Just why Mr. Blake prefers to blunt the edge of his ideas by casting them in the form of a novel is not apparent. He has much inventive talent but no authority whatsoever over his characters, who speak a strange language, slightly suggestive of Meredith crossed with Ouida. . . At [some] points the book stops being a novel, which is all to the good, and becomes an original piece of historical reevaluation. On the whole, I think Mr. Blake's dialogue may be well worth ploughing through in order to get at his ideas." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 17:92 N 8 '41 350w

BLEGEN, THEODORE CHRISTIAN. Norwegian migration to America; the American transition. 667p il $3.50 Norwegian-Am. hist. assn.

325.2481 Norwegians in the U.S.

"In [the author's] earlier volume, Norwegian Migration to America, 1825-1860 [Book Review Digest, 1931] the emphasis was placed upon the background of emigration in Norway and on the story of the migration to America prior to the American Civil War. In the present volume, as the subtitle indicates, Dr. Blegen deals especially with the transitional period of adjustment to the American scene of the earlier generations of Norwegian immigrants." Social Educ

BLEGEN, T. C.—Continued

"The author's complete technical competence and professional integrity are evident upon every page. When other national groups in the United States find themselves historians of equal stature, future Americans will be able to understand their origins." B. J. Hovde
+ Am Hist R 47:160 O '41 650w

"Dean Blegen has long been one of the most industrious and effective of those who have cultivated intensively this field of research. This volume is the concluding part of a larger study of Norwegian emigration to America. Notwithstanding its limited scope, it is, with the possible exception of Hansen's 'Mingling of the Canadian and American Peoples,' the most valuable monographic contribution which has yet been made to the study of immigration." H. S. Commager
+ Books p14 S 7 '41 1050w

"There are many excellent illustrations, and there is a good index. If painstaking scholarship, discriminating selection and emphasis, colorful illustration, and effective prose writing are criteria of excellence, this book deserves high rank." C. C. Qualey
+ Social Educ 5:234 Mr '41 700w
Social Studies 33:41 Ja '42 180w

BLOCHMAN, LAWRENCE GOLDTREE. See you at the morgue. 279p $2 Duell 41-5491

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 My 25 '41 160w

Reviewed by Mort. Post
New Repub 104:302 Je 9 '41 40w

"We take pleasure in recommending this story to those who like puzzles in which everything is perfectly clear once all the pieces have fallen into their proper places." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 My 25 '41 240w

"Original idea, excitingly handled."
+ New Yorker 17:72 My 31 '41 60w

"Sticks pretty closely to standard formulae, with stolen fur racket and some neat cryptography stepping it up satisfactorily. Good enough."
+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 31 '41 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 110w

BLOMQUIST, ALBERT E. Outline of air transport practice. 402p il maps $4.50 Pitman

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial 41-9933

"Air transportation is in a state of evolution that is more rapid in its rate of progress and volatile in the changing technique than are any of the other forms of transport. A text on the subject must, therefore, attempt to expound the principles of management, operation and sales that are fundamental to any type of transportation at any period of its evolution, and apply these principles to their proper place in air transportation. The author has attempted such an exposition and has supported the discussion with present air line practices that bear out these principles. In a subject so broad, it was only possible to outline the activities of each department and to sketch the correlation of the various departments. A comprehensive bibliography supports each chapter to permit the reader to gain a more thorough understanding of the subject matter covered." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:35 Jl '41 150w

BLOOM, SOLOMON FRANK. The world of nations; a study of the national implications in the work of Karl Marx. 225p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

330.1 Marx, Karl. Nationalism and nationality 41-6837

"It is the author's judgment that 'Marx simply was not a nationalist'—a proposition that is proved in a chapter near the end of the book. Nevertheless he recognized nationality as a social fact and a potentially useful instrument of progress. The purpose of the book, in the author's words, is to find how Marx 'met the problem of reconciling the demands and desires of the individual national society with the ideal of human fraternity.'" (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Bloom has wrestled with a significant and knotty problem and made a valuable contribution to a sounder understanding of Marxian thought." S. W. Armstrong
+ Am Hist R 47:305 Ja '42 420w

"Mr. Bloom's study is comprehensive, objective, and generously documented; he is successful in relating his special subject to the major theses of Marx's thought. The book will certainly have value, not only as a critical study of an important and often misinterpreted aspect of Marx's thought, but also as an illuminating study of one phase of nineteenth-century nationalism." J. D. Lewis
+ Am Pol Sci R 35:605 Je '41 230w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 215:199 My '41 550w

"The book is in no sense Marxist propaganda; rather it is a scholarly and scientific study of a phase of social and political philosophy that is of great importance in our time. The author is not the congressman of similar name, but a professor of history in Brooklyn College."
+ Christian Century 58:329 Mr 5 '41 160w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:195 O '41 20w

"Mr. Bloom did not try to write a controversial book, or to expose what was right or wrong with Marx. He set himself the task of summarizing and explaining Marx's thought and in this he has been wholly successful. His study is a scholarly work, making no concessions to transient trends or prejudices. With unusual fairness and objectivity, equipped with a profound knowledge of his subject, he compresses a wealth of reflection and research into his small volume." Guenter Reimann
+ New Repub 104:671 My 12 '41 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Je 14 '41 420w

BLOOMSTER, EDGAR L. Sailing and small craft down the ages. 280p il $5 U.S. naval inst. 623.82 Ships. Ships—Pictorial works 41-3468

"Small craft from all over the world are briefly described and effectively illustrated with silhouettes and some line drawings." (Booklist) Contents: The age of sail and oars; Pleasure craft; America's Cup defenders; Sails and rigging (including a glossary of sails); Appendixes: Nautical terms; Notes; Craft of Oceania. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:11 Ja '41

"With the date of its publication this became the standard work on the subject and an indispensable book of reference; and what is really surprising, it is good reading." F. P.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:25 F 8 '41 330w

BLOS, PETER. Adolescent personality; a study of individual behavior. 517p $3 Appleton-Century

136.7354 Adolescence. Personality 41-3762

"A study of individual behavior of adolescents, prepared for the commission on secondary school curriculum of the Progressive Education Association. The presentation of factual material concerning selected cases is followed by a discussion of the psychology of adolescent development and of the relation of the school and the teacher to the adolescent." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter
Am J Soc 47:234 S '41 600w
Booklist 37:351 Ap 1 '41

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '41

Reviewed by David Snedden
School & Society 54:420 N 8 '41 200w

"This book is not light reading and presumably is not intended for lay readers. It is written in a scholarly, logical manner and must be read with care, particularly the section concerned with the theory of adolescent development." C. E. Drake

+ Social Educ 5:633 D '41 900w

"The book tries to reach too large an audience. The social worker very much needs its true and carefully annotated picture of adolescence. But there are some pretty bad gaps in information that may lead her to wonder how carefully the job was done. The teacher, as we know her, requires precisely this sort of material but might not have the background to profit from the extremely analytical interpretation. If the author had made two volumes of this, both with the same honest, realistic, basic material, one for the social worker and one with a minimum amount of interpretation for the teacher—well that would have been a magnificent job!" J. S. Plant, M.D.

+ — Survey 77:165 My '41 270w

BLUM, HAROLD FRANCIS. Photodynamic action and diseases caused by light. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 309p il $6 Reinhold

612.01444 Diseases—Causes and theories of causation. Light—Physiological effect 41-5898

"This monograph presents in readable form a wide range of information on a subject which cuts across many special fields of interest. It succeeds in its purpose of making the technical knowledge in this field intelligible to those whose activities may be along a wholly different line. . . . There is included discussion of several diseases in domestic animals produced by light, and reviews of abnormal sensitivity to light in man, including sunburn, skin cancer, sensitization by substances coming into contact with the skin and by substances applied internally." Am J Pub Health

"Dr. Blum has made important experimental contributions to almost all phases of this subject, and has done much to free it from a number of fundamental misconceptions which have bedeviled its history. The present monograph is a lucid, critical and integrative presentation of the field, and of its interrelations with a number of tangent phenomena. The book is divided into three sections, written so that they may be read independently of one another: a general and theoretical treatment, and discussions of pathological effects of photodynamic action in domestic animals, and in man." George Wald

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:1777 Je '41 650w

"The American Chemical Society and the author are to be congratulated on a lucid exposition of a complex subject." R. M. Atwater

+ Am J Pub Health 31:391 Ap '41 140w

BLUMENTHAL, GERTRUDE. Louise's adventure; her ride in the subway; il. by Charlotte Becker. [32p] $1 Doubleday

(W) 41-5299

When she was seven Louise went all alone by subway to 42d Street, to meet her aunt and go shopping. This picture story book describes Louise's exciting time.

"Charlotte Becker's pictures just fit the story, which is not exclusively New York, but will appeal strongly to children anywhere, transit facilities being what they are." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 My 11 '41 290w

"Both story and pictures will have instant appeal to children from four to eight." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 70w

"This is one of those books, never too plentiful, which catch the wonder and excitement of a first experience, giving the proper values to the details which any one of Louise's age knows are really important, and if any one doubts the success of the trip they need only look at Charlotte Becker's merry pictures which include all the most vital and familiar details." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 25 '41 240w

New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 30w

BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES. Poems, 1930-1940. 264p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

821 [41-51619]

Collection of the poems of one of the better-known English Georgian poets, covering his work of the years 1930 to 1940. Index of first lines.

Booklist 37:355 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '41 170w

Manchester Guardian p7 F 11 '41 60w

"If his poems are haunted, they are not haunting; they are mild and comforting, not exhilarating. They are well made, but the freshness that once pervaded them has somehow gone." J. P. Bishop

+ — Nation 152:189 F 15 '41 170w

Reviewed by Myfanwy Piper

New Statesman & Nation 21:222 Mr 1 '41 700w

"One Georgian whose latter work continues to have style, emotion, and meditative substance."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 10w

Reviewed by K. J. Shapiro

Poetry 58:100 My '41 380w

Reviewed by Kathleen Raine

Spec 166:178 F 14 '41 430w

"All Mr. Blunden's best poetry is truly rooted in nature. Its ground is narrow, but deeply cultivated. And because his imagination is so fondly at home there, it seldom ventures into realms of modern thought or controversy. . . . In a machine-age this may seem an old-world fashion. And it may even be said that Mr. Blunden is a literary poet who shrinks from plunging into contemporary reality. But while many of the poems in this collection, notably the series of 'Sketches of Trials,' have a literary interest and recall other days, they live by the art of their human understanding."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p66 F 8 '41 2400w

"Blunden's unusual technical resources raise him distinctly above the commonplace Georgian level. Through them he is able to adjust the visual mode of Clare and Crabbe to the language and attitudes of his own time." J. L. Sweeney

+ Yale R n s 30:818 summer '41 90w

BOBBITT, JOHN FRANKLIN. The curriculum of modern education. 419p $2.75 McGraw

375 Education—Curricula. Education—Philosophy 41-1483

"This book attempts to show what education should accomplish in terms of daily human life, and how the results are to be achieved by means of those life-activities. As the author says in his preface: 'The theme of the book is a very simple one: The good life is the thing that is to be learned, and the pupils learn it by living it.'" (Publisher's note) Index.

"Bobbitt's latest contribution is a most interesting book. It is modern and yet not modern. It is sound and yet at certain points not so sound in terms of modern ways of thinking. The emphasis in the Preface and throughout the book on the view that any adequate education must stress activity—doing things, testing hypotheses—rather than the mere acquisition of book learning is very old and is also at the heart of modern school theory and practice." Samuel Everett

BOBBITT, J. F.—Continued

+ — El School J 41:793 Je '41 1450w

School & Society 53:64 Ja 11 '41 40w

"Excellent treatise. . . The book is refreshing. It should serve to strengthen the faith and the courage of all who seek to attack educational problems. Individuals and school faculties would do well to study carefully the challenging statements concerning the role of education and, as a result, think more than twice about their own objectives and procedures." H. E. Nutter

+ Social Educ 5:397 My '41 700w

BOETTIGER, ELIZABETH F. Your child meets the world outside; with an Introduction by Jessie Stanton. 179p il $2 Appleton-Century 136.7 Child study. Education of children (W) 41-18347

Suggestions to parents for helping their children to understand their part in the community and to guide them "in independent thinking and acting—the independence and freedom of the democratic way of life." Index.

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

School & Society 54:255 S 27 '41 30w

"This is distinctly a book for thoughtful people. In it Miss Boettiger makes a simple, clear-cut analysis of everyday life as we live it in our own modern democracy." L. P. Woodcock

+ Survey 77:374 D '41 350w

Wis Lib Bul 37:173 N '41

BOETTNER, LORAINÉ. Christian attitude towards war. 119p $1 Eerdmans 172.4 War and religion

"This book is an . . . exposition of the convictions concerning war held by a writer who believes in the plenary inspiration of the Bible. He insists that 'the Scriptures reveal God as a God of war as well as a God of peace.' In the Old Testament war to gain righteous ends is not only permitted but commended, and this teaching is considered so explicit as to account for the silence of the New Testament on the matter. . . Upon the basis of these and other considerations the author concludes that conscription is necessary and beneficent, and that war is useful in bringing judgment upon sinful nations." Crozer Q

Christian Century 58:89 Ja 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser

Crozer Q 18:185 Ap '41 250w

BOGAN, LOUISE. Poems and new poems. 116p $2.50 Scribner

811

41-21991

"[This volume] contains everything that Miss Bogan thinks is worth saving from her work of the last twenty years. There are seventy-two poems, mostly short lyrics, taken from her three earlier books; and sixteen others written in various manners since 'The Sleeping Fury' appeared in 1937." New Repub

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42

"One may regret that, for the sake of a thin sheaf of new poems, one must make room on one's shelves for 'Dark Summer' and 'The Sleeping Fury' all over again in a different binding, and even more that Miss Bogan has found it necessary to pad this collection with two translations of no great merit and several entertaining but unimpressive original pieces.

But so profound and intimate is the emotion that beats in most of these lines, so deliberate the art controlling it, that one ends by greeting the old lyrics and welcoming the new with almost unqualified delight." Babette Deutsch

+ — Books p8 D 28 '41 600w

"Women are not noted for terseness, but Louise Bogan's art is compactness compacted. Emotion with her, as she has said of certain fiction, is 'itself form, the kernel which builds outward form from inward intensity.' She uses a kind of forged rhetoric that nevertheless seems inevitable. It is almost formula with her to omit the instinctive comma of self-defensive explanation, for example, 'Our lives through we have trod the ground.' Her titles are right poetically, with no subserviencies for torpid minds to catch at; the lines entitled Knowledge, for instance, being really about love. And there is fire in the brazier—the thinker in the poet." Marianne Moore

+ Nation 153:486 N 15 '41 800w

"Other poets publish more in a single season. Even quantitatively, however, Miss Bogan has done something that has been achieved by very few of her contemporaries: she has added a dozen or more to our small stock of memorable lyrics. She has added nothing whatever to our inexhaustible store of trash. Nevertheless, I hope she now decides to make some change in her theory and practice of the poet's art. Together they have been confining her to a somewhat narrow range of expression. Her new poems—meditative, witty and sometimes really wise—suggest that she has more to say than can be crowded into any group of lyrics; and that perhaps she should give herself more space and less time." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:625 N 10 '41 420w

"In this new collection of Louise Bogan's there are poems that might have been written by other distinguished women poets of today. . . Miss Bogan has a somewhat more Celtic turn than the others and is influenced by Yeats's later work—but she gives the impression of having pushed her poetic mentality into a mold. . . The workmanship here is exquisite, but it is the poetry of self-absorption, as is the case with many other women poets. What a grand thing it would be if Miss Bogan could get out of the mood and the mold!" M. M. Colum

+ — N Y Times p20 N 30 '41 290w

New Yorker 17:92 O 25 '41 50w

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. Sociology. rev ed 567p $3 Macmillan

301 Sociology

41-5430

"The book is enlarged, and the author says each chapter is brought up to date with new facts and new points of view; reading lists are revised. Earlier edition was entered in [Book Review Digest, 1934]." (Booklist) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Am Soc R 6:772 O '41 60w

Booklist 37:442 My 15 '41

Christian Century 58:594 Ap 30 '41 40w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 20w

BOK, CURTIS. Backbone of the herring. 302p $3 Knopf

340 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Trials (W) 41-16810

The author is a son of Edward Bok and a judge of a court of Common Pleas in Philadelphia. This book, fictional in form, probably autobiographical in content, relates the histories of a number of cases tried before a certain "Judge Ulen." Interwoven with the case histories are the Judge's meditations and observations on the meaning of Justice.

Booklist 38:73 N 1 '41

"Here, in a volume which is part fiction, part case history, part introspection and part legal philosophy, Judge Bok has produced something which is bound to be read for years by connoisseurs as a genuine literary curiosity. It is exasperating in its unevenness, but it has passages of real beauty. The lucubrations of this 'human' judge, though sometimes confusing, are often marked by a shrewd observation which seems quite beyond the powers of most of the bewigged gentry. It is a freak book by a highly unusual man." Stanley Walker

+ Books p3 O 12 '41 1250w

"The stories Judge Bok tells are fascinating, and the incidents strange, but they are such as could happen to any of us. A broad and deep humanity runs through the whole book and we come away hoping that there were more judges like the central figure of the book, Judge Ulen." J. T. C.

+ Commonweal 35:348 Ja 23 '42 200w

Reviewed by J. A. Schon

Library J 66:791 S 15 '41 50w

"Judge Bok's writing is thoughtful, sensitive and suited to his varied play of material. And some of his descriptions may linger. . . Legal detail in his book is infrequent and unimportant. But human nature flowers in unexpected generosity, and humility itself may show a man how to take the bandage from the eyes of justice and set an abstraction to facing the concrete and multifarious sum of human life. That is the final value of this unclassifiable book." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 O 19 '41 1350w

"They are human and interesting, as case histories are likely to be, and the idea of justice they illustrate is a noble one, if somewhat difficult to set down. A very readable book."

+ New Yorker 17:97 O 18 '41 60w

"Curtis Bok has written a wise and delightful book. In days of violence and blood like ours, it is a heartening book to read, for it reaffirms one's faith in the humanity of man." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 O 11 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. B. Scandrett, Jr.

Survey G 30:712 D '41 450w

BONBRIGHT, JAMES CUMMINGS. Public utilities and the national power policies. 82p $1.25 Columbia univ. press [6s 6d Oxford]

380.166 Public utilities. Government ownership 40-34029

"The author discusses the control of public utilities as a current economic problem, rate regulation under the 'fair value' doctrine, power policies of the Roosevelt administration and public ownership and rural electrification. Sympathetic to the New Deal." (Commonweal) Index.

"Anyone desiring a brief but well-balanced interpretation of recent developments in the electric power field can certainly find it here." M. G. Glaeser

+ Am Econ R 31:407 Je '41 250w

"Only one who knows a lot about utilities could tell as much about them in such a compact little volume. The author exhibits in this snappy analysis the ripe fruit of many years of close contact with his subject, both as a theoretical economist and as one who has taken an intimate and responsible part in the development of public relations and control of public utilities." M. L. Cooke

+ Ann Am Acad 215:225 My '41 550w

"The 'Public Utility Problem' is the subject of a vast and technical literature. To have its salient points high-lighted by an eminent authority in seventy pages is a matter for gratitude. This survey will be useful as an outline of the subject for those whose reading in it must be limited; as an introduction for prospective students (who will appreciate the excellent 'suggestions for further reading' at the end); and as a stimulating 'refresher' for those already familiar with it." I. M. S.

+ Canadian Forum 20:358 F '41 280w

"This is one of the best things on the subject. Authoritative and easy reading."

+ Commonweal 33:188 D 6 '40 50w

Harvard Law R 54:915 Mr '41 180w
New Statesman & Nation 21:562 My 31 '41 250w

BONNELL, ALLEN THOMAS. German control over international economic relations, 1930-1940. 167p pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill.

330.943 Germany—Economic policy. Germany—Economic conditions 40-28764

"This book is an attempt to give an objective view of Germany's commercial and financial policies in the decade preceding the second World War. In his Preface Dr. Bonnell writes: 'To the National Socialists has been assigned a great deal of the responsibility for the disruption of normal international economic and financial relations between nations. However, to a considerable extent, German control measures were consequences, rather than causes, of international disequilibria. Germany was not so much the source of international economic and financial disturbances as a medium through which shocks originating elsewhere were transmitted to other parts of the world economy.'" Am Econ R

"In international relations the author does not deny that the German policies resulted in disturbing the political and economic equilibrium, but he lifts the burden of responsibility from the shoulders of Hitler and his advisers by repeating the observation already quoted from the Preface. In these and other remarks there seems a tendency to confuse the statement of what actually happened with its justification. The material treated does not lend itself to easy exposition, but the author has done little to help the reader. On many pages the text appears like the mere outline of a book, in 1-2-3, (a) (b) (c) fashion. Moreover, it could have been much improved by more careful editing and proofreading." F. W. Bidwell

Am Econ R 31:378 Je '41 500w

"The author's general conclusion . . . is true, if one does not push it to the point, as Mr. Bonnell does on page 59, of assuming that there were no alternatives to the rearmament policy and other policies of the National Socialists." Eugene Staley

Ann Am Acad 214:223 Mr '41 380w

BONNELL, JAMES FRANCIS. Death files west. 237p $2 Scribner

41-3323

Detective story.

"The majority of this is perfectly obvious—along about page 95 you should know all the answers." Marian Wiggin

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 50w

"This story is as you will have guessed, a melodrama. And if it is a little on the wild side, it is no less gripping entertainment for that." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '41 250w

"Flying-boat atmosphere goods. Story repetitious; living characters bloodless. No gimp."

— + Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 30w

"With its unusual setting, colorful characters, power-dive speed and undercurrent of intrigue and romance, the story has all the ingredients to suit mystery addicts."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 200w

BONNELL, JOHN SUTHERLAND. Britons under fire. 178p $2 Harper

940.5342 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Great Britain 41-23703

The author is minister of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church in New York city. His book is a personal narrative of what he did and saw during a trip to Great Britain in the summer of 1941.

BONNELL, J. S.—Continued

Reviewed by Diana Forbes-Robertson

Books p10 Ja 11 '42 170w

Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41 100w

BONNER, CHARLES. Angel Casey. 311p $2.50
Knopf

41-13493

Character study of Angel Casey, a very human and uninhibited girl, who grew up in California. After an early marriage in the East, Angel was left a widow before she was twenty. With her baby son, her adopted daughter, her aged Irish father-in-law, a Mexican maid, and assorted luggage, Angel moved to the massive Connecticut house, where the elder Casey had lived in his affluent days, before the wealthy New Englanders had cold-shouldered him from their midst. But it was harder to rout Angel, and the Caseys stayed.

"Angel Casey, the heroine who gives Charles Bonner's new novel its title, is a character who, while never completely convincing, is nevertheless interest-engaging. . . . Owing to Mr. Bonner's able craftsmanship, his humor and his portrayal of some of the minor characters, the book makes delightful reading. One simply doesn't and shouldn't take Angel Casey too seriously." Rose Feld
+ — Books p10 O 12 '41 650w

"If one does not try to take it too seriously, 'Angel Casey' is an amusing light novel of a rather fantastic sort, not too plausible but plausible enough. The impact of the Caseys on Bridgefield society is very divertingly portrayed. . . . Unfortunately, there are moments when Mr. Bonner seems to lose his ironic grip—when he appears to think that he is really proving something, and when he himself falls victim to Angel's primitive spell. On the whole, however, he keeps his sense of balance as well as his sense of fun, and the results are agreeable if nothing else." E. H. Walton
+ — N Y Times p16 O 12 '41 700w

"Father Joe Casey and Concha, the Mexican housekeeper, stand out vividly and enrich the story. The immature viewpoint of Angel makes her only partially attractive to the reader."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 220w

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL, comp. Golden slippers; with drawings by Henrietta Bruce Sharon. 220p $2.50 Harper

811.08 Negro poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections (W) 41-22155

An anthology of Negro poetry for young readers. Many old favorites are included. Brief biographies of the poets included, and an index to first lines. Grades seven to nine.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

BOOK of knowledge; the children's encyclopedia; ed. by Holland Thompson and Arthur Mee. 20v il cl $69.50, aircraft $79.50; 10v ed $59.50 c1937, 1938, 1940 Grolier soc.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Children's literature

"The Silver Jubilee edition (1935) of The Book of Knowledge was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1935 [Book Review Digest, 1936]. Since then there have been printings of the set in 1937, 1938, and in 1940, the edition under review. A first glance suggests that it is the same work not only in appearance and purpose but also in editorial policy that it has been since the complete revision of 1926. 'The fundamental purpose . . . is the development of the child in the broadest sense. Closer study shows that many articles have been revised or rewritten in part, introducing new material such as Bats, p.315; The world's bread and butter, p.369;

Wheat, p.1755; Russia as it is, p.5847; and that new articles, chiefly in the mechanical and scientific fields, have been added. Some of the more important are Television, p.122; Conservation, p.379; Vitamins, p.2423; Our animated friends (Disney studios), p.5901. The trend toward new material is especially noticeable in the Things to make and Things to do sections, where many old-fashioned activities have been discarded and more timely ones substituted." Subscription Bks Bul

"As a whole the 1940 edition of The Book of Knowledge is an improvement over previous editions. However, since it continues to follow the original plan of arranging material by departments, its convenience as a reference tool is still limited. This set continues to serve the casual reader rather than the child needing a direct approach and specific facts. It is recommended only in that respect, since more useful material for reference is readily available to libraries."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:2 Ja '41 400w

BOOK of knowledge annual, 1941; ed. by Holland Thompson and Ellen McLoughlin. 464p il maps $8.50-$10 c1940 Grolier soc.

031 Yearbooks (statistical, historical, etc.). Children's literature

"The Book of Knowledge Annual 1941, according to the publishers, includes 15 percent more topics, 10 percent more contributors and 10 percent more pages than the first annual, which was entitled Children's Book of the Year; the Book of Knowledge Annual 1940. Although the arrangement is alphabetical, there is a full index as well as a table of contents. Information is given in the slightly informal but interesting style of the body of the work and is illustrated by appropriate photographs and diagrams." Subscription Bks Bul

"In view of the price of The Book of Knowledge Annual 1941 and the limited use of an annual it is not recommended."

Subscription Bks Bul 12:3 Ja '41 240w

BOOTH, GEORGE C. Mexico's school-made society. 175p il $2.50 Stanford univ. press

370.972 Education—Mexico. Socialism in Mexico 41-26773

"The writer has here shown the entire fabric of modern Mexico's social reform, how through the philosophy of education prevailing in Mexico the schools are expected to remake the nation's society and how all activities are fitted into a consistent pattern. He also goes behind all this to show how and why the philosophy developed." (School & Society) Glossary. Index.

"A clear, useful exposition." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 100w

School & Society 54:600 D 20 '41 60w

BORDEN, MRS LUCILLE (PAPIN). King's highway. 485p $2.50 Macmillan

41-24963

This, the third of the Starforth romances, takes place in England and America, in the Carolinas and along the St Lawrence in the colony founded by Cartier. It is the story of Elspeth Starforth and her brother Kenneth, and their Aunt Maris, who escaped to America when they were betrayed to Queen Elizabeth because of their Catholic religion. In America it is Maris' daughter Erith, and the Indian chieftain she loved who hold the stage.

"Like most of Mrs. Borden's stories, 'King's Highway' will appeal especially to Catholic readers."

Books p14 N 30 '41 120w

Christian Century 58:1611 D 24 '41 40w

"However fanciful Mrs. Borden's fiction may be, she always mixes a strong dose of genuine history with it. Here, in closest agreement with the record, she has interwoven the story of the 'joyous' martyrdom of Margaret Clitherow, of which Sigrid Undset wrote with such moving restraint in her 'Stages on the Road.' With Henry Walpole, Catholic martyr of 1595, she has, however, taken considerable fictional license in order to associate him with Starforth fortunes. But why disinter centuries-dead religious feuds? Fiction, in any case, has no room for stark propaganda. And one doubts, greatly, whether religion needs it." J. S. S.

N Y Times p30 N 23 '41 900w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42
210w

BORTON, HUGH. Japan since 1931; its political and social developments. 149p $1.25 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

952 Japan—Politics and government. Japan—Social conditions. Japan—Economic conditions 41-51526

"Professor Borton begins his survey of Nippon during the past decade with a competent ten-page analysis of structure and working of the government. The function of groups—social, economic, political—is next discussed. . . . The trend toward military fascism is traced in conjunction with the turning of the tide against liberalism, democracy—and modernity of thought. The transformation of the country into a highly centralized and nationalized military-economic state organized primarily for war; the passage and the implementation of the Munitions Industry Mobilization Law and the National Mobilization Law; the formation of the Price Policy Commission, the Education and Culture Commission, the Cabinet Planning Board, the Planning Council, the Cabinet Advisory Council, and the National Spiritual Mobilization Commission—all are touched upon, likewise the increasingly adverse financial situation." Ann Am Acad

"A book which badly needed to be written. Into its brief pages the author has packed a mass of carefully documented material not to be found elsewhere in such small compass; material which will grow increasingly important, as sources dry up, not only for those interested in the political, economic, and social developments of Japan during a crucial decade, but for everyone concerned with the how and why of totalitarianism as a way of life. Source materials available to the author have been conscientiously explored and used." E. B. Price

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:590 Je '41 340w
Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Ann Am Acad 215:184 My '41 450w
Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 11 '41 90w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 105:92 Jl 21 '41 600w

"After sketching the structure of the Japanese Government, Dr. Borton explains the political rôle of various social and political groups and traces the trend toward military fascism. In this section appears an exceptionally useful treatment of the cooperative movement. There follows a description of the growth of state control over industry, trade, finance, agriculture, labor and public opinion in which the functions of the many new commissions, boards, councils and conferences are clearly distinguished. Analysis of problems, motives and political leaders is woven deftly into the descriptive pattern. . . . Dr. Borton's conception of the emperor's position is not fully shared by the reviewer, who would also ascribe greater importance to the political parties." H. S. Quigley

+ Pacific Affairs 14:361 S '41 280w

"This book . . . is well documented, it is objective in treatment, and it makes an excellent contribution to our knowledge of fundamental issues and shifts in Japanese life and statecraft in this time of world revolution." A. P. Ludwig

+ Social Educ 5:627 D '41 750w

BOSTON, CHARLES K. The silver jackass. 284p $2 Reynal

Detective story.

41-23059

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p36 D 7 '41 120w

"Joe Peel turns out to be a pretty good detective, and even Otis Beagle is not so phony as he appears to be at first sight." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 N 2 '41 200w

"Brash and breezy characters, with knack of getting in and out of scrapes plus good 'ghost town' scenery, make things hum, lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 1 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 140w

BOSWELL, PEYTON. Varnum Poor [ed. by André Gloeckner]. (Modern masters) 76p il col pl $2.75 Harper; Hyperion

759.1 Poor, Henry Varnum 41-51766

Biographical and critical study of the American artist, Varnum Poor. The volume is illustrated with reproductions of his paintings in color and in black and white. Bibliography.

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 9 '41 130w
Wis Lib Bul 37:136 Jl '41

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS. ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). London pride; with drawings by Raffaello Busoni. 253p $2 Little [6s Faber]

(W) 41-23964

The story of a London family living in the dockyard district and their experiences under the blitzkrieg. The chief character is seven-year-old Ben, who shares with his mother the responsibility and duty of keeping up the morale and well-being of the others.

"One feels that this book, for its many merits and its obvious appeal, will be eagerly and tearfully read. Yet it would be unfair not to comment on its several grave defects. In the first place, according to London Pride everyone under severe bombing is courageous. That simply is not so. . . . In the second place, while the sentimentality manages in most instances to 'get across,' nevertheless it is sentimentality. And it verges on cloying. . . . One cannot help feeling that Miss Bottome has yielded to the spell of her infinitely pathetic and moving story, and under that spell has written several degrees lower than her usual high standard as a literary craftsman." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic D '41 420w

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"Sometimes one might wish that the reporting of how and what the Barton family and their neighbors think and feel was stated in a rather less sprightly way, as if the quaint ways of monkeys were being described. There is no place where one can laugh more than in working-class London, without having to laugh at it. But in spite of this characteristic of the book, which is in the style of the writing and not in the thought behind it, there is a real knowledge of the problems, the laws, the point of view, and the jokes of Dockland." Diana Forbes-Robertson

+ Books p5 N 30 '41 500w

"A moving and vivid account." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 70w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS—Continued

"What might easily have been either a wanton tear-jerker or a swashbuckling 'juvenile' becomes, through Miss Bottome's expert story-telling, one of the most heartening novels of the war so far. . . . The more you think of it the more you realize what a difficult, ticklish job she has undertaken in writing the story of the blitzkrieg babies, and she has turned it into a brave and lovable piece of fiction, as well as a tribute to fortitude where it is least likely to be looked for." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 153:545 N 29 '41 550w

"Though not without sentimentality, it is written skillfully and has a fine quality of humor."

+ New Repub 106:94 Ja 19 '42 40w

"Aside from its value as an objective Blitzkrieg story Miss Bottome is to be congratulated on having brought to her portrayal of London's poor a depth of understanding much rarer, even, than sympathy." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 N 30 '41 850w

"Despite its Lady Bountiful-with-a-sense-of-humor quality and that rather tedious George Belcher attitude toward the 'lower classes,' the book gets you. It's a sort of 'Tom Sawyer' of a London in flames, although seven-year-old Ben, who is buried in a collapsed house and then bombed out of a hospital, is as much like Mr. Wookey as he is like Tom. Miss Bottome writes her little fiction with strict regard to fact. Her pictures of air-raid shelters, looting, evacuations, and so forth have a sharp veracity." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:104 N 29 '41 140w

"No mere outline of the story can do justice to the spirit of the book, to its knowledge and understanding of children and of the character of the London slum child in particular. Miss Bottome has done outstanding work in the past, but here she does better than ever before."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 29 '41 290w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Mansion house of liberty. 264p $2.50 Little 940.5342 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-6166

When the war began the author and her husband were safe in America, but they canceled their remaining American engagements and returned home to England. In this detailed account of England at war she describes London and Liverpool after repeated bombings, an airplane factory, women's auxiliary services, the R.A.F., the Army, the Navy, the mayor of Ramsgate and his expensive shelters, and the common man and woman.

Bookmark 2:10 My '41

"'Mansion House of Liberty' makes concrete the headlines in the daily newspapers and the news which comes over the radio. Written in a little island under bombardment, it is not, and could not be expected to be, an objective picture of war-time Britain. Out of the emotion with which the author writes, however, doubtless comes a truer picture of thoughts, hopes and fears in war time than will be shown by post-war documented accounts. In her belief that new and enduring standards of life have been created and may be carried over for the making of a new world, one can only hope desperately that she is right." Mary Ross

+ Books p6 Ap 6 '41 800w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner
Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 220w
Churchman 155:35 My 15 '41 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:198 O '41 10w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 152:673 Je 7 '41 90w

Reviewed by Alistair Cooke

New Repub 105:260 Ag 25 '41 280w

"The completeness which gives 'Mansion House of Liberty' its outstanding value goes far beyond experience and observation in word-picture, vivid and memorable as that is. There is completeness, again, in the wise balance of this author's mind, seeing the cruel folly of appeasement and complacency, looking at the shortcomings of British democracy, writing with all the fine British incisiveness of self-criticism." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 23 '41 1650w

"Not much new material, but fervently written."

+ New Yorker 17:92 Ap 5 '41 50w

Reviewed by Herbert Davis

Yale R n s 30:828 summer '41 170w

BOUCHER, ANTHONY, pseud. See White, W. A. P.

BOULDING, KENNETH EWART. Economic analysis. 809p $4.25 Harper
330.1 Economics 41-8263

"This book is designed as a text for a first course in principles, but it is also intended as a 'contribution to the development and the systematization of the body of economic analysis itself'. The book is divided into two sections, based on two methods of analysis. In the first part, all the analysis is carried on in terms of demand and supply. In the second part, the marginal technique is introduced." (Am Econ R) Index.

"There is no doubt that the book is difficult and that it will make heavy demands upon the student. However, the exposition is so clear that it can be used, I believe, in an introductory course. If it can be used successfully, the teacher will probably feel that the student has learned something that was worth his while: a feeling that many teachers are unable to experience fully after their students have been exposed to many of the traditional texts. I have reviewed the book as a possible text; I must also recommend it to anyone interested in economics. It is a long time since a serious general work in economics has been published and Dr. Boulding has succeeded in integrating much new material into the general body of economic doctrine." Lorie Tarshis

+ Am Econ R 31:610 S '41 1100w

"The author tries to keep 'imperfect competition' and 'monopoly' separate from each other. Despite the loose monetary theory adopted, he makes a good statement of the difficulties of using index numbers. He presents a strong anti-Socialist case. In general, however, the reviewer finds the work somewhat immature. The definitions are hardly one of the strong features." L. H. Haney

+ Ann Am Acad 218:230 N '41 700w

Reviewed by G. J. Stigler

J Pol Econ 49:917 D '41 500w

Social Studies 32:377 D '41 110w

BOURNE, GEOFFREY. War, politics and emotion; with an introd. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 110p $1.25 Liveright

320.1 Political science. Reason, Democracy 41-19708

Contending that our present ills are due to the fact that politics is dominated by emotion, the author shows how the world might be made over, after Nazism is destroyed, by educating men so that politics would be ruled by reason.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:374 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Sat R of Lit 24:19 O 11 '41 850w

"The ideal citizen is one who displays 'a ready appreciation of facts, judicial weighing of these facts; the formation of a reasoned judgment or opinion.' That sounds a bit naive and dated. Man is still a political animal, and animals judge situations in queer ways. But out of the debate we shall gain wisdom, and the glory of Bourne is that he keeps shooting at the right target, and often warms the heart with good ideas." Leon Whipple
+ — Survey G 30:640 N '41 420w

BOUSQUET, GEORGES HENRI. A French view of the Netherlands Indies; tr. from the French by Philip E. Lilienthal; issued under the auspices of the secretariat, Inst. of Pacific relations. (Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 133p $1.50 Oxford

991 Netherlands Indies—Politics and government. Netherlands—Colonies 41-10584

"This is a translation of part of Professor Bousquet's earlier work, La Politique Musulmane et Coloniale des Pays-Bas. . . The English version gives a condensed account of the earlier French chapters on Dutch Moslem policy—a topic deserving fuller study by English and American writers—and contains a new concluding chapter on the international position of the Indies, based largely on the author's article in the December 1939 issue of Pacific Affairs." Pacific Affairs

Reviewed by A. J. Barnouw
Am Hist R 41:421 Ja '42 280w

"A penetrating and provocative study of Dutch rule in the East Indies." L. A. Mills
+ Am Pol Sci R 35:593 Je '41 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:884 Jl '41 10w

"The translation has been well done and accurately reflects the witty and often caustic critical quality of the original." W. L. Holland
+ Pacific Affairs 14:129 Mr '41 80w

BOUTWELL, WILLIAM DOW, and others, eds. America prepares for tomorrow; the story of our total defense effort. 612p $3.50; school ed $2.65 Harper

355.2 U.S.—Defense (W) 41-14210

"The story of our total defense effort, a collaboration of six Washington experts on the plans, programs, and proceedings of the preparedness effort of the United States. Subjects discussed are: the role of the government in times of peril, events abroad, materials and tools, human resources, finance, military services, local governmental problems, education, and future developments." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"One cannot escape the feeling that the general reader will be left with an impression of heterogeneous factual material, insufficiently coordinated. This should not in any sense be interpreted as a wish to see the objectivity of the book reduced, rather that something more of editorial evaluation should have been included." J. O. McClintic

Am Econ R 31:902 D '41 450w

Reviewed by F. P. Hall
Ann Am Acad 219:194 Ja '42 350w

Booklist 38:7 S '41

Bookmark 2:6 N '41

"The book was written on a mass production basis, with Mr. Boutwell serving as foreman, editor and contributor. Inevitably, there was some duplication and repetition in the writing, but on the whole this story of our total defense effort reads as if streamlined by one master mind bulging with facts, facts and more facts." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p2 S 7 '41 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"The book naturally lacks perspective, is informational rather than critical in nature, praises rather than appraises. Of value as a general survey of the present situation. Recommended for large and medium-sized libraries. Mr. Boutwell is chief of the Division of Radio, Publications, and Exhibits in the United States Office of Education." H. A. Wooster

Library J 66:613 Jl '41 130w

"It is no exaggeration to say that hundreds of questions relating to the defense effort are answered satisfactorily in this volume. Its preparation was an ambitious undertaking in which the authors have succeeded notably. They give a broad overview of the defense program, at the same time supplying many of the details that any student of the subject might seek. It is the first time that the subject has been covered so comprehensively within the confines of a single book." Burnham Finney
+ Pol Sci Q 56:629 D '41 650w

School & Society 54:128 Ag 23 '41 30w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Ag '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

BOWEN, CROSWELL. Great river of the mountains: the Hudson. 96p $3.75 Hastings house

917.47 Hudson river. New York (state)—Description and travel. Photographic books (W) 41-13015

A volume of photographs, with accompanying text, depicting scenes along the Hudson river from the Adirondacks to New York city. Contains an introduction by Carl Carmer.

+ Books p10 Ag 17 '41 190w

"An excellent 'word track' accompanies these finely readable photographs."

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 13 '41 370w

New Yorker 17:55 Jl 5 '41 90w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH (MRS ALAN CAMERON). Look at all those roses. 329p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 41-13225

Nineteen short stories by the author of The Death of the Heart (Book Review Digest, 1939). They are sensitive, impressionistic, oftentimes detached, slightly reminiscent of Katherine Mansfield.

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"In both her excellent novels, The Death of the Heart and The House in Paris, Elizabeth Bowen showed herself a master of mood. Her new collection of short stories, Look at All Those Roses, again gives proof of her peculiar ability to create atmosphere but, with few exceptions, the nineteen pieces in the book are literary tone poems or sketches rather than short stories. In some there is a deliberately hazy and suspended quality that verges perilously on the artificial and precious." Rose Feld

+ — Books p3 Ag 3 '41 850w

"Even while the stories of this book do not come up to the high standards set by her last novel, their superiority in their field should make them the envy of many better known writers." P. T. Hartung

+ — Commonweal 35:96 N 14 '41 500w

Reviewed by M. E. Clark

Library J 66:669 Ag '41 40w

"The stories are various in mood and unequal in interest but uniformly successful in the adjustment of style to theme. Miss Bowen is, indeed, a writer in whom it is impossible to separate matter from manner, and for that reason her short stories are difficult to summarise. But a high place in this collection must be given to one of the slightest, Tears, Idle Tears." Charles Marriott

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 24 '41 150w

"The kind of stasis, or even trance, which holds Miss Bowen's characters, the airlessness of their surroundings, the decay of what was once elegance, taste, and manners, are pervasive sub-elements in the book. Miss Bowen has seen through the trappings of an Irish and an English world. The one war story, sentimental in the face of bombs, makes one wonder whether she has seen through those worlds themselves. If this story is a satire, she has." Louise Bogan

BOWEN, ELIZABETH—Continued

+ Nation 153:405 O 25 '41 800w

"An inclination to overwrite, to be just too subtle, too clever, tends to make Miss Bowen a more 'difficult' writer than she need be. . . Great concentration, in fact, is demanded of the reader throughout this volume, for Miss Bowen is an author of mood—an impressionist, getting her effects by a few bold strokes of a thick brush; to comprehend completely you must stand at a distance, and meditate. A whole novel could be written from the sometimes too scanty data offered; the characters—frigid, inarticulate English—remain for the most part in shadow, their relations to one another implied rather than stated; the dialogue is inconclusive, realistic, though rarely as revealing as that in the work of Dorothy Richardson, an author whose work is reminiscent of Miss Bowen's. . . Elizabeth Bowen may not yet be a worthy successor to the greatest masters of the short story, but neither the public nor her publishers need worry: her talent is well able to stand on its own merits; and her books, boosted or banned, will be bought, borrowed and read." James Stern

+ New Repub 105:550 O 27 '41 950w

"Miss Bowen has that fineness of touch which records the exact range of tone in a subject of light calibre, without blurring it. A Love Story in her latest volume, Look at All Those Roses, is an excellent example of this talent at its best. The drama is held back from completion, the characters remain in shadow. It is as if, in a game of cards, one hand were never disclosed. In a full-length novel this reserve is almost impossible to sustain, and under those conditions Miss Bowen has in some of her earlier novels partly lost control of her characters. . . Perhaps Miss Bowen is at her happiest when, as in Attractive Modern Homes and The Easter Egg Party, she is blending a tenderly malicious wit with an unexpected intimation of remote horror (incidentally, not unlike Auden). Altogether this is an impressive achievement, the best group of stories since V. S. Pritchett's You Make Your Own Life. Miss Bowen is a worthy successor to Katherine Mansfield." Desmond Hawkins

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:144 F 8 '41 1000w

"It would be quite possible not to like these stories. Delicate and subtle and more than ever polished in her craftsmanship Elizabeth Bowen certainly is, but there is the tenderness which warmed 'The Death of the Heart'. It would be almost impossible, however, for any one who knows or cares anything about fine writing not to admire them. No one, with the exception of Virginia Woolf, can distill a finer and more haunting essence of emotion than Elizabeth Bowen at her best." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 3 '41 700w

"Several of the pieces are cleverish or just off the commercial, others appear to have been rewritten until they're a trifle bony. You will, however, find at least a half-dozen sound stories in the book." Vincent McHugh

+ New Yorker 17:57 Ag 9 '41 230w

Pratt p12 D '41

"The fine qualities of Miss Bowen's writing are known from her novels to a public which is discriminating and yet not small; and they are apparent also in this collection of nineteen short stories. Taken as a whole, they show the same almost uncannily delicate perception of certain aspects of character; the haunting evocation of atmosphere, especially all the infinite variations of the atmosphere of brooding frustration; the exquisite style. There is also, running through these stories, and perhaps the more powerful since it arises from the depiction of so many different backgrounds, a strong sense of the aridity of the middle and upper middle classes." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ag 2 '41 650w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 166:94 Ja 24 '41 550w

"This collection is not merely pleasant or amusing. It is dark, or brilliant or bitter—but always intense. Miss Bowen is especially successful as was Miss Mansfield, in entering into the heart and mind of children. She has a direct unemotional approach to youth which is impressive. This volume is no lightly thrown together handful of events and people stirred up for midsummer reading. It is fine, arresting writing; hard, disturbing reading. It will be treasured by all those who appreciate the short story as an intricate form of art."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 240w

Time 38:76 Ag 18 '41 340w

"The stories, as stories, are very clever, very candid, intellectually a little exotic but brilliantly accurate and revealing in their way—at least the best of them are that. Three or four of the fourteen are too clever by half—tenuous little patterns of dialogue of a somewhat facile allusiveness. One story, the last and the longest of all, 'Summer Night,' seems quite pointlessly elaborate. But the rest, in varying degrees, exhibit a fine-drawn subtlety of sense and observation. There are no flies on Miss Bowen; she is scrupulously alert, witty, impartial, unsentimental."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 25 '41 750w

"Miss Bowen is clever, mannered, elliptic, tortured, always sticking out a gleaming, barbed satirical phrase for you to stumble over as you approach her characters. So you never get near them. I'm not sure they are worth it. The undeniable, sporting cleverness of her writing is perpetual dust in the reader's eyes. Well, no not dust—something more like finely powdered glass." Robert Littell

Yale R ns 31:xvi autumn '41 120w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). The family falling. 306p $2 Little

Western story.

40-35888

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"Mild Western." Will Cuppy

Books p25 Mr 2 '41 50w

"It is all written in Mrs. Bower's facile, breezy and pleasant style and is not devoid of her cleverness in characterization, but as compared with the best of the Flying U stories—compared, for example, with the last preceding novel in the series, 'The Spirit of the Range' (also published posthumously), this is rather thin stuff." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 19 '41 200w

BOWIE, WALTER RUSSELL. The Bible. (Hazen bks. on religion) 68p 50c Assn. press 220 Bible. Whole. Bible as literature
(W) 41-3149

Chapters on the Bible as the book of life; the Bible as literature; what the Bible tells of God and man; and the Bible and our contemporary world. Bibliography.

"The chapters are charming, instructive and unusually attractive in their invitation to the reader to know, enjoy and use the Bible." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:20 Ja 15 '41 50w

"Walter Russell Bowie presents The Bible in a very winsome fashion." C. E. Purinton

+ J Religion 21:226 Ap '41 170w

BOWMAN, HEATH. Hoosier; il. from phot. by the author. 360p $3 Bobbs

977.2 Indiana

41-5253

Informal history of the state of Indiana, beginning with a chapter on the origin of the name Hoosier, and stressing thruout the nature and achievements of the men who made the state and the name famous. Photographs grouped at end of volume. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

"Of the making of many books about Hoosiers there seems to be no end—if one is to judge by the amazing bibliography appended to this book—but 'Hoosier' is not a rehash, not a product of scissors and paste; it is an original study. It is not exactly a history of Indiana, or a boastful catalog of its famous statesmen, inventors and authors, or a satirical account of its lapses into communism, reactionary smugness and bigotry, even fascism. It is as the subtitle declares, a composite portrait... Half-way through the book there is a sharp change in style. The early chapters are written in gusty heartiness and high spirits, full of corny humor and racy anecdote. But when the Indiana of today is reached the writing becomes firm and sober—and much more satisfying." R. A. Cordell

+ Books p3 Mr 23 '41 1050w

N Y Times p19 Ag 10 '41 1250w

"An honest job, written with ingratiating warmth, humor, and penetration. Absorbing reading."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Mr 22 '41 50w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis

Sat R of Lit 23:3 Ap 12 '41 2000w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

BOWMAN, JAMES CLOYD. Winabobo, master of life; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 296p $2.50 Whitman, A.

970.3 Indians of North America—Legends (W) 41-18054

The legends of the five nations of the Iroquois Indians have been woven together to make one continuous story in this book for young readers. Winabobo, the culture hero of these tribes, with the wisdom gained from his father, the Keeper of the West Wind, teaches his people the advantages of peace and the agricultural life.

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"These North American myths and legends centering about the great hero of the Northern tribes are given in a continuous narrative, beginning with his boyhood. Mr. Bowman is unusually successful in making his illustrious subject seem like a great human leader bent on making an ideal democracy out of the Confederacy of the Five Nations." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:358 S '41 80w

"Plot and legend are well integrated, and boys of eleven and above will read it as an Indian story, but it will not replace Laing's The Hero of the Longhouse. The translation of many of the Indian names simplifies the text, but names like Chief Mighty-Good-Shot, Much-Feed-Sqaw, etc., do not add to the atmosphere and dignity of the story." T. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 150w

"Boys of junior high school age who would shy away from fairy or folk tale, will read this businesslike account of Indian tradition because of its clearly shown connection with Indian life and customs. It will be a valuable guide in club work based on Indian life and for the same reason a useful addition to supplementary reading shelves." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '41 300w

"This is an excellent gift book for boys keen on the American Indian and his life. In it, both rare and widely known legends are made meaningful against a convincing background of daily life. Four full-page illustrations in color and 12 in black and white, add special interest. All are drawn with originality and imagination by Armstrong Sperry."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 240w

BOYD, ANNE MORRIS. United States government publications; sources of information for libraries. 2d ed 548p $4.50 Wilson, H.W.

025.173 U.S.—Government publications—Bibliography (W) 41-5460

"The book is revised to June 1, 1940, including references to organization changes resulting from the President's reorganization plans no. III, IV and V. Largely rewritten, but follows the plan of the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1931] and like that, includes only agencies in existence at the time of publication." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:442 My 15 '41

"Miss Boyd's book fulfills completely the promise given in the introduction. Library school instructors will be especially grateful to her for bringing a valuable textbook up to date, and documents librarians will be happy to have it at hand for reference use along with others such as Schmeckebier's Government Publications and Their Use and the United States Government Manual." C. J. Pierce

+ Library J 66:452 My 15 '41 1000w

"It is to be regretted that many official lists of publications of the individual agencies have been omitted. Practically all of the major and even many of the minor agencies now issue comprehensive or selected lists of their publications. Selected rather than complete listings of periodicals and serials have been included. This is perhaps adequate from the standpoint of the library school student, but more complete listings would have been valuable to the reference librarian. A few important annual reports of the agencies are not mentioned. No one except a person who has followed United States documents very closely can fully appreciate the task Miss Boyd has undertaken in this second edition, and she should be congratulated by the profession for having attempted it and carried it out so well." J. K. Wilcox

+ Library Q 11:372 J1 '41 1350w

BOYD, JESSIE EDNA, and others. Books, libraries and you; a handbook on the use of reference books and the reference resources of the library. 143p il $1.40 Scribner

028.7 Libraries and readers. Reference books. Reference books—Bibliography (W) 41-14637

"How to use the library as a study asset in research work, reports, and term papers is explained for the young student or the uninitiated reader. Brief information is given on the libraries' reference resources such as the card catalog, dictionaries, encyclopedias, magazines, indexes, and other reference tools. Lists are included of useful reference books in various fields." Booklist

Booklist 38:73 N 1 '41

"On the negative side these points struck me as needing some attention in any future revision. The boxed quotations are often unrelated to the text and tend to distract attention from the business at hand. Individual units need further consideration in the light of needs. I question the inclusion of Poole and the large number of specialized indexes. I am sorry, also to see titles of periodical articles enclosed in quotation marks, especially when encyclopedia articles are not similarly honored and when book titles are underlined. These are, of course, all criticisms of detail. They take disproportionate space in this review because it takes so many words even to describe them. To me, Books, Libraries and You is the most stimulating text in the field. It has the effect on me of wanting to scrap and rework my unit on library use, and I believe its effect on students will be equally exciting. The authors are to be congratulated on a truly creative contribution to the field of teaching library use." Louis Shores

+ Library J 66:1085 D 15 '41 700w

BOYD, JULIAN PARKS. Anglo-American union; Joseph Galloway's plans to preserve the British empire, 1774-1788. 185p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

973.312 Galloway, Joseph. U.S.—Politics and government—Revolution. Great Britain—Colonies—America. 41-14416

"Galloway, one of the ablest of all the loyalists, had been closely associated with Franklin in Pennsylvania politics and had sat in the first Continental Congress. . . Galloway, younger but more conservative and more legalistic [than Franklin], held that the conflict could be resolved by constitutional measures. From 1774 till after the treaty of peace, he continued to draw up plans of union which he thought would restore the good old days and insure a rich, harmonious future. Mr. Boyd prints five of these plans from the original manuscripts, with an introductory analysis which is longer than the variant documents put together." (Books) Index.

Reviewed by B. H. Williams
Am Pol Sci R 35:1217 D '41 150w

"Valuable as the plans are, with their full display of the Tory mind, they fall into the category of proposed but unused constitutions and in a sense are only notable historical curiosities. But Mr. Boyd, explaining how Galloway came to draw such plans, and why they were satisfactory to neither side in the struggle, clarifies and illuminates the controversy in a brief but memorable treatise which is closely reasoned and firmly written out of solid knowledge and penetrating insight." Carl Van Doren

+ Books pl2 S 7 '41 700w
Social Studies 32:336 N '41 10w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 19 '41
600w

BOYLAN, MARGUERITE T. Social welfare in the Catholic church; organization and planning through diocesan bureaus; foreword by John Gregory Murray. 363p $3 Columbia Univ. press

360.973 Roman Catholic church—Charities 41-12375

Study of the organization of social welfare in the Catholic church, by the executive secretary of Catholic charities in the diocese of Brooklyn. "The book is divided into three parts. Part I deals with the nature and scope of a Diocesan Bureau of Social Welfare, with the forces that influenced the development of such bureaus, and traces briefly the beginnings of the work in various dioceses throughout the country, indicating some of the factors which played a part in their origin. Following this general survey, Part II gives an exposition of the development of the program in a particular diocese, setting forth the methods employed in meeting the problems of coordination and integration. . . Part III is devoted to a general discussion of some present problems with which these diocesan bureaus of social welfare are confronted: personnel, professional training, lay participation on boards and committees, interpretation and finance, research, cooperation in community movements, and social action." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

"From the wealth of training and experience that are hers, [the author] presents an extremely interesting and enlightening summary of research, observation and deductions which should be inspiring, clarifying and of very practical help in this day when the relationship between Catholicism and Social Service is fraught with new and far-reaching significance. Here are the mature, well-balanced findings of an eminent social worker who is, at the same time, remarkable for the vigor and purity of her Catholicism." Claire Armstrong

+ Cath World 153:765 S '41 460w

"Miss Boylan makes many valuable suggestions. . . The value of this volume is enhanced by an index, an excellent bibliography and an appendix which gives an outline of the work of other Diocesan Bureaus not covered in the text. It is highly recommended, particularly in connection with sociology courses." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 34:283 J1 11 '41 800w

Reviewed by Gordon Potat
Crozer Q 19:85 Ja '42 100w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 10 '41 480w

BOYLE, GEORGE. Democracy's second chance; land, work and co-operation. 177p $2 Sheed 630.1 Agriculture, Cooperative. Cooperation 41-51691

"Decentralization, return to the land, home production, credit unions, and cooperatives are the author's suggestions for a way of life that will go a long way toward solving America's economic and social problems. Along with his proposals is a readable, simply written review of the problems facing farmers and workers everywhere, which they find themselves incapable of solving alone. Many of his examples cited are of Canadian experiments; he is connected with Antigonish cooperatives." Booklist

Booklist 37:401 My 1 '41

"Much as I agree with Mr. Boyle as to the importance and direction of the phenomena he is discussing I am sorry to report that the book seems unconvincing. Perhaps the average reader will be satisfied with positive assertions, periodically keen philosophical observations and a minimum of substantiating evidence, but I have my doubts. . . Perhaps temperamentally I am allergic to doses of theory when not diluted with chunks of hard fact. In any case I think it is possible for someone who did not know much about cooperatives to read 'Democracy's Second Chance' without being much the wiser." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 33:661 Ap 18 '41 370w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:195 O '41 20w

BOYLSTON, MRS HELEN (DORE). Carol goes backstage; with il. by Frederick E. Wallace. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 233p $2 Little

(W) 41-21881

Describes Carol Page's progress from theatrical success in high school, to a part in a New York play, and a place with a summer theater group. For older girls.

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 30 '41 200w

"I believe this author has come back to a new high level after the dwindling quality of her latest 'Sue Barton' book." Maude Adams
+ Library J 66:1048 D 1 '41 80w

"Careful detail of backstage life and routine. For the stage-lorn." G. G. Bates
Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 30w

BOYNTON, PERCY HOLMES. America in contemporary fiction. 274p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

813.09 American fiction—History and criticism. Novelists (W) 41-61503

Critical essays on contemporary novelists and their work. Partial contents: Two New England regionalists; Puritanism in New England; Joseph Hergesheimer; James Branch Cabell; The retrospective South; Sherwood Anderson; Theodore Dreiser; Willa Cather; Sinclair Lewis; John Dos Passos; Thomas Wolfe; Ole Edvart Rølvaag; John Steinbeck. Index.

Booklist 37:238 F 1 '41

"Professor Boynton's attitude is tolerant and open-minded—though hardly enthusiastic. He maintains a balance and dispassion which would surely be wholly admirable did it not suggest a certain cool distance between himself and most of his subjects. . . A sober guide obviously subscribing to moderation and the middle way. Professor Boynton neither stumbles nor soars; he will never lead the reader off a cliff, but he will just as surely never lead him over unbeaten paths."

+ — Books p18 F 16 '41 600w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 58:863 Jl 2 '41 420w

"A reader who has followed with any more than casual attention the course of American fiction in the last two decades will find in Percy H. Boynton's 'America in Contemporary Fiction' not only firmer footing among shifting sands, but a field whence he can take flight into speculations of his own. Percy Boynton is competent to take a comparative view of the fiction of our day. For 40 years he has studied and taught the history of literature."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 1 '41 700w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon

Library J 65:1087 D 15 '40 150w

"With the more contemporary novelists—Thomas Wolfe, John Dos Passos, John Steinbeck—Professor Boynton is much less satisfactory. The book on the whole is tantalizing, in part exciting, and in the end disappointing. Both its virtues and weakness seem to stem from the lack of any unified philosophy of the relation between the individual and society." John Lydenberg

+ — New Eng Q 14:414 Je '41 350w

Pratt p16 autumn '41

BRACE, GERALD WARNER. Light on a mountain. 318p $2.50 Putnam

41-51620

The Gaunts, a family of Vermont farmers, are stirred to their depths by the marriage of the elder son to an unsuitable town girl. Mingled with descriptions of the beauties of the country, the story of this marriage and its effect on each member of the family is told as it appears to the intellectual, Henry; to the unpleasant Morton; and to the sweet and wholesome Sylvia.

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

"Tenderness and beauty are the words which come inevitably to mind. . . Here is a modern novel without the hectic quality of the morning newspaper. The world and its torments are here, beyond the mountain, but the Gaunt family, like most families everywhere, seldom looks beyond the mountain and finds its major joys and sorrows in the narrow, absorbing circle of life that must be lived from day to day." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p3 Mr 9 '41 900w

"Vermont life on a mountain-side farm is beautifully portrayed in this distinguished story of the Gaunt family. Mr. Brace avoids all sentimental bogs; he is not too poetic for ordinary mortals; he does not try to impress his masculinity upon you with a steady bouquet from the stables. . . Of course Mr. Brace's novel has a few faults. The stories of the three Gaunts are as separate as the stripes of a knitted afghan. . . But only at rare points do you see them all together in an even light. . . However this is the most satisfying farm story since Gladys Hasty Carroll wrote 'As the Earth Turns.'" Olga Owens

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 500w

Reviewed by Seymour Linscott

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 2 '41 600w

"One man who is deeply stirred by New England scenery and has the words to translate his emotions into exquisite prose is Gerald Warner Brace. His three novels, 'The Islands,' 'The Wayward Pilgrims,' and most recently, 'Light on a Mountain,' voice an intuitive response to New England's natural beauty, accompanied by an almost paradoxically intellectual approach to the observation of life and nature, and considerable, though probably not quite complete, understanding of the character of New Englanders. Adorning these gifts and attainments is his ability to make magic with words." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 26 '41 550w

"For those who know and love Vermont hills or, for that matter, any hills, 'Light on a Mountain,' Gerald Warner Brace's new novel, will be a heart-warming experience. He knows his country and the characters who people it; he knows the contours and the temper of the land throughout the seasons of the year and the effects they bring." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '41 550w

"Not much plot (not enough, probably), too many anecdotal digressions, some very pretty weather (all seasons), rather too many vaporish ideas, and pages of the grandest, most believable, humorous, hard-bitten, shrewd Yankee talk you'll find anywhere."

— + New Yorker 17:75 Mr 8 '41 40w

Reviewed by Bess Jones

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 15 '41 700w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv summer '41 30w

BRADBROOK, MURIEL CLARA. Joseph Conrad, Józef Teodor Konrad Nalecz Korzeniowski, Poland's English genius. 80p $1 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Conrad, Joseph [A41-4007]

Study of Joseph Conrad as evidenced in his works, and an analysis of some of those works. "Any profits accruing to the author from the sale of the book will be given to the Polish refugee fund."

"Miss Bradbrook's study is brief but meaty. I know of nothing on Conrad of equal length to match it. In this hour of Poland's anguish it is good to be reminded of the genius of her sons, especially of Conrad's from whose best work there springs a sustaining force which was never more needed than now."

J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 154:242 N '41 600w

"An excellent book." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 20 '41 120w

New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 40w

"The work is well done, without hyperbole, without more than a short footnote of regular text-book psychology."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Ag 2 '41 420w

BRADBROOK, MURIEL CLARA, and LLOYD THOMAS, MARY GWYNETH. Andrew Marvell. 161p $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge] 821 Marvell, Andrew [41-10835]

"The authors [both Fellows of Girton] discuss Marvell as he is revealed in the different aspects of his work: the pastoral, the satirical, the controversial, and the epistolary; this is not a biography, since, as they point out, [his] life and achievements were of a sure and civilized kind which do not so readily invite analysis as acceptance." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Books p9 Ag 3 '41 550w

Reviewed by B. I. Evans

Manchester Guardian p7 N 8 '40 310w

"Such 'defence' of Marvell's character and politics as was needed has been convincingly provided by the authors of this little book. Their analysis of his poetry (though there would be room for a little more of it) is exact and sensitive." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:474 N 9 '40 800w

"With wit and with discernment, these two English scholars—who are subtle critics as well—have written, in an astonishingly brief

BRADBROOK, M. C.—Continued
compass, what I take to be the best book about Andrew Marvell since Legouis's monumental study in French." Dudley Pitts
+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Je 14 '41 450w

Spec 165:620 D 6 '40 250w

"The study is not so likely to win new readers for Marvell as was the enchanting little essay by Miss V. Sackville-West that made the first number of 'The Poets on the Poets'; but its learning and its critical acumen combine to give Marvell for the first time the importance that he deserves. The authors study him 'both as a representative of his age and as individually remarkable.' If we had a complaint to make, it would be that, for the sake of readers in general, they might have spread themselves more generously on the first of the two aspects."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 4 '41 1100w

BRADEN, MRS LOUISE (GARLAND). Two to make a wife. 263p $2 Modern age 41-3112

"A queer novel about a group of unsavory people in a Middle Western town. There is a hard-drinking, hunchbacked aunt in love with a hard-drinking, weak nephew. The young man's father writes for the pulp magazines and hates himself for it, his half-crazy grandmother spends her nights in audible prayer, his wife—half-Russian and outspokenly self-analytical—finds family life under these circumstances rather hard going." New Yorker

"Mrs. Braden's style suits her story, and both are somewhat difficult to follow." George Conrad

— Books p10 F 2 '41 280w

"If you would like to meet a sadistic and malformed spinster, a promiscuous young man, and a pseudo-sophisticated group of small-town people in the Middle West, Miss Braden has scraped them up for you. . . Perhaps Miss Braden was trying to shock readers like us. Well, she does." O. O.

— Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 200w

New Repub 104:350 Mr 10 '41 40w

"Half a dozen people, ranging in disposition from depraved to merely unpleasant, comprise the personnel of this curious novel. If you do not feel drawn to it by such a brief appraisal, consider that it is skillfully written and that some of it is wicked enough to linger and come back to haunt you in the middle of the night." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 26 '41 280w

New Yorker 16:71 Ja 25 '41 60w

"It would be a considerable chore to list all the things that are bad in Mrs. Braden's novel. Her publishers presumably found some good in it." Frances Smyth

— Sat R of Lit 23:10 F 15 '41 240w

BRADLEY, CHARLES. Schizophrenia in childhood. 152p $2.50 Macmillan

616.8982 Dementia, Children, Abnormal and backward 41-6088

"One hundred and eighteen references, principally from German, English, Italian, and French sources, make up this review of the available literature concerning schizophrenia in children. The report follows a medical textbook procedure by giving an account of the incidence, symptomatology, course, types, etiology, psychopathology, laboratory findings, diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis of schizophrenia in children. This presentation, as indicated, is developed entirely from the existing literature, although there are included brief clinical accounts of five cases of childhood schizophrenia." Am J Soc

"The author has done well here in bringing together a mass of extremely heterogeneous and sometimes contradictory material. The general effect is still somewhat confusing to the reader, but he will find here very convenient access to the original sources. The author has been wise in not attempting to impose a superficial and artificial order upon material which in its present state of development is naturally immature and disorganized. Generally he is content to summarize without undertaking a critical analysis, and in some cases this is to be regretted." Miles Murphy

+ Am J Psychol 54:623 O '41 480w

Reviewed by H. W. Dunham

Am J Soc 47:645 Ja '42 330w

BRADLEY, HUGH. Havana, Cinderella's city. 456p $3.50 Doubleday

972.91 Havana, Cuba 41-52043

History of the city of Havana, which is in essence also a history of the whole island of Cuba. In colorful detail Havana's four hundred years of existence is sketched, with pictures of the outstanding personalities connected with its history. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"An excellent chapter describes the hour-by-hour existence of Havana on a typical day during the closing years of Spanish rule. Readers who look for racy accounts of the underworld will not be gratified. The author makes it clear that at all times for the past 420 years Havana has been noted for its sexual immorality, but he does not go into the details. Open and above-board gambling, sports, the stage and political gossip claim the major part of his attention. He has written a book that will be enjoyed by the thousands of Americans who have visited Havana, as well as the thousands more who intend to go there some day." W. A. Roberts

+ Books p22 N 30 '41 850w

"This latest book about Cuba focuses its interest on history; and it is as well not to allow yourself to be prejudiced by the jacket's description of the history as 'most unique.' In spite of that discouraging appeal to impossibility in the blurb-writer's assault upon the English language, the book itself is good reading. And the history can no doubt be fairly credited with individual and highly colorful characteristics."

+ N Y Times p35 N 23 '41 450w

BRADLEY, PRESTON. New wealth for you. 164p $1.50 Stokes

248 Christianity. Conduct of life 41-5764

A volume of addresses and articles on the religious aspects of a satisfactory personal life, by a popular radio preacher. Contents: New courage for a new day; Three cheers for youth! Bedrock anchorage; My life's work; The great affirmation; They did—you can! Contemplating matrimony; From rut to route; To hang on—let go! Behold the Book! Creative power; The inner need.

"Dr. Bradley puts his convictions in simple language, and for many readers these exhortations will have inspirational value."

+ Books p11 Jl 13 '41 80w

"These twelve short homilies by a popular radio preacher are interesting to read, meet us where we live, replete with colorful anecdotes and illustrations. No need to be captious in finding them a bit thin in spots and rather too pat in their solutions; they offer a deal of common sense and encouragement to the average man and woman baffled by the problem of living." J. H. T.

+ Churchman 155:34 S 1 '41 50w

BRADSHAW, MARION JOHN. Philosophical foundations of faith; a contribution toward a philosophy of religion. 254p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

201 Religion—Philosophy. Philosophy and religion 41-9269

"In this series of the Hazen Lectures, delivered at the Middlebury Convocation of Congregational Ministers, Professor Bradshaw attempts to answer the question, 'What does it mean to be a Christian?' His unique approach to this frequent interrogation lies in the fact that he tries to find an answer by going to the six founders of modern philosophy: Descartes, Hobbes, Locke, Pascal, Spinoza, and Leibniz. Through an investigation of the religious philosophy of these six bachelor philosophers, none of whom, interestingly enough, ever became a professor, he seeks to determine their attitudes toward Christianity, hoping thereby to answer the question of the Hazen Lectures." Crozer Q

"This attempt to deal with 'the religious ideas of thinkers who, however famous they are as philosophers, may not unfairly be regarded as amateurs in theology and laymen in religion' is significant for students both of religion and of philosophy. . . . This book is unique in its treatment of Christian faith. Although certain of its interpretations may be challenged, all who read it will be impressed and stimulated by its clarity and insight." I. E. Lunger

+ — Christian Century 58:1082 S 3 '41 400w
"Personally, I do not feel that the basic interest of the Hazen Lectures is satisfied by Professor Bradshaw's treatment. If this book were presented to a non-Christian in the Orient or to an unbeliever in America as a guide to what it means to be a Christian, I fear no clear impression would be left on the mind of the reader. Admirable as the lectures are as a presentation of the religious philosophy of these seventeenth century thinkers, they do not make us sure as to just what a Christian is. . . . One further word of commendation for this volume is in order. It is a much needed antidote for the view that we need be concerned only about the utilitarian value of religion, but not about its ultimate truth. Through these founders of modern philosophical thought Professor Bradshaw makes it clear that religion has rootage not in man or custom alone, but also in the structure of the universe. That is to say, religion is true not because it works, but rather because it corresponds, when true, to the very nature of reality." G. W. Davis
+ — Crozer Q 19:71 Ja '42 600w

BRAHMS, CARYL, pseud. See Abrahams, D. C.

BRAM, ISRAEL. How to prevent goiter. 182p il $2 Dutton

616.44 Goiter 41-1257

Discussion of the causes, treatment, and prevention of the different kinds of thyroid disturbances and goiter. The author is a physician, but has written his book with the layman in mind. Index.

Booklist 37:353 Ap 1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:51 Mr '41

BRANCH, GERALD EYRE KIRKWOOD, and CALVIN, MELVIN. The theory of organic chemistry. 523p $4 Prentice-Hall

547 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Chemistry, Organic 41-4486

"A treatise for graduate students and for chemists who desire to learn the most recent advances made in electronic structural theory, some of its relations to quantum mechanics, and its applications to organic chemistry. Included are provocative chapters discussing atomic and molecular structure, physical properties, equilibrium—acid strength, the rate factor in chemical behavior, and reactions of the double bond. Good author and subject indexes are provided." N Y New Tech Bks

"With commendable ambition the authors of this volume have undertaken to prepare a textbook on phenomena which modern research is still in the process of explaining. And they have been remarkably successful. Ideas are set forth clearly and in logical sequence. Numerous excellent illustrations aid considerably in the presentation."

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:131 Mr '41 200w

"By no means is this text a substitute for the excellent texts recently published by Professors Pauling and Hammett. It should serve rather as a companion text to these, and ultimately all three books should become the personal property of those who are deeply interested in the question, 'Why do organic molecules react as they actually do?'" R. T. Arnold

+ J Phys Chem 45:1051 Je '41 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:6 Ja '41

BRAND, ANNA. Thunder before seven. 438p $2.50 Doubleday

41-4405

Historical novel about the revolt of Texas against Mexico, ending with the battle of San Jacinto. The hero is a man fated to attract women, who does not want to be tied down by marriage, and loses the one woman he really loves.

"I suppose it is the humorlessness of the handling that accounts in part for the effect of the novel. Much of the descriptive matter is effective, and Miss Brand knows the details of life and, in general, the people of early Texas. She stages some first-rate scenes of festivities and conversations and introduces a score of early Texas types, old settlers and newcomers. But her central story will, I think, inflame that tiny spark of misogyny to be found in every man, so far as male readers go. I even think most women will find themselves on Blazeley's side." F. T. Marsh

Books p8 Mr 9 '41 1500w

"A novel which may have had great potential possibilities, but as it stands, is entirely lacking in reader interest." R. C.

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 220w

"Anna Brand's splendid narrative of 'settling' in Texas . . . is compelling, exciting reading." Frances McKee

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 6 '41 700w

"There is the usual colorful background of Indians, Mexicans, planters, backwoodsmen, battles, and duels to keep things popping."

New Yorker 17:85 Mr 15 '41 60w

BRAND, CARL FREMONT. British labour's rise to power. (Hoover lib. on war, revolution, and peace. Publication) 305p $3.50 Stanford univ. press

329.942 Labor party (Great Britain). Trade unions—Great Britain. Great Britain—Politics and government 41-12229

Eight studies which "center about the British Labour party . . . one of the significant political forces in the world today." The author is professor of history at Stanford university. Contents: The conversion of the British labour and the wartime coalitions; The war aims and peace programs of British labour, 1914-1918; The reaction of British labour to the policies of President Wilson during the World war; The attitude of British labour toward President Wilson during the peace conference; British labour and the international during the World war; British labour and the reconstruction of the International, 1919-1923; The British labour party and the communists. Index.

"Any reader who is interested in the rise of the British labor movement will find in this volume a valuable summary of its basic developments. Mr. Brand has based his research upon extensive examination of source materials made available to him in Britain and by the Hoover Library on War, Revolution, and Peace.

BRAND, C. F.—Continued

His scholarly approach to the subject matter and his emphasis upon annotation are enhanced by an excellent style. His book, therefore, recommends itself to a reader who wishes to obtain general facts about British labor history as well as to one who desires to pursue the subject in greater detail, even beyond the limitations of this book." M. E. Murphy
+ Am Econ R 31:915 D '41 800w

"A chronic complaint of reviewers of books on the British labor movement is the lack of a definitive history of the Labor party. Professor Brand's eight studies included in this volume make a notable contribution toward filling a part of this gap. . . A dual shortcoming of the book should be mentioned. Reliance is placed upon reporting events and facts gleaned from published primary sources, to the exclusion of considering forces and ideas available from individual participants and other writers." D. E. McHenry

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1170 D '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 4 '41 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:384 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer
Library J 66:613 Jl '41 80w

"Mr. Brand has collected considerable data that will be of value to the student. But he has unfortunately failed to set that material against the background of social and economic development that alone can give it meaning and significance. There is inadequate discussion of the doctrinal basis of the movement that is an important key to its history. . . And there is little here to help the American reader to an understanding of Labor's rise to a position of paramount importance in the state, or of its debacle of 1929-31 and the decade it subsequently spent wandering in the desert of political ineffectuality." D. W. Petegorsky

+ New Repub 105:258 Ag 25 '41 220w

Time 38:68 Jl 7 '41 300w

BRAND, MAX. The border kid. 303p $2 Dodd

Western story.

41-1050

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

"Splendid reading." Will Cuppy
+ Books p22 Mr 23 '41 80w

"Max Brand can spin the most preposterous of yarns with such amazing plausibility and such verisimilitude of detail that his readers are firmly held. In this new tale he is in top form. Purely as a preposterous yarn, seemingly written with the drive and glow of utter conviction, it is the best he has turned out in some time." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 19 '41 250w

BRAND, MAX. Dr Kildare takes charge. 210p $2 Dodd

41-16056

"This time young Dr. Jimmy Kildare takes on, in addition to his routine work as an interne, the salvation of a pair of young lovers determined on suicide, the reformation of the hard-hearted father in the case, the rescue of a man dying of pernicious anemia and, finally, the health, debts and general well-being of a whole town." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ag 24 '41 120w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p24 S 21 '41 190w

BRAND, MAX. The long chance. 299p $2 Dodd

41-10768

Story of the old West, in the days before the Civil war, and of a husky young man from a frontier trading post who took the place of a cowardly Southern youth for a year, with surprising results.

"It's one of Max Brand's best." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 Ag 10 '41 90w

"A new kind of romance from this writer, immensely clever, perfectly integrated, narrated with a matter-of-fact plausibility, and more carefully and more smoothly written than any yarn Max Brand has turned out in several years." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 20 '41 170w

BRAND, MAX. Vengeance trail. 305p $2 Dodd

41-19715

Western story for older boys.

"This is a major Brand with some eloquent Western prose and no skimping." Will Cuppy
+ Books p25 O 19 '41 80w

"This is really a story for boys—older boys—and as such is a superior article, devised with Max Brand's fertility of invention." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 N 9 '41 170w

BRAND, MAX. Young Dr Kildare. 237p $2 Dodd

41-3324

In which Dr Kildare, hero of several moving pictures, goes to a New York hospital to serve his internship, differs with his superiors once too often, and is almost—but not quite—fired.

"If you are a regular patron of the pictures, you need no introduction to Dr. Kildare. If not, here is Max Brand's third novel about the young physician, concerned with his career just after he finished his medical education, and you will find it a well constructed and compactly dramatic story." Lisle Bell

+ Books p19 Mr 9 '41 230w

"If you have seen any of the Dr. Kildare movies you will know just about what to expect from this book." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p13 Je 1 '41 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 O 18 '41 60w

BRAND, RENEE. Short days ago; tr. by Margaret H. Beigel and Gertrud M. Kurth. 211p $2 Farrar

41-1051

The characters of the novel are a group of refugees and the scene a No-Man's Land across the German frontier into which are pushed men for whom Europe has no use. "They are ministers and physicians, teachers and engineers, painters, writers, mothers, people in love, children." They have no provisions, no protection from the cold, nothing to do but to attempt to keep alive.

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

"[The book] is written with a sustained intensity of emotion, compounded of the author's love and longing for the Europe now obscured, her grief in present suffering and admiration of courage, and her resentment toward an outer world which cannot realize that such things are and feels generous when provision has been made for fifty refugee children. 'Short Days Ago' is not a comfortable book to read, especially on a night when cold rain lashes the windowpanes. What redeems it from despair and lights it with a glow you will not readily forget is the integrity one finds in human beings who have been pushed to the verge of survival." Mary Ross
Books p8 F 9 '41 650w

Reviewed by C. M. Healey

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 280w

"Miss Brand describes their plight with horror and indignation, but her characters are only symbols for all such outcasts. The novel about them still remains to be written."

New Repub 104:158 F 3 '41 30w

"This first novel or rather novelette by an exiled German writer is a concise, deeply moving story, different from any of the refugee books this reviewer has read. . . Much of it reads like poetry, somewhat abstract poetry which, so one fears, might easily carry the author too far from the story. Yet she always catches herself to land safely with open eyes on the frozen soil of No Man's Land, amid the pitiful cluster of forgotten men, women and children, who are busy keeping alive." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 F 2 '41 800w

"The atmosphere of horror and fear is well conveyed, but the story is too abstractly and impersonally handled to be really effective."

New Yorker 16:65 F 8 '41 30w

Pratt p10 spring '41

BRANDEIS, LOUIS DEMBITZ. Brandeis guide to the modern world; ed. by Alfred Lief. 375p $2.75 Little

308.1 Economics. Social problems. Political science 41-25590

Excerpts, sometimes only a sentence or short paragraph, sometimes several pages in length, taken from Judge Brandeis' writings, speeches, testimony before Congressional committees, letters, conversations, etc. arranged under a variety of heads from America: a criticism, and American ideals to Woman suffrage. Index.

Booklist 38:183 F. 1 '42

Reviewed by R. E. Gossage

Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 110w

"With the necessary stricture that Lief's method precludes an easy relating of Brandeis's views to their historical setting—an easy understanding of their dynamic inconsistencies—his 'Brandeis Guide to the Modern World' remains unusually useful." A. M. Lee

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 D 27 '41 550w

BRANDT, RICHARD B. Philosophy of Schleiermacher; the development of his theory of scientific and religious knowledge. 350p $3 Harper

193.6 Schleiermacher, Friedrich Ernst Daniel. Knowledge, Theory of. Intuition 41-4806

"Schleiermacher's collected works take up thirty-one volumes. Among other things, he wrote on religion, theology, ethics, metaphysics, science, aesthetics, history, education, politics, and psychology. Since Dr. Brandt hardly touches on the last seven topics, his book cannot be described as an introduction to the whole of Schleiermacher, as an introduction to the purely philosophical portions (as the title would lead one to suppose it is), or even as an essay on 'the development of his theory of scientific and religious knowledge' (as the subtitle characterizes it). It is a study of Schleiermacher's central ideas in ethics and religion as they developed over the years." (Ethics) Selected bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 100w

"Brandt's book helps to fasten interest on certain aspects of Schleiermacher's thought. Particularly well done is the background of Schleiermacher's philosophy. Because of Brandt's primary interest in intuition too much space, perhaps, is devoted to Schleiermacher's theory of feeling. Brandt also analyzes it mostly in the light of modern philosophical and psychological theories rather than first of all against the Kantian categorical approach. . . Apart from this rather usual lack of perceptive, Brandt's work is thorough, significant, and stimulating." N. F. S. Ferré

+ — Crozer Q 18:264 J1 '41 600w

"Dr. Brandt has written an excellent book. It can be read with profit by anyone interested in ethics or religion, and this irrespective of whether or not he knows or cares anything about Schleiermacher." Paul Weiss

+ Ethics 51:490 J1 '41 550w

"Dr. Brandt wisely withholds judgment on some points where the evidence is not sufficient for a definite decision, contenting himself with a full presentation of the evidence. The volume is a valuable contribution, for philosophers and theologians alike, to the understanding of Schleiermacher." G. C. S.

+ J Philos 38:500 Ag 28 '41 380w

"English and American expositions of Schleiermacher's thought have been regrettably scarce. The lack of a thorough interpretation of his thinking, particularly along philosophical lines, has been a great handicap to students who wished to have guidance in their study of Schleiermacher's theology, especially in so far as they looked for an understanding of his philosophical presuppositions. Professor Brandt's book therefore fills an urgent need. Its obvious merits are so considerable that its usefulness will not be seriously impaired by its equally obvious shortcomings." William Fauck

+ — J Religion 22:100 Ja '42 1400w

BRANSON, HENRY C. I'll eat you last. 302p $2 Simon & Schuster

41-11191

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p8 J1 13 '41 280w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p19 J1 13 '41 130w

New Yorker 17:56 J1 19 '41 50w

"Literate, logical and leisurely opus presenting an original and believable sleuth and winding up in blaze of action. Worth reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 J1 26 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e J1 27 '41 60w

BRANT, IRVING. James Madison, the Virginia revolutionist. 471p il $4.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Madison, James (W) 41-19279

This is the first volume of a projected three-volume biography of the fourth president of the United States. The author's interest in Madison is a result of his studies for an earlier work, Storm Over the Constitution (Book Review Digest, 1936, 1937). Index.

"Readers will undoubtedly be fewer because the author insists on fighting the battles of scholarship in public, with overt efforts to unhorse proponents of a contrary view, instead of telling his story and sticking to its own affirmations. But perhaps the method is necessary in a field already held by entrenched opinion; and perhaps the number of general readers is neither here nor there in connection with a work that asks to be judged by the pressure it puts on the professional historian to reconsider various of his judgments." Wilson Follett

Atlantic D '41 300w

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"Madison is remembered for his unfortunate Presidency rather than for his far more significant role in the Revolution. . . Mr. Brant's volume—the first of a series—embraces only the first thirty years of Madison's life. It is sympathetic and, indeed, generous, but all the skill of an advocate cannot conceal the fact that the popular judgment on Madison is a comprehensible one. . . This is an admirable

BRANT, IRVING—Continued
book, scholarly, intelligent, and spirited. What it lacks, chiefly, is narrative vigor." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p4 S 28 '41 1400w

Reviewed by Clifton Macon
Churchman 155:21 O 15 '41 350w

"This is only the first volume of Irving Brant's life of Madison, but it is taking a small chance, if any, to predict that it will become our best biography of the fourth President. . . If, in his next volume, Brant analyzes the conflicting viewpoints in the Constitutional Convention as keenly as he does the fields of controversy here, he may give us one of the few great books on American government. What he has already done makes it 'easier to comprehend a fact which has grown increasingly mysterious to Americans of the twentieth century: the fact that their eighteenth-century ancestors were revolutionists who overthrew by force of arms the government under which they were born.'" Max Gissen

+ New Repub 106:91 Ja 19 '42 1150w

"A splendid job, though too much scholarly argument gets into the text."

+ — New Yorker 17:102 O 11 '41 70w

"Throughout his book, as in this instance, the author combines a firm grasp of his materials with an expert pen and a judiciously employed sense of humor. The product is always readable and never vulgar. More history should be written in this fashion." S. L. Jackson

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 27 '41 700w

BRAY, JOHN LEIGHTON. Non-ferrous production metallurgy. 430p $4 Wiley

669 Metallurgy 41-6128

College textbook, which considers the material from a chemical standpoint. Each chapter contains: a history of the metal; economic situation; properties; marketing and prices; uses; ores in which the metal is found; and technical details of the production of the metal from its ores. References at ends of chapters. The author is head of the School of chemical and metallurgical engineering, Purdue university. Index.

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

"A comprehensive survey presented in a clear style, suitable for use as a text or as a reference. . . A very helpful and logical order is followed in the discussion of each metal. . . On the whole, the author has contributed a very concise and yet complete presentation of the subject matter covered by the title, and includes a good index and carefully selected list of references after each chapter." J. J. Jacobs, Jr.

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:163 Je '41 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:44 Jl '41

BRAZER, MRS ESTHER (STEVENS). Early American decoration. ltd ed 273p pl $16.50 Pond-Ekberg co, State & Andrew sts, Springfield, Mass.

747 House decoration. Furniture. Design. Decorative 40-27834

"A scholarly and enlivened account of an art, the practice of which is fast becoming extinct, is authoritatively presented by Mrs. Brazer. Stenciled and free-hand decoration of furniture, tinware, and even walls and floors by craftsmen flourished in this country more than a century ago. Many of the examples which survive have been tracked down and studied with meticulous care and skill by the author over a period of 20 years. . . Included are Hitchcock and fiddle-back chairs; chests, tea caddies, trays, candle sconces, bellows, and other household furnishings." Boston Transcript

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p9 D 22 '40 320w

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 300w

BRECHT, ARNOLD, and GLASER, COM-STOCK. The art and technique of administration in German ministries. 191p $2 Harvard univ press

354.4306 Administrative law—Germany. Germany—Politics and government 40-33043

"The volume deals primarily with the German General Code of Administrative Procedure of 1926, in the development of which the senior of the two authors played a leading part. The Code is translated and discussed. This Code and the structure of German ministries, although the products of monarchical tradition and democratic experiment, have continued without substantial change under authoritarian rule. . . the technique of administration is not immediately dependent on the political form of government." Am Pol Sci R

"The comparisons between the structure of German ministries and of our own governmental agencies are interesting but somewhat questionable, since the statements regarding our structure strike this reviewer as greatly over-simplified in the effort to get brief generalizations." Lewis Meriam

Am Pol Sci R 35:383 Ap '41 700w

"American students of administration, who have so generally neglected the procedures herein discussed, and practical American administrators, who have worked out but seldom explained to others a variety of methods for handling communications into and out of their offices, will profit greatly from an intensive study of this little volume. For them it is, in Bacon's words, a book 'to be chewed and digested.'" William Anderson

Ann Am Acad 213:236 Ja '41 350w

Foreign Affairs 19:683 Ap '41 20w

BREKHUS, PETER JOHN. Your teeth; their past, present, and probable future; with a foreword by Irvine McQuarrie. 255p il $2.50 Univ. of Minn.

617.6 Teeth 41-11472

"This book renders a partial account of the clinical and experimental research carried on at the University of Minnesota School of Dentistry during the past two decades. Much of the material has appeared previously, though in somewhat different form, in dental journals. . . [The author has] endeavored to refrain from treating any of our major dental problems as settled and to distinguish the few disconnected but positively known facts about our teeth from the innumerable theories that have been brought forth from time to time to explain those facts. The theory [favored]—that decreased functioning is mainly responsible for dental deterioration in civilized man—is presented as a possible point of departure for future research." (Author's pref) Index.

"This book is timely. It appears when the country is particularly conscious of the part played by dental diseases in the physical unfitness of many young men otherwise eligible for military service. . . This book is an important contribution toward stimulating a greater interest in the problem of dental diseases and their relation to public health. A useful and extensive bibliography, both scientific and popular, accompanies each of the eleven chapters." B. R. East

+ Am J Pub Health 31:1099 O '41 650w

Booklist 38:3 S '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

BRENNAN, FREDERICK HAZLITT. The Wookey. 249p $2 Knopf

812 World war, 1939—Drama

(W) 41-51950

Play based on the reactions of the inhabitants of London's Limehouse district in the present war. Mr Wookey, a domineering tugboat captain, having offered his advice to the government and had it turned down, was rather bitter on the subject of the war until Dunkirk. There he displayed such bravery in evacuating men, that the government he'd turned against sent him a gold medal. And when the war came to his own section of London, the Wookey took up the duties of fire warden, and became a staunch fighter for the "land of hope and glory."

Booklist 38:92 N 15 '41

"This reviewer was greatly disappointed at the stage performance, because the actor playing the Wookey seemed too soft and sentimental and not particularly real. Most of the players, in fact, seemed merely actors putting on a cockney accent with more or less difficulty. A reading of the text suggests that the play could have much more bite and earthiness than New York theater-goers have had a chance to realize." W. P. Eaton

Books p13 D 28 '41 160w

BRENNER, RICA. Poets of our time. 411p il $2.50 Harcourt

928 Poets, English, Poets, American, English poetry—History and criticism. American poetry—History and criticism

(W) 41-51653

Continuing the author's earlier book Ten Modern Poets (Book Review Digest, 1930) this is a collection of biographical and critical sketches of nine modern English and American poets. A list of poetical works accompanies each sketch. Those included are: Stephen Vincent Benét; Archibald MacLeish; Vachel Lindsay; Thomas Stearns Eliot; Sara Teasdale; Wystan Hugh Auden; Stephen Spender; Elinor Wylie; William Butler Yeats.

Booklist 37:386 Ap 15 '41

"Miss Brenner's selections and quotations from the poets are aptly chosen, skillfully interpreted. She does a good job tracing the developments and changes in the work of each from his early writing to the present. She has had access to a considerable body of excellent critical work on poets like Eliot, Auden, Spender, MacLeish, and has used this freely in direct paraphrase. On her own she is less dependable, and apt to slip into academic clichés. As a whole the essays are as adequate as anything yet written on modern poets in the way of supplementary reading for students." M. L. Becker

+ — Books p7 J1 6 '41 280w

"I think it is fair to say of 'Poets of Our Time' that it is thorough, sincere and that it will be very useful to all interested beginners; but that the author has compiled rather than imaginatively felt her evaluations of her ten poets." John Holmes

+ — Boston Transcript p9 Ap 14 '41 500w

"It is enough to say that the critical analysis is never beyond the comprehension of the cultivated reader. The biographical details add immensely to the appreciation of the poetry of today." L. L. R.

+ — Churchman 155:35 Ap 1 '41 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

"Valuable as 'Poets of Our Time' is, it would be much more so, and cheering too, if she had laid down her own concepts of the norms of poetry and thereafter used such a yardstick for her determinations of when the poet was really writing poetry, when he was writing verse (or worse—to repeat a pun), when he was merely indulging in personal expression or even exhibitionism. In such procedure, we might find truer reappraisal than any heretofore available. We might even find a new point of departure for sounder critique in this particular field." J. G. Brunini

+ — Commonweal 34:20 Ap 25 '41 420w

"As in the former volume, the make-up is adult, and, except for some restraint in the personal history of its subjects, the material bears no resemblance to a juvenile. Whether because of the treatment or because of the selection, this group seems too academic for adolescents. The chapter on Vachel Lindsay is handled more objectively and at good length, but it is the only one, I believe, understandable generally to readers under college age." Maude Adams

Library J 66:309 Ap 1 '41 110w

"The book is far from being a scholarly work either as biography or criticism, but it has an informal ease and a simplicity which are gently disarming. The object of the author is obviously to increase the enjoyment and understanding of poetry and poets, and her success may be willingly conceded by the not-too-demanding."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 8 '41 250w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

BRETZ, J. HARLEN. Earth sciences; meteorology, oceanography, geology. 260p il maps $2.25; college ed $1.75 Wiley

551 Geophysics. Meteorology. Ocean (W) 41-1026

Introductory textbook for college students giving in condensed form the fundamentals of meteorology and physical geography. The book is profusely illustrated with maps, diagrams and photographs, has selected references at chapter ends, a glossary, and index.

Booklist 37:320 Mr 15 '41

"The book from the first to the last page is delightful in its method. It is so informal and stimulating as to be quite without the usual run of textbooks. All during its reading I saw it rather as a book for the layman, thoroughly scientific and yet exciting in its stimulation, in its demands upon the thinking processes. . . . I, who anticipated boredom, found the volume good and stimulating reading. If I recommend it as a text, I also recommend it to the scientifically minded layman." Roderick Peattie

+ — Books p7 J1 20 '41 200w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:22 Ap '41

BREWER, LEIGHTON. Virgin water; thirty-five years in quest of the squaretail trout; phot. by Helen H. Brewer. 223p $2.50 Coward-McCann

799.1755 Trout fishing 41-51737

Experiences in fishing for trout in the Adirondacks, in New England, and Quebec. The author began his fishing experiences in the Adirondack streams, and later built his own camp in Quebec province.

Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

BRIDGES, HORACE JAMES. Humanity on trial; a brief for the defense; with an introd. by Hans Kohn. 334p $2.50 Liveright

170 Conduct of life. Ethics 41-9286

In this volume the author, leader of the Chicago Ethical society, provides a series of lectures on the present day world crisis. "Underlying Dr. Bridges' discussion of various and not necessarily related subjects is a fundamental moral conviction. Our modern world has failed, and is now going to pieces, because of its defiance, if not actual denial, of that spiritual universe and its laws in which, whether we know it or not, we are living out our destiny. . . . In the closing chapters, Dr. Bridges retires to the strongholds of his ethical faith, and establishes there anew the things which cannot be shaken—life's deepest craving, which is for 'the effectual realization and expression of what is distinctive and unique in our several personalities.'" Books

"This book attracts attention and holds it. . . . Dr. Bridges is frankly critical of our age. But he is no common scold, no censorious cynic. He is full of disgust, but not of despair. For his faith is not lost, but remains staunch and strong as ever in 'utter loyalty to Right and Truth as it is given to us to grasp them.' This, he insists, is 'the highest religious experience.' The world desperately needs such counsel as this." J. H. Holmes

BRIDGES, H. J.—Continued

+ Books p8 Je 15 '41 330w

"Dr. Bridges is a clear thinker, and sets forth much that is worthy of attention." T. L. Leishman

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 23 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"The book searches for a more valid and reliable standard of human values and a more vigorous adherence. Where one differs from the author it will be at points where difference is inevitable. Dr. Bridges belongs to that select company of unquestioned integrity of mind and spirit. Not the least valuable portions of his book will be found in his criticisms of practical endeavors in the interest of democracy and the good life. What he has to say about social security, progressive education, the youth of today, and daily life, should not be ignored." J. P. Jones

+ Survey 77:309 O '41 450w

BRIDGES, WILLIAM. Big zoo; photographed by Desider Holisher. 160p $2 Viking

590.74 New York (city). Zoological park. Animals, Habits and behavior of (W) 41-13066

Story of a large zoo, the difficulties involved in acquiring and handling the wild animals, birds, and reptiles, taking care of them when they are sick, and the reactions of the people who visit the zoo. Each section is illustrated with a collection of excellent photographs. "The book is essentially an inside story of the New York Zoological Park (usually called the Bronx Zoo), but it could be the story of any large, well-conducted zoo." (Library J)

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"The warm, personal interest taken by the narrator in his subject makes that of any animal-loving child catch fire. Indeed, a grown-up will not readily lay down the book. . . . As going to the zoo is a family affair, this photographic equivalent of doing so is recommended for family use." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 O 12 '41 240w

Churchman 155:5 D 15 '41 40w

"The most satisfactory zoo book for all ages that I have had the privilege of examining." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 150w

BRIER, HOWARD M. Smoke eater; il. by Louis Cunette. 251p $2 Random house

(W) 41-7938

Story of the exploits of a young fireman who while he acknowledges the virtues of traditional ways of fighting fire is also keen to find new ways. For boys in their teens.

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

"The material in this book, says its jacket, 'has been approved for its technical accuracy by the Fire Department of New York City,' which takes a load off my mind. All I need report upon is how the material is used; there is a fire going on somewhere so continuously through these rapid pages that I could never have stopped to question the facts. . . . The story is well handled for vocational purposes; even if the fire-bug is theatrical, the thrills are those fire departments take for granted." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 11 '41 320w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:378 D '41 140w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 130w

"There are some uncomfortably graphic descriptions of fires of all degrees, which will send the reader galloping through the chapters at a fire engine's speed and which leave no doubt as to the courage and integrity demanded of firemen in the ordinary course of duty. There is a great deal of information about modern fire-fighting methods, with special emphasis upon the chemical method, all of which has been checked for chemical accuracy by the Fire Department of New York City." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 11 '41 320w

"A good example of stimulating fiction for adolescent youth, and men who are still young. Mr. Brier knows fire-fighting down to the last yard of hose. The adventures of his fire-eating hero in the pursuit of arsonists and in the midst of terrific conflagrations makes stimulating reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 10 '41 40w

BRIGGS, ELIZABETH DARLING, ed. See American library association. Board on library service to children and young people. Subject index to children's plays

BRIGGS, THOMAS HENRY. Pragmatism and pedagogy. 124p $1.25 Macmillan

370.1 Education—Aims and objectives. Pragmatism. Culture 40-7264

"In the small volume representing the twelfth in the Lecture Series of Kappa Delta Pi, Briggs has given to educators another interpretation of the educational needs of the day in terms of a specific philosophical point of view. In the light of the present dominating educational philosophy, it is appropriate that this point of view should be pragmatic." School R

Reviewed by M. M. Thompson

School R 48:629 O '40 900w

Reviewed by Charles Cogen

Social Studies 32:186 Ap '41 130w

BRINIG, MYRON. All of their lives. 518p $2.75 Farrar

41-7793

"Traces the paths of two Midwestern girls of contrasting character, describing the manner in which their lives are intertwined, the men they fight each other for, and the ambivalent relationship between them. The background (1900 to the post-first-World-War years) is painted in solidly, and there is loads of it." New Yorker

"A novel whose interest is evenly balanced between development of plot and delineation of character. There is a richness, amplitude, and depth in Mr. Brinig's literary canvas. He explores the human situation not only in a broad geographical and social sense but in the more elusive hiding place of the individual soul. . . . 'All of Their Lives' is its author's tenth book and the smooth blending of its heterogeneous parts proclaims the fact that a craftsman of much experience has performed his work expertly." Milton Hindus

+ Books p5 Je 29 '41 750w

"Top-heavy with irrelevant detail and wearisome with events too often foretold by the author, the novel sags and drags through over six hundred pages that are not worth the effort they take. Adults only. Not particularly recommended." Katharine Shorey

— Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 90w

New Repub 105:30 Jl 7 '41 40w

"Compared to Mr. Brinig's best seller of a few years ago, 'The Sisters' (to which it is to be compared), this is a shockingly vulgar story—vulgar in the exact sense of the word. It is written down—unless, which is more likely, it was written merely lazily. . . . But except for a few entertaining passages of period coloring—the early Nineteen Hundreds which 'The Sisters' celebrated so delightfully—there is little else to be said for the new Brinig." F. T. Marsh

— + N Y Times p4 Jl 6 '41 900w

"Mr. Brinig has something like a genius for banality; his insights into people have a well-worn finish, as if they had been handled by a large number of other novelists before him. The general effect is of skim-milk Dreiser. Perfectly readable, however, if you care to drowse through a long stretch of surface realism and meet casually many people who will hardly tax your capacity for understanding." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 17:62 Je 28 '41 130w

"The writing is quite uneven. At its worst it sounds like a gushing high school journalist free of tutorial restraint; at its best, as in the unforgettable description of a wealthy Jewish family and the account of Flavia's illness and death, it is excellent. Brinig has not yet freed himself from his fondness for the cliché and the sentimental, and he often generates tumult and shouting rather than real power. There is a rich vein of humor, and the satire is broad and unmistakable. The fact that Dora's various distresses seem pathetic rather than painfully tragic will endear the novel all the more to its many readers." R. A. Cordell

— + Sat R of Lit 24:10 Jl 5 '41 450w

BRINK, CAROL (RYRIE) (MRS RAYMOND WOODWARD BRINK). Lad with a whistle; il. by Robert Ball. 235p $2 Macmillan

(W) 41-14767

Romance for young readers about Scotland in the days of Sir Walter Scott. On the death of their grandfather, the Laird of Kirkness, Malcolm and Annie are left practically at the mercy of rascally servants and a lawyer no better than he should be. Rob, a poor fifer, who had been summoned just before their grandfather's death, was the children's one friend for a time, but he was equal to the task of regaining their birthright for them. Sir Walter Scott and the Ettrick Shepherd are among the characters. For readers of ten to fourteen.

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"It is a happily written story with period decorations in the same vein." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 9 '41 290w

Reviewed by F. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:379 D '41 20w

"It's as readable as any [book] this author has written. The plot may be improbable and some of the characters unconvincing as individuals, but the Scotland of a certain era is vividly portrayed. Particularly good use has been made of many Scotch phrases which add to the atmosphere and impede not at all the swift movement of the story." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 130w

"Fast-moving in its easy, popular style, this is an obvious kind of story, relying upon all the usual sentimental values of its early nineteenth century setting." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p12 N 9 '41 170w

Reviewed by G. G. Bates

Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 30w

BRINTON, CLARENCE CRANE. Nietzsche. (Makers of modern Europe) 266p il $2.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm

A41-767

Biographical study of Nietzsche in which the author says he "does not attempt to analyze Nietzsche's work from the point of view of a professional philosopher, nor to estimate his place in the long line of such philosophers. . . . This study is rather an attempt to place Nietzsche's work in the more general currents of 'opinion' in our time. It is a study of Nietzsche as politique et moraliste. Begun before Munich, finished after the defeat of France, it must bear some marks of contemporary events." (Author's pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This brief and vigorously written study fulfills a distinct need. . . . This book outgrows its primary purpose of discussing one of the most important makers of twentieth-century Europe; it becomes a most enlightening contribution to an understanding of our own time. In both respects it should be highly recommended. There is also an excellent bibliography which will enhance the value of the book for the scholar. But it would be a pity if the book did not find its way into the hands of the general educated public for whom it is destined in the first place." Hans Kohn

+ Ann Am Acad 215:206 My '41 410w

"This is, first, a brilliantly devastating account of Nietzsche as man and as philosopher. . . . It is, secondly, an even more devastating account of how the official apologists of National Socialism have distorted, falsified, and suppressed him in order to jack their warped structure on to an underpinning of respectable holy writ." W. F.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 220w

Booklist 37:463 Je 1 '41

"Brinton, a civilized man, a disciple of the Enlightenment, seeks to fathom the abyss of unreason. In other years, this would have been merely a witty and scholarly study. As we are slipping on the brink, this last effort of common sense assumes a pathetic significance. The book has something of the same quality as Chaplin's 'Great Dictator'; it is a gay and lucid satire on a subject which is epic in scale, and horrible beyond words. There is heroism in maintaining to the last that the Supermen are funny, even if we are to be crushed by them." Albert Guerard

+ Books p5 Mr 23 '41 1350w

"Nietzsche, looking down from Valhalla—if that is the right address—would probably not be displeased at the form of Professor Brinton's book, though he would disagree with much of the content. For the subject of this biography, like its author, appreciated a sparkling style, and knew how to turn a phrase; but the subject was certain also that he was a prophet, and he would hardly understand the author's doubts in this matter. . . . Professor Brinton's unpretentious book is a most useful estimate of the contemporary significance of Nietzsche. I wish that its dimensions had allowed more thorough probing into some aspects of the philosopher—the psychologist of decadence, for instance." R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 700w

"With Frederick Nietzsche's life, Professor Brinton deals in commendable brevity. An original contribution lies in his analysis of the influence of Richard and Cosima Wagner upon Nietzsche's development. But the extended arguments over the more unfortunate phases of Nietzsche's career, so frequent in the German sources, are wisely avoided."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 12 '41 550w

Reviewed by G. C. Seward

J Philos 38:470 Ag 14 '41 600w

Reviewed by Albert Lippman

Living Age 360:493 Jl '41 450w

"I wonder if it would not be timely to suggest that famous authors, poets, and scholars be somehow insured against the misuse of their reputation for the support of the successful politicians and gangsters of history? If so, Professor Brinton's work could become a useful pattern. In addition, it is a most readable book, throwing a brilliant flashlight of erudition into the blackout of German philosophical terminology." Rustem Vambéry

+ Nation 152:449 Ap 12 '41 700w

"This is by long odds the best interpretation we have yet had on the Philosopher With a Hammer." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 6 '41 850w

"For the past ten years, Professor Crane Brinton has been most effectively putting at the service of the general reader his stores of historical knowledge bearing on contemporary questions, and his great talents as a writer of lucid prose. . . . In the present work on Nietzsche, Mr. Brinton comes closer than ever before to the centre of the contemporary maelstrom, but there will be few to say that he has been pulled under." Jacques Barzun

BRINTON, C. C.—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 Mr 22 '41 1200w

"Prof Brinton, as always, writes with rare clarity, with a cool wit, and with a good-humored erudition which both knows no idols and rejects petty prejudices. Friedrich Nietzsche's life and career invite just the treatment he has given them." D. D.
+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 Jl '41

BRINTON, HOWARD HAINES. Quaker education in theory and practice. 135p 75c; pa 50c Pendle Hill school, Wallingford, Pa.

377.896 Friends, Society of—Education 40-32753

"This little book is an examination of Quakerism as a philosophy which provides a definition of educational purpose; and its challenge to thought goes beyond Quakerism to the broader questions of the foundation and the safeguards for the good life. . . . After briefly tracing the history of Quaker schools Mr. Brinton sets forth and explains the Quaker educational policies as they have worked out, or existed as definite aims and tendencies, in the past." N Y Times

"The book serves well its purpose of orienting the teacher in the Quaker school, and will be of interest to any teacher who believes that education should be 'religiously guarded.'"

+ Christian Century 57:1002 Ag 14 '40 60w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser
Crozer Q 18:177 Ap '41 430w

"The author of this book is a Quaker speaking to Quakers, but in addressing the Society of Friends he also—consciously or not—addresses a larger society. We are being forced back to the realization that neither as taught in the school nor as lived in the nation or the world can the good life be sought in indifference to inner standards or without the aid of inner strengths." K. W.

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 26 '41 850w

Reviewed by F. L. Sanville
Survey 77:102 Mr '41 320w

BRITT, STEUART HENDERSON. Social psychology of modern life. 562p il $3.75 Farrar 301.15 Social psychology. U.S.—Social life and customs 41-8732

"Three objectives are stressed in this book: (1) As a social psychology it is written for students of sociology, students of psychology, and interested laymen. (2) The social psychology of modern everyday life is emphasized rather than abstract theoretical problems. (3) Experimental and observational materials are introduced on every topic, especially those which throw the most light on problems of human interrelations in the United States." (Pref) Indexes.

"The presentation of this varied and industriously collected material is accompanied by photographic puzzles and illustrations. But could any audience familiar with the magazine Life learn anything from them? Moreover, the aim at popularity, the eagerness to conform and to make overly-adaptable evaluations (such as to suggest the substitution of Henry Ford and other success lore for the folklore of Santa Claus), takes the scientist rather far afield. It may be wise for the teacher, to entertain, but not to play to the gallery." H. H. Gerth

Am Soc R 6:915 D '41 480w

"Any book so refreshingly written and factually sound deserves much praise." P. R. Farnsworth

+ Ann Am Acad 216:216 Jl '41 500w

BRITTAİN, VERA MARY (MRS GEORGE EDWARD GORDON CATLIN). England's hour. 230p $2.50 (8s 6d) Macmillan

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-61559

Vera Brittain presents from different angles the wartime life of England as it appears day by day to the ordinary civilian living in or near London.

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:10 My '41

Reviewed by Diana Forbes-Robertson

Books p4 F 16 '41 1350w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 440w

"There is betrayed throughout a fine fire of patriotism which is as deep as it is unmistakable, an agonized affection of a lovely land and a deep love and understanding of all the faults and virtues of its people. With eyes which are searching and experienced, tolerant and international in their vision, Vera Brittain relates what she sees, condemns what she detests, and lauds what she finds admirable in her people of whom she is so much one." Kay Montague

+ Canadian Forum 21:89 Je '41 360w

"Unlike most published impressions that come to us from over the sea, these sketches retain a sense of the gradual development of the situation as it has unfolded before the incredulous Briton. We thereby gain in perspective of the average Englishman's adaptation to the perils and upheaval of the Blitzkrieg. With a feminine flair for detail, Miss Brittain gives a particularly clear picture of the damage done in London, of the strange living conditions arising from population displacements, of some generally unmentioned discomforts felt in the shelters." C. A.

+ Cath World 153:246 My '41 600w

"Boldly British, frankly patriotic, and perhaps for that very reason free from hysteria, Miss Brittain's journalistic record is not only worth reading now but deserves to be filed away with the permanent data from which the future historian will learn how England took it."

+ Christian Century 58:226 F 12 '41 40w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 12 '41 750w

"The aim of England's Hour, according to the author, is to record on the spot the wartime experiences of English civilians. This picture the book does give, but it does more than paint a picture of the progressive ruin of London and the dislocation of English life. More perhaps than its author realizes, Vera Brittain brings to anxious, jumpy Americans a sense of sanity and a feeling of comfort." E. C. Thompson

+ Churchman 155:18 Ap 15 '41 300w

Reviewed by W. J. Grace

Commonweal 34:18 Ap 25 '41 380w

"Miss Brittain ranks with the outstanding eyewitness reporters of World War II. Vividly she describes conditions in London and the industrial Midlands, with all the now familiar ingredients—the bombs, the air raid shelters, the conscientious objectors, and above all the magnificent spirit of the people of England. Her prose is direct and moving, and she portrays the quiet, routine incidents of English life with as much skill as she does the fiercest days of the blitzkrieg." R. W. Straus, Jr.

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:57 Ap '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:874 Jl '41 10w

"She brings home to the reader the problems of citizens in various classes by vivid glimpses of her personal experiences. One who faced the first European war in college days and now sees another catastrophe which threatens the very life of the English nation, she has a perspective that notes the contrasts between the two conflicts." G. E. Brown

Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 210w

Reviewed by C. K. Cumming
 Living Age 360:98 Mr '41 320w
 Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 7 '41 150w
 Reviewed by Norman Angell
 Nation 152:215 F 22 '41 800w
 New Repub 104:414 Mr 24 '41 40w

"Miss Brittain's narrative differs from those of newspaper correspondents in that she cannot write wholly objectively, with the detachment of a mere onlooker. She writes as a confirmed pacifist, as a humanitarian, as a wife and a mother. It colors her comments, but not the truth of her observations of happenings. She may be unfair to Clemenceau and to Churchill, she may stress overmuch the evil effects of the Treaty of Versailles . . . but she never fails to perceive the real greatness of the people to which she belongs and of the institutions of justice and human decency it has evolved." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p5 F 16 '41 800w
 New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 40w
 Pratt p23 spring '41

"I hope Miss Brittain's touching and beautiful book finds its way into every library as the monument for generations to come of the very finest side of England, the England that came what may will live on." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 22 '41 750w

"This excited, sentimental and egotistic account of the air war by a pacifist will hardly help our cause much in America." Graham Greene

— Spec 166:178 F 14 '41 650w
 Springf'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 900w

"This is a book that could with advantage have waited until the picture was more complete. Many of the kind of scenes it describes have been depicted in the Press already, and excellently, with an accompaniment of even better photographs; and it is impossible, yet, to assess the spiritual or even material value of the havoc wrought."

Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 15 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

Reviewed by Herbert Davis
 Yale R n s 30:826 summer '41 140w

BROADHURST, MRS PATTI (SMITH). Any century. 93p $1.75 Dial press

811 41-1904

A new volume of short poems, lyrics and sonnets by the author of Worn Shoes (Book Review Digest, 1933).

"In her new volume of verse Patti Broadhurst gives further evidence of two diverse directions, one marked by a self-assertive individuality expressed in analytic free verse; the other by a simple, controlled lyric statement. Her sonnets and most of the brief lyrics in formal patterns contain original, neatly resolved work. Notable among these are 'When Stars Grow Still,' 'Bush, Snow and Bird,' and 'Revolution.'"

+ Books p26 F 23 '41 120w

"Of Miss Broadhurst's sixty-four poems, there are perhaps thirteen that can be read with a straight face." Robert Fitzgerald

New Repub 104:27 Ja 6 '41 330w

Sat R of Lit 23:22 Ap 12 '41 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 240w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Then came adventure. 184p il $2 Knopf

(W) 41-10975

"When the two young MacPhersons and the three Torgersens discover the Botany Lady making herself at home on their own secret island, the Pirates become Detectives in order to solve the mystery of the unwelcome intruder. They develop into ardent Foresters, however, under the companionable tutelage of Pamela Botts, and enjoy a trip filled with unexpected adventure in the great National Forest of the Michigan peninsula." Library J

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"Songs (with music) and Scandinavian legends come in so naturally, the grandfather's dry humor goes so well with the children's talk, that the story is continuously amusing even in the suspense of the forest adventure, and the beauty of the wood so charms the wanderers they know they are having the time of their lives. Miss Brock has made a story out of Paul Bunyan country, its life and spirit as it works on children; it is one of her best efforts." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 2 '41 280w

"A story of today for children of ten to twelve, filled with an appreciation for the out-of-doors. A bit of Paul Bunyan lore is included as well as an occasional Scandinavian folk tale." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 120w

BROCKWAY, WALLACE, and WEINSTOCK, HERBERT. The opera; a history of its creation and performance. 603p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

782.09 Opera—History (W) 41-24281

History of the opera from 1600 to 1941. It is made up of biographical sketches of composers of opera, anecdotes of performers and performances, statistics and dates, as well as the stage history of most of the major operas. List of recommended recordings, compiled by George Clark Leslie, editor of the Gramophone Shop Record Supplement. Index.

Booklist 38:154 Ja 1 '42

"Should make a strong appeal to all laymen interested in the subject. Although popularized perhaps more than is necessary, good judgment has been shown in evaluating the relative importance and influence of each composer and his works, while the historical resumé of operatic performances, especially in the case of the earlier operas, adds considerable value to the book. Recommended for the opera-enthusiast and for the general library." H. E. Bush

+ Library J 66:791 S 15 '41 100w

"Messrs. Brockway and Weinstock strive for freshness and originality in their writing. Often the result is felicitous, being brisk or witty or illuminating. There are other places where the effort shows and the writing is strained. On the whole, it is a lively traversal of the field. A valuable adjunct of the book is a listing of recommended recordings of operatic music drawn up by George Clark Leslie, editor of The Gramophone Shop Record Supplement." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '42 750w

"This book is an interesting account . . . told in an amusing fashion, with many little anecdotes. . . Perhaps its most valuable section is the final compilation of recommended recordings, which is surprisingly complete. . . There are certain inexplicable omissions and equally inexplicable inclusions, both as to composers lightly passed over and others completely ignored. . . In closing, one must admit however that 'The Opera' is the most complete and authoritative account of that art yet published in this country." Newell Jenkins

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:10 Ja 3 '42 240w

BROCKWAY, WALLACE, and WINER, BART KEITH, eds. Second treasury of the world's great letters. 636p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

808.86 Letters

(W) 41-25720

"A mixed mailbag including intimate exchanges and cycles of correspondence by famed men and women of history and the arts, selected, edited, integrated, with historical settings and biographical backgrounds and BROCKWAY, W. and WINER, B. K.—Cont. consequences." (Subtitle) A Treasury of the World's Great Letters, compiled by M. L. Schuster was published in 1940 (Book Review Digest, 1940). Index.

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"Our generation will leave few letters. There will be little but copies of birthday telegrams on file in some midtown office, to show that we possessed sentiment which could be roused by the Morse code and a friend's anniversary. There will be a few love letters, written on a portable typewriter by the modern amorous young. But there will be no treasury made of our private notes, collected like a valuable deposit of spiritual or social or cerebral wealth from which future generations can borrow, merely by reading. The worth of 'A Second Treasury of the World's Great Letters' is that none of us today could write any of it." Janet Flanner
Books p6 D 21 '41 850w

"This monumental collection of letters that are really no business of any third person's, affords the overcurious the opportunity of raking through the scandals, the clandestine relationships, the false faces and the old coals of the private lives of the great. . . And through all this I observe that the only letters that I personally read with pleasure are those clearly intended only for the recipient." George Barker

New Repub 105:901 D 29 '41 800w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 240w

BRODIE, BERNARD. Sea power in the machine age. 466p $3.75 Princeton univ. press 359 Naval art and science. Sea power.
Warships (W) 41-10846

"Brodie surveys lucidly the development from the steam warship of Fulton's day to the dreadnought of our times. He pays due attention also to the role played by torpedo, mine, and submarine in contemporary naval warfare and ends with reflections on the new threat that the airplane has brought to the war at sea." (Library J) Index.

"A selection of the Scientific Book Club, this work details with admirable skill and honest craftsmanship the five great naval developments that bridge the span between Trafalgar and today's naval battles." G. H. E. Smith
+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1002 O '41 700w

"This volume presents an excellent historical study of the impact of the technology of sea weapons upon power politics. . . The work is well balanced, thoroughly documented, and indexed. Its style offers continuing pleasure." S. F. Bryant

+ Ann Am Acad 218:202 N '41 500w
Booklist 37:540 Jl 15 '41

"A valuable, comprehensive and much needed volume. Very little new material is introduced, but the entire subject is treated in an integrated fashion for the first time. The author has studied records and sources with a scholarly thoroughness, and has written a worth-while thesis in a lucid and competent manner." P. J. Searles
+ Books p7 Jl 20 '41 850w

Christian Century 58:807 Je 18 '41 110w

"The account of naval aviation, both lighter and heavier than air, is well presented, and the use to which air power at sea has been and is being put is set forth in detail. This book will be a useful accession for the writer on naval topics, but other readers, unless particularly interested in naval matters, will find it rather meticulous." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 2 '41 440w

Reviewed by Alvin Adey
Current Hist 1:277 N '41 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 20w

"A solid, yet readable history." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 66:390 My 1 '41 110w

"So nearly definitive is this history and analysis of sea power that one wishes providence, if indeed it is operative in such matters, could have produced the crucial Battle of Crete in time for Mr. Brodie's final summation, which as it stands lacks any bias in favor of one or the other contestant in the momentous rivalry of battleship and plane. . . Mr. Brodie tempts and instructs us with the makings of this fascinating and certainly portentous problem, meanwhile offering a substantial story of what has gone on in the past interlarded with the ever-attractive lore of the sea." John Mitchell

+ Living Age 360:489 Jl '41 900w

"Mr. Brodie has given a clearly written and non-technical account of the great inventions which during the last century and a half have shaped the modern naval establishments and influenced the way they are employed. The deficiencies of Mr. Brodie's book are inherent in the complexity of the problem he has undertaken to treat. There are too many questions that need to be answered, and though Mr. Brodie has limited himself to naval problems, and therein has confined himself to certain revolutionary inventions, he has tried to answer more of these basic questions than the scope of his work readily permits. Inevitably some questions are answered better than others." Henry Guerlac

+ Nation 153:124 Ag 9 '41 900w

"The discussion of some topics, as when the author deals with steam tactics and strategy and the technicalities of ballistics, will not be followed easily by the uninitiated. However, Brodie's conclusions are always clearly stated and will be readily grasped by anyone with a modicum of intelligence. Personally, I liked the book very much, profited immensely from reading it, and feel certain that it will take its place as a standard work by the side of such classic studies as the works of Baxter and the Sprouts." A. J. Marder

+ New Repub 105:350 S 15 '41 600w

"This is not a book for popular consumption, yet it has much of interest for those who want to know the background of the war at sea. . . Mr. Brodie is least satisfactory—and that is not very harsh criticism—where he deals with contemporary events, for here he is evidently without the dependable crutch of big libraries. . . The combination Mahan-Douhet who can give us a modern picture of the shadow of wings over the sea still has not written his definitive work. But Mr. Brodie, nevertheless, has added a monumental volume to the sea libraries of our time." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 11 '42 650w

"This is a finely conceived, carefully developed, and well-written book. Every naval student is aware of the vast changes in navies during the machine age but it remained for Bernard Brodie to reveal the immediate result of each successive development on the ancient and conservative naval profession, and their cumulative effect on present day navies." W. D. Puleston

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Jl 19 '41 600w

"Dr. Brodie, in writing of the impact of the machine age upon naval warfare, does more than trace the changes in construction and the development of new techniques. He emphasizes the consequences of these changes in a book that not only navy officers, historians, and political scientists will consider valuable. Every citizen of the English-speaking world should own a copy in order to understand what is happening, and to be willing to share in the defense of democracy." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 Je '41 1100w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 27 '41 1300w

Reviewed by Paul Schubert
Yale R n s 31:190 autumn '41 1100w

BRODRICK, JAMES. The origin of the Jesuits. 274p $3 (10s 6d) Longmans 271.5 Jesuits. Loyola, Ignatius of, Saint 41-12393

A history of the Order during the years covered by the life of the founder. This volume is the first of a projected series designed to cover the whole history down to the present. Index.

"Father Brodrick tells us in his Preface that 'this little book is only the first installment of a much more extensive history of the Jesuits, which the war and other contingencies have at least temporarily frustrated.' We look forward to this promised work with intense pleasure, for this preliminary volume is a gem of accurate, historical scholarship." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 154:243 N '41 650w

"For years students have been hoping for a full-length general history of the Society that would be critical, well balanced, based on the original sources and written in a style worthy of the theme. Father Brodrick has fulfilled these hopes and it must be said at once that no future writer is likely to improve on the matter and form of his book. It is a model of historical writing, and readers will quickly be convinced of the providential character of the delay that reserved this task for him." F. D. Cohalan

+ Commonweal 35:228 D 19 '41 490w

"The first [volume] is so good that it certainly ought to be followed by others. It carries the story down to the death of St Ignatius Loyola. This period of the Society's history surpasses all the others in its appeal to the imagination and in its challenge to thought; but for this very reason it is the best-known period, and the others need retelling, both for their intrinsic interest and because they are the sequel, the inseparable commentary, to the first." G. N. Clark

+ Spec 166:231 F 28 '41 900w

"The substance of the story Father Brodrick has to tell is of course familiar from a gigantic literature; but of this a good deal is merely sensational, some crudely partisan, and most of the earlier works rendered obsolete by the publication in comparatively recent years of great masses of original documents in the Monumenta Historica Societatis Jesu and other collections. Father Brodrick not only uses these sources with scholarly judgment, but keeps an open mind for the valuable contributions to the understanding of Jesuit origins made by historians and biographers outside the fold of his church. In the result he exhibits the well-known facts in a distinctly new light."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p104 Mr 1 '41 1150w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM. Politics and law in the United States. (Current problems ser) 128p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge] 342.73 U.S.—Politics and government

"Mr. Brogan traces the accretions of custom and usage which have been added to our written constitution and proves that our system is not as inflexible as is sometimes assumed. He thinks, nevertheless, that we indulge in some 'misguided antiquarianism,' such as the election of the President by state rather than by popular vote. . . . With most Englishmen and many Americans he speculates upon the possibility of substituting at least a quasi-parliamentary system for the present constitutional relation between the President and Congress. . . . Mr. Brogan's chapter on the Supreme Court includes a discriminating analysis of the controversy occasioned by the 'court-packing' plan of the Administration." Nation

"A little book of exposition of which one cannot speak too highly."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '41 120w

"Mr. Brogan, an English political scientist with an extraordinary gift for understanding and illuminating the woof of constitutional principles and the warp of political tactics in the fabric of democratic history, whether in his own or in other nations, gives us a remarkably readable and able account of our own constitutional history in this small volume. It has the virtue of any book written by a sympathetic foreigner, for it combines familiar perspectives with insights which could have come only from an outsider." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 153:460 N 8 '41 460w

"This brilliant little book, which is as packed with knowledge as it is delightful to read, is as good an introduction as there is to the complexities of its subject." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:512 D 20 '41 540w

Times [London] Lit Sup p547 N 1 '41 120w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM. U. S. A.; an outline of the country, its people and institutions. 144p il $1 (2s 6d) Oxford

917.3 U.S.—Civilization 41-19770

In this outline of the United States, "its people and institutions," the professor of political science in the University of Cambridge, has attempted to explain this country to the average British reader. He discusses the government, our religion, labor conditions, the press, social life, literature, and amusements. Index.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 30w

"One cannot speak too highly of Mr. Brogan's brilliant and witty survey of contemporary American life, written, as he says, with an eye on what to the ordinary British reader is most unfamiliar." A. P. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 7 '41 50w

"The highest praise that could be given to this little book—and no praise could be too high for it—is to say that it is as good as any book on this subject by Professor Brogan was certain to be. It is a marvel of compression without betraying the least sign of compression, and it reveals its author as a marvel of omniscience. Professor Brogan appears as completely at home in the boxing world as the religious, at Hollywood as at Boston. . . . I have done my utmost to detect some fault of omission or commission, but failed practically everywhere." Warren Postbridge

+ Spec 166:182 F 14 '41 260w

"The book has been illustrated with evident care and with the idea of giving the British a truly representative picture of our ugliness and beauty in architecture and human character. The constitution has been reprinted in the appendix and an excellent index completes the work. It should prove highly instructive and entertaining to the American reader. Word for word and page for page he can probably get from it a better first-hand account of his country today, and a reliable one too, than he would find in many a civics text that has been 'toned down' to serve and satisfy reactionary and ultraconservative groups within American communities." Clifford Moore

+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 1250w

"The whole thing, really, could not be better done. The secret of the book's success is, perhaps, that Professor Brogan's great knowledge enables him to set each of his facts in its proper perspective, and so to build up like an artist, from a series of detached lines and points, the impression of a living and unlimited world. It is a model in its kind, and a gift to those who would grasp America in outline and briefly taste its living reality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup sup ix Ap 5 '41 220w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Wild is the river. 326p
$2.50 Harper

(W) 41-51986

A story of New Orleans in wartime, during a period when conflict raged between Union soldiers and proud Creoles, between Puritan blood and suppressed instincts and the soft, sensuous life of a Southern climate.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic Ja '42 100w

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"The canvas is alive with figures in action but, while they make an exciting tale, they are never fully convincing. . . Dipping deeply into vivid colors, Mr. Bromfield covers his canvas with violence of emotional and physical action. There are times indeed when one feels that he is writing with his tongue in his cheek, so completely in the old school of romance and adventure are his characters and his details of conquest, seduction and brutality. Yet, in spite of the extravagance of the story pattern, something emerges out of the context which holds the essence of the disintegration of a city." Rose Feld

+ — Books p7 N 23 '41 600w

Reviewed by J. E. Tobin

Commonweal 35:273 Ja 2 '42 420w

"Bromfield's ability to depict character and create an exciting story is well sustained. Not a pretty picture, but an interesting and well-told tale." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 80w

"'Wild Is the River' probably better deserves to be called exciting than anything Mr. Bromfield has done, including his motion picture epics of India. It is a triumph of technical skill. . . 'Wild Is the River' offers an exceptionally acute and amusing study of two ways of life in conflict. . . It is a theme he embroiders with almost Gallic wit, ringing changes upon it in half a dozen different ways." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 N 23 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:108 N 22 '41 70w

"It is entertaining, it has enormous gusto, swagger, voodoo mysteries, wonderful black women who devise love potions for good American dollars, aristocratic Creoles, moonlight, fever, sultry heat, jasmine and wistaria, a deluxe brothel, a pretty sprinkling of French words and patois songs, the Puritan conscience all the way down from Pinckney Street and Concord, balconies, French arias wafted across the night, and lots and lots of sex. One only awaits the climactic duet from Moore and Eddy." Bess Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 29 '41 800w

"In any other hands than Bromfield's this over-supply of characters might well prove baffling to the reader, but his skill is great enough to make one regret and deplore that he yielded here, as he has so often done in the past, to the temptation of creating characters and incidents which make their appeal through cheap sensationalism."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 600w

Time 38:111 N 24 '41 210w

"Louis Bromfield's Wild is the River is a slick, well-greased job, readable if you like a movie plot rather drowned in words, and can watch people act in lurid, unlikely ways without caring a whoop about any of them." Robert Littell

— Yale R n s 31:xii winter '42 60w

BROMHALL, WINIFRED. Johanna arrives; il.
by [the author]. 58p $1.25 Knopf

(W) 41-4027

Seven-year-old Johanna and her family came to the United States from Holland—evidently before the war. The new language and living conditions were hard on her at first, but when she won a skating contest and her class cheered her, Johanna felt that she had arrived.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p18 My 11 '41 230w

"A pleasant little story of no great importance. Its simple style, large print, and attractive make-up will appeal to children of eight and nine." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 120w

"Except for its Dutch-blue type, which is rather dizzying, this is a pleasant, easy book in big print about a little Dutch girl of today who comes to New York and by her skill on skates makes a place for herself among other young Americans."

+ — New Yorker 17:87 My 24 '41 40w

BROOKES, AMELIA. Through the ant hill; il. by Jacob Bates Abbott. 158p $2 Lippincott 41-8954

Peter, a small boy much interested in ants, one day realized he was shrinking in size, until he was sufficiently small to enter the ant castle. He learned all about the ant ways of life, took part in the war between the red and black ants, was condemned to death, and later rescued by a friendly ant. After that he returned to his normal size and went home. For children of eight to ten.

"It is a country book for children well under ten, taking the place of a fairy story and not too educational." M. L. Becker

Books p18 My 11 '41 250w

"Neither Peter nor his ant acquaintances are very convincing. The story is hard to follow and the telling lacks spontaneity. The large colored pictures emphasize the fanciful quality of the tale and sometimes have the humor which the text lacks." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '41 280w

BROOKS, ANNE. Kingdom on earth. 337p
$2.50 Morrow
41-6652

Harriet, the daughter of a midwestern professor, married Joel Randolph, feeling sure that her days of poverty were over, for the Randolphs were wealthy. But only a few weeks after the wedding, came the news that the family had lost all their money. As their easy good nature and aristocratic charm wore thin, Harriet found herself more and more disillusioned with her in-laws, and when her husband lost his job and she had to go to work herself her patience was strained almost to the breaking point.

Booklist 37:546 J1 15 '41

"An excellent first novel. Anne Brooks writes with a glowing intensity that holds the reader to the end. Her characters are real and play their parts with relentless consistency. There is mature analysis in Miss Brooks's objectivity, a wry logic which closes the story on a bitterly amusing twist." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 My 11 '41 800w

"Deft, shrewd, ironic and free of the soft, sentimental overtones which one customarily associates with a light domestic comedy. . . Though 'Kingdom on Earth' is slight and unpretentious—not obviously arresting—it strikes me as an uncommonly able job and a very pleasing one." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '41 600w

"Pleasant family background and a sound realization that situation should develop out of character make this not only credible and entertaining but a better-than-average first novel."

+ New Yorker 17:90 My 10 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. On literature today.
29p $1 Dutton

810.9 American literature—History and criticism (W) 41-5798

"An address delivered at Hunter College last year in which the author of 'The Flowering of New England' deplors the 'cynicism' of such writers as Dos Passos, Wolfe, and Hemingway and calls for a literature of affirmation rooted in 'health, will, courage, faith in human nature.'" New Yorker

"Mr. Brooks in this stimulating address sounds a clarion call for a return to sanity, to heroic and challenging writing, feeling that it will come through our heightened appreciation of what America really is. Van Wyck Brooks is always a humanist; the more regrettable that he can be unfair to a T. S. Eliot." E. B. Gulick

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 500w

"Every word of the essay, which runs to less than thirty pages, is worth pondering, partly because by its manifestation of his ability to appraise letters in the light of first principles, it explains why Van Wyck Brooks is America's most distinguished critic."

+ Cath World 153:510 J1 '41 270w

"This little book is at once a battle cry against the mortmain of yesterday and a trumpet call heralding tomorrow, which may be America's, as other eras were Greece's, Rome's, and Britain's. It is an affirmation of human dignity and sanity in a world gone mad and bent on self-destruction; and in itself it is a justification of the craft to which Van Wyck Brooks has given himself so unsparingly." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 34:260 J1 4 '41 650w

N Y Times p2 Ap 6 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:92 Ap 5 '41 30w

"A frontal attack upon the hard-boiled school of 'futilitarians' has been long overdue. Such an invasion coming from some quarters would be regarded as hypocritical piety but when the attacker is America's most respected critic, the matter cannot be laughed off as Victorian prudery. 'On Literature Today' is at once a sound blow to the philosophy of defeatism and an appeal to the writers of today to recover a feeling for the heroic, to find a standard of values." F. G. B.

+ Springfield Republican p10 Je 26 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. Opinions of Oliver Allston. 309p $3 Dutton

818 Literary criticism (W) 41-22921

The "Oliver Allston" of the title is supposed to have been the author's friend and a fellow critic who during the last few years of his life had kept a journal of literary notes and reminiscences. This book tells something of Allston's life and character and a great deal about his literary opinions as they can be ascertained from these journals. Index.

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
Books p5 N 23 '41 1450w

Reviewed by John Monaghan
Commonweal 35:300 Ja 9 '42 900w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 90w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 153:615 D 13 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 105:705 N 24 '41 1250w

"Although he is a fine stylist himself, one of the best, Brooks in his latest book pays too little attention to style in others, forgetting that it reveals the real nature of the writing man. He is falling into the heresy preached by Tolstoy in his later years and later revived as Socialist Realism: the doctrine that a good literary work is one that expresses the proper opinions. If that were actually the secret of literary merit, writers would have an easy time of it, so long as they followed instructions. Critics could be replaced by policemen and professors of moral philosophy." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:738 D 1 '41 950w

"This, it seems to me, is one of the most thoughtful and dynamic books in recent American writing. These are qualities, to be sure, that we long since came to expect in the work of Van Wyck Brooks, but they are present here in a more concentrated and, at the same time, a more widely applied way than in any book we have had from him. There is, indeed, in these 'Opinions of Oliver Allston,' as the publishers proclaim on the jacket, 'material for a literary revolution.'" J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p1 D 14 '41 1250w

"I do not wish you to think that Mr. Brooks is preachy on more than a few occasions. For the most part, he is a delight to read, especially when he attacks coterie literature and that group of death-lovers (now headed by the Fascist stooge Ezra Pound) he calls the 'paltry poets of a cheap despair.'" Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:92 N 8 '41 300w

"Mr. Brooks thinks simultaneously about literature and about the state... He writes also in the shadow of a greater command: in the effort to free literature from social or intellectual propaganda, let us not mistakenly release literature from all social inference, all social responsibility. Because 'Opinions of Oliver Allston' plumbs the depths and shallows of these vital problems, it should be widely, slowly, and thoughtfully read." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 15 '41 1900w

Reviewed by F. G. Bratton

Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 900w

"The device of Brooks talking about Allston, and Allston talking in his imaginary journal, is confusing and unnecessary. Is this a primary method? Mr. Brooks can speak in his own person—he needs no tricks with mirrors. For his standards and his scholarship, his comment on craft and style, his small tales and gentle meditations adorn a sturdy critic's creed." Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:701 D '41 370w

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy and the Ignormus; il. by Kurt Wiese. 286p $2 Knopf 41-10785

Freddy, the poetic pig, who with the other talking animals lives on Mr Bean's farm, has another bout of detecting in this story for readers of eight to ten. The Ignormus, a mysterious animal living in the woods, frightens the animals almost speechless, and it is up to Freddy to solve the mystery and quell the rascal.

"The undeniable charm of this story, like the earlier Freddy books, is not in morals, but in crisp talk between the animals. This goes on in good American; a better language can't be found for give-and-take. I don't know that any one has called attention to a basic likeness in character between Freddy and Pooh; Freddy is not a pet, he is less wistful, but he has the same innocent vanity and boundless good will." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 O 26 '41 250w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

"The children who have eagerly followed the adventures of Farmer Bean's talking animals since the first story, To and Again, was published will hail with delight this new story of Freddy, the poetic pig... Kurt Wiese's humorous illustrations well portray the events in the solving of this rollicking animal mystery story." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 140w

BROUGHTON, THOMAS. Perhaps Timothy was. 280p $2 Modern age

41-4547

"Timothy Martin was a gentleman, with a nice sense of polite living. He went to his office every day, and his partners and his secretary rather marveled at his skill in business, for they never saw him do any work. He did work, though, with speed and ability. . . . He had a clever, kind, attractive wife, charming children and a lovely home, and he spent money lavishly. With all these traits to recommend him . . . it seems hard to call him a cad and to say that his final punishment was no more than he deserved." N Y Times

"'Perhaps Timothy Was' reveals Thomas Broughton as a writer of perception and style, frankly interested in the intimate phases of love-making and not backward in saying so. His story gets out of hand and mired in melodrama, but its earlier and lighter episodes are deft and buoyant." Lisle Bell

+ — Books p12 Mr 23 '41 400w

"It is an interesting story, full of light and diverting conversation, a little odd in its conception and construction, sufficiently entertaining on the whole." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '41 440w

BROWN, HEYWOOD CAMPBELL. Collected edition; comp. by Heywood Hale Brown. 561p $3.50 Harcourt

818

41-51692

Selections from the works of Heywood Brown, beginning with an account of his first contribution to journalism—the original of which is now lost—and continuing up to his death in 1939. List of sources, chronology, bibliography. The editor is Heywood Brown's son.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic Je '41 250w

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

"Ever since Brown died publishers have approached various friends of his asking for a book on his life. Franklin P. Adams, Deems Taylor, George Bye, Alexander Woolcott, Carl Randau and others have toyed with the idea, but each one abandoned it. Brown was too many-sided, we felt, to be caught between the covers of any one book. Yet we all hoped that some one more ingenious than we would capture the man we knew and make him live again, even though it would be vicariously through the written work. Characteristically, the unpredictable Brown himself did the book for us. For this book is Brown." Quentin Reynolds

+ Books p2 Ap 20 '41 800w

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 60w

"Heywood Hale Brown, is the editor of the volume, and has done an excellent job. But without the true excellence of Brown's own writing, such a book would be only one more or less perfunctory memorial. On the contrary, it is a live book—for Heywood Brown lives in it as one of the best of our writers." Michael Williams

+ Commonweal 33:621 Ap 11 '41 800w

"As might be expected the best of Heywood Brown is among the best writing that has appeared in the American press in the past quarter-century. And this volume is important beyond being a tribute to the memory of a great writer and public figure, for it includes a discussion of many of the issues, vital and trivial, of our times—a discussion of them while they were still live and troublesome issues. It makes good reading. . . . It is hard to realize that these essays—most of them are less than 900 words each—that flow so smoothly and that read so well and that are so effectively reasoned were written under the stress of modern journalism with the edition deadline always waiting. In one of them he says that in the old days he liked to imagine that he was Charles Lamb, but that he could not make the grade; and yet some of these pieces could well bear comparison with the 'Essays of Elia.'" Neil MacNeil

+ Commonweal 33:624 Ap 11 '41 700w

Reviewed by Mildred Gilman

New Repub 104:829 Je 16 '41 950w

"It is impossible to believe that the man is dead. One realizes with difficulty that there won't be another volume, carrying on Heywood Brown's opinions about the lease-lend bill, the collapse of Italy, and the state of civil rights at home. The book we now have was tied to the day's news. Yet it seems curiously timeless. Perhaps after some years, when the history of 1920 to 1940 is reexamined it will be discovered that Heywood Brown isn't, in fact, dead—he has just been on a vacation." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '41 500w

"If anything were needed to convince anyone that Heywood Brown is irreplaceable, it would be this book."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Ap 12 '41 60w

Pratt p16 autumn '41

"Unless some cult of disciples should arise to spread the word or some unpredictable backsurge of popularity should sweep in to demand a five-foot shelf of the complete writings, here in this handy volume we have the main bid of Heywood Brown for the attention of posterity. On the showing of this rich and varied book, his chances with posterity should be good. It is not so much a chance I think, for Brown as the author of this and that. I am talking about Brown, a living character in our literature, a man who prevailed over a great talent in order to make himself an enduring and memorable person." George Britt

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 My 3 '41 1000w

Spring'd Republican p10 Ap 16 '41 490w

"Yes, Heywood Brown stands up well. In this collection we can take his measure. He writes of our times, and of us in them. He welcomes you not to Parliament or Cathedral, but just home. You want to read—and quote—and wonder why he was gone so soon and wish that Heywood could have written his own epitaph. Perchance it is good that he is spared the suffering of these days. They would have been cruel to a gentle man." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:297 My '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

BROUSSEAU, JULE ROSE (MRS E. A. ROTH). Episode on West 8th Street. 413p $2.50 Smith & Durrell

41-7325

"A Greenwich Village novel written in the 'Street Scene' style. . . . A little Jewish tailor commits a murder on a hot August day; a poor Polish girl tries to kill herself. These two unrelated events affect the lives of a group of persons—a Wall Street promoter, a young couple out of work, an unhappy wife, and so on." New Yorker

"It is a novel of remarkable emotional, even throbbing, story-telling quality; the writing, however, is overwrought, seems at times to come from a rush of words to the head, a characteristic, it is true, shared by some of the best writers with the worst." F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p12 Ap 13 '41 400w

"There are drawbacks, always, to what one may loosely call the Grand Hotel technique. Some loss of intensity and feeling is inevitable when a dozen different stories are artificially linked. 'Episode on West 8th Street,' however, has a depth, a richness, a solidity, a power, which one does not often find in novels of its class." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '41 850w

New Yorker 17:86 Ap 12 '41 50w

"There are amazingly good passages and sketches in the book but the whole thing needs design and focus of some kind. It makes the general point that is made in the Book of Job—a patient and noble person can ignore the cruelties of a petulant Jahveh or by opposing end them, perhaps—but as a narrative the book is tenuous and inconclusive." Phil Stong

— + Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 19 '41 490w
Time 37:104 My 19 '41 40w

BROWDER, EARL RUSSELL. The way out. 255p $1.75 Int. pubs.

940.53 World war, 1939—U.S. Communism—U.S. U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Politics and government 41-6361

"Under this title the recently supplanted head of the Communist Party in the United States leaves to admirers and critics a summary of his views as he entered Atlanta Penitentiary to begin a four-year sentence. The book is a collection of Mr. Browder's reports to the Party, campaign and other addresses, and editorials. . . The collected papers deal principally with two major events—the 1940 presidential campaign and the current war." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by M. Q. Sibley

Am Pol Sci R 35:1025 O '41 230w

"One striking weakness in Mr. Browder's analysis of events is his treatment of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union. The realities are glossed over with a layer of wishful reasoning. . . Despite apparent weaknesses, Mr. Browder's statements make most interesting and stimulating reading. To say the least, they present the troubled citizen with much 'food for thought.' One cannot refrain from speculation upon what may come from Mr. Browder's pen as the result of the next several years of prison life and world events occurring in the interim." W. N. Loucks
— + Ann Am Acad 217:177 S '41 700w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer

— New Repub 104:863 Je 23 '41 240w

BROWN, EDNA ADELAIDE. How many miles to Babylon? il. by Stephen Ronay. 206p $2 Lothrop

41-12316

"This is a book for children of eight and nine about a doctor's little daughter living in Freeport, Mass. For her ninth birthday Eunice was presented with a playhouse which she promptly named Babylon. Counting each flagstone a mile, Eunice had to travel 'three score miles and ten' to reach her house." Library J

"Miss Brown understands children and knows how to appeal to nine- and ten-year-olds. They will enjoy this book as much as they have her former ones." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 110w

"This is an unpretentious, pleasant little story for girls from six to 10."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 90w

BROWN, GEORGE WILLIAM. The economic history of Liberia. 366p $3 Associated pubs. 330.9666 Liberia—Economic conditions

41-13981

"The effort to build an independent and self-sustaining Negro republic in Africa . . . has been both helped and hindered by white interference. But the century-long endeavor has produced substantial results and Liberia under its present administration is a going concern. The characteristic feature of the present economic system appears to be a communalism which is less akin to communism than to what we think of as the cooperative movement." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 80w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish

Churchman 155:34 N 15 '41 180w

"This book suffers from too many pages, too many references to magazine material and too much praise of wordy Liberian politicians." George Streator

Commonweal 34:453 Ag 29 '41 180w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '42 20w

BROWN, HARRY PETER M'NAB. The end of a decade. $1; pa 35c New directions 811 41-7610

A collection of the lyrics of a young American poet whose work has appeared previously in the New Yorker and The Atlantic.

"That Mr. Brown's poems are not only a critique of our time but bear evidence also of historical perspective and a quiet, impersonal objectivity, are high commendation. Least effective in the present collection are his Audenesque, synthetic modern ballads. . . Considerably better are the satiric comments in which he employs, symbolically, the devices of Hollywood. . . The poems as a whole represent a finely-pointed outlook and technical achievement." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ — Books p14 Ag 31 '41 130w

"As a first book of poems it is impressive in spite of its slimmess. It begins with a poem, 1939, and ends with a poem called 1940. These appear the weakest in the book, and largely because their influences are too apparent." L. B. Bloch

+ — Living Age 359:592 F '41 200w

"If complacency has come upon Dr. Williams after two decades, it has done some heavy damage early in the career of Harry Brown. For the latter betrays the attitude that all that is necessary is to write circles around other poets (forgetting that they provide him with the centers). His idiom, his imagery and his subjects wear strangely familiar masks. Throughout the book there are plenty of embarrassingly Audenish lines. In fact all the poems with a few exceptions are plainly serious parodies of various aspects of Auden's work." Oscar Williams

New Repub 105:410 S 29 '41 230w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 110w

Reviewed by K. J. Shapiro

Poetry 58:340 S '41 470w

BROWN, HARRY PETER M'NAB. The poem of Bunker Hill. 158p $2 Scribner

811 Bunker Hill, Battle of, 1775—Poetry 41-18467

"Except for a prologue which sets the scene and an epilogue in the form of a valedictory ode, Mr. Brown sticks to a straightforward, admirably simple narration of the phases of that battle on a warm June day 'when the nation was born.' . . Mr. Brown uses a narrative form whose rhythms are reminiscent of those of Mr. MacLeish, though less studied, less formalized by the long caesura of the colon-punctuated phrase." Books

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"The story might have gained in variety and emphasis had he broken away now and then from his fixed stanzaic pattern with a change in metrical pace or lyric interlude. . . There is also a marked use of cliché, perhaps intentional, since startling or unique figures of speech or symbols often slow up narrative pace. That Mr. Brown is capable of excellent lyric utterance is shown in the technically accomplished, highly impassioned concluding valedictory ode, exalting the possible function of love in our future." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ — Books p24 O 19 '41 360w

"The Poem of Bunker Hill' tries to be an epic, a patriotic manifesto, and a properly modern poem all in one—which requires no small facility on the part of the poet. Brown has facility, indeed, but it does not extend to narrative verse. Technically, the best passages of his poem are the inspirational ones—which are coincidentally the falsest and most offensive. Nor can I deny Brown the ability to perpetrate howlers with a certain plausible finish. . . But since prose is the lower common denominator, he would have done better for his reputation as a writer to have kept to it." Clement Greenberg

BROWN, H. P. M.—Continued

— + Nation 154:71 Ja 17 '42 800w

"Harry Brown has done a fine, even a remarkable, piece of work: he manages to give a sort of timeless quality to the battle and to confer a sort of heroic status on men and names whose lustre has been rubbed off in dull history books; he tells skillfully a story in which the characters are all men, in which the masculine element is predominant; he gives these men character: they are soldiers, they are Americans, and they are individuals." M. M. Colum

+ N Y. Times p5 N 30 '41 600w

"Well told, full of the look and sound of ordinary life, and stirring to a degree." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:88 N 1 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

"It is said that Mr Brown, now in the army, is a high-ranking sharpshooter, and I may be putting my life in his hands by ruefully pointing out that the lengthy poem marches up the hill and marches down again, proceeds from one cliché to another, and winds itself up dutifully, doggedly, and (more than alliteration demands it) dully. Perhaps Mr. Brown has attempted to balance virtuosity with deliberate maturity. But, confusing himself and his aim, he has mistaken a serious subject for a serious idea and substituted pomposity for drama." Louis Untermeyer

— Yale R n s 31:376 winter '42 230w

BROWN, JOSEPHINE CHAPIN. Public relief, 1929-1939. 524p $3.50 Holt

361.60973 Charities—U.S. Federal emergency relief administration 40-34168

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Miss Brown's book is the most comprehensive and most fully documented book on public relief covering this crucial and creative decade, 1929-1939. The necessary historical setting is also provided, and it is constructed with a fine, selective hand, with frankness, without gloves, yet without rancor. The battle between exponents of private philanthropy and of governmental relief, between the advocates of local (then state) autonomy in administration and the proponents of federal programs, between protagonists of work versus relief and promoters of straight relief, is described both in its theoretical and in its factual phases, and the outcome is seen as 'inevitable' rather than as 'just.' It is a scholarly, comprehensive, but not pedantic performance." Philip Klein

+ Am Econ R 31:194 Mr '41 700w

"The ambitious scope of Miss Brown's volume is both its strength and its weakness. Her aim was to give us a complete but general account, and this she has done admirably. With this as her goal, she could not easily emphasize all of those special aspects of the development of welfare policy in which the scholar in the fields of federal theory, pressure politics, public finance, and public administration is interested. Federal grants to the states are discussed with little consideration of the administrative difficulties encountered when an attempt is made to specify some formula on which these grants may be based. . . One notes with no little surprise that there is almost no material in this book on the financing of relief, other than statistical data on the amounts appropriated and spent or tables on average expenditures per case. Similarly, the discussion relating to federal-state administrative relations leaves much untouched. However, these and other related problems have been and will continue to be discussed in the more specialized monographs. In the meantime, we now have an excellent general account." A. N. Christensen

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:360 Ap '41 700w

"Here is an extremely useful book. . . There is no appeal to emotion nor, on the other hand, is there a dry recitation of a sequence of events. Miss Brown is interesting while being thorough, without being unnecessarily exhaustive. She writes from a national or, rather, a Federal point of view, it may be presumed, because she was in the thick of the work as a Federal official under Harry Hopkins." P. D. Flanner

+ Am Soc R 6:603 Ag '41 450w

"To this reviewer the book suffers from the faults of its qualities—it is partisan. It falls too often into the device of denouncing critics of the Administration instead of appraising them with balanced judgment. . . While the book cannot be accepted as the definitive history of the momentous events of the decade it describes, it is a vast storehouse of data, carefully compiled, documented, and analyzed." F. J. Bruno

+ Ann Am Acad 214:247 Mr '41 450w

Pratt p20 D '41

Reviewed by J. C. Colcord
Survey 77:100 Mr '41 1300w

BROWN, JUNIUS FLAGG, and MENNINGER, KARL AUGUSTUS. The psychodynamics of abnormal behavior. 484p il $3.50 McGraw

132 Psychology, Pathological 40-35910

"Written from the standpoint of psychoanalysis and Gestalt psychology, this text in abnormal psychology is unique in that it integrates the psychoanalytic approach into the subject matter usually presented in academic texts, and in that it offers a thoroughly systematic treatment covering the complete theoretical background of abnormal behaviors. The author has attempted to bring the discussion abreast of the times by adopting the organismic solution to the psychosomatic problem and by treating each behavior disorder systematically in terms of its cause, significance, and economy." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Indexes.

"This book will be more satisfactory as a class text than might at first appear. Some teachers will object to its definite bias in favor of the psychology and psychotherapy of the Freudian school of psychoanalysis. In spite of this bias, it is, however, systematically logical and not dogmatic. Its plea for an experimental psychopathology is more than a mere gesture. It is certainly less dogmatic even in regard to psychoanalytical theories than many texts that slight or oppose these theories. Apart from controversy, the sustained emphasis on psychodynamics versus symptomatology, on an 'hypothetico-deductive' methodology, and on the 'dynamic-genotypical' versus the 'static-phenotypical' approach to the problems of abnormal behavior will certainly warrant consideration of the book as a text for college classes." F. N. Maxfield

+ Am J Psychol 54:621 O '41 500w

"This is a fluent and lucid book. The author is an apt student who draws his information from several disciplines, with all of which he appears to be well-acquainted: psychiatry, social psychology, sociology, and psychoanalysis. The intellectual hero of the book is the founder of psychoanalysis, Sigmund Freud. The author credits him with being the greatest student of human nature ever produced by science. The chapter on psychiatry, written in collaboration with Dr. Karl A. Menninger, is the best in the book. Dr. Brown's work is superior to the ordinary textbook on psychopathology and has ambitions far above the average. . . It does not add anything of substance to our knowledge, but it tends to confuse hard-won methods and procedures with one another. I wonder what sort of marginal notes Sigmund Freud would have made in this book had he lived to read it." J. L. Moreno

+ Am Soc R 6:448 Je '41 1000w

"There are a number of faults which are common to introductory books on psychopathology. . . These faults have been avoided by the authors of the interesting book under review. It is an excellent introduction to psychopathology planned for the student, but the general physician will also find it of interest. . . The book is well presented, with excellent binding and good print. The style is clear and illustrated with diagrams. It should be easy for one who has had a little acquaintance with psychology to understand the theories presented, but naturally those who are studying medicine should augment it with a text-book of psychiatry, since the clinical descriptions are a little curtailed. The value of the book is enhanced by a full bibliography." Clifford Allen

+ Nature 148:676 D 6 '41 650w

BROWN, LLOYD ARNOLD. Notes on the care and cataloguing of old maps. 110p il $2.50 Hawthorn

025.3 Cataloging—Maps. Classification—Maps 41-51504

"A guide to cartographic nomenclature and the storage, classification, and cataloguing of old maps. Though the work is limited for the sake of convenience to maps printed between 1500 and 1800, the principles may be applied to later maps. Historical background has been included to aid in an appraisal and analysis of old maps." Booklist

Booklist 37:235 F 1 '41

"The book is one of the most thorough, scholarly and useful guides of its kind, and it should have a salutary effect upon the collecting of old maps." Philip Brooks

+ N Y Times p31 Mr 23 '41 1150w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Baby animals; il. by Mary Cameron. unp 50c Random house

41-19430

Picture story book about familiar animals, birds, and fishes, and their young, showing how they eat, sleep, and play. For pre-school and first grades.

"It is strangely moving in its utter simplicity." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 21 '41 100w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

"A good addition for the inexpensive picture-book table." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 60w

"Pleasant and peaceful." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 8 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:203 D '41

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. The comical tragedy or tragical comedy of Punch and Judy; adapted; il. by Leonard Weisgard. [41p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

40-33740

An illustrated retelling of the Punch and Judy story, with Punch conquering all comers, including the devil.

"This is in its own way an event. I tried all over England, all over France—countries in which Punch and Judy yet flourish at every fair—to find a printed version of this traditional dialogue, and I never found it, not even in the arcades of the Odéon, where you expect to find everything theatrical. But I recognize this deathless drama. I have listened to it in one country or another all my life. . . These pictures are large, comic, brightly colored.

The book's jacket may be bent into a puppet theater. It's lovely." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 10 '40 200w

"Whatever its positive or negative values, 'Punch and Judy' has through three centuries become a rightful heritage and it could scarcely have had a livelier presentation in book form than this one. Margaret Wise Brown has adapted it in swinging sentences, with plenty of hits and runs, but no errors, and with rolling verses set to the tune of 'For He's a Jolly Good Fellow.'" E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '40 210w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Polite penguin; with pictures by H. A. Rey. 31p $1.75 Harper

41-22150

Picture-story book for children, 'describing the laughable attempts of a little penguin from the South Pole to learn manners.

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 66:1048 D 1 '41 50w

"This original lesson in one of the great arts of society is made absolutely painless by H. A. Rey's fascinating and very funny drawings." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 7 '41 220w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Poodle and the sheep; pictures by L. Weisgard. [55p] $1.50 Dutton

41-12321

Picture-story book about a little poodle who would chase sheep, and what happened to him when he was caught by the sheriff and put in the dog-jail.

"As the incidents of the tale lack the inevitability of true nonsense, the result is dull and the pictures are effective from the adult's standpoint rather than from that of the child." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 Ja 11 '42 130w

Springfd Republican p7e Ar 10 '41 120w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. The seashore noisy book; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [42p] $1 Scott, W. R.

41-13238

Picture book for the very young with a story to be read aloud, describing the sights and sounds which a little dog met at the seashore.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 21 '41 100w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:372 D '41 40w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 20w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 20w

"This picture book for the youngest children has freshness of invention and a gay humor. . . The drawings, in three colors that have both depth and brilliance, give us delightful views of an engaging and very busy little dog. For the most part the pictures are child-like, but occasionally, as in the drawings of the cliffs, which are puzzling even to the older reader, the artist introduces a note too adult and sophisticated for a child's book. A pleasant and cheerful addition to the list of picture books for the 3 to 5 year olds." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 O 19 '41 260w

BROWN, PAUL. Insignia of the services. [63p] il $1.50 Scribner

355.81 U.S.—Army—Insignia. U.S.—Navy—Insignia (W) 41-8412

Pictures of the insignia worn on caps, sleeves, shoulders, etc., of members of the army, navy, marine corps and air force. Brief descriptive text.

Booklist 37:551 J1 15 '41

BROWN, PAUL—Continued

"There is no reason to suppose that the book is for young folks only. But as it gives schoolboys just what they find fascinating at any time, and particularly absorbing just now, it should be brought first to the attention of those who buy books for boys—reading them on the way home. This one is uncommonly easy to read; it depends, as it should, upon a great many uncommonly clear pictures to which just description enough is added to clinch the identification." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Je 1 '41 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"This is a source book of information for which there will be increasing demands." D. M. MacDonald

Library J 66:522 Je 1 '41 70w

"Here in Paul Brown drawings, which have the debonair air which we proudly associate with our services, are illustrated the uniforms of Navy, Army and Marine Corps, from enlisted men to general and admiral, with detail sketches of the various insignia. Just give it to any small boy and see if in two days he doesn't know them all by heart." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 3 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:133 Jl '41

BROWN, ROSE, and BROWN, ROBERT CARLTON. Look before you cook; a consumers kitchen guide; with the assistance of Consumers union. 404p $2.75 McBride

641.5 Cookery. Food. Buying. Commercial products 41-51621

"A cook book worked out in conjunction with Consumers Union. A 'buying guide,' occupying about one-third of the book, lists commercial brands, with their ratings. This guide covers other household necessities in addition to foods." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 37:353 Ap 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

Springf'd Republican p7e My 11 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

BROWN, STUART GERRY, ed. We hold these truths; documents of American democracy; with an introductory essay. 351p $1.50; college ed $1.25 Harper

342.738 U.S.—Politics and government 41-8272

Collection of essays, addresses, and writings on the subject of democracy in this country, beginning with the Mayflower compact of 1620, and ending with Thomas Wolfe's credo of 1940. Index.

Reviewed by Willmoore Kendall

Am Pol Sci R 35:1190 D '41 220w

Christian Century 58:886 Jl 9 '41 40w

School & Society 54:535 D 6 '41 30w

"One might wish for a somewhat wider selection from contemporary statements but the documents are well chosen and offer a wide range of possibilities." Mildred Ellis

+ Social Educ 5:551 N '41 450w

Social Studies 32:333 N '41 20w

"What a heritage of wisdom, realism, courage we have! What challenges to defend this way of life! What lessons for the very present time of peril, fresher than the headlines, in such documents as Robert LaFollette's, 'Free Speech in Wartime,' or James G. Blaine's 'North American Relations with South America!' You cannot act now unless you know these truths, winnowed free of the chaff of politics and propaganda. Read this book of principles—it will clear your head of confusion and steel your will." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:404 Jl '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 Jl '41

BROWN, THOMAS BENJAMIN. Foundations of modern physics. 333p il $3.25 Wiley

530 Physics

40-32759

A textbook based on the fourth unit of a two-year course in physics given at the George Washington university. "It is hoped that this book may assist students in all fields of learning to obtain some acquaintance with the fundamental discoveries of modern physics, together with some understanding of the theories whereby these discoveries are explained and interpreted. To further this purpose, technical terms and phraseology have been avoided except where such terms may be fully explained, and only elementary mathematics is used." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:237 F 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 25:51 O '40

BROWN, WELDON AMZY. Empire or independence; a study in the failure of reconciliation, 1774-1783. 338p $3 La. state univ. press

973.31 U.S.—History—Revolution 41-21913

"[This study] examines minutely the various efforts made to settle by negotiation the quarrel between Great Britain and the United States. The author concludes that the earlier offers made by Lord North were inadequate and played into the hands of the minority who wanted independence and not a peaceful settlement. The final proposals of 1778 would very probably have been accepted a few years earlier, but they came too late." Am Pol Sci R

"A very careful and detailed investigation of an aspect of the American Revolution which has received little attention from scholars." L. A. Mills

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:820 Ag '41 90w

"Professor Brown's painstaking thesis on the various proposals, and the debates and correspondence relating to them, though capable of being bettered by a more incisive style, is undeniably useful to students of American history." W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 21 '41 550w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. The international gold standard reinterpreted, 1914-1934. 2v 730; 731-1420p $12 Nat. bur. of economic research

332.42 Currency question. Gold 40-34584

"These volumes are the product of research begun under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation in 1932 and later carried forward under the National Bureau of Economic Research. The discussion is divided into four parts, descriptive of what happened to the gold standard during each of the periods indicated: Break-down, 1914-1918; Restoration, 1919-1925; Experimentation, 1925-1931; and Disintegration, 1931-1934." (Ann Am Acad) Index at end of volume two.

"The two volumes are an outstanding achievement and will be of great value to every student of currency. They ought to be of particular help to those who will be charged with the duty of restoring an international currency system in the future, for the careful study of these volumes will help to avoid many pitfalls." Marcus Nadler

+ Am Econ R 31:174 Mr '41 1100w

"The reader is frequently led to wonder whether this is a history of gold or of finance and money markets throughout the world. But if at times the discussion strays farther than seems necessary from the subject of gold, the result is nevertheless a reference work of high usefulness. On the other hand, in an apparent effort to free himself from abstractions and preconceptions, the author has made little use of the theoretical work of other scholars. This distribution of emphasis represents, of course, a deliberate choice on the part of the author, but to this reviewer the choice does not appear to have been an altogether happy one." C. R. Whittlessey

+ — Ann Am Acad 215:214 My '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:872 Jl '41 40w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Murder of a fifth columnist. 242p $2 Scribner

41-12686

Detective story

Booklist 38:13 S '41

"Here's a swift, smart, exciting mystery romance that has everything you need for summer entertainment." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Jl 20 '41 150w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 105:598 N 3 '41 60w

"Leslie Ford at her best. . . There's a romance running all through this thriller, of course, with Leslie Ford's usual well-born and impoverished heroine. But both romance and heroine have a pertinent interest. 'Pertinent interest' in the broader sense is the phrase for the story as a whole, in all its swift-paced bafflement." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 20 '41 280w

"It's nice to see a pro work: plot with a double bounce, urbane people, skilful suspense."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Jl 26 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 27 '41 80w

BROWNE-OLF, LILLIAN. See Olf, L.

BROWNELL, BAKER. Philosopher in chaos; an attempt to make head and tail of the modern world. 253p $2.50 Van Nostrand

100 Philosophy. Civilization 41-8423

"In this book Professor Brownell supplies an eloquent analysis of various tendencies in contemporary society which make for the disruption as well as for the enhancement of civilized life. It includes a synoptic view of the physical, chemical, and biological conditions of organic behavior, as well as surveys of the major philosophies of human nature and social reconstruction. Professor Brownell . . . believes that the concentration of power so characteristic of modern society is inimical to the preservation of human values. He recommends, however, that a more adequate society can be achieved not by turning away from science and industry, but by a rational decentralization of the instruments of power." (J Philos) Index.

Reviewed by T. L. Leishman

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '41 500w

"Professor Brownell's plea for a humanistic liberalism is intriguing, and his proposed remedy for our present ills appears to be a reasonable one; but he does not suggest procedure for belling the cat." E. N.

+ — J Philos 38:531 S 11 '41 180w

BRUCE, CALEB. Knickerbocker Gardens; a pursuit of happiness. 564p $2.75 Scribner

41-21272

Knickerbocker Gardens is an imaginary but supposedly typical suburban community, inhabited by an assortment of Americans coming from various parts of the country and the world at large, and representative of various classes and conditions. The time covered by this picture of the ways of life in such a town is the decade from 1927 to 1937.

"'Knickerbocker Gardens' is the kind of book that could easily become diffuse and get out of hand. But Mr. Bruce never allowed his theme to escape him. And though his characters are sometimes one-dimensional, this first novel is a very creditable achievement and gives promise of a better second." Milton Hindus

+ Books p18 O 26 '41 360w

Nation 153:649 D 20 '41 450w

"The cast of characters is so large that this is not an easy novel to get into—there are so many waiting to be introduced. But there are good stories here, with moving, dramatic scenes, that are more than worth the brief tedium of the reception line." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 N 9 '41 370w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 300w

BRUEHL, CHARLES PAUL. This way happiness; ethics: the science of the good life. (Science and culture ser) 241p $2.50 Bruce pub.

170 Christian ethics 41-8426

"The title of the book makes clear the purpose of the author—to emphasize the relationship between moral action and human happiness, and to bring into focus the reasonableness of following ethical precepts in human endeavor. Father Bruhl does demonstrate his thesis, that the way to happiness is through the attainment of moral goodness." America

"Most interesting, concise and masterful, and above all else, pleasing to the reader, is This Way Happiness." J. F. MacDonnell

+ America 65:358 Jl 5 '41 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"The volume is readable and attractive, and it is cast in non-technical language that makes it understandable to the average intelligent reader." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 34:187 Je 13 '41 420w

BRUNCKEN, HERBERT. Hue and cry. unsp pa $1 Prairie

811

"A selection of 12 poems issued in brochure form. More lyric in quality than the author's previously published poems, they will have a wider public appeal. There is a timely note also in such poems as Over this country, Black-out, and Sermon before disaster." Wis Lib Bul

"Competent craftsmanship gives substance and form to viable ideas."

Christian Century 58:1178 S 24 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

BRUNCKEN, HERBERT, ed. Subject index to poetry; a guide for adult readers. 201p $3.25 A.L.A.

808.81 Poetry—Indexes (W) 40-27835

"The editor has attempted to supply material that will be of service in three types of inquiry: 1. For the location of poetry on specific subjects; 2. For the location of a poem, the topical matter or dominant idea of which is known, but not title, author or first line; 3. For the location of a poem whose author, title or first line is not known, but a line or fragment of a line of which is known." Pref.

Booklist 37:171 Ja 1 '41

"It is too bad the Subject Index could not be devoted entirely to good or at least to better poetry. It is disquieting to see under 'Death' poems by Donne, Keats, and Tennyson next to E. A. Guest's 'They're waiting over there' and many others of like caliber. A surprising exhaustion is made of the poems of the 'popular' poets, and only the most famous of great poems are included. There is almost nothing by important contemporaries such as T. S. Eliot or by less famous poets whose work does not already appear in anthologies. All in all, it would be heartening to see something in the way of a subject index which would do better than merely satisfy the innocent library patron."

BRUNCKEN, HERBERT—Continued

Library Q 11:250 Ap '41 290w

School & Society 53:160 F 1 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

BRUNER, HERBERT BASCOM, and others. What our schools are teaching. 225p $3 Teachers college

375 Education—Curricula. Education of children. Education, Secondary 41-16418

"An analysis of the content of selected courses of study with special reference to science, social studies, and industrial arts." Subtitle

School & Society 54:128 Ag 23 '41 10w

"The techniques of the study are set forth in great detail. The book will be of interest primarily to those concerned with the three areas covered, and to those who wish to undertake similar studies. There will be wide differences of opinion as to the significance of the 'index of significance.' For those who want to look up particular matters, just an old-fashioned index in the same old place would have been useful." Thomas Woody

Social Studies 32:373 D '41 850w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead

Survey 77:342 N '41 600w

BRUNTON, PAUL. The hidden teaching beyond yoga. 413p $3.50 Dutton [21s Rider]

181.4 Metaphysics. Knowledge, Theory of. Yoga. Philosophy, Modern 41-9485

"In his opening chapters Dr. Brunton argues the case against Yoga as an end in itself. The practice of meditation, the encouragement of the mystical vision and ecstasy, the separation of the seeker from the life of the world (of which he has himself had full experience) can never, he claims, lead to a true understanding of the universe. It may answer the question 'Who am I?' but not the more important question 'What am I?' the proper search of the philosophy contained in certain ancient books of India which have only comparatively recently become available for Western students. From this he passes to an interpretation of the Hindu doctrine of Maya, the essential theme of the present work." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"This reviewer finds Paul Brunton an annoying writer for several reasons: first, because he is so entranced with the words 'hidden' and 'secret' that he uses them in expounding the most ordinary ideas known to modern philosophy; and second, because his writing is the philosophic equivalent of the 'strip tease'—always promising to reveal more and always ending up with something still 'hidden' which will be 'revealed' in the next act. . . The style of the book is good and several difficult topics such as the basis for mentalism, relativism, and the need for a study of semantics, are presented in an easy manner for the average reader. Unfortunately some conclusions apparently have no relation with the thread of reasoning." K. P. L.

— + J Philos 38:559 S 25 '41 420w

"[Mr Brunton's] latest book is frankly directed to the intellectual, and his style and presentation is in keeping with his purpose. The book is crammed with telling yet sympathetic analyses of the shortcomings of the materialistic credo, as well as with the failures of orthodox religion to meet the need of individuals facing today's uncertainties and confusion. His conclusions often offer a challenge to differing opinion, but they are too temperately expressed to evoke resentments. In short, in his latest book, Mr Brunton is an entertaining, probing and precise guide on a worth-while intellectual adventure." + Spring'd Republican p10 Ag 8 '41 480w

"The student of philosophy will find much in the present work which must seem to him laboured and unnecessarily repetitive. But Dr. Brunton is writing primarily for the plain man, to whom this concept of the world as idea may well seem revolutionary and incredible, and has evidently been at great pains to state and argue his thesis with the least possible ambiguity in untechnical language." + Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Ag 23 '41 390w

BRUSH, KATHARINE (INGHAM) (MRS H. C. WINANS). You go your way. 240p $2 Farrar

41-9389

The ups and downs of a clever New York couple whose marriage was almost wrecked because Connie had too much money and too many ideas, all of which she wanted to use on Bill.

Booklist 37:515 J1 1 '41

"There isn't much sense to Katharine Brush's new novel, 'You Go Your Way,' but there's a vast amount of joyous nonsense. And there comes a time in this world and these days when one is happy to relax with a book that has no problems but ridiculous ones. When it comes to this sort of thing, Katharine Brush has few peers. Connie Howell is completely mad, goofy, haywire, 'tizzy,' but she adds up to a person—in the book, anyway, and that's saying something. For it's no small task, as any writer knows, to carry laughter ringing down the pages to the last dot of silly complications." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 J1 6 '41 500w

"A comedy of marriage, separation, and divorce whisked with lightness, deftness, and gaiety to a stiff and delicate froth. Pleasant sophistication. Traces of autobiography." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 66:614 J1 '41 20w

"The story is light and amusing, short on ballast but long on smartly frivolous conversation. . . Anyway, the tale is told to entertain, and Connie's comedy and Connie's errors in promoting continuous courtship are generously diverting." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p5 J1 6 '41 280w

"A Park Avenue décor, up-to-date witticisms, and a fast pace help to conceal the fact that the young woman is a mite dim-witted and her long-suffering husband likewise."

New Yorker 17:70 J1 12 '41 60w

BRYAN, WILLIAM FRANK, and DEMPSTER, MRS GERMAINE (COLLETTE), eds. Sources and analogues of Chaucer's Canterbury tales [by] Carleton Brown [and others]. 765p $10 Univ. of Chicago press

821 Chaucer, Geoffrey—Canterbury tales 41-6613

"Studies are available which exhibit Chaucer's borrowings from the Bible, Lucan, Horace, Ovid, Seneca, Catullus, Statius, Boethius, the Roman liturgy, Dante, Boccaccio, the Roman de la Rose and the Golden Legend of Jacobus de Voragine, not to mention his English contemporaries, Langland and Gower. A more comprehensive treatment is the British Chaucer Society's sixty-year-old Originals and Analogues. . . [This volume] is a cooperative enterprise carried through by more than twenty scholars in the Chaucer group of the Modern Language Association of America. Not more than one-fourth of its contents duplicates materials to be found in the Chaucer Society's volume, and it has the notable advantage of covering all the twenty-four tales. Besides listing, describing and evaluating hundreds of sources, it presents the actual text of scores of these in versions carefully edited from early editions or from the best available manuscripts. . . The bulk of the book consists of the texts of sources and analogues in the languages in which they were written." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Books p15 O 12 '41 800w

"The work here under review may fairly be said to supersede all previous studies or Chaucer sources. . . For the reader or student who can handle Italian, German, old French and Latin, this is a treasure house of materials which not only reveal all that is known of the sources of Chaucer's stories but give fresh insight into the mind of the Middle Ages. Anyone who got his ideas of medieval Europe out of a college textbook, or who thinks of that period as a time when men were interested only in the crusades and the suppression of heresy and the struggle between the empire and the papacy, will discover here that life went on in the 'dark ages' with as much merriment and with as wide a variety of interests and motives as now. Besides its main value as a magnificent and scholarly contribution to the study of comparative literature, the work brings the Middle Ages to life in a remarkable way." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:721 My 28 '41 700w

"The University of Chicago is more and more assuming the character of the world's leading center for Chaucerian studies. This latest volume, intended as a supplement to previously existing collections of the same sort which the years have made incomplete, represents the joint work of a galaxy of specialists. It is, of course, primarily intended for students and for other experts, yet it can be made to serve a wider purpose. For it reflects the literary tone of Chaucer's time, and thereby makes his own genius all the more obvious."

+ Commonweal 34:213 Je 20 '41 80w

BRYAN, WILLIAM LOWE. Wars of families of minds. 143p $2 Yale univ. press

121 Thought and thinking. Science—Philosophy. Literature and science 41-929

"'Families of Minds' comes from Sainte-Beuve, who used it to distinguish groups of authors who differ profoundly in spirit and prevailing mood. Dr. Bryan applies it to groups of men who try in different ways to learn what they wish to know. They are represented by Daniel Boone, Galileo, Hegel, Keats, and St. John. . . Dr. Bryan considers the misunderstandings and hostilities between these human groups and then shows how a bridge may be made by men who follow diverse occupations and belong to more than one family of minds—such men as Aristotle, Leonardo, and Goethe. William Lowe Bryan is President Emeritus and sometime Professor of Philosophy and Psychology in Indiana University, and this volume is based on the Powell Lectures delivered at Indiana University in 1940." (Publisher's note) Index.

Christian Century 57:1555 D 11 '40 80w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:18 F 1 '41 270w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee

Ethics 51:358 Ap '41 330w

"A simply and gracefully written account of some of the historic misunderstandings and conflicts between families of minds." A. H.

+ J Philos 38:333 Je 5 '41 300w

BRYANT, ARTHUR. Pageant of England (1840-1940). [Eng title: English saga (1840-1940)]. 338p il $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Collins]

942.08 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Social conditions. National characteristics, English (W) 41-51622

A history of England during the last one hundred years. Stress is laid on the changes in thought concerning social, economic and political problems brought about by historical events. Index.

Booklist 37:355 Ap 1 '41

"Mr. Bryant's ideals are fittingly summed up in Kipling's phrase of 'Law, Order, Duty and Restraint, Obedience and Discipline.' His is a plea for patriarchal benevolence which articulates with the confusion and frustration of the bewildered democrats of 1941. While casting a spell of romantic happiness over a vanished utopia and while ravaging our sensibilities, it seeks to administer an anesthetic to all critical inquiry." Leo Gershow

Books p16 Ap 6 '41 900w

"Altogether a good book to read in these times." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Forum 21:92 Je '41 410w

"English Saga is, in the main, a social history; and it may be said at once that it is probably the most brilliant and comprehensive picture of Victorian society that has ever been drawn in so short a space. . . It is unfortunate that so good a book should be marred by exaggeration and by so open a parade of the author's political prejudices. . . The old England was not, except for the privileged minority, so idyllic a place as is here suggested; and there is certainly more to be said for the social benefits of many of the liberal reforms of the period than might be inferred from the brilliant but misleading denunciations of Gladstone and the doctrinaires with which this book abounds. For all that, Mr. Bryant has written a notable book, a book which can be read with interest by all, and with profit by those who are still inclined to seek the records of a people's greatness in the balance-sheets of merchants and manufacturers." D. J. McDougall

+ Canadian Hist R 22:198 Je '41 550w

Cath World 153:379 Je '41 280w

"[The] book is melancholy in outlook, though it is also a clarion call to better things, and it is written with superb fire and intensity of feeling." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 15 '41 130w

"A 'must' book to Americans who want to know something about the real England." Géza Schütz

+ Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 90w

"Mr. Bryant keeps up with the times; less than a year ago he produced an historical defence of appeasement; now he appears as the historian of collectivist democracy, speaking disrespectfully of 'Chamberlainism' and even of Baldwin." A. J. P. T.

— Manchester Guardian p8 D 27 '40 300w

"Vivid, dramatic, swift, passionate, ironic, witty—these are the adjectives that come to mind in trying to describe this action picture of the rise and decline of English industrialism and laissez faire."

+ Nation 153:520 N 22 '41 100w

"Mr. Bryant's style has the race and urgency of spontaneous writing, with the body in it that deep feeling lends. English Saga is well worth reading, worth pondering, and worth refuting." C. H. Wilson

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:15 Ja 4 '41 1450w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p9 Ap 13 '41 2050w

"'Pageant of England' is aptly named. It has the bad and the good qualities of a well-mounted pageant, being heroic in conception, vivid and picturesque, full of bold contrasts, stirring, and not quite in accord with reality. . . Mr. Bryant's book, whatever way one views his moral prepossessions, makes inspiring reading. . . The pageantry is admirable." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:72 Mr 8 '41 600w

"The book is a series of scenes from English life, a sort of Cavalcade built up from odds and ends of social and economic history. It does not altogether avoid the major difficulty of such history: it seems at times episodic and disjoined. But on the whole Mr. Bryant makes the thing move, succeeds in living up to the title of his book." Crane Brinton

BRYANT, ARTHUR—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:15 Mr 29 '41 650w

"The style is brilliant and never dull even in the sections on economic theory. Layman and scholar alike can read this book with profit and enjoyment." Avaline Folsom

+ Social Educ 5:546 N '41 600w

"Mr. Bryant has very distinguished historical work on the seventeenth century to his credit, but he is also a professional journalist. He has at times deputised for Mr. Garvin on the middle page of the Observer, and when his pen gets warmed up, as it were, he develops Garvinian traits. He hits the nail on the head very hard, but, as it were, rather sweepingly; he is more emotional than judicial. But for all that it is a fine book. Those who are uncritically carried away by it—and there will be thousands of them—will be none the worse if it sets their minds upon the better England which is Mr. Bryant's aspiration." D. C. Somervell

+ — Spec 166:16 Ja 3 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p621 D 7 '40 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Yale R n s 31:186 autumn '41 850w

BRYSON, LYMAN. The new Prometheus. 107p $1 Macmillan

501.8 Science—Methodology. Sociology. Civilization 41-5336

"[The] purpose [of this little book] is to awaken students, teachers, any one concerned in making and keeping America the home of the free, to the prime necessity of learning how to think, to think straight and to use this ability in the solution of problems that cannot be dodged and will not solve themselves." Books

"Its tone, though dignified, is as far as possible from what the layman calls 'academic.' Indeed, the smug is Professor Bryson's horror; his style is dynamic. Its effect on the reader is to make him want to do something about this thinking business, and the book also tells him something to do."

+ Books p12 Ag 3 '41 110w

"It is quite possible that readers of these lectures will feel that the author has excessively emphasized certain points. His preference for books as the basis of adult education rather than newspapers, magazines, and the radio is an illustration of this emphasis. Some readers may feel, too, that many of the progressive schools are more successful in teaching pupils to think than Professor Bryson would seem to acknowledge. Certainly, however, no one can object to the high value that he places on the art of scientific thinking. The clarion call for more emphasis on this essential in education should strike a responsive chord." F. T. Goodier

+ — El School J 42:70 S '41 650w

"Democracy needs more leaders like Bryson, who can keep their fingers on the pulse of humanity, yet continue to identify themselves with humanity and not become intoxicated by power; who can recognize method, responsibility and sportsmanship in the political process; who can guide the functioning democratic process along the least harmful, most honorable, path toward an always tentative conclusion." H. H. Shoen

+ School & Society 53:639 My 17 '41 500w

BRYSON, LYMAN, and SMITH, KERRY. Working for democracy. 425p il $1.32 Macmillan

321.8 Democracy

"The final book of the Democracy Series, this volume presents actual experiences as experiments in democratic living." School & Society

School & Society 54:64 Jl 26 '41 20w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 20w

BUCHAN, JOHN, 1st baron TWEEDSMUIR.

Canadian occasions; addresses. 256p $1.50 Musson (Canadian publication) [8s 6d Hodder]

971 Canada

[41-6957]

Collection of Lord Tweedsmuir's speeches made in Canada. They cover many subjects: engineering, law, mining, medicine, literature, philosophy, Canadian affairs, education, and youth. As a preface is given the speech delivered in London, at the Canada club dinner before his departure for his new office in 1935.

"Those who knew John Buchan (and they must be very many, for he had a genius for knowing men) will read with affectionate memory these Canadian State speeches. Hannay, of the adventure stories, the eye of a hunter, the knowledgeableness of a Scotsman, and the careful balanced prose of a D.C.L. Oxford, and L.L.D. St. Andrews."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 22 '40 600w

"They all have the touch you find even in Hannay, of the adventure stories, the eye of a hunter, the knowledgeableness of a Scotsman, and the careful balanced prose of a D.C.L. Oxford, and L.L.D. St. Andrews."

+ Spec 165:560 N 22 '40 90w

"Although these are speeches made on occasion it would be hard to find a book of his, with the great exception of his Cromwell, where he is more admirable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p574 N 16 '40 440w

BUCHAN, JOHN, 1st baron TWEEDSMUIR. Lake of gold; il. by S. Levenson. 190p $2 Houghton

971 Canada—History—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-13043

"After the manner of Kipling in Puck of Pook's Hill, the author presents a pageant of Canadian history to a boy camper in Quebec. Under the spell of sunset glow on the river pools, aided by an Indian guide and a friendly priest, the boy who was bored with school history is fascinated with such stirring events as the coming of the Norse men, Cartier, de Courville, and the 'white water' men. It is good North Americana." (Library J) For ages fourteen and older.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 N 2 '41 240w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:379 D '41 140w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 10w

"One of the finest chapters of this inspiring book is entitled White Water. Older boys and adults will best appreciate it." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:367 S '41 110w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:476 N '41 140w

"I fear that the presence of fairly long poems between chapters, many French expressions, a mature vocabulary, and the device of loosely connected narrative will deter all except the best readers." Maude Adams

Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 120w

"A book for boys from 12 on, and one that adults also will enjoy." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p33 N 2 '41 230w

"Beautifully written and conceived." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 40w

BUCHAN, JOHN, 1st baron TWEEDSMUIR.
Mountain meadow; with an introd. by Howard Swiggett [Eng title: Sick Heart river]. 277p $2.50 Houghton [8s 3d Hodder]

(W) 41-51660

The final volume in the series of romances centering about Richard Hannay and his friends is the story of the last adventure of Sir Edward Leithen—his search, while he is dying of tuberculosis, for Francis Galliard, a French-American millionaire lost in the Canadian wilderness. In the Introduction, Howard Swiggett provides a summary of the series of novels, showing their relationships with each other.

"Mountain Meadow is a great, sustained, tapestried poem of place, and its natural audience is made up of all those who warm to the inhuman beauty of what to common natures are the forbiddingly desolate places—the sea, the treeless crags, the everlasting snows." W. F.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 270w

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:13 My '41

"'Mountain Meadow' will be read with a sharpened appreciation in the consciousness that this final episode in the career of Sir Edward Leithen, which is its substance, is the last we shall hear of Richard Hannay's notable circle of men. And it has a deeper meaning because it is concerned in such large measure with the meaning of a life not much longer to be lived. Death and how a man should face it is the theme." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Mr 16 '41 600w

"'Mountain Meadow' is the work of a fully mature and perhaps a tiring man. It lacks the quick motion and intense riotous action of the earlier tales: I think it is the only one which includes no physical fighting between man and man." F. T. Pratt

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 600w

"The concern with philosophy weakens the novel as a work of fiction. The scenes follow from Lord Tweedsmuir's visit to the Arctic and from the information he gathered from friends. In the spiritual sense this is his greatest book because it is his book, but in the technical sense it is his weakest." H. A. Innis

+ Canadian Hist R 22:192 Je '41 160w

+ Cath World 153:241 My '41 1300w

Christian Century 58:886 Jl 9 '41 140w

Churchman 155:35 Ap 15 '41 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"'Mountain Meadow' has the color of a travel book, the thrill of an adventure story, and the conviction of an authentic psychological document. As an added filip there are some isolated comments on the American scene which are pungent and revealing as one might expect from so able a writer and so honest a man." F. X. Connolly

+ Commonweal 34:40 My 2 '41 420w

"Thrilling adventure and a thought-provoking study of human nature combine in making this a most engrossing book." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 70w

"It would seem that, perhaps with some premonition of his own approaching end, Lord Tweedsmuir wished to record, in the guise of a fable, his own most intimate convictions on the significance of death and of man's indomitable struggle against the implacable enemy. The book contains much profound reflection on this poignant theme, expressed with the clarity and the mature assurance of a writer who is uttering the final conclusions gathered in a life of strenuous endeavour." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 12 '41 380w

"The old Buchan is here throughout, conjuring up, with his inimitable prose, unforgettable pictures of an Arctic Canada few have seen; blending the mystic with the actual; building up, without intending it, the self-portrait of a very great and very humble man. Aside from its intrinsic fictional distinction, 'Mountain Meadow' has the unique value attached to the deliberate pronouncements of an exceptional man on the brink of eternity." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 16 '41 1000w

New Yorker 16:65 F 8 '41 60w

Pratt p10 spring '41

"John Buchan has always been best in vast places 'filled with God.' He has never had happier material than the Sick Heart valley, end of the quest. He may prove the last of a distinguished line, but there is nothing whatever fin de siècle about him. This is a gallant and a fitting last try at what Stevenson called 'awful fun.'" K. P. Kempton

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 Mr 22 '41 550w

Reviewed by Graham Greene

Spec 166:430 My 13 '41 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Ap 5 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

BUCK, MRS ELIZABETH (HAWTHORN).
The powder keg [il. by Frank Lea]. 223p map $1.50 Penn

40-31799

Story of the Pennsylvania frontier in the 1750s, when the French-Indian trappers were coming closer to the English settlers. Matthew Vane, a young fur trader, is the hero. George Washington is among the characters. For grades five to seven.

"The picture the book leaves with a young reader, both of Washington and of the wilderness, is convincing." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 1 '40 200w

"Very convincing picture of the young George Washington and the wilderness frontier just before the outbreak of the French and Indian War."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:95 My '41

BUCK, FRANK, and FRASER, FERRIN L.
All in a lifetime. 277p il map $2.75 McBride

B or 92 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation (W) 41-5841

Autobiographical study by the author of Bring 'Em Back Alive, in which he describes his Texas boyhood, his struggle to earn a living in Chicago, his travels and adventures in the jungles, from which he returned to supply animals for zoos and circuses, and his two marriages. The book contains stories of people the author has met on his travels, as well as many wild animal stories.

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

Reviewed by H. M. Shaw

Books p21 Ap 20 '41 500w

"Easy, unpretentious, undistinguished. . . Chance, friendship, danger, and success furnish interest. Sidelights on the last fifty years and on notable people are entertaining to contemporaries." Catherine Van Dyne

Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 90w

"The book has a high content of reader interest throughout, if not actual importance." E. F. Allen

N Y Times p18 Mr 30 '41 700w

"Mr Buck's book is profusely illustrated and packed with plenty of adventure, enough to make one forget the imminent arrival of one's questionnaire or the tense situation in the Balkans. It is fit company for Frank Buck's other volumes."

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 31 '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

BUCK, MARGARET WARING. Animals through the year [il. by the author]. 96p $2 Rand McNally

591.5 Animals—Juvenile literature 41-6635

Accounts of twenty small animals of field, and wood, tracing their activities throught the different seasons of the year. Six are described in each season; the others during three seasons. For grades six to eight. Index.

Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 40w

"The information given is too slight to answer any child's very serious questions, but the book could be used to arouse an interest in animals in children from six to eight. Recommended only for large libraries needing additional animal material." E. G. Mullan

+ — Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 90w

"The text is clear and well written, the information is sufficient to serve as a starting point for 8 to 10 years olds without confusing them with too many details, the type is large and clear, and there are many pictures. . . A good first book which will stimulate a child's interest and encourage further reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 J1 13 '41 120w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Of men and women. 203p $2 Day

396 Women in the U.S. Women in China. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 41-51773

"That American middle-class women are discontented and that they don't enjoy their husbands much and vice versa has often been pointed out. Pearl Buck . . . is convinced the root of the trouble lies in the fact that American women are given paper equality but not the real thing, that they quite literally have no work to do. She also makes the important point that where this sullen, vacant, restless discontent exists is fertile ground for the nostrums of the dictator, who at least offers women the definiteness and permanent security of slavery." New Yorker

Booklist 37:485 Je 15 '41

"Mrs. Buck discovers the relations between American men and women to be in a parlous fix—so bad indeed that they may well provide first-rate groundwork for Fascism. So she writes, among other good reasons, to sound this warning. In the course of her 203 pages she says so many things which are penetratingly true, partly true and wholly false, with such a rush and such brilliancy, that she leaves one bedazzled and confused." F. H. Bullock

Books p24 My 11 '41 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '41

"Mrs. Buck's comparison of the home in China and in America is particularly interesting. Her discussions of women and war, education, and the old issue of women in politics are intelligent and fresh. She is, thank heaven, not one of those irritating women known as 'feminists' who substitute female for male superiority as their basic assumption. Her thesis is that both men and women would be much happier if women were allowed, or forced, to function, not as angels or as concubines or both, but as human beings." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 152:698 Je 14 '41 1100w

"A stimulating essay inquiring 'into the basic scheme of American living.' . . Mrs. Buck's criticisms of American women are very much to the point, especially those directed against the idle, dissatisfied, privileged 'gunpowder' variety, that may well provide a field for fascism in this country. It could be argued, however, that American women generally have not so much privilege and freedom of choice as Mrs. Buck appears to think. How can idle women 'choose' to work or build a career when millions of men are also unemployed and cannot earn a living?" Nym Wales

+ — New Repub 105:316 S 8 '41 300w

"This book will arouse discussion, and should. It is frankly vehement and sometimes in its vehemence not wholly clear. On the other hand, it is both capacious and epigrammatic, as it is courageous, thoughtful and sincere. Its challenge should be as courageously received." K. W.

+ N Y Times p5 Je 22 '41 700w

"She talks as if the differences between men and women were inconsequential and also as if the little matter of sex were not half so important as a lot of other folks would seem to believe. Her notions are nonetheless stimulating and courageous, and it wouldn't do us any harm to ponder them while we still have time to do any pondering." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:87 My 10 '41 250w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 J1 5 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Today and forever; stories of China. 327p $2.50 Day

(W) 40-27836

Thirteen short stories of life in China, arranged in chronological sequence. They show the contrast in Chinese life and customs before the war and now. Many of the tales show the impact of Western culture on the Confucian tradition.

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

"One gets a strange reaction reading these tales of Mrs. Buck's. Individually, some of them seem slight and almost inconsequential, interesting little items contrived out of a notebook of memories. The writing is often uneven. Yet, in total, the stories add up to impressive stature. They give a picture of China in light and in shadow, of Chinese character in simplicity and grandeur. Any one interested in knowing what kind of people are these who successfully and stubbornly are withstanding the onslaught of superior arms can do little better than read these tales." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 Ja 5 '41 750w

"The short stories all contain the same insight into Chinese minds, the same quiet, mellow humor, the same sympathetic penetration that have distinguished her novels. While none are important in the same sense that the Wang family trilogy was important, yet all are worth reading for the light they throw upon modern China." P. J. Searies

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 190w

"The spirit of China, which Mrs. Buck recognizes and serves by revealing, rises from her pages to stir our hearts and consciences." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 55:18 F 1 '41 200w

Commonweal 33:309 Ja 10 '41 60w

"As the stories unfold, the reader gains an understanding of the problems of the country and an appreciation of the indomitable and invincible quality of the people, especially the women." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 65:1087 D 15 '40 210w

"Certainly the best stories in this volume are those which have been suggested by Mrs. Buck's own experiences of missionary work in China, and these are very good indeed. The incidents may be invented, but Mrs. Buck's invention is securely rooted in a rich mould of knowledge and intuition and is fed and watered by a quick and sympathetic imagination." Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '41 300w

"The tales, though lacking the full-bodied flavor of the author's novels, make good reading."

+ — Nation 152:81 Ja 18 '41 90w

New Repub 104:382 Mr 17 '41 50w

"In spite of a recurrent incompatibility of opinion—and I hope this adds to my tribute—I admire the deftness and polish of Miss Buck's writing and her obvious affection for her characters. She works neatly and economically, comes to the point without fuss, and closes with a gesture of comprehensive and sympathetic insight." Desmond Hawkins

+ — New Statesman & Nation 21:221 Mr 1 '41 130w

"Several of the stories are weakened in their essential realism by a too-well-worked-out love interest, too concise a course of personal event. 'Tiger, Tiger,' the longest, is less powerful, thus, than it should be; and the otherwise excellent tale of young soldiers, 'A Man's Poes,' shrinks from its full stature in its romantic equations at the end. This flaw exists and should be mentioned; nor are all the stories of equal value, of course. But these things are not important in the inherent substance of the book as a whole." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p1 Ja 5 '41 1500w

"Mrs. Buck is definitely a long-breathed writer; she works well when she has space to move about in. Confined within a smaller compass, her stories have somewhat the air of the diagram and the argument. This is not to say that they are not readable, and certainly there is not one that is anything but honestly and sincerely felt." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 16:55 Ja 4 '41 200w

"The people are here, the men and women and children; their world, too, is full of life and reality, but in many of the stories they have to move through plots or romances that have a strangely ready-made tinge as contrasted with their own integrity. . . . It must be admitted that in several cases, where the outlines of the stories seem least convincing, most 'made' for the occasion, the preface states that the incidents are based on actual happenings. Such actuality, however, has never been a guarantee that a narrative would seem real. The amazing thing is not that truth is stranger than fiction but that it is so disconcertingly like it." G. G. Bates

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ja 11 '41 900w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

Spec 166:614 Je 6 '41 140w

"One reads each story with interest and with pleasure, for each has drama, and each has Miss Buck's skillful writing. Incidentally, each tale arouses more sympathy with and understanding of Chinese thought and ways of life." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p65 F 8 '41 500w

BUCKMASTER, HENRIETTA, pseud. See Henkle, H.

BUENO DE MESQUITA, D. M. Giangaleazzo Visconti, duke of Milan, 1351-1402; a study in the political career of an Italian despot. 408p maps $4.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

B or 92 Visconti, Gian Galeazzo, duke of Milan A41-2530

"This is a careful study of the most powerful Italian ruler of the late fourteenth century, the wealthiest prince in Europe and the planner of that characteristically splendid, not to say ostentatious, Visconti monument, the Certosa of Pavia. It has been worked up by its author, a fellow of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, mainly from recently published researches by Italian and other scholars, but also from his own independent work in the archives of Lombardy and elsewhere. References, bibliography and index are all impeccable." Spec

"Considering the subject and its possibilities, Mr. Bueno de Mesquita has not written a very exciting book, but it is only fair to say that he has written a sound one. It is for scholars only. Leaving the pictorial—and perhaps also the inaccuracies—to John Addington Symonds, whose few pages of colorful prose have introduced most English readers to Giangaleazzo, he has concentrated on pure fact. Sometimes this is a little tantalizing but the work he has done is good and thorough and the first complete and accurate monograph upon this interesting and important person is now there for all who care to read." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p34 N 9 '41 490w

Reviewed by Kenneth Bell

+ Spec 166:256 Mr 7 '41 430w

"The destruction of the Milanese records by the Ambrosian Republic a generation after Giangaleazzo's death has left a difficult task to the biographer. Mr. Bueno de Mesquita has discharged it with exact though rather laborious scholarship."

Times [London] Lit Sup p253 My 24 '41 900w

BUILDING America; illustrated studies of modern problems (a project developed and prepared by the Society for curriculum study with the assistance of the Lincoln school of Teachers college, Columbia university). 6v il $3.95 per volume; 30c per single issue, special prices for quantities c1935-41 Americana corp.

300 Social problems. U.S.—Social conditions (W)

"The aim of Building America is 'to place the facts about America's social, economic, and cultural problems before the nation's young people in a dramatic pictorial fashion.' . . . With this point of view the Editorial Committee has planned vocabulary, subject matter, and format primarily for students in junior and senior high schools. Younger children, however, and some adults find the material interesting and thought provoking. . . . Building America is published monthly, October-May. At the end of a year the eight issues are bound together as a volume. Each volume is indexed fully, with symbols to indicate the references which are illustrations." Subscription Bks Bul

"Articles are consistently impartial and, perhaps for that reason, give a somewhat colorless effect when considered in the light of youthful readers. Interest is created, nevertheless, by the content of the brief, pointed sentences and furthered by the numerous charts, graphs, cartoons, and photographs which illustrate and supplement the text. . . . Building America is recommended especially for school libraries and for large public libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:35 Jl '41 650w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. When the cat's away. 312p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Dent] (W) 40-29643

Rollicking story of a strayed black cat, a scrambled romance, with a perfectly good outcome, all scened in a quiet little English village.

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

"'When the Cat's Away' is an example of that altogether too rare form of fiction, a good light novel. Like a crime story (which it really isn't), it demands that the reader cast aside his personal preconceptions and accept its conventions; if he refuses to, he's likely to think it rather silly. If he can and does, however, he's in for a light-hearted evening, with at least several audible chuckles." David Tilden

+ Books p8 F 9 '41 480w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 40w

"All very gay and jaunty, and remote indeed from any thought of blitzkrieg."

+ New Repub 104:286 F 24 '41 40w

"The book tells one of those absorbing, quite preposterous stories we blink at in fiction and accept with equanimity in real life, it is delightfully written, and while novels that seem funny to one person do not always seem funny to another, it is difficult to see how any one equipped with a mature and well developed sense of humor can fail to chuckle joyfully over Gerald Bullett's gay and lively account of what may happen 'When the Cat's Away.'"

BULLETT, G. W.—Continued

L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 F 9 '41 700w

"It has the merits of a good detective story, is ingenious in plot, rapid in action, humorous in narration, without the corresponding disadvantages of a corpse. . . Mr. Bullett writes in a witty style and makes all of his characters, good and bad, entertaining."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 130w

"The situations are mostly slight, but they are handled with an engaging flippancy and are helped out by neat character-drawing of the lightly farcical kind and by a good deal of amusing patter and back-chat."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Ag 24 '40 270w

BUNDY, ROY DALTON. How to teach a job.
63p $1 Nat. foremen

607 Technical education. Industrial education 41-51693

"This manual is intended for foremen, supervisors, job setters and vocational instructors—those who teach the new worker how to do his job. The reader is taken step by step through various stages of the teaching process. Plentiful, practical illustrations help to make clear the application of basic principles." Management R

Booklist 37:401 My 1 '41

Chem & Met Eng 48:192 My '41 130w
Management R 30:155 Ap '41 40w

BURACK, ABRAHAM SOLOMON, ed. The writer's handbook; manuscript market section ed. by Udia G. Olsen. 498p $3.50 Writer 029.6 Authorship. Publishers and publishing (W) 41-7967

Guide to all phases of writing for publication. Fifty-five chapters, each by an authority, give practical information on the writing of fiction, non-fiction, verse, radio plays, plays, juveniles, etc. The second section of the book contains information on where to sell manuscripts of different types. Index to markets.

"Deserves to be recommended to the specialist" Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '41 80w

Booklist 37:485 Je 15 '41

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 2 '41 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 70w

BURANELLI, PROSPER. News reel murder.
284p $2 Funk, W.

Detective story. 40-32856

"Though a little of Nick goes a long way, the yarn is a liberal education in news reels, with plenty of vocabulary technique and inside stuff, an item for the connoisseur of special backgrounds. Billed as 'highly unique in approach.' Get the idea?" Will Cuppy
Books p26 O 27 '40 120w

"It might have been better had some one else done the telling, for Big Nick's manner of speaking is too explosive for continuous hearing or reading. Up to the last moments of the story Big Nick is wrong about virtually everything, but he redeems himself by one bit of brilliant deduction which breaks the case. The plot of this story is better than ordinary, but it is spoiled in the telling." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 O 27 '40 100w

BURBANK, NELSON L., comp. Practical job pointers. 129p il $2 Simmons-Boardman

694 Carpentry. Building 41-51591

"Published in 1934 as 369 Practical Job Pointers, and now enlarged to 600 entries. These are short cuts or ingenious methods for doing odd jobs about buildings, contributed by men in the building industry to the 'Job pointers' section of American Builder and Building Age. Small illustrations, drawn to scale, accompany most of the entries. Indexed." Booklist

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:4 Ja '41

BURGESS, LESLIE. Hallowe'en. 282p $2.50 Putnam [8s 6d Hutchinson]

41-13495

When Claire Dane, newly wedded to the master of Corston Peel, came home to the ancient tower on the Scottish border, she found three women to dispute her right to happiness. They are Roger's mother, mentally ill as the result of an accident, Roger's beautiful but strange sister, Elspeth, and Hannah, the old housekeeper. How Elspeth and Hannah seek to drive Claire out and almost succeed is told in this modern story of horror and terror.

"Altogether a rather meaningless affair."

— Books p12 O 19 '41 210w

"The supernatural is never directly introduced into the weird tale, which develops plausibly out of a gruesome, festering, murderous hatred, and a love still more festering and gruesome. Mr. Burgess is evidently an experienced as well as a talented writer, and in 'Hallowe'en' he presents a dramatic, often impressive story, very interesting and exceptionally well told." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 O 12 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:102 O 11 '41 50w

BURKE, KENNETH. The philosophy of literary form; studies in symbolic action. 455p $3 La. state univ. press

801 Literature—Addresses, essays, lectures. Literature—Philosophy. Criticism 41-11084

"The opening monograph, which gives the title to the volume, outlines both a doctrine and a method for literary analysis. The author, who was strongly affected by the aesthetic emphasis in the literary criticism of the twenties, and by the social emphasis in the criticism of the thirties, has interwoven these two strands with a third: the emphasis upon semantics." (Publisher's note) Other studies include: Semantic and poetic meaning; The virtues and limitations of debunking; and The rhetoric of Hitler's Battle.

"Kenneth Burke likes formulae and out-of-the-way vocabularies, but he never is their prisoner. My chief criticism is that his thought is complex beyond his powers of integration. He has an inquisitive and an acquisitive mind. He cannot see a theory anywhere, in any one of the sciences, without desiring to add it to his philosophical arsenal." Albert Guerard
+ — Books p25 O 26 '41 850w

J Philos 38:719 D 18 '41 550w

"No isolated quotations can do justice to Mr. Burke's subtlety and good sense, and no doubts that one may entertain about the soundness of his critical position can obscure the fact that he is unquestionably the most brilliant and suggestive critic now writing in America." W. H. Auden

+ New Repub 105:59 Jl 14 '41 1050w

"Burke's keenness of perception is everywhere evident, and his many insights both in the philosophy of literature and in the analysis of specific works are liberal reward to any reader. His general 'sociological' approach to art is broader and juster than most of those which so label themselves. It can comfortably embrace within a larger range both Marxian and Freudian literary criticism." Justus Buchler

+ N Y Times p36 N 30 '41 750w

BURKE, RICHARD. The dead take no bows.
235p $2 Houghton

41-3532

Detective story.

"Though this item is somewhat lacking in graces of matter and manner, we'll say one thing. It contains one of the biggest surprises in recent fiction." Will Cuppy

Books p22 Mr 23 '41 70w

"For all mystery fans, particularly the stage-struck. More about Hite, please, Mr. Burke!"

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 30w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:478 Ap 7 '41 120w

"Quinny Hite proves himself to be as good a detective as he thinks he is, and the story of how he does it provides entertainment of a high order." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '41 200w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 29 '41 40w

BURKE, THOMAS. Living in Bloomsbury.
361p $3 Norton [10s 6d Allen, G]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. London—Social life and customs. London—Intellectual life [40-5032]

"Bloomsbury as it was is the loved background against which Mr. Burke writes of life and letters, art and madness, publishers and editors, food and drink, Cockneys, seaside towns, English and American humour and himself." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p17 S 7 '41 490w

"Mr. Burke has given us a delightful monologue that wanders, gaily yet reflectively, into all manner of topics, and enlivens each of them with the diversions of an exceptionally independent mind. His effect is entirely that of a good talker, of a charming and tactful autocrat of the after-dinner table, who assumes a certain similarity of tastes with his company, but never forgets his duty as a host, or pursues his own enthusiasms too heartily." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '39 280w

"Mr. Burke has humour, his asides are even better than his stories, and he is at his best when dealing with the not quite first-rate, whereby, of course, he is the more human and the more companionable in a rambling, widely allusive book." H. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 20 '39 250w

"A rambling and prejudiced literary arm-chair book with some good things in it. . . In spite of a tendency to facetiousness on the subject of modernity, there is something solid and crotchety about this book, which contains much interesting information and good craftsmanship, and recalls the old London atmosphere of literary reminiscence, as in tales by Maugham and Beerbohm." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:688 N 11 '39 210w

"'Living in Bloomsbury' is at once a sad and a gay book. Sad if the reader who knows the district dwells on the destruction wrought there, gay if he remembers that nothing can destroy the spirit which has made the district memorable, and makes Mr. Burke's book delightful. This is a leisurely, very English book to be treasured by those who prefer good wine to quick-firing cocktails." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 My 17 '41 500w

"Here is the true portrait of a Londoner, by choice as well as by birth; and as Mr. Burke writes of his likes and his dislikes, of his love of talk and his hatred of cards and parties, he must make those who do not know the London in which he grew up . . . realize, in his own person, how pleasantly, and genially and freely a man devoted to London could grow there and be himself, uncrowded and undisturbed, like a tree well planted in an open field. A man has lived in the right place to have the ripe contentment which fills this book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 O 14 '39 700w

BURKE, THOMAS. Streets of London through the centuries. 160p il $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

914.21 London—Description. London—
Streets 41-10909

"This is a 'sitting' subject for Mr. Burke. When he is not writing another of his own books about London, I imagine him busily reading the innumerable works of predecessors. In The Streets of London he draws on these resources with refreshing frequency; what he has seen himself, what he has lifted from journalists and poets of the past, combine to make a vivid picture of his favourite city. He illustrates his subject in more than the usual Batsford sense; for the hundred or so admirably chosen illustrations are matched by as many slabs of quotation from sources most of us know only by name, if at all: John Lydgate, Fitzstephen, Dekker, Shadwell, Ned Ward, Pierce Egan, etc., as well as broadsheets, melodramas, almanacks and phrase-books of all periods." New Statesman & Nation

"Thomas Burke has special qualities for making what any one will admit is the best book now existing on the streets of London. He cannot take up a subject without seeing it through; what in another might be a hack job always dances under his hand like a circus horse, and when he sets out to study anything it arouses in him a passion that tears through to the reader. Thus what might have been no more than running commentary on a magnificent collection of prints, paintings, drawings and photographs, has a life of its own that makes it wise to run through the pictures at once and clear the way for uninterrupted reading of the story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 J1 13 '41 600w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 21 '41 100w

"A lively and original London miscellany." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:168 F 15 '41 850w

N Y Times p9 My 11 '41 700w

"An entertaining and skilfully handled sketch of London life through the centuries, very varied and many-sided, though rather excessively dwelling on 'Sittengesichte'—the dirtier aspects of London slang and piquant or unsavoury details of London night-life of the past." Nikolaus Pevsner

+ Spec 166:93 Ja 24 '41 750w

Time 37:74 Mr 31 '41 600w

"It is the raffish, the riotous, the criminal which make up the gay, repulsive scene of the life of the London streets as Mr. Burke shows it through the centuries; and a reader not allowing for the distortion might well wonder how, until the middle of the nineteenth century, any quiet citizen could go about his daily business uninjured, unassaulted and unrobbed. Though Mr. Burke recognizes the distortion he does not seem always to allow enough for it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 4 '41 700w

BURKLUND, CARL EDWIN, ed. New Michigan verse; with a foreword by Louis Untermeyer. 113p $2 Univ. of Mich.

811.08 American poetry—Collections 40-28820

"[This volume contains] poems by twenty-four selected Michigan-born, residing or Michigan-educated poets arranged chronologically from oldest to youngest, covering a time span of some fifty years. . . . Probably the majority of readers will find the collective work of these younger poets the most interesting. To followers of verse published in the better magazines, the excellent work of David Cornel de Jong, Ivan Olson, Theodore Roetke, Anne Persov and John Malcolm Brinnin is already well known. The lyrics of Charles Miller, Elizabeth Allen and John Nerber also merit particular mention." Books

"This book of 'New Michigan Verse' because of the discriminating taste of its compiler, is a valuable anthology of good contemporary poetry. . . . As a selective anthology, however, 'New Michigan Verse' is open to question on the score of certain striking omissions."

+ Books p14 Mr 9 '41 280w

"Neatness and competence generally mark the book." P. M. J.

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '42 200w

"Of the 113 pages of this anthology, perhaps a dozen slow one up for a careful look and a re-reading: not a bad average of the incidence of poetry in verse. But if it sounds meager, then let me say that the merit of the book is larger than the total occurrence of what seems to me to be the genuine poetry." W. T. Scott

+ Poetry 58:344 S '41 300w

BURLINGAME, ROGER. Whittling boy; the story of Eli Whitney. 370p il $3 Harcourt

B or 92 Whitney, Eli (W) 41-51519

Semifictionized biography of the Massachusetts farm boy who invented the cotton gin and worked out the principle of interchangeable parts which underlies industrial mass production.

Booklist 37:269 F 15 '41

Reviewed by M. R. Werner

Books p14 F 9 '41 700w

"The book makes good reading, for it is well written and the subject is certainly interesting." P. M. I. T. Morse

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 320w

Christian Century 58:227 F 12 '41 50w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 155:18 Ap 1 '41 250w

"The very unusual interest of this book lies in the facts of Whitney's life, which are not well known, but equally in the way Mr. Burlingame has treated them. The achievement is one of approach and style." C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 34:66 My 9 '41 390w

"First-rate in spite of scanty source materials."

+ New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 80w

"This is a curiously planned book, written in a style that attempts the dramatic but is turgid and dull to the point of confusion." R. v. G.

+ N Y Times p3 F 9 '41 400w

"Rather forced here and there, but an excellent story, told with dramatic economy and set before a background of the first years of the blossoming Republic."

+ New Yorker 16:66 F 8 '41 120w

"There is hardly any fiction in the book, Mr. Burlingame says. Most of the dialogue even is shaped from letters, diaries, and the like. Unfortunately, however, his method makes historical truth read like light fiction, but a fiction which leaves the reader impatient for more solid detail of history." J. D.

Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 1 '41 280w

"The book offers rare entertainment rather than solid biography. It surpasses much fiction in its drama, in its enlivening details about Whitney. It is written in a style which a schoolboy would enjoy, but is meant for adult reading. It makes Whitney live and breathe, engage our sympathies and our respect." M. D.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 1050w

Time 37:76 F 10 '41 440w

Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

BURN, DUNCAN LYALL. The economic history of steelmaking, 1867-1939; a study in competition. 548p maps $6.50 Macmillan [27s 6d Cambridge]

338.4 Steel industry and trade—Great Britain. Iron industry and trade—Great Britain [L 41-18]

"Mr. Burn covers both the history of the British steel industry and the competitive development of the industry generally from the Paris Exhibition of 1867 till the outbreak of war in 1939." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Burn has succeeded in writing a comprehensive, well documented and thoroughly scholarly history of steelmaking in Great Britain. His interpretations of the economic developments which he so ably records may well provoke dissent from those economists who are less certain than Mr. Burn that rationalization, even under government supervision, is the panacea for unprofitable industry." S. S. Stratton

+ Am Econ R 31:148 Mr '41 700w

"This judicious, well-documented study of the British steel industry covers ground that has been under discussion for many years. No one has, however, brought to the subject so much information or such sound appraisal of the critical problems of this complex period in the history of steelmaking. Since nearly all the material is derived from printed sources, there is no information that is conspicuously new, but much information is not readily available so that there is a great deal of material that has not been embodied hitherto in any general account." A. P. Usher

+ Am Hist R 46:912 Jl '41 420w

"This book is stiff reading, but it is a rich quarry of facts with regard to the history of steel-making and it contains many thoughtful comments on economic policies, past and present. Contemporary politicians might profitably study some of its conclusions. To the student, it is a valuable contribution to a subject which is almost ripe for considered historical treatment—the decline and fall of Britain as an industrial nation." A. Birnie

+ Eng Hist R 56:330 Ap '41 1100w

"Mr. Burn has done an admirably thorough piece of work."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 30 '40 180w

"The book throughout is excellent—clear, comprehensive, well analysed, and well-backed by facts and figures."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p576 N 16 '40 700w

BURN, JUNE (MRS FARRAR BURN). Living high; an unconventional autobiography. 292p $2.50 Duell

B or 92 (W) 41-15023

June Burn and her husband were evidently born with uncontrollable wanderlusts. This description of their haphazard but happy lives begins in a remote log cabin in the Maryland woods, and follows their combined career thru years of homesteading on an island in Puget Sound, teaching among the Eskimos within the Arctic circle, traveling thru the United States with a donkey cart, and singing their way thru southern California in a "little house on wheels" built out of an old automobile and painted blue and canary yellow.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

Bookmark 2:13 N '41

"Living High" is the screwball book of the month, and if you enjoy amiable tramps, this is your meat." S. H. Holbrook
Books p8 Ag 24 '41 900w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 11 '41 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"Profitable and entertaining American escape reading for young people and adults." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 140w

"The Burns [had] plenty of ups and downs, but they all added up to a full life and a good book. It is a charming story of practical escapists." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 31 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

BURNET, FRANK MACFARLANE. Biological aspects of infectious disease. 310p 4pl $3.75 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

616.01 Infection and infectious diseases. Immunity. Micro-organisms, Pathogenic

41-6150

The aim of the book is to present a simple account of the micro-organisms which cause disease, of the processes within the body which provide defenses against bacterial infection and the way infection persists and spreads within the community. Index.

Nature 147:74 Ja 18 '41 240w

"Whilst his outlook cannot be called enthusiastically optimistic, the truth-loving reader will appreciate the cool, refreshing frankness, scientific candour and courage which characterise an important and informative book." Harry Roberts

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:476 N 9 '40 550w

"Dr. Burnet's book is surely one of the best of its kind that has appeared for a very long time." H. H. Bashford

+ Spec 165:394 O 18 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 22 '41 420w

BURNETT, CONSTANCE BUEL. The shoemaker's son. 315p il $2.50 Random house
B or 92 Andersen, Hans Christian—Juvenile literature (W) 41-19496

Biography of Hans Christian Andersen, for older boys and girls. The book covers the whole span of his life, from poverty-stricken boyhood, thru his slow rise to fame, to his death in 1875.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"This is more than a biography; it amounts to an identification with Andersen. It is true not only to fact but to the spirit of the world's one perfect autobiography, 'The Ugly Duckling.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 N 2 '41 300w

"Miss Burnett has written warmly and with sympathy, possibly with over-kindness, about the naive, impractical, grotesque yet lovable being whose genius and inordinate ambition won him friends and ridicule, criticism, loving care, and popularity." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 8 '41 280w

"Several readable biographies of Andersen have appeared in recent years, but none of them presents a more appealing picture of his childlike nature and awkward person than does this. None of them makes his character so animated and spontaneous, so exasperating and lovable." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:467 N '41 140w

"Denmark and its great people of that day, and Charles Dickens, Jenny Lind, Thorwaldsen and others as well as Hans Christian himself, come alive for us in this book." E. J. Gray

+ Horn Bk M 17:481 N '41 140w

"In the midst of the deluge of made-to-order biographies for the teen age it is a pleasure to find a spontaneous and well-synthesized one. With sympathy and insight, and not too much softening of cruel facts, the author has made the difficult personality of the great storyteller seem neither too grotesque nor too sentimental. If girls and boys of high school age can be persuaded to read a biography of an author of fairy tales, they will enjoy the good writing in this. . . Recommended." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 140w

"The author brings Andersen to life, in the midst of his own spick-and-span, provincial nineteenth-century Copenhagen, with a fluent and graceful penetration."

+ New Yorker 17:110 S 20 '41 60w

"An excellent biography." K. U. Wise

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:205 D '41

BURNETT, EDMUND CODY. The Continental congress. 757p $6 Macmillan

973.312 U.S. Continental congress. U.S.—Politics and government—Revolution

41-20697

"This book is based upon a reservoir of information about the nation's origins—the letters of members of the Congress—almost untapped until recently. It was Mr Burnett who undertook to track down and to edit those letters in a series of volumes providing scholars generally with a formidable collection of the personal opinions, the political aspirations and the piques and the prejudices of the men who fought the Revolutionary war on the legislative front and paved the way for the enactment of the constitution. 'The Continental Congress' is practically a resume of the text of the collected letters." Springf'd Republican

Christian Science Monitor p24 N 19 '41 500w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

Library J 66:613 J1 '41 110w

Nation 153:547 N 29 '41 90w

"In general, a reviewer is well advised to pay little heed to enthusiastic jacket summaries, but in this instance one must fully agree with the publisher's claim that Dr Burnett 'is pre-eminently the man' to write the history of the Continental Congress. Among his fellow historians he is highly esteemed as the editor of the eight-volume Letters of the Members of the Continental Congress and as the author of many monographs on our institutional beginnings. It is not, however, to the specialist but rather to the general reader that this volume is mainly directed. . . Historians who have consulted Dr. Burnett's Letters will find in The Continental Congress disappointingly little that is new in content or interpretation. In yet another respect there is ground for disappointment. Of the many forces which impinged upon and were embodied in the members of Congress, certainly not the least was the development of political or constitutional theory; and an account which almost wholly disregards that development, as this book does, must be misleading. The omission cannot be ascribed entirely to exigencies of space." P. A. Palmer

+ New Eng Q 14:763 D '41 900w

"All the achievements of the Congress are seen here in the raw reality of daily debate and discussion, of lobbying and of petty politics. . . In addition to the more important phases of the Congress's work, numerous interesting facts are brought out. . . One fault must be mentioned. Mr Burnett merely states facts, he does not attempt much critical analysis of them or seek to tie up what the members of the Congress were saying and doing with our knowledge from other sources." Donald Derby

BURNETT, E. C.—Continued

+ Springfield Republican p10 O 30 '41 700w

BURNHAM, JAMES. The managerial revolution: what is happening in the world. 285p $2.50 Day

330.15 World politics. Social problems. Capitalism, Socialism (W) 41-51738

"This book contends that we are in the midst of a social revolution and explains what is happening in the world [during] the transfer of power from the capitalists to the administrators in business and government. The author maintains that this transfer will not be easy but will be accompanied by considerable disorder. However, this will be the new order and not rule by socialism or labor." Library J

Reviewed by M. Q. Sibley

Am Pol Sci R 35:1023 O '41 300w

Reviewed by M. M. Tumin

Am Soc R 6:737 O '41 1050w

"Of all the many books which seek to explain the world crisis, and predict the shape of things to come, this is one of the most striking—and in a rather special sense satisfying. It is striking because it explains by a relatively simple hypothesis so many puzzles. It is satisfying because it is written with vigor and simplicity—and with no apparent axe to grind. One may or may not agree with this forthright thesis of a 'managerial revolution,' but the book is both provocative and useful." C. R. Walker

+ Atlantic Ag '41 200w

Booklist 37:431 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Louis Hacker

Books p4 Je 22 '41 1800w

Reviewed by V. C. Aldrich

Christian Century 58:1145 S 17 '41 900w

"James Burnham believes that ours is a transition point in world history, a revolutionary era ushering in a kind of social order he calls 'managerial.' The capitalist system is finished, but it will not be replaced by a socialist society. His demonstration of the certain emergence of the managerial state is interesting and compelling, even to those who find it difficult to accept implications which he draws." J. M. Calderon

Commonweal 34:113 My 23 '41 2050w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:373 Ja '42 80w

"A very thorough treatment." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 50w

Management R 30:155 Ap '41 60w

Reviewed by R. W. Porter

Management R 30:233 Je '41 800w

Reviewed by Lewis Corey

Nation 152:505 Ap 26 '41 1450w

"Mr. Burnham is a better critic and analyst than he is a prophet. In foretelling the future, he makes the mistake of asserting that things will inevitably happen at or before a given time, whereas the past seems to teach that history has its own calendar, in which ten years is sometimes only a day, and that no event is inevitable until it has taken place. The real value of his book is that it casts a clearer light on the present." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 104:607 Ap 28 '41 1300w

"The long-range prospective in which he places his theory gives his observations on the immediate scene a defeatist aspect not necessarily warranted by the actual facts taken as a whole. Nevertheless, Mr. Burnham has written a book to be welcomed by inquiring minds and to be read with profit by any one tired of analysis at the commentator level." J. D. Norton

+ N Y Times p9 My 18 '41 1150w

"An ingenious argument, though the author seems to underestimate the importance of politics."

New Yorker 17:88 Ap 12 '41 70w

"Highly provocative and worthwhile book. . . The fact that it is impossible to discuss this book without also discussing the fundamentals of political and social beliefs, shows that it is an extraordinary book. All in all, it is one of the best recent books on political and social trends; it will probably become the Bible of the next generation of neo-Marxists." Peter Drucker

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 My 10 '41 1400w

"Insofar as Mr. Burnham's book keeps the reader alive to the assumption of the dynamic nature of the total political economy of the world, he performs a useful service. But that his specific description of the likely trends is considered and deeply thought, I cannot myself agree. Here is a volume which is worth reading, however, not for the conclusions it imparts but for the disturbance to habitual thought patterns which it will engender." Ordway Tead

+ Survey G 30:350 Je '41 900w

Time 37:98 My 19 '41 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

BURROWS, MILLAR. What mean these stones? the significance of archeology for biblical studies. 306p il $2.50 Am. schools of oriental research

220.93 Bible. Whole—Antiquities 41-23375

"Professor Burrows, who is Winckley professor of biblical theology at Yale University, president of the American Schools of Oriental Research and a past director of the school in Jerusalem, makes a broad and well planned survey of the contributions of archeological discovery to our knowledge of the Bible: its text and languages and its historic, material, religious and ethical backgrounds." Christian Century

"It is not too much to say that the book is just what the general Bible student has long needed."

+ Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 190w

"To understand the Bible is more important than to defend it. We join the author in hoping that this volume will be of value to the many divergent groups interested in a better understanding of the Bible." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 19:74 Ja '42 400w

BURT, ALFRED LE ROY. The United States, Great Britain and British North America, from the revolution to the establishment of peace after the War of 1812. 448p maps $3.25 Yale univ. press [15s Oxford]

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Canada. Canada—Relations (general) with U.S. 40-29766

"Professor Burt's study was designed as a volume in a series on the relations between the United States and Canada prepared under the direction of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Chronologically the book extends from the Revolution to the negotiations which followed in the wake of the War of 1812; topically it reviews the political and diplomatic decisions of importance in 'shaping the destiny of the North American continent.'" Ann Am Acad

"The reviewer finds it necessary to dissent, in part at least, from Professor Burt's rejection of frontier grievances and ambitions as an essential factor in bringing on the war (pp.305-10). That Western indignation at Great Britain was in part the result of British interference with the markets for Western products may well be granted. . . But this defect, if defect it is, is a small one in what in nearly all respects is an admirable book. Particularly appealing is the consistent attempt to understand and explain rather than condemn the shortcomings exhibited on either side of the international boundary line." J. W. Pratt

+ Am Hist R 47:87 O '41 1300w

"Since so much of the ground covered in the study has been the subject of controversy for many years, perhaps a descriptive bibliography would have been more useful to the reader than the brief list of materials under the heading of 'Abbreviations,' and the author's interpretations clearer if source references were more comprehensive, and minor details relegated to footnotes. However, the book is a major contribution to the subject of United States and Canadian relations and of importance for a proper understanding of the influence of the Napoleonic period on the history of the United States." V. F. Barnes

+ Ann Am Acad 217:183 S '41 700w

"Acuteness, learning and a resolute refusal to follow authority merely because it is authority have paid handsome dividends. This book is a very important contribution to American and to Canadian history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Ag 23 '41 950w

BURT, CYRIL LODOWIC. The factors of the mind. 509p $5 Macmillan [21s Univ. of London press]

151.265 Psychology. Correlation (statistics). Ability—Testing

"An introduction to factor-analysis in psychology." (Subtitle) "The book consists of three main parts. The first explains the general method of factor-analysis as a logical technique; the second describes the relations between the various forms which this general technique has taken, either for the purpose of special problems or at the hands of particular writers; the last attempts to illustrate and defend the views advanced in what would seem to be the most effective way—namely, by an actual application of the alternative methods to a concrete issue of general interest, the problem of temperamental types." (Pref) The author is professor of psychology in the University of London. Indexes.

"For readers familiar with factor analysis, the book is too repetitious and many points are unnecessarily drawn out. On the other hand, it is doubtful whether the statistically unsophisticated reader, to whom the book seems to be especially addressed, can learn much from it. To such a reader, one of two alternatives seems to be open: either he must accept on faith many of the points presented in large type; or he must postpone reading the text proper until he has mastered the appendices and perhaps also studied some of the suggested mathematical reading to fill in the gaps in his preparation." Anne Anastasi

Am J Psychol 54:613 O '41 1000w

School & Society 53:615 My 10 '41 60w

"The book will be read with profit by students of psychology and general readers alike."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 18 '41 280w

BURT, KATHARINE (NEWLIN) (MRS MAXWELL STRUTHERS BURT). Fatal gift. 268p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-15432

A Philadelphia girl of almost unbelievable beauty is the heroine. Life drifted by Lucy quite peacefully until her father brought home an attractive second wife with a grown daughter of her own. Then Lucy's fatal gift began to make itself manifest and to cause unhappiness all around. A young neurologist, with an exceptionally clear head, saved the situation from getting out of hand.

"Mrs. Burt has written an extremely interesting study of the havoc of beauty. Of her recent novels 'Fatal Gift' is decidedly the best. . . It's an ingenious psychological drama with a surprising climax." Lisle Bell

Books p8 Ag 17 '41 230w

"To convince a reader of superlative genius or superlative beauty is about as difficult a task as the writer can set himself—in this case, herself—in the way of characterization. Mrs. Burt has made a good job of it." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 130w

BURTON, JEAN. Sir Richard Burton's wife. 391p il $3 Knopf

B or 92 Burton, Isabel (Arundell) Lady. Burton, Sir Richard Francis (W) 41-6558

This is on the whole a sympathetic portrait of Isabel Arundell, who against strong family objections, became the wife of Richard Burton, soldier, traveler, translator of Oriental tongues, and adventurer. Lady Burton's whole heart and soul were wrapped up in the man who was her girlhood's ideal and "the perfect husband," so that the story of her life is also in large measure his story as well. The author, a Canadian by birth, is, with Sir Richard Burton, a collateral descendant of the author of The Anatomy of Melancholy. Index.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

Bookmark 2:13 N '41

"Richard Burton had everything that goes to the making of a genius except genius. Isabel Burton was equally compounded of fantasy and hard common sense. Together they were something more than they would have been apart. Miss Burton has recreated them by the modern method of selective biography, properly highlighted with direct quotations; the narrative is closely integrated and the style lively without straining for superficial effects." Isabel Paterson

Books p3 Je 22 '41 1150w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 153:632 Ag '41 320w

"Miss Jean Burton writes with Burton vigor and, like former Burtons, she resents the spiritual solidarity and social aloofness of the old English Catholic society; inclines to doubt Burton's conversion and to have a laugh at Isabel. But such is the candid passion and generosity of Lady Burton that her own humility triumphs." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 34:260 Jl 4 '41 800w

"Sympathetic and colorful biography. . . Well annotated, with extensive bibliography and index. Particular appeal to students of the period." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 140w

"The author, who is only a very distant connection, does full justice to her subject. She succeeds in bringing out the comic side without spoiling the dramatic. This is a book to be read for plain enjoyment."

+ Nation 152:761 Je 28 '41 50w

"In addition to its value as a resumé of two striking careers, the book contains much interesting material on leading figures of the last half of the nineteenth century in England, in the Near East and on the Continent." M. R. Werner

+ New Repub 105:412 S 29 '41 600w

"This completely absorbing book follows the course of an extraordinary romance, tells a life story which has in it nothing pallid on negative, and paints the portrait of a woman who through all contradictions (and there were many) was always quite simply and triumphantly herself. Marked first of all by its vivid compulsion of interest, 'Sir Richard Burton's Wife' is touched also with a delightful humor and develops a felicitous tenderness which the reader fully shares." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Je 22 '41 1750w

BURTON, JEAN—Continued

"Miss Burton [is] no great fist as a writer, but she sets down the story clearly and fluently. There is not a trace of heroine worship (Isabel must have been pretty much of a bore, come to think of it, and her biographer doesn't blink at the fact) and there is plenty of sensible humor. One wishes, however, for the touch of a Strachey. What miracles of sly illumination he would have performed with these two eminent un-Victorian Victorians!" Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:61 Je 28 '41 900w
Pratt p6 autumn '41

"Miss Burton's book is painstaking if rather uninspired. It is not free from mistakes. Miss Burton, for instance, quotes Frank Harris's essay on Burton in apparent ignorance of the unreliability of its facts. Still these are slight flaws in a book which pays belated tribute to a woman who, in spite of all difficulties, of the insane jealousy and hatred felt for her by Burton's family, did her utmost to help the life-work and serve the reputation of the man she had married." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:6 Je 28 '41 900w
Spring'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 600w
Time 37:95 Je 23 '41 700w

BURTON, MARGARET ERNESTINE. Assembly of the League of nations. 441p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

341.1 League of nations 41-19714

Historical and analytical study of the League of nations. It gives an account of the origin, establishment, organization, operation, special problems and general development of the League assembly during the last twenty years. Bibliography. Index.

"This is an excellent book. Miss Burton has studied the documents, but she has also spent considerable time in Geneva and has observed several Assemblies at first hand; she knows the Assembly and she knows the League of which the Assembly is [was?] but a part." C. A. Berdahl

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1172 D '41 1050w

"Can be recommended for the thorough account it gives of the organization of the Assembly and its achievements in preparing the way for a system of international cooperation. The book is not only a new and valuable source of information; it wakes us up to the fact that the League accomplished a great deal more than is generally assumed." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 1:279 N '41 230w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:374 Ja '42 10w

"Miss Burton's painstaking study, based on primary sources and direct observation, is without doubt the most satisfying work of its type in English. Well written, skillfully organized, thoroughly documented, closely knit, it provides a complete record of the experience and procedure of the popular organ of the League from its inception to its present quiescence." W. C. Langsam

+ Social Studies 32:372 D '41 600w

BURTON, MILES. Death visits Downsprings. 267p $2 Doubleday

41-18050

Detective story.

"Here's a highly readable wartime mystery that somehow escaped our clutches during recent weeks. . . A good bid by the author of 'The Clue of the Silver Cellar,' 'The Platinum Cat' and 'Mystery of High Eldersham.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 28 '41 190w

"This is a spy story, but unlike most spy stories, it deals chiefly with detection and only to a minor degree with adventure. Since it is written by Miles Burton, it is quite unnecessary to add that it is well done." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 O 12 '41 180w

"Graphic and effective pictures of raids and dog fights over English countryside. Good central puzzle, and plentiful action. Commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

BURTON, MILES. Vacancy with corpse [Eng title: Death takes a flat]. 276p $2 Doubleday [8s Collins]

41-606

Detective story.

"This is recommended to those who like to study every aspect of a sensible case with an excellent deducer." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 Ja 26 '41 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 40w

"'Vacancy With Corpse' offers a good puzzle on which to test your wits." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 26 '41 190w

"Well played."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 1 '41 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p581 N 16 '40 90w

BURTON, THOMAS, pseud. See Longstreet, S.

BURTON, VIRGINIA LEE. Calico, the wonder horse; or, The saga of Stewy Slinker; pictures by [the author]. [60p] $1 Houghton (W) 41-20166

A Western for young readers with a taste for the "funnies." In illustrations in black on different colored backgrounds, with short running text, the book outlines the adventures of one Stewy Slinker and his gang of bad men, who are captured and reformed by the good people of Cactus County, led by cowboy Hank and his calico horse.

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"Fresh and original in treatment, it is the perfect answer to the Comics. Small boys, everywhere, will read this real 'Western,' in which a horse and a cowboy and a proper list of villains fill the stage with excitement and delight. At the same time, the composition and design of the pictures cannot fail to arrest the attention of older people interested in illustration. The progress of the story calls for backgrounds of different colors and we wait to see what effect these will have on a child's liking. Altogether, Virginia Lee Burton has made a noteworthy experiment." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:356 S '41 100w

"This story is as tall a tale as any about Paul Bunyan, and Calico is every bit as unusual as Babe, the Blue Ox. Here is a book to give your comic-crazy customers. The follow-up with other books in our collections will be a challenge to each children's librarian. The book is oblong, with rainbow-colored pages of full-page illustrations, the text beneath the pictures. This is an earnest attempt to displace the 'funny books,' and worth consideration as an experiment if nothing more." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 40w

"Here is a remarkable little book that strikes a fresh and original note in book making for children and bids fair to provide a solution to the problem of what to do about 'the comics.' . . This book was actually made according to specifications provided by a group of 9-year-old boys who demanded action, suspense, tremendous but possible odds against the hero: also that no one must get seriously hurt, and that the Bad Men should be both villainous and comic. While child readers are entranced by the speed, excitement and fun of Stewy Slinker's saga, their elders will find the design and composition of the drawings, and the backgrounds of different colors which help to develop the plot, extraordinarily interesting." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p35 N 2 '41 260w

"Innocuous but highly eventful tale of the Wild West told in comic-strip manner by pictures and running captions. The black drawings on varicolored pages have style and the text is spiced by a brisk seasoning of burlesque."

+ New Yorker 17:142 D 6 '41 50w

"Fun for all the family." K. U. Wise

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

BUSCH, NIVEN. The Carrington incident. 283p $2.50 Morrow

41-2702

The adventures of an American college teacher, Bertha Carrington, who is engaged as teacher of Italian by Hitler. She is caught up in a plot, sent to a concentration camp, and escapes on the eve of the great German revolution.

"Some excitement and plenty of horrors among people it is impossible to like." R. M. G. Atlantic Ap '41 130w

"The Carrington Incident' is about as sensational an offering as one could imagine. We might even say lurid." Lisle Bell

Books p21 Mr 23 '41 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 40w

"A first novel that manifests technical competence."

Commonweal 33:605 Ap 4 '41 30w

"The fabric of Miss Carrington's career, from her invitation to tea with the Leader, to her betrayal by the Minister, to her experience in the concentration camp, has the rough, actual feel of life in it. Mr. Busch has given it a thoroughly objective treatment; no editorializing, no agonizing, but a calm and relentless narrative with absolutely no nouns or adjectives barred. This is going to be a hard book for anybody to put down." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 1 '41 270w

BUSS, CLAUDE ALBERT. War and diplomacy in eastern Asia. 570p maps $5 Macmillan

950 Eastern question (Far East). Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. Japan-Foreign relations-China. China-Foreign relations-Japan. World politics (W) 41-11373

An analysis of the present chaotic economic and political conditions in the Far East, a review of their causes, and an attempt to apportion praise and blame—"a sizable share of both parks indiscriminately on everybody's national doorstep." The author is professor of international relations at the University of Southern California and executive assistant to the High Commissioner of the Philippine Islands. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Buss writes in journalistic style, using a minimum of footnotes and numerous quotations, many of them from unnamed authors. Although 'bibliographical notes—on authors rather than on their writings—and a useful bibliography are appended, the book's utility as a text is somewhat limited by the scarcity of precise references. Students will, however, enjoy reading it and can do so with assurance, since the author amply demonstrates his command of the facts. For the lay reader, the reviewer knows of no book on this subject which is at once so comprehensive and so reliable." H. S. Quigley

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:999 O '41 600w

"Granted that parts of his analysis must be tentative and subject to later modification, Dr. Buss has written perhaps the best book in the field. . . . A few criticisms may be ventured. The book is lacking in unity and is unduly repetitious. The author occasionally makes careless generalizations and inconsistent statements. He uses copious quotations, generally without giving references. The bibliography is largely limited to American publications. While the book is readable, written in vigorous, robust style, the author too frequently employs colloquial and other phraseology ill-suited to such a work." G. L. LaFuze

+ — Ann Am Acad 217:185 S '41 600w

Booklist 38:7 S '41

"This volume is richly packed with the facts necessary to understand the contemporary catastrophe in the Far East, and it is written in a homely, almost conversational, style that makes good reading." Edgar Snow

+ Books p4 S 7 '41 750w

"Important study of present day conditions in the Far East." Dorothy Graham

+ Cath World 154:122 O '41 500w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 155:21 S 1 '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat

Crozer Q 19:84 Ja '42 300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:205 O '41 50w

Reviewed by H. A. Von Urrf

Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 100w

"The material is well-organized and provides a complete background of China's historical relations with all the powers. China's case is presented sensibly, as is that of Japan, while all of the policies of the United States, and the British Imperial problem in Asia are taken into full account."

+ Living Age 360:597 Ag '41 80w

"In the main Dr. Buss has produced a book that is solid and valuable and just about as nearly up to date on the Far East as the rapid movement of events would permit." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p6 J1 13 '41 1800w

Reviewed by R. W. Barnett

Pacific Affairs 14:493 D '41 750w

"Factual errors could be pointed out, and there is also a considerable amount of repetition, which could have been avoided by more careful editing and pruning. When all this has been said, however, the volume still holds its place as a most useful over-all survey, particularly valuable for the layman who wants more than a cursory introduction to the field. The quotations culled from state papers, Far Eastern periodicals, and statesmen who have played their parts on the diplomatic stage are especially apt and illuminating."

T. A. Bisson

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:6 J1 12 '41 550w

Reviewed by F. M. Mohler

Springfd Republican p7e J1 13 '41

1600w

"Dr. Buss combines a wealth of information with a readable style." E. O. Hauser

+ Survey G 31:40 Ja '42 140w

BUTLER, ELIZA MARIAN. Rainer Maria Rilke. 437p $4.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge] B or 92 Rilke, Rainer Maria '41-13806

Biography and critical analysis of the works of this German writer, who has been called "the greatest German poet since Holderlin." The stages of his life begin with an unhappy childhood in Prague, and continue with "a breakaway, resulting in a Russian Sturm und Drang period; then an extraordinary interlude in the artist's colony at Worpswede, where the poet evolved his cult of virginity, an obscure technique of Platonic friendship, and his characteristic symbolism of the rose. This period resulted in a curiously abortive marriage, a translation to Paris and the friendship of Rodin (an all-important influence). Then come the years of uneasy wandering, punctuated by illustrious and advantageous friendships; then the war and Switzerland, the gradual withdrawal into invisibility at Muzot, and at last the long-wished-for death." (New Statesman & Nation)

BUTLER, E. M.—Continued

"Professor Butler has examined all possible sources and has had the assistance of many of the poet's intimates, but the story has been so obscured by other friends of Rilke's by the reluctance of his German publishers to help an English scholar, and particularly by the confusion wrought by Rilke's daughter and son-in-law, the editors of his published letters, as to make an accurate picture extremely difficult. Nevertheless, this study offers a reasonably clear account of his private history, generating glimpses of his personality, and thoughtful elucidations of his work." Eabette Deutsch
+ Books p16 N 16 '41 950w

"Miss Butler's study of Rilke is well timed. Through the labours of Mr. J. B. Leishman and others much of his poetry and some of his prose is now available to English readers in translation, enough at least to rouse even in those who cannot go to the originals a deep interest in the man. Hitherto, however, this interest has had to go almost unsatisfied, despite the considerable literature which has already sprung up around the poet and his work on the Continent. Miss Butler's book fills that void as fully and competently as could be desired." H. I. A. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 4 '41 300w

"Miss Butler is a scholar; not a journalist and not a vulgarizer, but also as certainly not a critic, a trustworthy interpreter, or a student capable of doing what her ambitious book on Rilke strains pretentiously to do—to expound the content of his poetry, to evaluate it, and to sum up his life and work on a judicial basis. She has the assets of persistence and comprehensiveness in her method, but these being inappropriate to seizing the essence of any real poet, they are extravagantly inappropriate in the case of Rilke." M. D. Zabel
+ Nation 153:645 D 20 '41 1500w

"Summarily I must say that this biography converts me to one obvious but unusual conviction, and this is that the life of Rilke, the biography as revelation, can only be written by a woman. But I do not think that Professor Butler's is the one." George Barker
New Repub 105:548 O 27 '41 850w

"Professor Butler seems to me the first of the many writers on Rilke who has examined his personality with an eye unclouded by passionate feeling. Her most able and sensitive study may in future receive confirmation from letters still unpublished, but it will hardly be disturbed by them. For this reason alone her book would be of capital importance; but when it comes to commenting on the poet's work, the sustained brilliance of her exposition would be equally difficult to over-estimate. Most laudably, she has translated all quotations (or made use of existing translations). This will help readers who have no German to an understanding of the poet's ideas." Edward Sackville West
+ New Statesman & Nation 21:606 Je 14 '41 2400w

"To write sensibly of a great poet who was a dreamer and a visionary is a difficult task. To make a man out of a myth is the hardest business for any biographer. Yet Professor Butler has accomplished what has been thought impossible. She has made all the Rilke readers understand him so far as he understood himself, and still admire and respect him. It is a biography that talks of good poetry in the best terms of prose." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p8 S 14 '41 900w

"It is time that Rilke was made out more of a poet and less of a prophet, but it is certainly gratuitous to make him appear a nincompoop and rather a knave. The book should be read with the constant realization that this subtle denigration does not hesitate occasionally to distort his poetry as well as make ridiculous and rather sinister his career." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:76 S 6 '41 150w

Pratt p6 D '41

"The chief value of this work, since there is no other full length study of Rilke in English, lies in its wealth of bibliographical detail and in its copious quotations from letters. Yet this value is rather more than half suspect: for the curiously nagging animosity that Miss Butler displays towards her hero, and the contradictions and confusions that becloud her evaluations of his poetry, provoke doubts as to her ability to be objective even in the handling of objective matters." Dudley Fitts
+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 O 25 '41 320w

"Those who read this book cautiously will benefit. Cautiously, yes, because Miss Butler's book, with all its detail and devotion, is one of the most ill-written I have ever read on a great and peculiar subject. . . . Rilke bodies out, beyond flaw and silliness, not a religion, but a complex feeling for life such as we can profit by from few poets; and above that life a reason for suffering it. But Miss Butler academically prefers the plain classic statement that twice four is precisely eight. She wants consistency; and so she writes with an uncharitable priggishness and disdain of the contradictions, weaknesses and vanities in Rilke, as well as of Rilke's excesses, when as a young writer, he was growing (as Yeats had to grow) through the 'nineties.'" Geoffrey Grigson
Spec 166:453 Ap 25 '41 850w

"Painstaking and penetrating as Prof Butler's critical study of Rilke is, it remains tentative for many reasons. Much of the biographical material is still inaccessible, and a period like the present, 'when poetry and life are rent apart' is not conducive to an understanding of what Rilke considered his 'mission,' which was nothing less exacting than to found the religion of art." J. J. Starr
+ Spring'd Republican p6 J1 29 '41 800w

"Rainer Maria Rilke could serve as a symbol of the best and worst meanings of the word genius. He was a lap dog for cultivated ladies, loveless as a serpent, soaked to the soul in the most indecent self-pity. He was also ruthlessly loyal to the fact of his genius as a poet. Professor Butler looks at him with a level, sane, exacting eye. The result is the first biography and critique of Rilke to be worthy of its subtle, over-cultured subject."
+ Time 38:79 J1 28 '41 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Ap 26 '41 2100w

"It would be difficult to find among contemporary writers a more telling case than that of Rainer Maria Rilke, of the dilemma into which an unreligious and therefore unimaginative age, forces the supremely 'inspired' poet. This, at any rate, is the theme of Miss Butler's extraordinarily important account of Rilke's spiritual history. Fortunately for those who have long attempted to disentangle the core of the poet's work from the idolatrous enthusiasm of his worshippers and, at the same time, from the obfuscating commentaries of the German 'existential' critics, Miss Butler places her emphasis first upon the biographical aspects of a somewhat opaque life." Victor Lange
+ Yale R n s 31:399 winter '42 1050w

BUTTERWORTH, CHARLES C. Literary lineage of the King James Bible, 1340-1611. 394p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press
220.52 Bible. Whole—History 42-770

"In its literary aspects the King James Bible represents the culmination of a long line of earlier English versions; and it is the purpose of this book to trace the course of this lineage and to illustrate the gradual unfolding of the biblical style. . . . This book is not, in its conception, a religious work—it is a literary study. Such light as it may throw on the meaning of any particular passage in the Bible is incidental to its purpose; for it deals with the form of expression, rather than with the substance, of the Scriptures." (Pref) Bibliography. Indexes.

"This is not just another book on the Bible. It is certainly the best and most scholarly of the works which are beginning to be written about the Bible as literature." E. A. R. Rumball-Petre

+ Books p12 Ja 11 '42 650w

"Even those who know better, who are familiar with the work of earlier translators, especially of the incomparable Tyndale, do not always realize the rich heritage of versions which the translators of 1611 possessed. In no book known to me is that heritage so carefully and skillfully set out as in this book of Dr. Butterworth's." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 25:15 Ja 10 '42 500w

BUTZNER, JANE, comp. Constitutional chaff; comp. from the notes of James Madison [and others]. 197p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

342.73 U.S. Constitution. U.S. Constitutional convention, 1787

This volume contains the "rejected suggestions of the Constitutional convention of 1787, with explanatory argument." (Subtitle) "The device used is to set forth under each of the Constitution's provisions the plans that would have replaced or modified it and the arguments in their favor. . . . The source of the notes from which this book was compiled is Documents Illustrative of the Formation of the Union of the American States, House Document No. 398, 69th Congress, First Session, in which for the first time all the known notes on the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention (among other things) were collected and made available to the general public." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Max Farrand

Am Hist R 47:197 O '41 170w

Reviewed by Mona Fletcher

Am Pol Sci R 35:603 Je '41 220w

Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 170w

Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 60w

New Eng Q 14:776 D '41 140w

"The book would have been better, and not much longer, if the gradual development of each article of the Constitution had been shown. . . . A final criticism would be that the editor made no use of Lansing's notes on the Convention." J. R. Strayer

Social Educ 5:549 N '41 600w

"Could be used as stimulating collateral reading."

+ Social Studies 32:240 My '41 30w

BYE, CARL ROLLINSON. Developments and issues in the theory of rent. 133p $1.75 Columbia univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

333.5 Rent 40-9840

Summary of the rent theory and an evaluation of the controversial issues related to that theory. A final chapter traces the evolutionary trends in the theory of rent. Bibliography. Index.

"In bringing together the various concepts of rent and subjecting them to examination, the author of this book has done a useful task. Despite the brevity of the treatment, a review of significant developments in the theory of rent is included. Moreover much of the analysis is good, and some is excellent. The reviewer liked particularly the discussion of Marshall's quasi-rent doctrine and its bearing on his value theory. On the other hand, it seems to him that the question whether land may be distinguished from capital on account of economic differences depends on the point of view from which economics is regarded, and that in no event may the decision on a matter of this importance depend on expediency or convenience." M. S. Kendrick

+ Am Econ R 31:119 Mr '41 700w

"Students of economic theory will find this treatise by Professor Bye of Syracuse University a very useful work. . . . The author indicates that progress in the field of rent theory lies in two directions: (1) a clarification of the nomenclature involved, and (2) further development of a 'single comprehensive principle which can be applied uniformly to all branches of income.' Toward such progress this book makes a contribution which will be recognized as substantial by all advanced students of economic theory." W. N. Loucks

+ Pol Sci Q 55:609 D '40 360w

BYE, RAYMOND TAYLOR. An appraisal of Frederick C. Mills' The behavior of prices; with a rejoinder by Frederick C. Mills, a panel discussion and a commentary by Read Bain [foreword by Edwin G. Nourse]. (Critiques of research in the social sciences, 2) 335p pa $1 Social science research council

338.5 Mills, Frederick Cecil—Behavior of prices. Prices 40-34812

"F. C. Mills' now famous The Behavior of Prices was published in 1927. . . . Because of its importance, and as the result of a poll of economists and statisticians, Mills' work was chosen as the subject for the present critique, the purpose of which is to set in theoretical and methodological perspective quantitative subject matter of the sort treated by Dr. Mills. . . . The critique includes a detailed critical analysis of Mills' work by Professor Bye, a reply by Professor Mills, the two extensive reviews of Viner and Mudgett published about 1928, a lengthy roundtable discussion of both Mills' work and Bye's critique, and a general commentary by Read Bain." Social Forces

Reviewed by Arthur Schweitzer

Am J Soc 47:264 S '41 220w

"Highly interesting and significant. . . . The commentators were ably chosen." V. A. Mund

+ Ann Am Acad 213:231 Ja '41 700w

"While this volume is concerned primarily with the behavior of certain economic variables and with the methodology of their analysis, it deserves careful examination at the hands of both sociological statisticians and social theorists bent upon formulating theory in a manner conducive to, and consistent with, empirical approaches. Economists, especially those interested in price theory, will find this work most interesting and suggestive." J. J. Spengler

+ Social Forces 19:567 My '41 500w

BYERS, MRS MARGARETTA (MANNING). Help wanted—female; careers in the field of fashion. 386p il $2.50 Messner

396.5 Woman—Employment. Profession. Choice of (W) 41-8833

The author of Designing Women (Book Review Digest, 1938) has prepared this companion volume for those who desire a career in the field of fashion. It is a guide to fashion designing and other jobs available in that line. Contains a list of schools offering training for fashion careers, and frequent quizzes of interest to fashion designing tyros. Index.

Booklist 37:540 Jl 15 '41

"Mrs. Byers knows all the answers, and answers all the questions. She not only writes very instructively; she writes extremely well."

+ Books p7 Ag 10 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

BYRD, WILLIAM. The secret diary of William Byrd of Westover, 1709-1712; ed. by Louis B. Wright and Marion Tinling. 650p il $5 Dietz

B or 92 Virginia—Social life and customs—Colonial period. Plantation life 41-21807

"The part of the Byrd diary now published was recently discovered in the Huntington Library in California and translated from the shorthand by Miss Tinling; later, even more intimate, portions have since turned up in Virginia and North Carolina. It gives an untouched picture of the planter's life. In it he tells of reviewing the militia, settling his accounts, loading his tobacco, writing to his agents in London, arguing with his overseers, visiting his neighbors, concocting medicines, setting out fruit trees, sitting in court at the Capitol and later at cards in the coffee house, bleeding his servants when they were sick, and whipping them when they got drunk without his permission." Nation

BYRD, WILLIAM—Continued

"Byrd's graceful, lucid and sprightly prose, which is so noteworthy a characteristic of 'The History of the Dividing Line,' 'A Journey to the Land of Eden' and 'A Progress to the Mines' is less striking in the diary, since the daily entries are brief. . . . The exquisite touch which made Byrd the premier American stylist of his time is partially lacking. There is also a certain sameness about the entries, owing to the diarist's insistence upon chronicling his 'dance' or calisthenics, his matutinal reading, what he ate for dinner, and whether before retiring he had 'good health, good thoughts and good humor' and said his prayers. Yet sandwiched between these repetitious items are innumerable notations which illumine the period in which Byrd lived." Virginius Dabney

+ — Books p6 D 28 '41 1150w

Reviewed by Grace Adams

Nation 153:379 O 18 '41 550w

"A picture of life—of men, women and goings on in Virginia when the eighteenth century was young—which will shock the fastidious but will mightily fortify the historian and enlighten the student of human behavior."

H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p5 O 19 '41 950w

"Comparison with Pepys is inevitable. The same intimacy of revelation, the same unblushing frankness about personalia, are common to both men, albeit Byrd generally retains a dignity even in the midst of some of the unconsciously funny passages, which Pepys loses. He is not Pepys, however, and he falls short of his great rival in two particulars: there does not emerge from the Byrd journal a group of personalities comparable to those whom Pepys made vivid and the monotony of colonial life necessarily restricted the activities of the great Virginian." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 1 '41 850w

BYRNE, JACK. Gunswift. 291p $2 Doubleday

Western story.

41-6689

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 4 '41 120w

C

CABLE, EMMETT JAMES; GETCHELL, ROBERT WARD, and KADESCH, WILLIAM HENRY. The physical sciences. 754p il $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

500 Science

40-13532

"The aim in this book is to help the reader interpret intelligently the forces that make up the complex world in which he lives and to place at his disposal enough scientific knowledge to free his mind of prejudice and superstition. It should aid him to express himself accurately and to understand and appreciate scientific methods of arriving at the truth; also to form the habit of weighing values and reserving judgment until he knows all the facts." (Pref) Partial contents: Man and his machines; Force and motion; Some simple heat phenomena; Our atmosphere; Weather forecasting; Illumination; Electrical communication; Some fundamental chemical processes; Some common metals; The earth and its rocks; The earth's past; Astronomy, ancient and modern; Latitude, longitude, and time; Science and the world of tomorrow. Reading references. Questions. Index. This is also published with the title: Science for a changing world. Wilson cards are obtainable for this title.

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt

Books p19 D 15 '40 120w

"From a chemical engineering viewpoint, this book is unimportant. It is apparently intended as a text for survey courses in general science and as a popular introduction to that mysterious thing known to the layman as 'Science.' And it can be highly recommended to the serious student in either category."

Chem & Met Eng 47:657 S '40 150w

Reviewed by C. W. Sternberg

J Geol 49:781 O '41 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:51 O '40

CAIN, JAMES MALLAHAN. Mildred Pierce.

388p $2.50 Knopf

41-15433

"Mr. Cain's three fascinations are the Laocönic stranglings of sex, money (or its lack) and snobbery. His heroine, Mildred Pierce, finds herself entangled in all three. Divorced after eleven tame years of marriage, she finally manages to support her children through a pie-bakery. But little else in her life is quite as easy as pie. The first of her lovers, her husband's ex-partner, is only too ready to betray her when it means money to him. Her second, an insolvent playboy, blandly accepts her money, calls himself her gigolo, sneers over her with her daughter Veda as a working woman, a moneygrubber, a 'varlet.'" Time

"Mr. Cain, as one of the most uncompromising observers of our more swinish countrymen, has written a story in which there is not a single admirable main character. This is no complaint. He can peer into the innermost depths of the soul of a heel, and record with brutal accuracy what he sees there. There are, to be sure, moments in the lives of his adulterous and double-crossing characters when some of them, in a dumb fashion, have glimpses of fine, brave dreams. . . . It is probable that this novel will add little to Mr. Cain's excellent, if peculiar, reputation. It seems curiously spotted. But, for all that, it has stretches of Cain at his mordant best. It may disappoint some readers, and disgust others, but it will bore very few." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p10 S 21 '41 470w

"The hard-boiled author of 'The Postman Always Rings Twice' and 'Serenade' has wrapped his iron fist in a silk stocking to knock together the sexy, highly sensational, and sometimes outright sentimental odyssey of a grass widow. . . . Who's been softening up Mr. Cain?"

Nation 153:409 O 25 '41 80w

"Cain's talent is the hare to Farrell's tortoise. He is a slick and accomplished writer, with a genius for effective, sparse dialogue and tight, neat plots with trick endings, preferably ringing twice. Like Farrell, he has been kidded out of the worst of his excesses but unlike Farrell he has now become readable. . . . The blurb speaks of Cain as a 'first-rate storyteller,' which is so unconsciously fair and exact an estimate of his ability as well as his limitations that no reviewer can add more, except to say that 'Mildred Pierce' doesn't seem to be so shocking as either 'The Postman Always Rings Twice' or 'Serenade,' his first two." S. E. Hyman

New Repub 105:441 O 6 '41 550w

"That this is a novel that, once begun, will almost surely be read to the end is understandable, for it has in it the deep, slow pull of the ancient ooze where worms and serpents crawled; it reflects no codes, no restrictions, and none but the primordial necessities. It is a bath in sensation. . . The plot is often ripely dramatic and is very well put together. The details of living that fill his story are fresh and interesting." Robert van Gelder

N Y Times p7 O 5 '41 500w

"'Mildred Pierce' will hardly stand up under analysis (Mr. Cain is a short-order motivation man), but then it's hardly a story on which you'll be tempted to try your analyzer. As a matter of fact, if it didn't happen to include adultery, a near rape or two, and a few other motives of comparable torridity, it would make a bang-up movie, for it is a first-rate example of the sort of tricky, cynical realism that the superior Hollywood writer likes to turn out in his more conscientious moods." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:75 S 27 '41 800w

"Mr. Cain writes, as usual, with great vigor and economy, but this book, is neither so tight nor so dramatic as the frugal 'Postman.' The story wobbles seriously at the end. . . Still, no one has ever stopped in the middle of one of Jim Cain's books." Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:13 O 4 '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 480w

"James Cain has a cold authority about suburban vice which could yield an invaluable gloss on Middletown or even on the works of Lardner and O'Hara. His trouble is not knowing when to stop. . . But the drugstore-library sensationalism that still overhangs Cain's work does not stop him from being one of the most readable storytellers in the U.S. He has broadened his subject matter and, with a cruel anthropologist's tenacity, virtually wrung it dry."

+ Time 38:91 S 29 '41 260w

"A flabby, slowish, and unrealized story to come from the hand that kept us awake with The Postman Always Rings Twice." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:viii winter '42 220w

CAIRNS, HUNTINGTON. The theory of legal science. 155p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

340.1 Jurisprudence. Sociology 41-6661

This study attempts to define the general principles of legal science. Contents: The theory of jurisprudence; The social basis of law; The formation of law; The principle of disorder; The inventive process; The method of legal science; The field of investigation; The nature of legal change; The relations of orders; The valuation of legal science. The author is assistant general counsel of the United States treasury. Index.

"The reviewer confesses to a feeling of disappointment in the book despite the wealth of erudition it displays." K. C. Cole

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:817 Ag '41 500w

"It is one of the most original works that has ever been done in the field of American jurisprudence. . . Not since the publication of Mr. Justice Holmes's 'The Common Law' in 1881 has there been a better essay toward the foundations of a theory of law." J. B. Eggen

+ Books p18 My 18 '41 440w

Reviewed by Edwin Garlan

J Philos 38:440 J1 31 '41 950w

CAIRNS, HUNTINGTON; TATE, ALLEN, and VAN DOREN, MARK. Invitation to learning. 431p $3 Random house

804 Literature—Addresses, essays, lectures. Books and reading. Radio entertainments (W) 41-51856

This book contains transcripts of a series of radio broadcasts which took the form of unrehearsed but prearranged conversations about some of the great works of literature of all ages. The works discussed include Aristotle's Politics, Machiavelli's Prince, the Essays of Montaigne, the autobiographies of Rousseau, John Stuart Mill and Henry Adams, Tolstoy's War and Peace, Dante's Divine Comedy, The Book of Job, Pilgrim's Progress, Gibbon's Decline and Fall, and others. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:543 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Books p5 J1 20 '41 1200w

"I do not think anybody is likely to get much learning out of this Invitation: the uninformed will find little enough for their purpose, the informed will find still less." Theodore Maynard

+ Cath World 153:627 Ag '41 550w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Nation 153:185 Ag 30 '41 130w

"Twenty-seven of the world's great books are here conversationally discussed, and perhaps the first thing to be said about this substantial volume is that it acts as an incentive to the books' reading, not a substitute for it. . . There is no appeal here to the seekers after 'popularizations' and 'digests' and other shortcuts to an illusion of culture. This is the real thing."

+ N Y Times p6 J1 6 '41 600w

"An interesting experiment, and much of it readable."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 7 '41 20w

"There is a preliminary dialogue, created as an introduction to this book, in which the speakers commend to us dialogue as a literary form, with the examples of Plato, Bishop, Berkeley, and Santayana. The boldness of this challenge throws into relief the fault of the book; the dialogues of those masters were each given their final form, at least, by one controlling mind; and they were molded with a clear idea of the audience for which they were intended, and the postulates on which they might be based. Whereas in these transcripts, it is not only that there are many imperfections which might pass the less critical ear, but that there stand out to the eye answers that do not quite touch the point to which they are intended to reply." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 24:10 Je 7 '41 460w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

CALDWELL, ERSKINE, and WHITE, MARGARET BOURKE. Say is this the U.S.A. 182p $3.75 Duell

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions. Photographic books (W) 41-12294

A famous photographer and her regional writer husband have combined their forces in order "to give the impression and feel of America." The bulk of the photographs were taken on a trip from the East coast to the West and back. Photographs are identified by short paragraphs; running comment is in story form. A chapter on the photographing of the book is included.

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"Come again, Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell, say we! Sounds like you've got a real interesting book." R. F. Crandell

+ Books p4 Je 29 '41 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 20w

"Here is a picture in words and by camera striking enough to make the most indifferent person question his own attitude as a citizen of our highly diversified country." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 90w

"The collaborators claim to have had a 'background plan,' but it scarcely emerges. The ground covered was too vast, and it is difficult to bring the varieties of life in this 'standardized' country into a single focus. The book yields rather the sense of roving at random, which is pleasant enough in itself." Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:36 J1 12 '41 150w

"One has the impression throughout this book of a country that can take care of its own business without failing to realize its part in the whole modern world; it has its imperfections, but here is vitality enough for anything!"

CALDWELL, ERSKINE—Continued

+ N Y Times p7 J1 6 '41 700w

"Erskine Caldwell and Margaret Bourke-White have collaborated on another of their prose-and-picture books, 'Say Is This the U.S.A.' As in their other volumes, the text is often good and the pictures are almost always magnificent. The authors are honestly convinced that they have worked out a pattern for interweaving text and pictures. All I can say is that I like both and that they seem to have virtually nothing to do with each other. . . . It adds up to some fine pictures and some good reporting. Which, maybe, is plenty." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:54 J1 5 '41 200w

"The photos buttress the anecdotes, adding the dynamic documentation of American faces and Americans in action. Six fine Kansas wheat pictures show a good deal of the epic of mechanized wheat. Three Nevada gambling pictures tell another significant story; and the South Carolina Negro jail pictures yet another. Yes, 'America is the scene of a mighty drama,' and some of its might and some of its drama has been caught by the writer and the photographer in this good collaboration." Benjamin Appel

Sat R of Lit 24:12 J1 26 '41 320w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK) (MAX REINER, pseud). The earth is the Lord's. 550p $2.75 Scribner

Jenghis Khan—Fiction (W) 41-1125

A novel based upon the life of Jenghis Khan, the thirteenth-century Mongol chieftain, who led his swarm of shaggy barbarians over Asia, the Near East and Hungary. The story begins with his birth, as Temujin, the son of a petty chief in the Gobi desert, and ends with his first great victory, over the Karait Turks, and his election as emperor of the nomads.

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

"The surface story and the pictured background is really magnificent, in the way that the huge historical canvases are magnificent—blood spurts from the knife with all the realistic utterance of a painting in the familiar grand school; beads of sweat stand out on straining flesh; lusts are consummated and revenges achieved in the way of the artists who caused visitors to the old panoramas to gasp and remark that the figures looked as though they were actually alive; and you can almost hear the cries of men and screams of horses, and smell the reek of blood and sweat in battle. . . . I think you will find an interesting and suggestive portrait underneath the gorgeously fantastic 'trappings.'" F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 Ja 5 '41 850w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Ja 8 '41 650w

"To a reader who wants movement, adventure and plenty of love interest without regard for historical accuracy, the book will be interesting. But I regret that Miss Caldwell did not tell much the same story in a present day setting more familiar to her. Perhaps I am too carping, too pedantic, but I just cannot accept a lovesick Genghis and a horde of meta-physical Mongols." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 900w

Churchman 155:35 F 15 '41 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

Reviewed by M. E. Clark

Library J 65:808 O 1 '40 90w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 11 '41 80w

"In spite of a needlessly lush style, a lot of pseudo-archaic dialogue that does not always ring true, and a great deal of melodramatic intrigue with motives that sound complex but are really oversimplified, the narrative has a barbaric rush and verve; and from its many unflinching accounts of gruesome battle scenes and murders you would never guess that the author is a woman." L. B. Salomon

+ — Nation 152:191 F 15 '41 190w

"As long as Miss Caldwell keeps to the normal mainsprings of action inspired by the lust for power, we are able to follow her with understanding and admiration. It is only when she attempts to rationalize the actions of the young barbarian and to impart to them a kind of philosophy that we are impelled to raise an eyebrow. . . . And we have a story that seems to foretell our own time. The average reader will not have difficulty in recognizing parallels—the superior race theory, Munich, Czechoslovakia, and what not. All of which is important if true." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 5 '41 900w

"The Earth is the Lord's reminds one less of a novel than it does of a particularly grandiloquent opera. All the characters talk in a kind of recitative, the psychology is always grand to the point of inflation, and all the action seems to be accompanied by full orchestra, with percussion instruments dominating. The net effect, too, is operatic, for you feel that while all this blood and thunder verges on the silly, it never really is silly but, on the contrary, is perversely, if only momentarily, fascinating. . . . And, of its sort, pretty good." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:62 Ja 11 '41 800w

"How the dark minds of nomadic savages may respond to the flicker of civilized ideas from beyond their borders is something we imagine only with difficulty at best; when the civilization that enlightens them is also completely alien to us, the difficulty becomes insuperable. That difficulty alone would defeat this book. Its characters behave sometimes like romantic orientals of 'Lalla Rookh' or 'The Corsair,' sometimes like Sioux Indians, sometimes like Nazi politicians; they talk sometimes like Hollywood Mystics, sometimes like lecturers at the New School for Social Research. There is, however, a strenuous effort at reality. Taylor Caldwell is a writer of impressive powers. Parts of her tale really seem to recreate the bleak desert of Gobi and the corrupt luxury of the trader cities." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 Ja 11 '41 900w

"Miss Taylor Caldwell plays fiction with fact: the Naimans were a powerful confederacy, and not a small peace-loving tribe as she suggests. But for those who delight in glorious technicolour here are four hundred luscious pages. Her characters are constantly biting lips, giving black looks, shedding angry tears, and drawing shuddering breaths, &c." John Hampson

Spec 167:116 Ag 1 '41 150w

"The main charm of this book lies in the fact that Temujin remains always a quite believable person. His schemes and his battles and his triumphs are set against a background of the everyday happenings of his tribe. The author might have done better had she expended less space on long, detailed descriptions of the Gobi, although it is obvious that she does it to set the scene and create the proper mood."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 360w

"It is a vivid piece of work, a highly coloured picture which will entrance the romantic but whose comparatively short span . . . may disappoint the historically curious. But the first task of someone whose unparalleled military strategy afterwards overwhelmed everything and everybody against him was obviously the consolidation of the scattered and independent Mongol tribes, and this is roughly the theme of Miss Caldwell's book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p321 J1 5 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK) (MAX REINER, pseud). Time no longer. 368p $2.75 Scribner

41-15452

A story of Nazi Germany during the early years after Hitler's coming to power. The chief characters are twin brothers, Karl and Kurt Erlich, one a Nazi sympathizer, the other a gentle, humane professor.

"In a short story or novelle the author's approach might have been effective. But in a long novel it confuses rather than guides. This seems a pity, particularly as the characters are well thought out and drawn with deep compassion and a fine sense of irony." Marianne Hauser

— + Books p6 Ag 17 '41 550w

"It is not the exterior action in 'Time No Longer' which matters so importantly—crowded though it is with violence, death and spectacular disaster. Where Mr. Reiner excels is in his atmosphere—in the sense which he gives one, through Therese and others, of a diseased and nightmare world from which security has fled. . . . When it comes to a final summing up, it seems to me that 'Time No Longer' is a little over-wrought, that it lacks the lights and shades which might have made it more convincing. There is too much unrelieved tension and melodrama. It seems touched, at times, with the hysteria which blighted Karl and Kurt, and like them, indulges in extravagances. On the whole, however, it is a curiously exciting and moving book which casts a somewhat feverish spell upon the reader." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '41 950w

New Yorker 17:67 Ag 23 '41 50w

"The book is always overwrought and unconvincing. . . . It is surprising, and in a way discouraging, that at this late date an author, or anybody for that matter, can still speak in such general terms as 'the forces of evil' when it comes to a definition of Hitlerism. And here lies the real defect of the book. If Mr. Reiner's conception of the problem had been more qualified it would not have been necessary for him to give the book the artificial substance that it has. He might not have found a satisfying explanation, but at least he might have kept his sense of proportion." Charles Lambert

— Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 30 '41 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 240w

CALDWELL, TAYLOR. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALVERTON, VICTOR FRANCIS. Where angels dared to tread. 381p $3 Bobbs
335.973 Utopian colonies. Socialism in the U.S. (W) 41-5634

History of the Utopian colonies in the United States, from the Rappites, Shakers, and Mormons, to Father Divine, and from Brook Farm and Fruitlands to the Oneida community. Index.

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

"Lively, colorful and interesting survey. . . . Obviously we would not look to a man who had covered so wide a field in so short a time for the sort of research that runs every relevant fact to earth and holds a whole subject in exquisite balance while now one facet is explored and now another. Instead, we find here the lively insights of a widely informed mind. In a few pages, for example, Calverton writes a brilliant interpretation of the work of Father Divine, which gives a new understanding of one of the most significant phenomena of our day and compensates a hundred-fold for certain infelicities of the encyclopedic type of mind." A. B. Parsons

+ Books p3 Ap 6 '41 1450w

"Mr. Calverton had written many vigorous and thoughtful books, but none better than this. He had a free and unconventional mind which enabled him to treat sympathetically the efforts of these bold experiments, even when he disagreed with their ideas." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:782 Je 11 '41 800w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 27 '41 1100w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft
Living Age 360:391 Je '41 600w

"Calverton's telescoped histories of the rise and decline of each community, considering his limited space, are good if somewhat superficial, and his treatment of such thorny roses as George Rapp, Ann Lee, Joseph Smith, Bronson Alcott, Orestes Brownson and John Humphrey Noyes is three-dimensional, sympathetic and understanding. His conclusions about the economic significance of the experiments are the wormy side of the book." S. E. Hyman

+ — New Repub 105:28 Jl 7 '41 700w

"A great deal of careful research went into the making of Mr. Calverton's departing message, a book that ought to find a permanent place in our records. He saw the colonies as heartening examples of man's perpetual upward struggle, and the result of this point of view is a serious study, but one that is also perfectly readable and bearing no traces of academic dust." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 13 '41 1600w

"A fascinating and significant tale, well documented and vigorously written,"

+ New Yorker 17:71 Mr 29 '41 50w

"An excellent introduction with a living and contemporary point of view." J. T. Adams

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ap 12 '41 1100w

Time 37:104 My 19 '41 90w

CAMBRIDGE bibliography of English literature; ed. by F. W. Bateson. 4v $32.50 Macmillan [£7 7s Cambridge]

016.82 English literature—Bibliography 41-4948

"The chronological scope of the work is from the year 600 to 1900. . . . However, some recent editions of books first published before 1900 and critical works of later date are listed. Geographically, the primary limits are those of Great Britain and the British possessions. Non-British works of critical scholarship dealing with British authors are included. . . . The lists are not confined to 'literature' in the narrower sense. The analysis of the contents shows such divisions as these: literary relations with the Continent (i.e., translations and kindred works), intellectual background, book production and distribution, education, political and social background, poetry, prose fiction, drama, critical and miscellaneous prose, sport, newspapers and magazines, theology and religion, philosophy, history, science, economics, law, biblical scholarship." Christian Century

Reviewed by L. C. Wroth
Books p33 O 5 '41 1150w

"Such a monumental achievement is a bulwark in the kingdom of the mind. At a time when English thought is being challenged as never before, it stands as a banner of articulate expression, a reaffirmation of democratic culture. Supplements to the biography will be listed at suitable intervals; librarians, teachers, writers and students will find this publication of inestimable value." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 160w

"The reviewer has long been saving the word 'monumental' for application to an opus of such scope, scale and mass as this. No smaller adjective fits it. . . . Yes, 'monumental' is the word for it, but it is a monument which is also a detailed map of a wide terrain of literature and a guide to its exploration. Discriminating readers generally resent the compilation of lists of the 'hundred best books,' but when the number is raised into the thousands the offensive claims of literary aristocracy are submerged in a democracy of letters. These are, at any rate, the forty thousand most worth listing." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:396 Mr 19 '41 900w

CAMBRIDGE bibliography of English literature
—Continued—

"This Bibliography is not, of course, the sort of work over which one lounges on the sands at the seaside during a summer holiday... But to anyone who has any serious interest in literature, and particularly to anyone who contemplates writing a book on any subject under the sun, its double-columned pages are invaluable. If you want to compose still another commentary on Shakespeare, if you wish to know exactly how a novel is constructed, if you want to know how far sport has influenced fiction, or the details of the Regency background, here is a full and complete list of all relevant matter." H. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 1 '41 1050w

Reviewed by James van Zant
Churchman 155:19 Ag '41 250w

"If a work of reference does not function smoothly in its capacity as a machine for answering questions, then certainly it is of little worth. On this score the new Cambridge bibliography is about as useful a compilation for those interested in the field it covers as anything that exists. Certainly every college and university library will be incomplete without it, and I should even go so far as to urge its purchase for high school use." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 33:568 Mr 28 '41 3200w

"Every large library will find it an essential tool. Smaller libraries, particularly those connected with educational institutions, will be justified in purchasing it from their more limited funds." Nathan van Patten

+ Library J 66:511 Je 1 '41 1400w

"This long-awaited work is unquestionably the most complete bibliographical aid covering the whole field of English literature that has ever appeared. . . Since the editor has wisely decided that such varied writings as newspapers, books of travel, controversial religious books, and works concerned with science, economic theory, sport, and oriental scholarship still 'possess some literary interest,' the scope of the bibliography is even broader than its title would suggest. . . In an undertaking as extensive as this, it was, of course, necessary that the labor be divided up among many contributors; and over two hundred scholars, English and American, have been employed in preparing and revising the various sections. Collaboration has been more successful in this case than in most, but even the expert editorship of Mr. Bateson has not overcome all the difficulties that inevitably arise in collaborative efforts. For one thing, there is in various places a good deal of needless repetition from one section to another. . . A more serious difficulty appears in the varying degree of completeness with which major authors are treated." Arthur Friedman

+ — Library Q 11:521 O '41 1900w

"Long awaited, these volumes will be long discussed and longer used by all who cherish the unsearchable riches of English letters. The reasons for the continuing and abundant use of the work are implicit in its clearly expressed purpose. . . Admitting all the errors of omission and commission, the Bibliography remains a great and brave achievement. All who love letters must be grateful to the editors and publishers for the vision and fortitude they have displayed in making such a book, and for the gift of it in this dark hour of hate and destruction." D. A. Roberts

+ — Nation 153:76 J1 26 '41 900w

"This magnificent work, which Mr. Bateson has most ably edited, bears all the marks which we are accustomed to find in books published by the Cambridge Press—rigid accuracy in dates and matters of fact, extreme thoroughness, and topographical impeccability." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:254 Mr 8 '41 1150w

Pratt p16 autumn '41

"By all odds the most useful bibliographical tool that the reader, the student, or teacher of English literature can have at his command." Christian Gauss

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Ap 19 '41 1550w

"The American user of this bibliography will question the omission of the English Journal from a list of current bibliographical sources which includes the English Association Bulletin and Review of English Studies. Similarly, the inclusion of Webster's Dictionary when Funk and Wagnall's New Standard Dictionary is omitted seems debatable. . . Well-bound in buckram, the volumes will stand considerable use. The bibliography will be of great service to scholars and research workers. The ease with which it is used is dependent upon the user's knowledge of bibliographical method. Library purchase will be determined by the need for scholarly resources. The Cambridge Bibliography of English Literature is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:36 J1 '41 1050w

"To those scholars who have learned to turn first to the 'Cambridge History of English Literature,' another invaluable tool is now available." D. G. Wing

+ Yale R n s 31:208 autumn '41 850w

CAMBRIDGE economic history of Europe from the decline of the Roman empire; ed. by J. H. Clapham and Eileen Power; v. 1, The agrarian life of the middle ages. 650p il maps $7.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

330.94 Europe—Economic conditions. Europe—History. [A41-3509]

"The purpose of this work is to tell the economic history of the world as it impinges upon Europe, starting with the later centuries of the Roman Empire. The present volume was planned to be complete in itself; it gives the foundations of economic life—and what was in many places the complete superstructure too—the earth, the crops, the peasant's toil, how villages and fields were occupied and laid out, how and with what cattle and implements they were tilled, what the society was that they maintained." (Publisher's note) Bibliographies. Index.

Am Soc R 6:928 D '41 100w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:202 D 12 '41 100w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns
Ethics 52:122 O '41 1450w

"The answers are not always clear-cut; there are still unbridgeable differences of interpretation. But the reader who studies Professor Koebner's brilliant opening survey, Professor Dopsch's masterly chapter on the German penetrations, Professor Bloch's sketch of the evolution of manorialism, and Professor Aubin's account of German eastward colonisation will have a knowledge of the processes of a thousand years of history he could not get elsewhere in English. And he can fill in the regional details from the numerous specialised sections, illuminating them by the two extraordinarily interesting chapters on agricultural technique by Mr. Stevens and Professor Parain. The Englishing of the volume must have been itself a great editorial achievement." A. P. W.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '41 500w

Reviewed by F. M. Stenton
Nature 148:671 D 6 '41 1200w

"The execution and style are uneven, and a unifying principle is lacking. It is too bad that J. H. Clapham did not carry out his intention to make some editorial generalizations from the material. Due to the rise of fascism and the extension of the war, the volume was assembled with difficulty, and shows it." S. F. Bloom

+ — New Repub 105:706 N 24 '41 1150w

"The inauguration of a new Cambridge History, always a notable happening, is doubly welcome at the present moment. It will be, to students of history at least, a major event of the spring publishing season. . . Co-operative histories to which each writer contributes a chapter almost inevitably suffer from a certain lack of freshness. . . In this respect the contributors to an economic history are fortunate. They have a theme which is not hackneyed or outworn, and have generally the definite findings of their own researches to make public. Consequently, the present volume is both more readable and more stimulating than all but a very few of the previous Cambridge Histories." David Knowles

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:140 Ag 9 '41 1650w

"None of the great series of Cambridge histories can have been inaugurated under greater difficulties than this. The sudden death of one of the editors, Dr. Eileen Power, shortly before going to press, the dispersion of the team of foreign scholars (only one chapter is contributed by an Englishman, Mr. C. E. Stevens, who writes on rural life in the Later Roman Empire), whose very whereabouts or fate are in some cases unknown, must have added immensely to the burdens of editorship. Fortunately Professor Clapham has proved equal to the task and must be congratulated on the production of a book of the first importance." A. L. Poole
+ Spec 166:634 Je 13 '41 800w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p10 D 24 '41 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Je 14 '41 2450w

CAMBRIDGE history of Poland from Augustus II to Pilsudski, 1697-1935; ed. by W. F. Reddaway [and others]. 2v v 2 630p maps $7.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

943.8 Poland—History [A41-4089]

This volume of a projected two-volume work covers the history of Poland from 1697 to the death of Pilsudski in 1935. The book is a composite one, made up of articles by twenty-one contributors, of whom twelve are Polish. The opening of a new world war prevented the completion of the work on the earlier years of Poland, but a brief introductory chapter in this volume is designed to summarize this material for the benefit of those who are not familiar with the earlier history. Index.

"As in all composite works, the contributions are not of equal merit, and the general result is somewhat lifeless—only a history from a single pen can be a work of art. The painstaking reader will learn the main facts of Polish history, but he will gain no understanding of the forces that have made (and unmade) Poland." A. J. P. T.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 9 '41 350w

"The Cambridge History of Poland, 1697-1935, is, I believe, the longest and most detailed account of the country's affairs that has yet appeared in English. Its production at this moment is a considerable achievement." Francis Genn
+ New Statesman & Nation 22:381 O 25 '41 1100w

"The appearance of this volume is a triumph over great difficulties: Poland has been cut off for nearly two years, at least two of the Polish contributors have died from German ill-treatment, and one of the English writers was killed in this country. In view of these manifest obstacles it is tempting to give this history a kind, but superficial, welcome: to record some of the writers, point out the defects of translation (the second chapter, for instance, is almost unreadable), and, at most, criticise the absence of a bibliography—a grievous lack, in which this volume is unique among the Cambridge Histories. But this book appears in a great and learned series; and it would be a disservice to historical scholarship to pretend that it attains the detachment which Acton laid down as essential when he inaugurated the series forty years ago. Nationalist history (though not misstatement of fact) is pardonable in the Polish writers; all the greater is the obligation on the English writers and editors to be both impartial and accurate." A. J. P. Taylor
+ Spec 167:360 O 10 '41 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p479 S 27 '41 2800w

CAMBRIDGE history of the British empire; general eds: J. Holland Rose, A. P. Newton and E. A. Benians; v 2. The growth of the new Empire, 1783-1870. 1068p $10.50 Macmillan [50s Cambridge]

942 Great Britain—History (37-964)

"The new Empire, the subject of this volume, is the Empire that the British people acquired after the loss of the thirteen colonies. The editors say in their preface that the object of the first Empire, as defined by Adam Smith, was to raise up a people of customers; the object of the second to secure to Great Britain the freedom to sell all over the world the products of her growing industries." (Manchester Guardian) For volumes of this history published earlier see Book Review Digest. 1933, 1936.

Reviewed by A. G. Dewey
Am Pol Sci R 35:1171 D '41 800w

Reviewed by S. M. Scott
+ Ann Am Acad 217:182 S '41 550w
Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill
Canadian Hist R 22:317 S '41 1700w

"In a world that is apparently given over to propaganda, to nationalistic bias and prejudice, and the doctrine that history is merely an instrument of political aggression, the Cambridge History of the British Empire magnificently continues the course of absolute impartiality that Acton marked out for the great Cambridge Modern History 40-odd years ago. This publication is therefore not only a superb work of scholarship; it is a moral gesture, a witness to ideals that are now dangerously threatened, but can never be wholly destroyed." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 15 '41 700w

"The tale told in these 900 pages is a complicated and fascinating one of adventure, commerce, and conscience."
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 7 '41 450w

"This volume is made up of chapters by many authorities, and combines scholarship with literary merit."
+ Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 90w

Reviewed by S. F. Bloom
New Repub 105:379 S 22 '41 700w

Reviewed by W. M. Macmillan
New Statesman & Nation 21:308 Mr 22 '41 700w

"This volume bears evidence of careful planning and scholarly execution in a field less well supplied with guide posts and traveling directions than that traversed by the first volume, which was concerned with the Old Empire. And it will long be used, for nowhere else within the covers of a single volume can a comparable mass of information, textual or bibliographical, be found on the rise and development of what the editors call the Second Empire." R. L. Schuyler
+ Pol Sci Q 56:449 S '41 1350w

Pratt p13 autumn '41

"The scholarship of the present volume is of a high order, and the exposition generally, though not uniformly, good. The excellent bibliography, which takes up 120 pages, will be a boon to the advanced student, who will doubtless find his labors lightened by, inter alia, the select lists of Parliamentary Papers and of Parliamentary Debates. It is to be hoped that the appearance of volume III will soon complete this very worth-while undertaking." Leonidas Dodson
+ Social Studies 33:43 Ja '42 440w

"No one could read this worthy volume in a great work without wondering how it is that the romance of our Imperial history is so little known among the generality of our own people. If we do not appreciate it ourselves, we can hardly expect it to be familiar to the foreign world or even to Hitler and Mussolini." H. V. Hodson
+ Spec 165:695 D 27 '40 2050w

CAMBRIDGE history of the British empire—

Continued

"Even the contributors have sometimes thought that the Cambridge Histories had too much fact and too little history. . . Fact is sardined against fact on every page. It looks like one of those invaluable reference books which no one ever reads through. That would be the hasty judgment, and the wrong one. These twenty-three essays treat the usual subjects of war and diplomacy, of the industrializing, humanizing, and liberalizing of Britain, from an imperial rather than an insular outlook. Some of them, especially the economic chapters, are superbly done and are modern in their omission of sentimentalizing about British benefits to mankind." Stanley Pargellis

Yale R n s 30:860 summer '41 1000w

CAMERON, DONALD CLOUGH. And so he had to die. 278p $2 Holt

41-4914

Detective story.

"This is Abelard Voss' best case to date. It packs an admirably sustained secret that explodes at the proper moment." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 Mr 30 '41 170w

"Mystery and human interest are the factors that distinguish this book." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '41 170w

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 19 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 150w

CAMP, RAYMOND R. Fishing the surf; il. by Luis M. Henderson. 223p $2 Little 799.16 Fishing 41-3429

"A brief guide to surf fishing, giving descriptions of tackle and equipment, habits and food preferences of different fish, surf fishing methods, and areas on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts where surf fishing may be found. One chapter covers home rod making." Booklist

Booklist 37:384 Ap 15 '41

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 90w

"No more practical or meaty book on surf fishing has been issued than this volume by Mr. Camp. Even its convenient pocket size shows foresight. The style of the author matches the format; it, too, is condensed and readable. . . Much of the writing about fishing and hunting has been curiously artificial and stilted. Mr. Camp's book has the clear and genuine quality of good reporting." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p36 N 2 '41 200w

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE ORMOND. No murder of mine. 243p $2 Scribner

41-3610

Detective story.

Booklist 37:361 Ap 1 '41

"It's amusing and eerie by turns through a succession of moods and contains sufficient paraphernalia for a lively guessing game. Neither Miss Campbell nor her heroine takes the corpse very seriously, which struck us as a step in the right direction." Will Cuppy
+ Books p25 Mr 2 '41 160w

"The story itself is well enough written so that although you know after the second killing who is responsible you keep right on going to the end to find out what happened to Rowan." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 50w

"The author is at her best in depicting [the heroine's] fear and indecision, but her final explanation of the crime and its motive is a little too involved and much too long." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 F 23 '41 140w

"The characters are nicely unorthodox and the plot is right enough, but watch out for the international intrigue."

New Yorker 17:60 Mr 1 '41 50w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 8 '41 50w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 166:534 My 16 '41 90w

"The thrills and mystery continue to the end of the story, along with a romance that does not delay the action."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 180w

"There is an intensity about the characters which compels you to share their suspense; even the corpse leads a more lively existence than corpses usually do. Perhaps this powerful style has a fault, for the false scents are so very strong that no experienced nose will follow them after one casual sniff. Nevertheless the pace continues at a stirring speed to an exciting finish."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Ap 12 '41 140w

CAMPBELL, HARRIETTE (RUSSELL) lady. Murder set to music. 312p il $2 Harper

(W) 41-8355

Detective story.

Booklist 37:515 Jl 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 25 '41 240w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 My 25 '41 190w

"A well-written story."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 7 '41 70w

"Murderer of hapless Graeco-Irish sisters revealed in super-dramatic finish after Chinese ivory cubes clarify strange problem for observant sleuth. For deduction-lovers."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 31 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 Jl '41

CAMPBELL, PERSIA CRAWFORD (MRS EDWARD RICE, Jr). Consumer representation in the new deal. 298p $3.25 Columbia univ. press [13s King]

339.4 Consumption (economics). U.S.—
Economic policy 41-587

"Study of the attention given to consumer interests by the federal government, especially under the N.R.A. and in the A.A.A. The author concludes that adequate consumer representation in the formation of federal policies is indispensable in our present industrial and agricultural setup and that it will not be obtained until a separate consumer agency is established." (J Home Econ) The author is a member of the economics department at Queens college, New York city. Index.

"It is fitting that the subject of consumer representation in the New Deal be treated very seriously for it has been a serious and at times even a slightly tragic subject. No complete treatment, however, can fail to disclose some hilarious incidents and developments. For example, if the membership of the Consumers' Advisory Board of N.R.A. during its first year had been asked to formulate a program for national economic salvation it is almost certain that it would, in spite of the great restraint and dignity of the membership, have got into a terrific row in the process, so great were the conflicts in the basic economic notions of the membership. . . A proper exposition of this remarkable balance in consumer representation seems to this reviewer to have amusing possibilities of a sort which, explored more fully, might not only add some leaven but some real light to Dr. Campbell's excellent study." D. M. Keezer

+ — Am Econ R 31:675 S '41 700w

"This is an important and valuable book. Let no one be misled by the title. It is accurate enough, but some may not realize that involved in such a discussion are fundamental economic and political questions of concern to everyone. Everyone should therefore be grateful that this study was made by someone who grasps the implications of the events chronicled, thinks clearly, and writes well. The reviewer has but one critical question to raise. Could Dr. Campbell by a different organization, or use, of her material have separated that part of relatively transient or limited interest from that of more lasting and general interest?" Hazel Kyrk

+ Ann Am Acad 214:261 Mr '41 400w

"A scholarly study."

+ J Home Econ 33:188 Mr '41 70w

Management R 30:236 Je '41 80w

"Dr. Campbell has made an important contribution to the literature of consumer economics. Although writing close to the events she describes, the author has sifted wisely and evaluated objectively." L. J. Gordon

+ Social Educ 6:50 Ja '42 450w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Short grass country. (American folkways ser) 304p $3 Duell

917.8 Southwest (W) 41-52003

History, legend, economics and humor of that portion of the Southwest bounded by Ozarks and woodlands on the east, by the foothills of the Rockies on the west, by the Colorado River on the south, and by the cornlands of Kansas and Nebraska on the north. Index.

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"A little less folklore and a little more of the real man would have been welcome. However, this may be a trivial objection. Mr. Vestal had done a work that will stand on its own feet. He has taken what, to most Americans, is one of the drabest of all regions and given it life, and he has tried with some success to make us understand why there are those who not only can get used to it but who actually come to love it." Stanley Walker

+ Books p2 N 30 '41 1250w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt

Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p4 N 30 '41 1200w

"Stanley Vestal, of the University of Oklahoma, has written several books, good books, about the West, and this book about the short grass country is a fine job. . . This book should be a 'must' book for every class in American civilization in every college in the U. S." W. A. White

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 13 '41 900w

"Short Grass Country, the third volume on the list [series of American Folkway books], is on the same high level as its predecessors. Its author is a native of this vast region of high plains, with its varied topographical features and its individual history and folklore. He has interpreted his land most graphically in various chapters that show that the 'Short Grass Country' is different, valiant, resourceful, imaginative and histrionic."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 D '41 100w

CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. Canada in world affairs; the pre-war years, by F. H. Soward [and others.] 356p $3.25 Oxford

971 Canada—Foreign relations

"This is the first of a new series in which it is planned to publish a volume every two years. The present work deals with the political, economic and diplomatic problems of Canada during the last years before the present war." Foreign Affairs

Canadian Forum 21:25 Ap '41 460w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:881 J1 '41 40w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '41 100w

"[The book is] characteristic, in strength and weakness, of composite scholarship. Eclecticism of approach and unevenness in treatment are seemingly the concomitants of detached and specialized expertise, which also contrives to avoid controversy and eschew passion. But [it does] succeed in bringing out that Canada's future will be materially affected by factors now being shaped in the world outside." Michael Greenberg

+ Pacific Affairs 14:498 D '41 230w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. The Brandywine; il. by Andrew Wyeth. (Rivers of America) 285p $2.50 Farrar

917.481 Brandywine river (W) 41-5328

The Brandywine is only sixty miles in length; it rises in the Pennsylvania hills east of Lancaster, flows thru Pennsylvania and part of Delaware, and joins the Delaware river at Wilmington. The author's ancestors settled in the Brandywine country in the early 1700s; he himself was born here; and his study of the river and the country thru which it flows is part reminiscence, part gleanings from private journals, part historical. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

"This is a book written con amore. . . It is not too much to say the Brandywine is the most intimately charming of the Rivers of America series. And the illustrations by Andrew Wyeth are something to cheer about." W. C. Weber

+ Books p5 Ap 27 '41 900w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14 '41 550w

"As a whole The Brandywine is interesting reading but not as consistently strong as The Kennebec and other earlier volumes in the 'Rivers of America' series." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 140w

"Those who know Dr. Canby's work will find in this book the Quaker ancestry of the sincerity and quiet distinction which mark Dr. Canby's criticisms. . . In a style quiet, unpretentious and without display Dr. Canby has told the charming story of the Quaker country." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '41 1200w

"A very pleasant and well-written little history."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 3 '41 50w

"Yesterday afternoon I left Dr. Canby's book for the Brandywine itself and soon, in a green and tender April light, the book and stream merged one into the other. The pages, the sliding water, lost their material differences; together they enveloped me in the magical peace of a time gone forever from living men, that simpler husbandry we missed." Joseph Hergesheimer

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 My 10 '41 900w

Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

CANNAN, JOANNA (MRS H. J. PULLEIN-THOMPSON). Death at The Dog. 272p $2 Reynal [7s 6d Gollancz]

41-2804

Detective story.

"'Death at "The Dog"' is a well written item, with emphasis on character and intensive detection in an up-to-the-minute scene, blackouts and all." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 F 16 '41 120w

"It's a shame that Joanna Cannan's 'Death at "The Dog"' is so much like Ngaio Marsh's 'Death at the Bar.' As itself it is a fine mystery with a good crime and expert sleuthing. But all the time you are reading it, you'll keep feeling: 'I've been all through this before.' Of course, if you haven't seen Miss Marsh's book or can manage to wipe it completely out of your mind, you'll like this latest version of death at darts immensely." Marian Wiggan

CANNAN, JOANNA—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 3 '40 200w

"Disappointing; incessant dialogue gives the feeling that the reader has been invited to a party but not properly introduced. . . Miss Cannan's characters are always attractive, but she finds it an effort to implicate them in crime." Ralph Partridge

— New Statesman & Nation 19:678 My 25 '40 60w

"'Death at the Dog' is a novel, and a good one. And as a mystery story it is all the better for that. The author, like her detective, is genuinely interested in her characters as characters, and she has the skill to make them real and interesting to her readers as well. Her book belongs in Class A among intelligent thrillers." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '41 280w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 8 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p233 My 11 '40 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

CANNON, CARL LESLIE. American book collectors and collecting from colonial times to the present. 391p $3 Wilson, H.W.

025.2 Book collectors. Book collecting (W) 41-51592

This work attempts to describe "the main outlines of book collecting in America, together with some account of the libraries of a few of its collectors. . . The object kept in view has been to present the subject as a whole from colonial times to about the year 1930, with emphasis at times on the collector and at other times on the subject." (Introd) Partial contents: Thomas Prince; William Byrd II of Westover; Thomas Jefferson; George Ticknor; John Carter Brown and James Lenox; Three collectors of books on the American Indian; Three scholarly collectors; Incunabula, typography and the book arts; Three college benefactors; John Pierpont Morgan; Henry E. Huntington; Shakespearean beginnings and the stage; Henry Clay Folger; Wilberforce Eames. Index.

"Readers acquainted with the book world and its history will find much to criticize in the emphasis, or lack of it, placed on certain personalities and particular fields of collecting. They will find conspicuous omissions among the names of great collectors and collections, but no thinking person will fail to recognize the fact that the author has brought together a mass of data which has never before been made available to the public in a single volume. The book will therefore serve admirably as an introduction to the history of an important branch of American culture." L. A. Brown

+ — Am Hist R 47:343 Ja '42 500w

Booklist 37:317 Mr 15 '41

"The narrative, smooth and entertaining, presents a valuable record from Prince, the father, to Eames, the dean, of American bibliography." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p25 Ap 20 '41 1100w

"Mr. Cannon's book is welcome and interesting for the same reasons that biography is more thrilling than bibliography and that passionate book collecting and the men who most successfully do it are more alive and stimulating than any formal catalog of the books about them or collected by them. The present volume is not precisely unique (no book ever is exactly that) yet it is one of a very small number of reliable books in English, publicly

(not privately) printed and to be had at a moderate price, which give first place in title and treatment to the collector rather than the books collected. Further, it is the first book to achieve a nontechnical, comprehensive, and readable account of American book collectors and their collections." J. I. Wyer

+ — Library J 66:552 Je 15 '41 1600w

"This book will long stand as a valued reference book on the small shelf of much-used books near the desk of the librarian, the bibliographer, the book collector (especially he who is interested in provenance) and the rare-book dealer, each of whom should be familiar with it. There is no other volume covering the American field which even approaches this comprehensive record, although George L. McKay's American book auction catalogues should be used in conjunction with it. May there be, in a decade or so, a revised and enlarged edition containing equally good accounts of collections now in private hands and hence outside the scope of this first edition." G. H. Doane

+ Library Q 12:139 Ja '42 900w

"It is too bad that collectors are not always interesting, even when pursuing their hobby. If they were, this book might have been continuously absorbing reading. Parts of it, when the subject lends itself to exploitation, are fascinating. Mr. Cannon does his best with the material at hand. He has a flair for reporting, a lucid narrative style, and an excellent grasp of the significance of collecting trends. . . But often there is more talk of the collection than the man, and without the human equation the method becomes statistical and unexciting."

Philip Brooks

+ — N Y Times p16 S 28 '41 1600w

"The first extensive study of the romance of the 'book collecting game' in America. . . This volume is not only an entertainingly written narrative of the romance and adventure of collecting, with hundreds of stories of famous books, their discovery and capture, but it is a brief but thorough history of every important collector, whether his library was dispersed under the auctioneer's hammer or became a part of a great public collection." R. W. G. Vail

+ Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America 35:165 Ap '41 1100w

"His book can look forward confidently to fifty years of active and useful life, for it is certain to become a 'must' book for the shelves of every information desk. In it will be found an answer to most of the questions about the owners of American bookplates or the writers of the signatures that are found on the title or fly-leaves of the books that recur most frequently in these catalogues." G. P. Winship

+ Print 2:67 My '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:133 Jl '41

CANNON, CARL LESLIE, ed. See Joint committee on library research facilities for national emergency. Guide to library facilities for national defense

CANTRIL, HADLEY. The psychology of social movements. 274p $3.50 Wiley

301.15 Social psychology. Crowds 41-10411

Analyzes the psychology behind mass movements of many kinds. Some of the types considered are: the lynching mob; the kingdom of Father Divine; the Oxford group; the Townsend plan; and the Nazi party. The author is associate professor of psychology at Princeton university. Index.

"The book is written in a direct, lucid, interesting style and contains a wealth of specific factual material." H. R. Bruce

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1214 D '41 300w

Reviewed by Theodore Abel

Am Soc R 6:914 D '41 550w

"This book should be a welcome addition to the library of every social scientist who dislikes oversimplified or particularistic explanations of social phenomena. . . [It] is a highly readable and extremely informative volume on social psychology, with ample consideration of economic and political factors." S. H. Britt
+ Ann Am Acad 218:240 N '41 270w

"A challenging examination of one of our gravest problems, well written and not formidably technical."

+ New Yorker 17:55 J1 26 '41 40w

"It is not an enviable undertaking, nor are his efforts recommended for light summer reading. In addition to the naturally hazy atmosphere permeating most treatises on psychology, 'The Psychology of Social Movements' is replete with obscure terminology. The use of such words as 'interiorized,' 'stratrate' and 'conceptualized' is hardly calculated to make the book a favorite of those readers who enjoy absorbing science in easy doses. Aside from the disagreeable jargon of modern psychology, however, Prof Cantril presents a great deal of timely information regarding widely varied phenomena." M. C. Abrams
+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 1000w

"Reviewer's shorthand cannot do justice to the illumination you can gain from this study. Clarity, skill in making technical concepts understandable, scholarship, and courage combine to present a view of man in society that we must understand to keep our balance." Leon Whipple
+ Survey G 30:640 N '41 900w

CAPEK, KAREL. I had a dog and a cat; pictures drawn by Josef and Karel Capek; tr. by M. and R. Weatherall. 160p $1.50 Macmillan [3s 6d Allen, G]

891.86 Cats. Dogs (W) 41-13720

"The late author of 'R.U.R.' goes on about his cats and dogs, all apparently rather wifful and exuberantly procreative. If you've ever owned a puppy or a kitten, you'll be pleased by his lovely, folksy, Czech humor on the subject. . . Drawings by the author and Josef Capek." New Yorker

Booklist 38:3 S '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

"These chapters are a striking proof that it is not necessary to take sides on the cat-dog question. Capek understands both, feels for both the compassion, the faint envy that understanding an animal always produces in a human being, and interprets them both with the humor of one who puts up with them rather than bends them to his will. This is a posthumous work, from the most famous Czech dramatist. Happy the man who can make the world laugh as he leaves it—innocent, tender-hearted merriment." M. L. Becker
+ Books p2 J1 20 '41 400w

"It is cleverly written, no less cleverly illustrated, and will be a delight to lovers of these pets. The information conveyed is negligible, but the entertainment value is considerable."

+ Christian Century 58:935 J1 23 '41 60w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 6 '40 110w

New Statesman & Nation 19:628 My 11 '40 140w

"This book about dogs and cats is a treasure among the books of Capek which have to do with nature, with animals, and the little intimate things of life." Milos Sefranek
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 3 '41 950w

New Yorker 17:56 J1 19 '41 50w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p239 My 18 '40 450w

CARCOPINO, JEROME. Daily life in ancient Rome; the people and the city at the height of the empire; ed. with bibliography and notes by Henry T. Rowell; tr. from the French by E. O. Lorimer. 342p il $4 Yale univ. press [16s 6d Routledge]

937.6 Rome—Social life and customs. Rome (city)—History 40-34290

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"This English translation of Carcopino's book is well done. It combines accuracy with smoothness and freedom from effort." W. L. Westermann

Am Hist R 46:700 Ap '41 320w

"This is a fascinating book, a must item for classical scholars and for students of social conditions both past and present." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 153:250 My '41 650w

"Though it carries a vast amount of detailed learning, Daily Life in Ancient Rome is not a heavy book and can be recommended to the general reader of intelligent tastes." G. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 25 '41 280w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

New Repub 104:508 Ap 14 '41 380w

"How far M. Carcopino's book will be useful to scholars I am quite unqualified to judge, but to the common reader like myself it is of the greatest interest. It can be particularly recommended to school libraries for the enlivenment it would bring to the tedious though rewarding study of the Latin tongue." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:303 Mr 22 '41 1800w

"The translation is poor, and the proof-reading is less good than it ought to be; but the additional notes and appendix added by Professor Rowell partly compensate for that. It is a fascinating work, written with much of the grace and smoothness characteristic of even the most learned French scholars. And its great merit is that, with a masterly command of a multitude of scattered details—the size of a pocket sundial, the width of a side street, a poor poet's breakfast—its author combines a view so clear and broad that his book is not a collection of dead atomic facts, but the description of a living organism." Gilbert Highet

+ N Y Times p14 F 23 '41 850w

Pratt p13 D '41

Times [London] Lit Sup p267 My 31 '41 270w

CARDWELL, ANN, pseud. See Powley, J. M.

CARDWELL, LAWRENCE. Mountain medicine. 232p pl $3 Caxton printers

917.8 Ranch life. Arizona—Description and travel 41-8476

Account of life on a small Arizona mountain ranch, upon which the author and his wife have managed to make a living contrary to the predictions of their friends and neighbors. The sketches which make up the book have appeared in the Los Angeles Times Sunday Magazine.

Booklist 37:611 J1 '41

Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"Allowances must be made for the author's turgid style, for without it, even the few interesting spots of the book would not have come to light. Whether even these make it worth wading through these two hundred odd pages is hard to say. Those who like slapstick yarns of the backwoods will be at home here, though they will agree that one cannot be whimsical and slapstick about everything that happens on a ranch. The sepia photographs are quite normal."

+ Canadian Forum 21:93 Je '41 100w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Judy [Eng title: Manuscript of youth]. 265p $2 Putnam [8s 6d Hutchinson]

41-1054

Badly bored with life in a small, provincial English town, young Judy Daly married, in haste, the middle-aged Hugo Gordon when the Munich crisis brought promise of excitement. During Hugo's absence in the Far East, Judy is introduced to a more exciting life by a sophisticated, cynical novelist, but Hugo's return and the coming of real war finally recall Judy to her senses.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 Ja 5 '41 200w

"Readers looking for easy diversion will find the writing smooth and the war not too obtrusive." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p23 Ja 12 '41 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p557 N 2 '40 60w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Rhapsody in green [Eng title: Symphony in green]. 311p $2 Putnam [8s 6d Hutchinson]

41-12022

A story of an international marriage which in itself was supremely happy, but which a second war brought to a tragic end. Rudi von Breitenhof lost both his parents in the first World war and was brought up in England by an aunt who hated her native land. In most things Rudi was English, he went to an English school and married an English wife, but his love of music called him back to Germany. And the loyal to his adopted country the second World war brought about his death.

"'Rhapsody in Green' is honest and emotionally sincere, and gives one a picture of the tragic but unavoidable consequences of such a situation. In his efforts to aid unfortunate relatives still living in Germany, Rudolf came under unjust suspicion. To give proof of his loyalty to the country of his adoption, he had to make a heroic sacrifice. Miss Carfrae has handled the story with restraint and a true sense of drama. It is genuinely moving." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Ag 17 '41 250w

"This is a long novel for lovers of light fiction who like the author to take her story and her readers seriously. The story is well told, like all Miss Carfrae's, and deals with an English family today and other timely subjects." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '41 180w

"[This novel] is humanly and sympathetically written and brings a sane and balanced outlook to a problem that it does not pretend to solve."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p301 Je 21 '41 50w

CARGILL, OSCAR. Intellectual America; ideas on the march. 777p $5 Macmillan

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. U.S.—Intellectual life 41-21084

"The focus of Mr. Cargill's attention is that complex of ideas which has dominated the American mind over the last generation, but his concern is rather with the heredity and the evolution of these ideas than with their influence or effect. He has seized upon five types of literary expression—naturalism, decadence, primitivism, intellectualism, and Freudianism, and he has been zealous to trace their European origins and their migration to America." (Books) Index.

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"The most serious defect in the presentation of these American authors is the failure to attempt any evaluation of their influence on the society in which they worked or of the influence of that society upon their work."

Perhaps this and many other difficulties will be cleared up in the volume which is to follow this one—Ideas in Conflict. Here certainly should be an opportunity to come to grips with the problem of the American environment and of the impact of ideas upon that environment. Here, too, should be an opportunity to embrace not only imaginative literature with a smattering of history, philosophy and sociology, but the literary expression of religious, of political, of economic ideas." H. S. Commager

Books p24 N 30 '41 1500w

Christian Century 58:1611 D 24 '41 350w

"Final judgment on this work must await the completion of the second volume, Ideas in Conflict, but it will undoubtedly be an important book. Recommended for all libraries." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 66:833 O 1 '41 140w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 50w

"Written in a vigorous and witty style whose interest flags surprisingly seldom. That is a real accomplishment." S. L. Jackson

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 8 '41 1000w

CARLISLE, DONALD THOMPSON. The ordeal of Oliver Airedale; or, To the dogs and back; a satire with teeth in it; il. by [the author]. [85p] $2 Scribner

817 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 41-19815

Describes in satiric prose and picture what happened when "the last of the Men had gone [and] the world went to the Dogs." The highlights of Caninian history are reviewed, from the arrival of Thaddeus Airedale from Angletierria in 11,630 to the day when his descendant Oliver Airedale tied a can to the tail of Der Footsch and saved the world from the Apes.

"A good book to give your recalcitrant friends." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic N '41 90w

Books p29 O 26 '41 90w

"To outline this hilarious and mordant satire and some of its pictured moods and scenes is to point to only half—or less—of its triumphant wit. D. T. Carlisle . . . has risen as artist above all the difficulties and perils of the creation of dogs-as-men; and he strikes just the right point that blends uproarious fantasy with searching reality, never veering to extravagance on either side."

+ N Y Times p10 O 5 '41 550w

"The text is definitely amusing and the 40 full-page drawings deftly 'take off' present events and well-known characters. Mr Carlisle has made a unique contribution to present-day entertainment, albeit there is food for thought on every page."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 110w

CARLISLE, NORMAN V., and ERICKSON, CURTIS L. Civil service careers for boys. 202p il $2 Dutton

351.1 Civil service—U.S.—Juvenile literature. Occupations (W) 41-18265

"Information about opportunities in public service in all the various fields in which the federal and state governments are active. Told in a narrative style designed to hold the interest of boys of high school age." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

CARLISLE, NORMAN V., and MCFERRAN, DORIS. Civil service careers for girls. 202p il $2 Dutton

351.1 Civil service—U.S.—Juvenile literature. Woman—Occupations (W) 41-15538

"Similar to the book on civil service for boys. Covers municipal as well as state and federal opportunities, with chapters on teaching, librarianship, public health nursing, playground work and similar subjects." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

CARLISLE, NORMAN V., and RICE, CONRAD C. Your career in radio. 189p il $2 Dutton

621.384193 Radio workers (W) 41-5046

In story-form this book tells what three high school boys learned about radio on a visit to a radio station. In the book "every effort has been made to include all the essential facts that will enable a young man to make a wise choice of his special radio broadcasting vocation. The authors have felt it advisable to give a fairly comprehensive picture of radio in action, to tell what and how, as a working method of presenting the requirements and opportunities of radio work." (Foreword)

Booklist 37:411 My 1 '41

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 Je 15 '41 50w

CARLSON, EARL REINHOLD. Born that way. 174p $1.75 Day

B or 92 Paralysis, Spastic (W) 41-51593

This is the autobiography of a man so badly handicapped at birth that it was problematical if he would live to grow up, let alone attain any success in life. However in spite of his helpless infancy and childhood—he suffered from spastic paralysis—by will power and hard work he developed control over his movements, went to college and medical school and is now a leading practitioner in the treatment of similar handicaps in others.

"Not only does this book have a certain practical value for psychologists who may have occasion to work with spastic cases, but it furnishes interesting illustrative material for the general psychologist as well." Anne Anastasi

+ Am J Psychol 54:629 O '41 310w

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

"The handicapped in any way, and those who meet them in society or live with them in the family, will be led by this inspiring record to the right attitude to life, to themselves and to each other."

+ Books p14 Je 8 '41 120w

CARLSON, OLIVER. A mirror for Californians. 372p $2.50 Bobbs

917.94 California—Description and travel. California—Social conditions. California—Politics and government 41-7292

"An attempt to understand and evaluate the effects of social, economic and psychological forces upon native and adopted sons [of California] as conditioned by the peculiar geographical, climatic and historical setting of the state." Intro.

"Neither too solemn, nor too flippant, the study includes significant criticism of scholarly histories of the past, and at the same time records a good selection of the best parlor stories of California and Californians. The appearance of the 'Mirror' at this time can be regarded as the closing of a cycle in an appropriate manner."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 20 '41 450w

Nation 154:45 Ja 10 '42 140w

"It is easy to rhapsodize about California, to be romantic about it, to laugh at it, to be indignant about the kind of human society that is being constructed there, to find evidences of a nascent Utopia there. The materials are all here in Mr. Carlson's book. It is not that Mr. Carlson has unearthed any important fact not already known. He has brought together known facts that were hitherto separated. At times he is careless. . . Mr. Carlson, without saying the final word, is suggestive and helpful." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p18 My 11 '41 1250w

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 28 '41 160w

CARMICHAEL, ANDREW WILLIAMS. Practical ship production. 2d ed 283p il $3 McGraw 623.8 Shipbuilding. Naval architecture

41-12484

"This text was written originally to meet the needs of technical men lacking experience in shipbuilding who in 1919 found themselves projected into shipbuilding by the increased activity in that field following the first World War. The present edition has been brought out to meet a like situation, but because of rapid advances in welding that have occurred in the past decade, much of the text has been rewritten. The book relates chiefly to the production of ships from existing plans. It is concerned almost wholly with steel ships, giving wooden and concrete ships only passing comment." (Eng N) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1919. Index.

Booklist 38:15 S '41

Eng N 127:72 Jl 31 '41 100w

CARNES, KATHLEEN, and PASTENE, JEROME. Child's book of the symphony; ill. by Dorothea Parrot. 98p $1.50 Howell, Soskin

785.11 Symphony. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 41-5751

Simplified analyses of ten well-known symphonies: Beethoven's Fifth; Tchaikovsky's Fourth; Haydn's G Major (Surprise); Mozart's G Minor; Schubert's Unfinished; Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony; Dvorak's "From the New World"; Brahms' First; Franck's D Minor; and Sibelius' D Major. Orchestral instruments are characterized briefly; themes of the symphonies are given for the piano; pen and ink portrait of each composer; and recordings of each symphony are given.

Booklist 37:411 My 1 '41

"I wish for its own sake that the word 'child' had not been used in the title; it will limit its usefulness. As a matter of fact, any beginner might be grateful for it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 20 '41 200w

"Children who are studying the less complicated musical forms will find the transition to the symphony made considerably easier by the Carnes-Pastene treatment."

Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 14 '41 250w

CAROTHERS, WALLACE HUME. Collected papers on high polymeric substances; ed. by H. Mark [and] G. Stafford Whitby. (High polymers; a series of monographs, v 1) 459p il $8.50 Interscience

541.7 Polymerization 40-34508

"First of a projected series of volumes on high polymers, this collection of papers forms an important contribution to a subject of constantly increasing importance. The papers

CAROTHERS, W. H.—Continued
fall into two main divisions: studies on polymerization and ring formation; acetylene polymers and their derivatives. They were reprinted without change, a short abstract is given for each, and the editors have added a few references concerning recent developments in the literature." Chem & Met Eng

"The book might have been improved by the elimination of several typographical errors among which are the reversal of figures 1a and 1b on page 133 and incorrectly printed formulas on pages 275 and 279. There is also the curious fact that in the bibliography the distribution of four of the papers among the three general groups differs from that used in the text. However, these items are of minor importance and do not detract from the value of the book as an excellently arranged and edited record of brilliant achievement in the field of high polymers." R. L. Jenkins
+ Am Chem Soc J 63:635 F '41 650w

"The outstanding achievements of Wallace H. Carothers in the nine years during which he devoted his efforts to the study of high-molecular-weight substances, his exceptional originality, the clarity of his concepts, and his ability to express them in a distinctive and readable style are ample justifications for the appearance of this book." P. J. Flory
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:46 Ja 10 '41 650w

"Research chemists and engineers concerned with polymer studies, development and production will welcome this reference book."
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:725 O '40 100w

Reviewed by H. W. Melville
Nature 148:419 O 11 '41 800w

CARR, ALBERT H. Z. Napoleon speaks; translation of Napoleonic documents by Julia Van Huele. 392p il $3 Viking

B or 92 Napoléon I, emperor of the French 41-22909

"The author is said to have examined upwards of 40,000 of Bonaparte's letters, besides proclamations, decrees, pamphlets, and the like, and he quotes from 480 of them, thus permitting the voluminous Corsican to tell his own story. These are interspersed with lucid and pointed comments and the history required for a biography which, though brief, gives a clear picture of the ambition-ridden soldier who capitalized upon his undoubted military genius to build a short-lived empire for himself." Christian Science Monitor

"There is nothing wrong about this presentation of the familiar story, except that there is nothing new. Albert Carr thinks sensibly and writes pleasantly; he does not pretend to be a historian—his bibliography is amusingly haphazard—and, in this book at any rate, he does not profess to be a political philosopher." Albert Guerard

Books p28 N 16 '41 370w

Christian Science Monitor p30 D 13 '41 850w

"Mr. Carr's book [is] a vivid, colorful, and dramatic account of a lustrous personality." Rustem Vamberry

+ Nation 153:432 N 1 '41 800w

"Like many biographers of Napoleon, Mr. Carr falls into the obvious traps. One can regret that Mr. Carr hasn't benefited by the history of our own times. For the first time in a century we are in a position to have a balanced appraisal of a very great, a very able, but a very ruthless man." E. P. Dean
N Y Times p5 Ja 18 '42 700w

CARR, SIR CECIL THOMAS. Concerning English administrative law. 189p $2 Columbia univ. press

354.42 Administrative law—Great Britain
41-7241

"The six chapters of this book reproduce six lectures delivered upon the Carpentier foundation at Columbia University in the fall of 1940. They discuss various aspects of public administration in Britain." (Pref) Contents: The eighteen-thirties and after; Delegated legislation; Crisis legislation; Administrative tribunals; The written laws; Bureaucracy. Index.

"The volume is well worth reading. It is carefully referenced and indexed." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Am Hist R 47:412 Ja '42 270w

Reviewed by C. G. Haines

Am Pol Sci R 35:974 O '41 850w

"Sir Cecil would be the first to disclaim any pretension of profundity for the lectures, just as he would be the last to reveal the difficulties of their preparation and delivery during wartime. (He and Lady Carr returned to England on the torpedoed Western Prince.) But his modesty should not be allowed to conceal the shrewd insights and homely wisdom with which they are pregnant, and which make them rewarding as well as charming reading." C. S. Ascher

+ Ann Am Acad 217:207 S '41 300w

"Much of significance in this book has not been mentioned. As its cover says, the book is 'a monument to the finest English scholarship.' It is more than that. Viewed in the setting of England, 1940, it exemplifies the moral and intellectual fibre now bulwarking our civilization." Lowell Turrentine

+ Harvard Law R 55:155 N '41 2600w

New Repub 105:29 Jl 7 '41 30w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). The case of the constant suicides. 296p $2 Harper

(W) 41-10677

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

"This volume by one of the top-notchers of bafflement belongs on your shopping list." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Je 29 '41 290w

"In 'The Case of the Constant Suicides' Mr. John Dickson Carr gives his readers not only an exciting puzzle—for why this epidemic of suicides?—but also a riotous demonstration of the demoralising effect of Scottish air, and even of Scottish whisky, on the innocent Southerner. It is indeed not always easy, in between such gusts of laughter, to remember the background of mystery and death." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '41 100w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 22:381 O 25 '41 110w

"This is a lighter opus in the John Dickson Carr listing, but it rings the changes on mystery with a lusty wit." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 260w

"This is a fine story, hilarious and well plotted."

+ New Yorker 17:64 Je 28 '41 70w

"Carr at his best."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 167:338 O 3 '41 40w

Springfd Republican p7e Jl 13 '41 350w

Time 38:72 Jl 7 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Ag 9 '41 180w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Death turns the tables. 257p $2 Harper

(W) 42-99

Detective story.

Booklist 38:190 F 1 '42

"No use talking, Dr. Gideon Fell has few if any equals in the detecting racket, as he proves once more in this case of the fatal shooting at Mr. Justice Ireton's seaside bungalow." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Ja 11 '42 480w

Reviewed by Mort Post

New Repub 106:125 Ja 26 '42 10w

"This story is not quite up to the Dr. Fell standard, but it is well worth your attention." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '42 140w

"Although not quite up to some earlier Fell feats, bulky doctor's personality carries off yarn pretty well. Diverting."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 10 '42 40w

"The solution remains improbable; which does not, however, detract from its grip on the reader's attention. However, in the end there is a gross miscarriage of British justice, for the high-placed murderer escapes the usual penalty for his crime. Someone should speak sharply to Mr Carr about this; after all, the movies and the detective story are almost the only two places left where we can expect villainy to get its come-uppance and justice to emerge triumphant. In this one respect, then, 'I do not like you Dr Fell': otherwise 'Death Turns the Tables' ranks among the author's distinguished best."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 200w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Seeing is believing. 272p $2 Morrow (W) 41-12687

Detective story.

Booklist 38:53 O 15 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"You can hardly beat this for sure-fire, all-around mystery entertainment, what with one of the author's smoothest plots and grumpy, lovable old Sir Henry rallying round. Also two pairs of sweethearts and plenty of quiet fun." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Ag '24 '41 160w

"Mr. Dickson's ingenuity in leading his readers astray is truly remarkable. All the evidence is in plain sight, if one only knows where to look for it, but not many will find it. There is one place, however, where the author slightly oversteps the bounds of what should be permitted to a writer of mystery stories. It is all explained away, to be sure, but the explanation is not quite satisfactory. Even so, no admirer of Carter Dickson and Sir Henry Merrivale will regret having read this story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '41 290w

"Very funny, and written in Mr. Dickson's usual brilliant manner."

+ New Yorker 17:68 Ag 23 '41 50w

"Ennobled sleuth's robustness memoirs vie with excellent detecting in fantastic and shrewdly tangled mixture of laughs and horror. Essential."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 30 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 130w

"Good mental exercise and robustly amusing."

+ Time 38:92 S 1 '41 40w

CARR, LOWELL JULLIARD. Delinquency control. 447p il maps $3.50 Harper 364 Juvenile delinquency 41-5070

"Dr. Carr has had long and intensive experience in the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of delinquent behavior of young persons. Out of this rich experience in research and practice he has formulated the principles that may guide parents, clinicians, and public authorities in dealing with juvenile delinquency. This book is a systematic analysis of the problem in which the emphasis is upon procedures that have worked. Although the many facets of juvenile delinquency are made concrete and vivid in terms of his own experience, the author has also oriented his procedures to the findings of numerous other authorities, as well as to the major theoretical implications of the problem." (Editor's intro) Selected bibliography. Index.

"As an advanced textbook in juvenile delinquency, a review for those who need a 'refresher', and a guide to anyone seeking practical suggestions that have vision but are not visionary, this volume should bring inspiration. To those whose primary interest is in public health it will prove doubly significant as demonstrating that the public health concept—not treatment alone but also control and prevention—applies with equal force in the field of delinquency." A. H. McCormick and W. H. Kinney

+ Am J Pub Health 32:97 Ja '42 500w

"The major weakness of the book is found in its face-value acceptance of dubious estimates, results of follow-up studies, and professed functions of delinquency-control agencies. The book is written in a very newsy attention-holding style of a sociologist who was once a newspaper man. It is by far the best all-around statement of the problem of delinquency control." W. C. Reckless

+ — Am J Soc 47:515 N '41 190w

"While Carr presents an inclusive classification of delinquents, moving from decreasing antisocial expectancy to increasing coverage . . . this classification is certainly inadequate for scientific purposes. . . . The entire discussion might have been clarified if some adequate scientific scheme for classifying delinquents had been developed and attention focused on each one in turn. Even so, this is a significant book in this field, both because of its comprehensive character and its challenge to social action. It is also a much needed one, and should prove exceedingly valuable as a textbook for undergraduate courses bearing the label of juvenile delinquency." H. W. Dunham

+ — Am Soc R 6:764 O '41 650w

"The final chapter concerning the work of the Michigan Child Guidance Institute exemplifies the objective application of Carr's thesis. It is a well-fitted close to this highly integrated and interesting volume, which is a definitely superior contribution in its field." G. K. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 217:167 S '41 450w

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

"This is by all odds one of the best—and soundest—surveys on the cause and cure of juvenile delinquency that has appeared." S. G. Kling

+ Books p16 O 5 '41 290w

School & Society 53:352 Mr 15 '41 20w

"It is fairly easy to make a study and assemble facts, but it is energy-consuming to organize these facts in a systematic and serviceable form. This more onerous task has been admirably accomplished in the field of juvenile delinquency [in this book which] has furnished the social worker a most practical guide and handbook for field use." A. D. Woodruff

+ School R 49:550 S '41 700w

"The richness of Dr. Carr's philosophy, nurtured in a convincing knowledge of literature, history, Bible, religion, and even a touch of economics, is evidenced by his practical and understandable approach to the problems of juvenile delinquency, and the natural course of events in his well-ordered mind indicate at least partially what can be done in that field by using the same methods." W. F. Bailey

+ Social Forces 20:123 O '41 800w

"The book is in a form readily adaptable for textbook purposes. To the college student it can serve as an excellent treatise on social technology with the problem of delinquency control as illustrative of method. To the social worker, psychiatrist, and educator interested in the problem of delinquency treatment, prevention, and control from an eclectic point of view, it is valuable as source material, and as an over-all consideration of the delinquency problem in the light of the best and most recent knowledge we have on the subject," John Slawson

+ Survey 77:308 O '41 700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:38 My '41

CARR, PHILIP. The English are like that. 356p $2.75 Scribner

914.2 National characteristics, English.
Great Britain—Civilization. England—
Social life and customs (W) 41-18929

Analysis of the English people, their character and institutions by an English journalist. Contents: The English character; Justice and Parliament in England; The social structure of England; Women, children and home life; Schools and universities; The press and its influence; Industry, commerce and finance; Literature, the arts and the theatre; Sport; National defence, the British empire and sea power; The men at the helm. Index.

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"Mr. Carr has given us an excellent reportage on England, coming in good time when the relationships between the United States and England are so much a matter of moment." Lawrence Fernsworth

+ Books p22 O 19 '41 900w

"The author writes in a lucid and compact style on British character, social structure, courts of justice, educational methods, sports, the press, industry, government and other factors in the national make-up. . . It is a pity that his discussion of the British Commonwealth of Nations and its self-governing members cannot be made enforced reading for those Americans and others who have swallowed Fascist and Nazi propaganda on this subject. The details concerning the press, the school and university system, the War Cabinet, and the men in command of naval, military, and air forces make exceedingly interesting reading." P. P. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 27 '41 490w

"A fine job, clear explanations, well organized. Recommended." R. S. Alvarez
+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 130w

"Mr. Carr offers us a number of facts and figures about industry, commerce, finance, national defense. . . They are well condensed and easy to assimilate, but the reader will probably not spend much time with them, for they are informed with such a stubborn conservatism that they can hardly be said to have any meaning at all. Mr. Carr is a kind of Rip Van Winkle in reverse: he seems to have gone to sleep and to have woken up twenty years ago." George Dangerfield
N Y Times p4 O 12 '41 500w

"A revealing and well-nigh complete guide to the mental background and the institutions which made the Briton what he is. . . Mr. Carr draws upon an apparently inexhaustible supply of information and a lifetime of observation."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 13 '41 600w

CARRICK, EDWARD, pseud. See Craig, E. A.

CARRICK, GERTRUDE. Consider the daisies. 365p $2.50 Lippincott

41-20886

Contemporary student life at an Eastern woman's college forms the background for this study of the development of an ordinary college girl from smug self-satisfaction into a really worthwhile person.

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"Every parent, sister or brother of a college girl will be delighted by Gertrude Carrick's sharp, idiomatic picture of Vassar. She catches the girls' speech so unflinchingly, she creates such a full background, there are so many familiar things brought into her story." Anne Brooks

+ Books p10 O 19 '41 550w

"Practically every college generation produces its spokesman and in 'Consider the Daisies' Miss Carrick speaks familiarly, and on the whole quite ably, for her own. Not far enough removed in time from the campus to have forgotten any of the multitudinous details concerning the besweated and hair-ribboned array of undergraduates, she has not achieved a satire, but she tinctures her recreation of bright college years with a refreshing dose of irony. . . It is honest and unsensational, and based on a sharp-eyed and humorous observation which would be an asset to many a more experienced writer." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p7 O 26 '41 500w

"This is that rare and difficult achievement, a really good college novel. Miss Carrick has caught the quality of those palpitant years when the campus is the world, and life and work and friendship are narrowed to a poignancy which later experience never recaptures to the same degree." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:30 O 18 '41 400w

"'Consider the Daisies' in spite of its stylish and foolish title, is an honest and likable story. . . Unfortunately, though the heroine possesses a definite credible personality, her intimate associates do not. They are vague and frequently puzzling, manipulated as foils for the central character. They seem given this aptitude or that reaction at random, or their share in a given situation is neglected to the point of irritation and confusion. This confusion is encouraged by the style. Yet even within its imposed limits, the writing is too frequently inexact and careless. These two weaknesses mar an otherwise very readable tale." Gay Stebbins

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 360w

CARRIER, WILLIS HAVILAND; CHERNE, REALTO E., and GRANT, WALTER A. Modern air conditioning, heating and ventilating. 547p il $4.50 Pitman

628.8 Air conditioning. Heating. Ventilation 41-1448

"This book is designed to apply existing theory to actual practice in the industry. It is not intended to supplant texts on the physics and thermodynamics of air conditioning, but rather to complement them—to lead the student into the channels of thought which are the prime interest of those intimately connected with the industry. It has been the purpose of the authors to present the material in such manner that not only will it be useful to the scientifically minded but also that men of limited technical training may grasp the essential principles and practices of the art. Much of the material has been used by the authors and their business associates in the schools conducted by the Carrier Corporation for training technical graduates for application engineering assignments." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:320 Mr 15 '41

"To those who can use the information, the book should prove of substantial value, but that audience is limited. Its usefulness to others is likely to be small."

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:598 My 25 '41 400w

"Before reading this long-heralded contribution from the pen of Dr. Carrier and his collaborators, the reviewer seriously questioned the need for still another book on air conditioning. Therefore it is a pleasure to report that this is not 'just another book', on the subject. It is definitely superior to the earlier literature, filling in many gaps from the extensive experience of the authors' company. . . Naturally, a book aimed primarily at the heating, ventilating and air conditioning profession, leaves something to be desired from the standpoint of the chemical engineer. . . Still, from the standpoint of use of the new book, these comments are obviously minor. For the mass of hitherto unavailable information included, Dr. Carrier and his collaborators deserve the thanks of all engineers, a great many of whom will find this important work a decidedly valuable addition to their libraries." T. R. Olive

+ — Chem & Met Eng 48:163 Je '41 450w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:3 Ja '41
Pratt p11 D '41

CARRINGTON, PHILIP, bp. The primitive Christian catechism; a study in the Epistles. 96p $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge] 227 Bible. New Testament. Epistles [40-29542]

"In chapters entitled 'Tōrah in Israel,' 'Proselyte Baptism' and 'I Peter and Parallels' the writer gives a sketch of the Jewish handling of proselytes, its possible influence on Christian method in dealing with Gentile converts and the possible growth of a body of 'traditional catechetical material.' . . . Under the title 'The Social Religious Unit,' the indebtedness to Judaism is then extended to the supposed development of a tannaite system in the Christian Ecclesia. After consideration of the features of the selected epistles which are deemed specially significant and the classes of persons to whom they were addressed a sketch is attempted of 'The Reception of the Word.' Three appendices deal with 'Pliny's Letter,' 'The Colossian Catechism,' and 'The Matthaean Sermon on the Mount.'" Times [London] Lit Sup

"This is a very difficult book to read. And specialists will certainly feel that far too sweeping corollaries are deduced from the theorem." B. S. E.

Churchman 155:34 Ap 15 '41 120w

"The main lines of the theory have been set forth with admirable conciseness, and New Testament students will certainly find the time spent in going over the ground again in the author's company to have been amply repaid. Whether they are inclined to the same conclusion in the handling of points of detail or not, the line of approach and the method of treatment are alike stimulating and full of interesting suggestions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p564 N 9 '40 330w

CARROLL, MRS ELEANOR (ELLIOTT). Dark Entry. 318p $2 Penn 40-35536

Romantic story of the modern South. Dark Entry, a large and prosperous plantation, should have gone to Wayne Laurens, who had spent years building it up. But his uncle died intestate, so Dark Entry went to a young girl, a distant relative. A mischievous pet monkey was the means of bringing the situation to a happy conclusion.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 90w

CARROLL, HERBERT ALLEN. Genius in the making. 307p $2.75 McGraw 136.765 Children, Gifted. Genius. Child study 40-12647

Study of the characteristics of intellectually gifted children. It is "primarily concerned with a psychological description and interpretation of mental superiority." (Pref) Contents: Identification of intellectually gifted children; Racial and family background; The role of environment; Physique and health; Social characteristics; Mental characteristics and achievements; Constancy of mental development; Determiners of eminence; Special gifts; Educational adjustments; Biography of a typical gifted child. Selected bibliography. Index.

"This volume presents a somewhat uneven report on the materials available in a dozen books. . . . Workers in other fields who need a quick survey of what is known about the gifted child will be helped by this book. Similarly it may serve as a first approach for students in teacher training. For the advanced student in any field it has nothing to offer." G. D. Stoddard

+ — El School J 41:315 D '40 700w

Nature 148:605 N 22 '41 360w

School & Society 52:64 Jl 27 '40 20w

CARROLL, MRS MARY (TARVER). The man who would not wait. 224p il $2 Longmans B or 92 Burr, Aaron—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51889

A full-length biography of Aaron Burr for young readers. Short bibliography.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"It is hard enough to make a thoroughly attractive biography for the teens that makes a character like this convincing, yet leaves it, in its own hard way, touching and even a little lovable. It will be remembered when the outlines of many a biography easier to write will have faded." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 28 '41 410w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:380 D '41 120w

"A sympathetic biography written in lively story form by one who believes in Burr's talents and abilities while recognizing his great faults." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:359 S '41 90w

"It is written in an unassuming style, simple enough to satisfy the curiosity of children of eleven to fourteen, who get just a glimpse of this strange, brilliant though unprincipled figure in their history books. In presenting a picture of the many-sided Burr—the impatient and impulsive young Revolutionary soldier, the devoted father of Theodosia, the man of public affairs and his thwarted ambition—the author will have helped many to a better understanding of the man." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 80w

"Burr is a character of no great proportions, but this well balanced portrait shows the author's sympathy for him." I. S.

N Y Times p35 N 2 '41 160w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 3 '41 40w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 10w

"Mrs Carroll presents the facts about this much disputed character and leaves her readers to evaluate for themselves the subject. Of all the eminent figures of our colonial period, perhaps none presents such a diversity of traits and chameleon-like personality than does Burr."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 220w

Wis Lib Bul 37:205 D '41

CARROLL, ROBERT SPROUL. What price alcohol? 362p $3 Macmillan 41-4725 616.861 Alcoholism

"A practical discussion of the causes and treatment of alcoholism." (Subtitle) The author, who has had many years' experience as a doctor with alcoholics, reaches the conclusion that alcohol is advantageous to none, and on those who are neurotics or under nervous strain, its effects are more than likely to be disastrous. Index.

"Unfortunately, the satisfactory portion of this book is interspersed with statements of discarded beliefs and inadequately supported hypotheses." E. A. Strecker

Ann Am Acad 217:225 S '41 320w

Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

"This is a new and, it must be admitted impressive kind of temperance propaganda. There is none of the old-fashioned concern for the poor working man and his family as helpless victims of the saloon, no pseudo-

CARROLL, R. S.—Continued

scientific variations upon the theme of hob-nailed liver and delirium-tremens. Most of it should not be called propaganda, indeed, for usually both sides of the question at issue are given; but in the end the author is found taking his stand unequivocally against alcohol, the liquor trade, and every form and manner of indulgence, and he would obviously welcome some kind of prohibition which was free from the glaring drawbacks of the Noble Experiment." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p18 Ap 6 '41 550w

Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 150w

Churchman 155:34 O 15 '41 80w

J Home Econ 33:409 Je '41 130w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 4 '41 600w

"Here is a thought-provoking book which should command the attention of all who take issue on this controversial subject. . . The numerous case histories are illuminating and revealing of the methods Dr. Carroll evidently has applied so successfully to helping alcoholics return to effective living." C. H. Durfee

+ Survey 77:311 O '41 400w

CARSON, MRS JULIA MARGARET (HICKS). Elbow House; decorations by Elizabeth Tyler Wolcott. 128p $1.50 Longmans

41-17578

Combination mystery and buried-treasure tale for older girls. Penelope, aged fifteen, is left with heavy responsibilities while her mother is in Nova Scotia gathering material for a book, and her older sister is teaching in a summer camp. Penelope has to care for an aged great-aunt, watch the two old servants, try to sell the beloved pre-Revolutionary home, and make cakes for a nearby tea-room. The mystery is solved, and the treasure found simultaneously.

"It is good to find so wholesome a variant of the buried-treasure story for girls." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 20 '41 240w

"One or two interesting personalities and a pleasing, unaffected style partly redeem a hackneyed plot in this novel. . . Not necessary, but acceptable where clean, light fiction with a mystery is wanted. The thinness of the volume will tempt younger girls than those of fourteen to twenty, for whom it is suitable." Maude Adams

+ — Library J 66:910 O 15 '41 190w

Reviewed by M. M. Clark

Library J 66:910 O 15 '41 120w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41

Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 100w

CARSON, RACHEL LOUISE. Under the sea-wind; il. by Howard Frech. 316p $3 Simon & Schuster

591.92 Marine biology (W) 41-22771

This book contains a series of "descriptive narratives unfolding successively the life of the shore, the open sea, and the sea bottom." The first section: Edge of the sea, describes the life of a portion of North Carolina's sea coast; part two, The gull's way, deals with the life of the open sea and specifically with the life history of a mackerel. In part three the author follows the life course of an eel from coastal river to deep sea bottom.

Booklist 38:108 D 1 '41

"Miss Carson's unemotional handling of her subject matter is anything but dull. There is drama in every sentence. She rouses our interest in this ocean world and we want to watch it." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p5 D 14 '41 850w

"It is perhaps the outstanding feature of Miss Carson's work that she never sends her reader's attention to one creature alone. Howard Frech's eight full-page illustrations are also beautiful and telling: sheer beauty in the flight of the snow geese, brooding drama in the Arctic landscape, excitement as a lone fish escapes the hawk's plunge and portent again as the hideous angler fish waits in hiding for its prey. There are informative drawings, too, in the good forty-page glossary. 'Under the Sea-Wind' is a selection of the Scientific Book Club; it promises its readers the gratification alike of knowledge and of sound enjoyment."

+ N Y Times p10 N 23 '41 480w

New Yorker 17:111 N 15 '41 40w

"I have thoroughly enjoyed every word of the volume, but I found difficulty in trying to read it aloud. The plethora of facts occasionally smothers the smoothness of diction, and distracts the attention from the word picture itself. . . This is not captious criticism, but an appeal for more simple words, fewer terms of physical and faunal geography, and a greater leisureliness in description in the author's second volume. Miss Carson's science cannot be questioned; I have been unable to detect a single error." William Beebe

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 D 27 '41 500w

"Not since the publication of 'Salar the Salmon' has there been a volume so replete with information about sea-life as this book by Rachel Carson. . . In the three parts of the book, Miss Carson employs the device of weaving her story around certain individual creatures, although so many other animal 'personages' appear that a paradoxical sense of orderly confusion is conveyed. Here is the darting, swooping, preying struggle that has been going on for untold centuries. . . There is poetry here, but no false sentimentality. . . There is ruthlessness as well as beauty in nature, as depicted here by a zoologist of experience, who, since 1936, has been a member of the staff of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, now part of the Fish and Wildlife Service." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 O '41 800w

"A number of simple but effective sketches greatly enhance the value of 'Under the Sea-Wind.' The main defect, if it may be called that, about the Carson work is in the presence of a glossary. One feels, somehow, that the material concerning the life habits of marine plants and animals might to better purpose have been interpolated within the main body of text. One must stand indebted to Miss Carson, however, for having opened the eyes of her readers sufficiently to want to study further the fish, birds and small animals of our coastal shores and waters and to develop a finer appreciation and understanding of these before vacationing in 1942." Clifford Moore

+ Springf'd Republican p12 N 18 '41 700w

CARTER, ALBERT E. The battle of South America; with sketches by the author. 332p $2.75 Bobbs

980 South America. World war, 1939—South America. U.S.—Relations (general) with South America. South America—Relations (general) with the U.S. 41-23732

A survey of South America's geography, racial groupings, and past history, precedes the author's discussion of present and past economic and political relationships between the South American countries and the United States and European countries. Index.

"Mr. Carter steers clear of the wilder sensational type of reporting on the southern part of the American hemisphere and ends his survey with a variety of suggestions as to how we might strengthen our bonds with our Southern neighbors." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic D '41 280w

"The war is on for South America. Germans and British and Americans are fighting there, it is high time we turn our eyes south. So argues Mr. Carter, who took time off from his newspapering and lived with the Latin Americans for a couple of years. He learned to speak Spanish acceptably, traveled leisurely and widely and met a good many people other than bartenders, prime ministers and professional friends of the United States. His report, written with a modesty which assumes no vast knowledge, shows that he stayed by South America long enough so that he feels it, smells it, tastes it. This puts Mr. Carter in a different category from the flock of commentators who take their swift swing around the circle and paste together a book out of newspaper clippings and the columns of "The Encyclopedia Britannica." Hubert Herring

+ Books p34 N 2 '41 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

"Recommended as informative and interesting for the reader just beginning to study South America." Emily Garnett

+ Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by Karl Loewenstein

Nation 154:44 Ja 10 '42 240w

Reviewed by K. C. Rodell

Sat R of Lit 24:10 D 20 '41 500w

CARTER, ERNESTINE, ed. Bloody but unbowed; pictures of Britain under fire; pref. by Edward R. Murrow; phot. by Lee Miller and others [Eng title: Grim glory]. 109p $1 Scribner [pa 3s 6d Lund]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. Photographic books [A41-4105]

Photographs of typical scenes in London and other parts of England in the present war, with short descriptive captions and paragraphs. The book is the work of an American photographer and his wife.

Reviewed by John Piper

Spec 167:38 J1 11 '41 80w

"This book is dedicated to the Prime Minister, and something of his splendid rhetoric has passed into its phrases. . . . There is grim beauty in some of the photographs, most of all in the photographs of St. Paul's, which, by a strange irony, looks in them so high and serene above the smoke and ruin as to be beyond reach of the destruction that has fallen on the things of the earth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p223 My 10 '41 280w

CARTER, PHYLLIS ANN, pseud. See Eberle, I.

CARTWRIGHT, FRANK THOMAS. Life has no ceiling. 151p $1; pa 50c Missionary educ. movement

B or 92 Cheng, James Tsumu. Cheng, Dorothy (Lee) (Mrs James Tsumu Cheng)

"A simple, touching account of an orphaned Chinese boy and an unwanted girl who through tenacity and perseverance have risen high in their native land, one becoming physician to Chiang Kai-Shek and the other prominent in missionary work." Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 30w

"This is a 'missionary book' of a new and moving sort."

+ Christian Century 57:1555 D 11 '40 40w

CARY, PAGE. Melinda's hat; pictures by [the author]. 28p $1.50 Harper

41-14548

Story for seven and eight year old girls about a little American tomboy of the early nineteen hundreds. Melinda longed for a pen-knife, but her parents could not seem to grasp the idea. They gave her an overwhelming Easter hat, instead. But when the hat was admired by a poor little friend, Melinda made a realistic change.

"A highly amusing little picture-book which happily evades any moral whatsoever. Little girls of 7 and 8 who are just becoming clothes-conscious and who are at the same time curious about their mother's childhood will learn a good deal about that scarcely conceivable time from the bright and vigorous pictures which are full of mirth-provoking details. This is an original story which will doubtless provoke some interesting reminiscences for the edification of the young." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 O 19 '41 220w

"A brief story which has freshness and vigor in both its text and its forthright pictures in bright color; good reading for harum-scarum young ladies who don't yet want to tackle long books."

+ New Yorker 17:141 D 6 '41 30w

CASE, ROBERT ORMOND. West of Barter river. 272p $2 Doubleday

41-8078

"Here we have love, hate and money at stake in the Alaskan wastes, with Glenn Connolly as hero. . . . A mean ship's captain, his half-breed gunmen, a remittance man and a rich platinum deposit near Ikkipuk figure in the lively doings." Books

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 25 '41 80w

CASE, SHIRLEY JACKSON. Christianity in a changing world. 204p $2 Harper

261 Christianity. Church history

(W) 41-13129

An answer in the affirmative to the question: Can Christianity survive the calamities that have befallen the modern world? The book contains the substance of lectures delivered before an assembly of Congregational-Christian ministers at Daytona Beach, during October, 1940. Index.

Booklist 38:45 O 15 '41

Bookmark 2:5 N '41

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p14 S 28 '41 240w

"To those who know Dean Case's writings, it will be sufficient to say that he never wielded his great erudition with more ease, or brought it more effectively to bear upon the living interests of men." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:1410 N 12 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 155:22 O 1 '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"This is a book that will not only inspire confidence but will also give birth to new impulses of dynamic, practical activity on the part of Christians." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 19:68 Ja '42 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Nixon

J Religion 22:113 Ja '42 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:173 N '41

CASE, MRS VIRGINIA (SMITH). Your personality—introvert or extravert? 277p $2.50 Macmillan

137.45 Personality

41-16451

Study of personality differences in the extravert and introvert, based on Jung's theory of psychological types. Describes the reactions of both types to everyday life, friendships, and marriage. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

"Despite the failure to prove the existence of real psychological types, the author has succeeded in throwing some additional light on the nature of personality. In declaring that a trait of character does not exist apart from the total situation which evokes it, that the individual self is an excerpt from a psychological network or continuum, that mental abnormality may be a retreat from either subjective or objective reality, and that marriage is a psychological synergism, she has indeed shown penetrating insight. Nor are these the only statements worthy of further consideration. The treatment of 'rapport' and 'incorporation,' even though we consider the words themselves unnecessary, is very suggestive. Certainly Miss Case, who claims herself to be an extravert, does full justice to introversion. Perhaps in doing so she has prevented the overemphasis on extraversion which practicing psychologists are in danger of making." T. C. Johnson

CASE, VIRGINIA—Continued

+ Christian Century 58:1442 N 19 '41 650w
 "The reader will find the book useful in knowing people and adapting to them unless he overuses its descriptions and attempts to catalogue each individual as an introvert or extravert and to deal with him according to one or the other scheme of automatic behavior. Individualism is too intricate not to spill over whenever one attempts to force it into any conceptual mold. The author does not encourage this distortion of Jung's contribution. Such exaggeration is merely a liability of any well written book which seeks to distribute to the general reader values of mental hygiene. Your Personality deserves a wide reading. It is understanding, interesting and practical." E. R. Groves

+ Social Forces 20:284 D '41 250w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. I can't forget. 399p $3 Bobbs

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 41-23343

As foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News the author saw the battlefronts of the war during the early months of the "phony" war, and later under the blitzkrieg in Belgium, France and England. His book is largely anecdotal in style with frequent touches of humor and dry irony.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
 Atlantic D '41 280w

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"This is considerably more than an adventure book. Mr. Casey has the eye for the significant details of the reportorial life, meaning for the humor and heartbreak of countless hours waiting in anterooms, or arguing with police and censors. His eye and mind are as sensitive to women as to men, and some of his French and London chapters have the war's most vivid pictures of personalities on the home front." J. B. Phillips

+ Books p16 N 16 '41 750w

"Persons who have met Mr. Casey know that he talks as he writes, in a style that possesses unique, unvarying interest. To read these true stories—true, that is, in the journalistic sense—is the next best thing to visiting the spots which the author visited and it is immeasurably safer."

+ Cath World 154:508 Ja '42 130w

"All in all, this book is what any young student in journalism could study with profit. It shows what a man can do with the day-by-day material, the little conversations, the minor human contacts, as well as with the great tragedies and heartbreaks of a world struggle. There is nothing pontifical about it. It is just a good reporter talking." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p4 N 16 '41 1400w

"The author's cool reportorial gall and the rather grim pity and humor of his observations are almost equally striking. A dramatic job."

+ New Yorker 17:134 D 6 '41 50w

"If I were asked to name the most competent craftsman in the field of foreign correspondence, my unhesitating choice would be that amiable, redoubtable Irishman, Robert J. Casey, of the Chicago Daily News, whose 'I Can't Forget' makes the first sixteen months of this war equally unforgettable to us. 'The trouble with a book like this,' says Casey, in abruptly concluding his magnificently written personal narrative, 'is that there's never any end to it.' I say—and I am firmly convinced that every reader of it will agree—that the trouble with 'I Can't Forget' is that there is an end to it." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 1 '41 800w

CASH, WILBUR JOSEPH. The mind of the South. 444p $3.75 Knopf

975 South—Civilization. South—Social conditions (W) 41-1848

A critical analysis of the social background, temperament and characteristic ways of the Southerner, the reasons why they have survived changing social conditions and the probable course of their evolution in the future. Index.

"Mr. Cash has written a brave and critical book about the South which deserves a wide circle of readers, including the effective political and social leaders of the South today." Clement Eaton

+ Am Hist R 47:374 Ja '42 850w

"These 400-odd brilliant pages by a Southern journalist possess the power to make understanding flourish and triumph in one of the areas where bigotry and misunderstanding have been the norm for a century. The book is a literary and a moral miracle." W. F.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 330w

Booklist 37:322 Mr 15 '41

"This is an interesting and courageous piece of regional analysis, and one which is apt to bring down oburgations from reactionary Southerners upon the author's head. . . This is no one-sided and ill-balanced attack on the South, or on any group of Southerners. . . Mr. Cash is at his best in the latter half of the book. The South of the late nineteenth and the twentieth centuries seems to interest him more acutely than that of the antebellum period, and he is more effective in analyzing the contemporary Southern mind than in dealing with that of a century ago. The book's rather tedious pace is stepped up in the last couple of hundred pages, and the reader is swept along at an accelerated tempo!" Virginia Dabney

+ Books p3 F 9 '41 440w

Reviewed by G. K. Smart
 Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 23 '41 450w

"The book will have an honored place in the growing literature of the South. In fact, the candor, forthrightness and energy of the author make it easily one of the most revealing books we have yet had on any region in America." W. J. Gold

+ Current Hist & Forum 53:4 Je '41 480w

"The picture of the South which is given is realistic rather than romantic. Some statements will make Southerners squirm and others will make Northerners writhe, but the honest intent of the author cannot be questioned. An interesting parallel of the mind of the South after Appomattox and of Germany after Versailles is drawn. Of value as an important sectional study of our national background." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 140w

"As a Southerner himself Mr. Cash deprecates plain-speaking and takes his time to convey a conclusion. In the matter of style he often carries individualism to the point of quaintness, and rhetoric to the point of Carlylese. But these are minor blemishes of a thoughtful and knowledgeable book." James Orrick

+ Nation 152:414 Ap 5 '41 950w

"Lovers of the South and haters of the South alike are pretty sure to be outraged by Mr. Cash's analysis of the region—which is good reason to believe that it is not far from the truth. It is a reflective book, which will disgust the materialists; but its conclusions are based on careful and clear-eyed observation, which will disgust the idealists. In short, there is no reason why anyone should like the book except those who are more interested in knowing what the South is really like than in reinforcing any pre-conceived opinion about it." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 104:673 My 12 '41 700w

"Mr. Cash, a loyal son but an acute and discerning critic, expounds the thesis with convincing scholarship in his highly readable and illuminating book, 'The Mind of the South.'" C. L. Snyder

+ N Y Times p4 F 23 '41 1250w

"The complex psychological and cultural history of the South in a beautifully written, often profound interpretation by a North Carolina newspaper editor. Probably the most readable and penetrating general treatment of the subject we've had."

+ New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 30w

Pratt p13 autumn '41

"Mr. Cash's undertaking has been one of great courage. His book merits wide reading and is a notable contribution to the steadily growing literature of the subject." D. L. Cohn

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 F 22 '41 2900w

Spring'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 1000w

"The Mind of the South is not an 'authoritative' book. It is laden rather with personal intelligence than with documented information. It is by no means complete; the whole ugly and fascinating complex of problems surrounding the Negro, for example, is never examined head-on. But Cash is honest, temperate, eloquent and kind, and he is definitely in command of his subject. Anything written about the South, henceforth must start where he leaves off."

+ — Time 37:98 F 24 '41 950w

Reviewed by G. F. Milton

Yale R n s 30:831 summer '41 500w

CASIMIR, HENDRIK BRUGT GERHARD. Magnetism and very low temperatures. 93p pa $1.40 Macmillan [pa 6s Cambridge]

536.5 Low temperature research. Magnetism 41-7627

"[This tract] reviews the methods of producing and results of adiabatic temperature changes obtained by demagnetization processes with paramagnetic salts at very low temperatures. It includes a valuable theoretical discussion of the behaviour of paramagnetic ions with special reference to the Lorentz and Onsager fields, and a short account of the theoretical aspects of relaxation phenomena in paramagnetics." Nature

"We are glad to recommend the book as an excellent introduction to the subject of magnetism at low temperatures." W. F. Giaque

+ Am Chem Soc J 62:2569 S '40 250w

Nature 147:728 Je 14 '41 70w

"It is very well written and should stimulate research in magnetism at low temperatures. The logical treatment of the subject is especially noteworthy." F. G. Brickwedde

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:324 O '40 550w

CASSOU, JEAN. Picasso. See Picasso, P.

CASTIGLIONI, ARTURO. A history of medicine; tr. from the Italian and ed. by E. B. Krumbhaar. 1053p il $8.50 Knopf

610.9 Medicine—History 41-2602

History of the whole field of medical theory and practise from its earliest beginnings to the present. The book "was first published in Milan in 1927 and immediately won recognition as a leading treatise in its field. The volume was later translated into French, Spanish and German. It has now appeared for the first time in English, in a splendid up-to-date version by Dr. E. B. Krumbhaar of the University of Pennsylvania. . . . Until recently Dr. Castiglioni was Professor of the History of Medicine at Padua. . . . He is now connected with Yale." (N Y Times) Copiously illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

"Castiglioni is a brilliant writer. The translation from the Italian, made by Professor Krumbhaar, renders the crispness and luminosity of the original as faithfully as our more prosaic English will permit. The book is copiously illustrated. This work, then, is highly recommended to physicians and public health workers." Iago Galdston

+ Am J Pub Health 31:748 Jl '41 600w

"The book is all-inclusive, with the broadest grasp of literature, philosophy and science. It is a great piece of work well done." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p4 Ap 6 '41 1050w

"Castiglioni's monumental history . . . will take its place on the reference shelves alongside Fielding Garrison's history as one of the major sourcebooks in the field. If the Castiglioni text is stiffer and less readable than Garrison's, the thoroughness of the scholarship—especially apparent in the pre-modern period—is ample compensation." H. M. Davis

+ New Repub 104:767 Je 2 '41 130w

"The book is broad in scope, authoritative in detail and handsome in format. It will be sought avidly by a large group of physicians, scholars, historians and general readers." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 27 '41 1250w

Pratt p21 spring '41

CATTELL, JAMES MCKEEN; CATTELL, JAMES, and ROSS, EDNA ELIZABETH, eds. Leaders in education; a biographical directory. 2d ed 1134p $12 Science press

923.7 Educators. Teachers 41-8346

"There are over 17,000 names given in the new edition of Leaders in Education. The aim of the publication is to list, in a single biographical directory, educational workers who are outstanding in their respective fields. In format and in kind of information given the volume is similar to the first edition, edited by J. McKeen Cattell, which was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1932 [under title in Book Review Digest, 1934]. Being a directory the information is condensed and relates to the educational career. . . . There are over 6000 more entries in the second edition than in the first, but there are still unexpected omissions." Subscription Bks Bul

School & Society 53:520 Ap 19 '41 60w

"The volume is well printed on good paper. Leaders in Education is recommended for public libraries and educational libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:44 Jl '41 310w

CAVAN, ROMILLY, pseud. Beneath the visiting moon. 376p $2.50 Coward-McCann [9s 6d Heinemann]

41-21539

The Fontaynes, an upper-class English family, are faced with the dreadful prospect of selling their beloved family estate, because the death of Mr Fontayne had left them almost penniless. Gentle Elisabeth Fontayne, harrassed by bills, and wanting the best for her gay youngsters, makes a second marriage with a man not much better off than she, and thereby adds two more obstreperous children to the quota at Fontayne. Sarah, aged seventeen, falls hopelessly in love with a diplomat twice her age, and adds to her mother's trials. The story comes to an end on the eve of the second World war.

"Miss Cavan's settings and the close-woven warp and woof of English life which supports her pattern are entirely and undilutedly captivating. 'Beneath the Visiting Moon' is an exquisitely wrought and lovely pendant from the past to hang about the neck of the distressing present—a sort of talisman to remind us that underneath the debris of war, the kindly, amiable impulses of human nature still persist." F. H. Bullock

CAVAN, ROMILLY—Continued

+ Books p16 O 26 '41 480w

"The setting has a sleepy charm, and there are some entertaining children and servants." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p2 S 6 '40 90w

"Quite apart from wartime implications, what a delightful little world it is Miss Cavan has created and how truly representative of the time and the circumstances! One does not know whether to admire more the skill with which the story is told from the adolescent viewpoint or the sly quietness with which the elders' share in the cosmos is revealed. . . Miss Cavan's treatment of Sarah's young arrogance is along lines of first-rate comedy. She deserves all our thanks for an escape book so packed with wit." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p16 O 12 '41 850w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith

Spec 165:152 Ag 9 '40 500w

"Miss Cavan plumbs no depths in this new novel of hers, but skims the surface of a sea of adolescent joys and troubles with bright feminine grace and to clever and amusing effect. . . The story has little of the pretentiousness of Miss Cavan's previous novel and is an altogether better piece of work. A certain artificiality of phrase and a too striving cleverness are still in evidence, and there are passages in the middle of the book of a too protracted humour or of overdone satire. . . But this is clearly the sort of novel that brings out what is most attractive in Miss Cavan's talent."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Ag 3 '40 390w

CAVANA, FRANCES. Louis of New Orleans;

il. by Leonard Weisgard. 36p $1 McKay

41-10778

The story of a frightened little orphan boy, who went to live with a very dignified grandfather in New Orleans. It was the gay Mardi gras which helped to smooth out his difficulties. For ages seven to ten.

"There is more than one reason to connect this pretty book with 'Lottie's Valentine,' a find of the spring season. Its scene is New Orleans, its typography and illustrations are of the most distinguished, and the brief story carries child-like emotion. The color scheme, however, is different: the Valentine book was misty and soft, and this tale, as befits the season of Mardi Gras, is brilliant in color and full of gay little figures like those in a toy theater. . . Leonard Weisgard's distinctive style as an illustrator could not be bettered for this purpose." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 13 '41 230w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 20w

"Recommended for children from six to nine." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:619 J1 '41 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p9 J1 6 '41 240w

CAWLEY, ROBERT RALSTON. Unpathed waters; studies in the influence of the voyagers on Elizabethan literature. 285p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. Voyages and travels 40-36135

Studies of the heritage bequeathed by the ancient world and the middle ages to renaissance literature. It includes a study of maps and their importance; of the spirit which inspired the voyages; and characteristic uses of the voyages in the works of Robert Greene, Thomas Dekker, Beaumont and Fletcher, Thomas Heywood, Shakespeare, Bacon, and Davenant. Bibliography. Index.

"The author must have turned over many books and have gradually accumulated a mass of somewhat heterogeneous material. We have occasion to admire his organization of the subject matter of his book. . . Unpathed Waters has, shall we say, the general learned reader in mind. The book is scholarly and has this scholarly merit, not a minor one, as part of its conservatism. It shows that knowledge of travel and exploration was available in many places, not in one place only, as older scholars and source hunters were too prone to think." Hardin Craig

+ Am Hist R 46:893 J1 '41 700w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Books p11 Ja 5 '41 480w

CECIL, EDGAR ALGERNON ROBERT GASCOYNE-CECIL, viscount. A great experiment; an autobiography. 390p il $3.50 Oxford [16s Cape, J]

B or 92 League of nations 41-8249

After an introductory chapter in which Lord Cecil reviews his childhood, education and early career up to the time of the first World war, this work is almost entirely devoted to the League of Nations, considered in four chapters: The making of the League, Early years, Downhill, and Conclusions. Index.

"Now, while the bombs fall, while the victims pay for their gullibility, while overwrought ministers shoot themselves and intriguers collect their rewards, Viscount Cecil with his life work in ruins, dares to affirm his faith in humanity. It is the greatest, as it is also probably the last, of his contributions to the cause of human brotherhood." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Books p7 My 11 '41 1150w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 58:1079 S 3 '41 1300w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '41 330w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Lynskey

Commonweal 34:451 Ag 29 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:374 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

New Repub 105:262 Ag 25 '41 600w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

New Statesman & Nation 21:162 F 15 '41 1700w

"The tale is told as autobiography, and it comes as a surprise. Cecil has never been an expert on publicity. He says things that are true—not things that are quoted. He is dealing with treaties, compromises, discussions, many of which, even at the time, became wearisome. Yet the narrative—pleasantly pedestrian—is entirely readable. It is just a stroll, step by step, along the path of life with a venerable companion who is happy within himself, having done his best, and refuses to be hurried. He does not argue—he does not reiterate—he tells what happened and so proceeds." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 27 '41 2150w

Pratt p5 D '41

"It is perhaps unfair to suggest that this book contains too much League and too little Cecil, for that is the intention of its self-effacing author. . . One wishes, however, that Cecil had given a fuller and franker description of men and events, and had revealed more of the conflict over policy in both Cabinet and Parliament during the twenty years between wars. With rare exceptions. . . he is almost too gentlemanly in refraining from judgments on his contemporaries." J. F. Green

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 My 10 '41 600w

"Lord Cecil is one of the great figures of our time. He has a remarkable faculty for inspiring admiration and devotion in his friends, and deserving it. To them, I suggest again, he owes it to treat this book as a first instalment, and give them, and the world, as a second those personal memories to which they may claim to be justly entitled." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 166:120 Ja 31 '41 1450w

"Viscount Cecil's work is as good a general account as could be desired of the League's achievements and errors. Moreover, it is heartening to find a writer who can discuss in such a forthright manner the mistakes as well as the merits of an effort to which he has so completely devoted his life." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 2 '41 600w

"Throughout most of the events he describes Lord Cecil, in Whitehall or at Geneva, has been personally responsible for either the formulation or the representation of his country's policy at Geneva—the two functions being, unhappily, too often in conflict. The story he has to tell, modestly as he tells it, is one of noble loyalty to a great ideal, baffled at last by the absence of any comparable single-mindedness in others, and by the fluctuations of policy inseparable from party government."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p56 F 1 '41 1850w

CECIL, HENRY L., and HEAPS, WILLARD ALLISON. School library service in the United States; an interpretative survey. 334p $2.75 Wilson, H.W.

027.82 School libraries (W) 41-51561

"For the purpose of the present study, the term 'school library service' is defined as the function of providing a school system with reading materials other than school texts, under the direction and stimulation of trained librarians or teacher-librarians, . . . The purpose of this volume is threefold: 1. To interpret to the school administrator and student of school library development the importance and place of school library service in our educational program today. 2. To trace its growth and educational significance from the earliest school library consisting of a single shelf of books, to the broad concept of service which the school library of today implies. 3. To describe and analyze forms of administration and participation in the establishment and maintenance of school library service today." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:286 Mr 1 '41

"When a librarian writes about libraries for school administrators, he rarely succeeds in getting beyond the library profession. But when a school superintendent collaborates with a librarian, as in the present case, several things are bound to happen. First, there will be a minimum of technical library terminology. Second, more attention will be paid to the ends than to the means. Third, objectivity in appraisal of present practices and conditions will be more likely. All three of these things have happened in this meaty monograph." Louis Shores

+ Library J 66:168 F 15 '41 1100w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

School & Society 52:704 D 28 '40 100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

CENTENO, AUGUSTO, ed. The intent of the artist, by Sherwood Anderson [and others] with an introduction, 162p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

701 Creation (literary, artistic, etc.) Imagination 41-13613

Four experts in as many professions discuss their respective callings and the basic problems of each of them. Contents: Man and his imagination, by Sherwood Anderson; Some thoughts on playwriting, by Thornton Wilder; The composer and his message, by Roger Sessions; These documents called buildings, by William Lescaze. Contains an introduction on The Intent of the Artist, by Augusto Centeno.

"Mr. Centeno has coined another word for a distinction originally emphasized by T. S. Eliot. A work possessing cultural value, but which is neither interesting nor uninteresting, he calls extereesting. He has written a very extereesting essay on the intent of the artist." Mario Collaci

Books p12 Jl 6 '41 480w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 12 '41 550w

"The symposium's rather curious mixture of the popular and technical approach to aesthetics may limit its reader appeal." R. H. McDonough

Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 120w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Nation 153:185 Ag 30 '41 430w

Reviewed by Justus Buchler

N Y Times p27 S 28 '41 1100w

"Music lays hand on time to order it in terms of the movements of man's inner being, reproducing them 'far more directly than is possible through any other medium'. The novelist is less sectarian, on the whole. But it remains for the architect . . . to encompass in his description of the builder's way of working an admirable composite of the artist mind." George Beiswanger

+ Theatre Arts 25:553 Jl '41 500w

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. Three famous murder novels; complete and unabridged in one volume. 660p $1.98 Randon house

41-13491

Omnibus volume, containing Before the Fact, by Francis Iles; Trent's Last Case, by E. C. Bentley; and The House of the Arrow, by A. E. W. Mason. Contains a foreword by Bennett Cerf, who made the selection.

Booklist 38:16 S '41

Books p13 Ag 17 '41 40w

"If there is a real 'must' in the mystery field at this moment, this thrice-welcome reprint of three classic puzzlers is certainly it." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '41 200w

New Yorker 17:60 Ag 9 '41 50w

CHAFEE, ZECHARIAH. Free speech in the United States. 634p $4 Harvard univ. press

323.443 Liberty of speech. Sedition A 41-4297

"Professor Chafee, in this volume of 600 pages, brings up to date his text on free speech, which has been since 1920 the chief authority for both lawyers and laymen. . . The book reprints, with fairly complete revision and in language deliberately made clear to laymen, Professor Chafee's discussion of free speech up to 1920; treats 'The First Decade of Peace' through the cases brought chiefly against Communists and I. W. W's; then discusses the more liberal Supreme Court interpretations under Chief Justice Hughes. A biting chapter excoriates the federal 'alien and sedition act of 1940,' and the recent epidemic of state statutes excluding Communists from the ballot." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"To those anxious for the preservation of democracy this book is the most important publication of the year." H. S. Commager

+ Books p5 D 28 '41 1850w

"Disappointment that Professor Chafee has chosen a canvas which is too small to include the whole of the scene with which he is concerned does not, of course, detract from the merits of the picture which he has painted. Like his earlier volume on free speech and his miscellaneous writing on the same theme, this book is rigorously honest. The issues which he considers are thoroughly examined, and the whole is written with his usual charm and humor. There is still considerable effectiveness in the approach to the problem which he used with such brilliant success in 1920. One only wishes that he had made use of his insight, his talents, and his suggestive imagination to deal fully with all those aspects of the problem of free speech which the most recent decisions have brought to light." M. D. Howe

CHAFEE, ZECHARIAH—Continued

+ — Harvard Law R 55:695 F '42 1950w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz

Nation 153:672 D 27 '41 850w

"This well documented book contains the best contemporary exposition of the history of seditious libel and the meaning of free speech." L. B. Boudin

+ New Repub 106:121 Ja 26 '42 1450w

"It is to be regretted that the book ignores what would reasonably appear to be the two greatest issues of free speech today—radio and the trade unions. . . . Professor Chafee's style is so free of technicalities as to be almost journalistic, and is often spicy and witty. . . . The volume is not only an indispensable reference book on free speech, but a tract for the times." R. N. Baldwin

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:22 N 8 '41 800w

Spring'd Republican p6 O 4 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 31:36 Ja '42 800w

CHALMERS, ALLAN KNIGHT. Candles in the wind, 224p $2 Scribner

248 Christian Life

41-5767

Chapters on the need for a more dynamic Christianity to meet the needs of the twentieth century. Contains many references to Brown- ing and Tennyson. The author is pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York city.

"The brevity and inadequacy of the author's reference to his position on war is disappointing, and inappropriate to the tenor and thesis of the book. Half a hundred pages would have been much more usefully spent on that question than on the interesting but overexpanded setting forth of spiritual equivalents of laws of eminent domain and squatter sovereignty, and of the fourth day of creation. All in all, it is an excellent book, written on the road and not in the balcony, and a welcome relief from some of the verbose and involved treatises that have been coming to us from writers who prefer the academic irresponsibility of wrestling with ideas and words to the arena in which most of us have to live." E. W. Luccock

+ — Christian Century 58:690 My 21 '41 700w

"These chapters are so real, so living and clear, that the reviewer confesses to laying aside a sermon and reading a chapter of this book to his congregation. Every preacher who reads it will find that his own preaching will gain a great deal, both in content and method. It does something to you." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 15 '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"This is the kind of gospel the world needs today, and it is very good to hear a voice which says with assurance that these things shall be if only the light can be kept burning in the darkness so that men may see the way." H. W. Hansen

+ J Religion 21:328 Jl '41 250w

"The book is a challenge to courage and sacrifice as the price of being electric torches rather than tallow candles in perpetual danger of being snuffed out. There is not a dull page in the book."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Jl 21 '41 220w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

CHALMERS, AUDREY. Fancy be good; il. by [the author]. unp $1 Viking

(W) 41-22671

Picture story book about two kittens, one very good, and the other a decided minx. The story shows what a day and a night of banishment from home will do for a naughty little kitten.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"The child pictures are lovely, and five-year-old children will treasure the book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 19 '41 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:357 S '41 60w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 20w

"These are no Newberry kittens, soft to the touch even on the printed page, but plebian kittens in their most exasperating moments. No cat lover should miss the picture of Fancy showing the breadth of beam so few artists catch in a scrambling kitten. An easy or picture book for all libraries." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 150w

"Only a truly imaginative artist with a sense of humor and a sensitive understanding of children and animals could have made Fancy a kitten of so much personality, convincing kitten-mischief and charm. . . . A book which 5 to 7 year olds find irresistible and one, which no cat lover of any age can do without." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 O 12 '41 480w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Coast of Maine; a photographic panorama. 101p $2 Hastings house

917.41 Maine—Views. Photographic books

41-13768

Photographs of scenes on the coast of Maine, from Kittery to Quoddy Head. Except for captions and a few short descriptive notes there is no text.

"One tries to be fair to a book that will please many eyes while falling far short of its possibilities. These are pretty photographs. Mr. Chamberlain's skill as an etcher has dramatized the more meticulous detail and sharper contrasts feasible with the camera. His composition seems fresh and stimulating without being too subtle. . . . But this is no fit record of the Maine coast. It is a concession to whim, or to what tourists want the Maine coast to be. In his foreword Mr. Chamberlain admits superfluously that all the pictures were taken in summer. One can understand his preoccupation with architecture yet deplore the monotony of his spires, doorways, and woodsheds, and regret throughout the complete lack of characteristic human figures here. His water is always calm. He never saw a ledge awash, a line of breakers, or the lovely pattern of a rip tide; buoys, kelp, blueberry thicket, and alder swamp are unknown to him." K. P. K.

+ — New Eng Q 14:779 D '41 320w

"The Maine you've always wanted to see and never quite been able to catch all in one place, laid out for you here in more than 150 sharp and expressive pictures by one of our foremost regional photographers."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Ag 9 '41 40w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. France will live again. 173p il $3 Hastings house

914.4 France—Pictorial works

41-51562

Pictures of provincial France, between 1919 and 1939. The book is composed of lithographs, drypoint etchings, sketches, and photographs, with short descriptive notes, and an introductory chapter by Donald Moffat. Paris and some of the other larger cities are not included.

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

Books p22 F 9 '41 160w

New Yorker 16:64 D 28 '40 70w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL, ed. This realm, this England . . . the citadel of a valiant race portrayed by its greatest etchers; introd. by Donald Moffat. 180p $3.75 Hastings house

914.2 England—Pictorial works. Etchings (W) 41-12943

Reproductions of etchings and photographs, with four wood engravings and three lithographs, portraying England and Scotland at peace. Contents: London, the heart of an empire; Towns and cities of England; Villages; Farms; The English countryside; Scotland; Rivers; The coast of England; Castles; Churches and cathedrals. There are two descriptive essays, one by Donald Moffat, the other by the editor; a list of illustrations; and an index.

Bookmark 2:12 N '41

"In a special sense, this is a perfect 'gift book'; the impulse to give it to some one who has visited England, or longed to do so, will be strong. For it does more than put together two hundred magnificent reproductions of etchings, drawings and aquatints of English landscapes, buildings and coastal beauty; these have been chosen with such sympathy and arranged with such wisdom that they embody—in the words of Donald Moffat's thoughtful preface—"the England her people are fighting to preserve, as they are fighting to defend their lives. Body and soul are one."

+ Books p2 J1 6 '41 200w

"Not only will this book be enjoyed by those who appreciate the artists' work, but by those who see through the artists' eyes the history of a great country and the struggle within herself to maintain her culture and authority."

+ Cath World 154:254 N '41 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:36 J1 12 '41 60w

"Beautiful book. Muirhead Bone in his 'Piccadilly Circus Night' begins the valuable collection with a reminder of London itself. It is in keeping with the English love of the countryside, however—as Donald Moffat points out in his introduction—that the pictures from London, though very fine, are comparatively few. Other aspects of the English scene are emphasized with a wise selectiveness."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 15 '41 480w

"This unforgettable collection achieves Mr Chamberlain's purpose eloquently. It portrays the England her people are fighting to defend, as they are fighting to preserve their lives. In its different sections, showing the cities and towns, the villages and farms, the countryside and the rivers, the coasts and the castles, the churches and the cathedrals, Mr Chamberlain has collected a cross-section of England, familiar to its visitors, of course, but familiar also to those who have never crossed the Atlantic. For it portrays a countryside immortalized in the greatest of English literature."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 360w

CHAMBERLAIN, WILLIAM WOODROW. Leaf gold. 347p $2.50 Bobbs

41-16485

Dramatic story of tobacco growing in Kentucky, as seen thru the lives of Bert Perkins, his young "city" wife, Nolie, and the Parks, for whom Bert worked. "The young couple's domestic joys and sorrows, their social life, the community spirit of mutual help in diurnal tasks and in the major crises of births and deaths, the husking bees and barn-raising parties are described with fidelity to realistic detail." (N Y Times)

"Everything, Mr. Chamberlain gets into 'Leaf Gold'—all the techniques of the difficult business of farming, its pains and satisfactions, and the man's life and the woman's, lived side by side, now together, touching closely, almost intermingling in one life; now separate and coldly independent of the love they share—a counterpoint of the living, male and female, of one life. 'Leaf Gold' is worth your while."

F. H. Bullock

+ Books p8 Ag 31 '41 490w

"A plotless, leisurely novel about simple, undramatic people, 'Leaf Gold' depicts an aspect of Southern life with the fidelity of a slow-motion cinema." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '41 550w

"Sincere, warm-hearted, but rather awkwardly done."

+ New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 30w

CHAMBERLIN, WALDO, comp. See Stanford university. Library. Hoover library on war, revolution and peace. Industrial relations in wartime: Great Britain, 1914-1918

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. World's iron age. 402p $3 Macmillan

909.82 World politics. Civilization. World war, 1939- (W) 41-52067

"Large-scale view of the revolt against nineteenth-century liberalism, traced from the predominantly liberal period preceding the first World War to the more or less authoritarian present. Includes a generally temperate criticism of American interventionism. . . Part of the material has appeared in the Atlantic Monthly." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic F '42 350w

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"There is no doubting the sincerity of Mr. Chamberlin's convictions, or of the integrated pessimism to which they lead. As foreign correspondent for 'The Christian Science Monitor,' he watched a lot of change over eighteen years, and little of it was for the better. The chancelleries of Europe and Asia are not cheering places. . . Nor are they the places to see and test the strength of people who still care for freedom and the good life, or the toughness of these people under strain, and these are not in this book." Joseph Barnes

Books p4 D 14 '41 900w

"Chamberlin's analysis is so important that it will be calamitous if his opposition to all-out American entry into the war prevents his book from receiving the attention which it deserves. . . If I were trying to pick out a current American interpretation of the world situation which is likely to command respect in 1951 or 1961 my choice would rest on Mr. Chamberlin's book." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 58:1508 D 3 '41 950w

"An important book on current history. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 130w

"I happen to sympathize with Mr. Chamberlin's concern for the general collapse in our standards of debate. But in his preoccupation with the spread of 'iron-age' psychology to America, Mr. Chamberlin becomes an unwitting exemplar of the technique which he abhors. . . When he comes to write of the acts of the Roosevelt government, as distinct from the words that are used by Knox and Stimson and Roosevelt vis-à-vis Hitler, Mr. Chamberlin falls into a trap. . . Mr. Chamberlin tends to mistake the words of, say, the Fight for Freedom Committee for the acts of the government, which isn't the 'objective' thing to do.

CHAMBERLIN, W. H.—Continued

All of this, however, does not detract very much from the value of 'The World's Iron Age.' The book is remarkable in that it succeeds in viewing the dilemma of Western civilization as a whole without trying to make either defeatist 'wave of the future' propaganda or propaganda for any one of a dozen crusades." John Chamberlain

+ — N Y Times p1 N 30 '41 1300w

"Lots of challenging opinions and a few naive ones."

New Yorker 17:111 N 22 '41 60w

"This reviewer is bold enough to believe that the value of this book will grow steadily, and that in the years to come it will be valued increasingly as a statement of the liberal, anti-war point of view of 1941. Undoubtedly some years from now we shall have a lot of books, as Mr. Chamberlin suggests, telling us what really happened, describing the road to war, and explaining the effects of propaganda emanating both from Washington and London. Even at that time, I think, Mr. Chamberlin will be found to have written a vital source-book for students of the history of the cataclysmic period in which we live." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 29 '41 1100w

Social Studies 33:46 Ja '42 60w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 6 '41 800w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 110w

Time 38:107 N 24 '41 1850w

CHAMBERS, DANA, pseud. See Leffingwell, A.

CHAMBERS, WHITMAN. Dangerous water. 268p $2 Doubleday

41-3114

Mystery and adventure story laid in the Bahamas.

"Here is as brisk and breezy and stirring a romance of adventure as Whitman Chambers has ever written." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 23 '41 280w

"No killings, but plenty of skulduggery, good seascapes, pleasantly palpitating romance, and some well drawn characters."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Mr 1 '41 30w

CHAMBERS'S technical dictionary; comprising terms used in pure and applied science; medicine; the chief manufacturing industries; engineering; construction; the mechanic trades; with definitions by recognized authorities; ed. by C. F. Tweney and L. E. C. Hughes. 957p $5 Macmillan [15s Chambers]

603 Technology—Dictionaries (W) 40-30762

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The success of this book is due to the excellent work of a large team of scientific contributors (whose names are not, for the most part, well known), and to the judgment of the two editors; to them for their ability, and to the publishers for their enterprise, the thanks of the scientific and technical world will be readily given." E. H. T.

+ Nature 147:372 Mr 29 '41 360w

"The vocabulary shows a very definite English bias in both terminology and spelling. . . No mention is made of common American technical terms such as grommet and nylon. A check of the vocabulary shows that the largest number of words listed may be found in any unabridged dictionary, in some cases with fuller and clearer definitions. . . Three or four-line definitions seem to predominate, though many are twice that length or more. The definitions themselves are in some instances shortened by the use of other technical terms which lead the layman through several definitions for complete understanding. . . Chambers's Technical Dictionary is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 12:4 Ja '41 600w

CHANCE, EDGAR PERCIVAL. The truth about the cuckoo. 224p il $4 Scribner [12s 6d Country life]

598.74 Cuckoos

41-15861

"Mr. Edgar Chance has devoted much of his spare time in recent years to painstaking inquiry into the habits of the cuckoo. . . In 1922 'The Cuckoo's Secret' first brought the author's experiments before the public, and his latest book extends what was printed there. . . His experiments and discoveries are given in detail, and many interesting points emerge." (Manchester Guardian) "The principal problem which Mr. Chance set himself to solve was whether the cuckoo laid its egg and then carried it in its beak (or in its gullet) before depositing it in another's bird's nest, or whether it laid it directly into the nest of the foster parent." (Nature)

"When it comes to theorising Mr. Chance is less convincing; he seems, for example, to be able blandly to disregard the facts established by others because they do not fit in with his own ideas on evolution. The book is well illustrated by a number of maps and excellent photographs." A. W. B.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 4 '41 350w

"From what Mr. Chance has seen and recorded we have learned much. It is one of the merits of his book that it makes us wishful to know more. I cannot conclude without congratulating Mr. Chance on the wonderful series of photographs which have contributed so largely to the successful solution of the problems investigated." F. H. A. Marshall

+ Nature 147:157 F 8 '41 800w

"Mr. Chance has now proved his case beyond a shadow of doubt, and any who continue to urge the traditional theory will merely incur the charge of obstinacy. The details of the evidence make a most interesting story and one written in a manner that makes it easy reading."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p657 D 28 '40 550w

CHANDLER, ALBERT RICHARD, ed. The clash of political ideals. 273p $2.50; students' ed $2 Appleton-Century

320.8 Democracy, Communism, Totalitarianism. Political science

40-34589

Source-book on democracy, communism, and totalitarianism. Contents: Thucydides on Athenian democracy; Christian love in the New Testament; Milton on freedom of thought and publication; Locke on civil government; Jefferson on democracy; The French declaration of rights; "The Federalist" on the American constitution; George Washington on freedom, unity, and peace; John Stuart Mill on liberty; Lincoln's Americanism; Whitman on the prospects of democracy; Hoover on American individualism; Dewey on progressive democracy; The communist manifesto; Lenin and Stalin; Marxism in the twentieth century; Mussolini on fascism; Hitler on nazi methods and aspirations; The spirit of Japan; Pius XI on reconstructing the social order; Epilogue: American aspirations in 1940.

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Am Hist R 46:867 Jl '41 110w

"On the whole, Dr. Chandler's opus is a valuable addition to political-science pedagogy." N. C. Leites

+ Am J Soc 47:216 S '41 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Gettell

Am Pol Sci R 35:354 Ap '41 420w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee

Ethics 51:357 Ap '41 600w

Foreign Affairs 19:462 Ja '41 10w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 20w

"Professor Chandler has been necessarily selective in the original materials he has excerpted. But he has given a nice juxtaposition to the conflicting ideas through the ages about the present issue," Phillips Bradley

+ Survey G 30:257 Ap '41 110w

CHANDLER, ASA CRAWFORD. Eater's digest. 343p il $2.75 Farrar

612.39 Nutrition. Food (W) 41-7664

Guide to diet for the layman, written by a biologist. Partial contents: The bill of fare; fuel; Digestion, absorption and elimination; Vitamins: the spark plugs of the body; Human mineralogy; Iron and other metals in the body; One man's food is another man's poison; The preservation of food; Special-purpose foods; A dictionary of diets. Index.

Booklist 37:511 Jl 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p27 My 11 '41 120w

J Home Econ 33:485 S '41 30w

CHANDLER, CAROLINE AUGUSTA. Susie Stuart, M.D.; with a foreword by Edwards A. Park. 232p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-17877

Story of Susan Stuart's years of study before she arrived at her M.D., written for high school girls. The author is an instructor in the Johns Hopkins school of medicine.

"[Susie] has a gay heart, and Dr. Chandler keeps her conversation brisk; all this time she is learning, and young readers getting an idea, what medical education is like. There is, for instance, a bit about animal experimentation that will do them good." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 O 26 '41 400w

"In the effort to keep the style sprightly and informal, some terms, like 'lingo' and 'for the duration,' are irritatingly overworked. But the story is enthusiastic and it inspires respect for the close application required in the pre-clinical years, instead of dismissing them as so much 'stupid grind.'" Maude Adams

+ — Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 150w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 10w

CHANDLER, HENRY BRAMWELL, and CROTEAU, JOHN TOUGAS. A regional library and its readers; a study of five years of rural reading. 136p maps $1 Am. assn. for adult educ.

027.4717 Libraries—Prince Edward island. Libraries, Regional. Libraries and readers 41-51563

Report on a regional library demonstration set up by the Carnegie corporation in Prince Edward island. "The main purpose of the study is to determine reading habits in Prince Edward Island as demonstrated in the regional library. This study is an analysis of the reading habits of 25,000 people who have read over 1,000,000 books in a period of five years. These reading habits are analyzed according to the sex, age, education, occupation, and residence of the readers. The study is concentrated almost entirely upon adult reading habits. . . It is hoped that this study will offer source material to the student of library administration. It should supply the rural sociologist and the adult educator with a demonstration of the place of the regional library in rural America and its use as a tool in rural adult education." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 37:285 Mr 1 '41

"The book will interest county librarians and rural sociologists both as a study of general trends in reading and also as a text book on compiling statistics. The student of book selection will be interested in the appendix, which is a classified author list of adult fiction in the Prince Edward Island library. This book is a heartening and valuable guide to all workers with rural groups." M. M. Hill

+ Library J 66:300 Ap 1 '41 250w

"The volume contains information of interest to librarians concerned with service to rural areas and to students of rural sociology. The differences in the socio-economic, geographic, and climatic conditions between Prince Edward Island and the United States, however, limit, to a considerable extent, the applicability of the findings of this interesting study to our country." J. C. Settelmayer

+ Library Q 11:379 Jl '41 700w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

School & Society 53:127 Ja 25 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

CHANDLER, LESTER VERNON. Introduction to monetary theory. 216p $1.50 Harper

332.4 Money. Currency question 40-30826

"Here the author presents a brief but explicit summary of leading monetary theories, emphasizing the many points of agreement rather than the few of controversy. As he points out: 'Such a procedure obviously suppresses many provocative arguments, but it is to be defended on the ground that a knowledge of accepted basic principles is necessary before the significance of controversies can be appreciated.'" (Ann Am Acad) Selected supplementary readings. Index.

"Every chapter in the book is well done, although perhaps the chapter entitled 'The income and expenditure approach and the business cycle' could have been less general and more closely integrated with other chapters. On only one debatable point would the reviewer be inclined to disagree with the author. In discussing various objectives of monetary policy, he seems to favor the point of view of Hayek rather than of Keynes, that any attempt at stabilization of the price level when 'real costs' are decreasing ('real efficiency of production' is increasing) would lead to abnormal profit margins and disequilibrium. . . However, Professor Chandler in this book is explaining rather than arguing or defending his own views. As an explanation of various types of monetary theory his book is an excellent piece of work." R. A. Lester

+ — Am Econ R 31:114 Mr '41 490w

"In monetary theory, a field outstanding for polemic discord, any writer attempting rapprochement is refreshing. But when one like Mr. Chandler, displaying anew the perspicuity found in his earlier work, attempts to reconcile modern monetary theories and to integrate them as far as possible, the result is a book both refreshing and outstanding." K. L. Trefftz

+ Ann Am Acad 214:257 Mr '41 500w

CHANING-PEARCE, MELVILLE. The terrible crystal. 250p $2.50 Oxford [7s 6d Routledge]

201 Religion—Philosophy. Kierkegaard, Soren Aabye

"Nine essays which the author describes as 'studies in a certain type of modern Christian thought and feeling deriving from and attuned to conditions of terror and catastrophe.' Only the first is on Kierkegaard, based on Lowrie's biography and Dru's edition of the journals. The second is on the theory of crisis. Kindred themes are discussed in the subsequent chapters." Christian Century

"The author modestly describes himself as an 'amateur layman' in theology, but his scholarship no less than his gift for expression is evident on every page."

+ Christian Century 58:595 Ap 30 '41 80w

"There is much, indeed, in the theology of catastrophe that we have forgotten, to our peril, and which the present crisis is recalling

CHANING-PEARCE, M.—Continued
to us, to our grief. And yet the theology of crisis is not the whole truth. Kierkegaard was so great that even to praise him seems an impertinence. But no one could ever dream of saying of Kierkegaard that he was a friend of publicans and sinners." B. S. Easton
Churchman 155:16 My 15 '41 280w

"I rank the book as the most important of its class that I have read for at least two years."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 7 '40 270w
Times [London] Lit Sup p360 J1 27 '40 440w

CHANSOR, TORREY. Our second murder.
304p $2 Stokes

41-3902

Detective story.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 F 23 '41 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 40w

"There's an excellent whodunit plot in the tale of Hero Lynn and the people who hated or loved or feared her and who were suspects all. But the author's outstanding achievement is Miss Lutie herself." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '41 260w

"Nice, orthodox stuff."
New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 40w

"Gets twittery at times, but finishes well."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 40w

"Miss Lutie Beagle's clever deductions and her swift if dangerous actions, added to the quiet, sure methods of the police, keep the reader swinging from one suspect to another, wholly unprepared, although the clues are all there, for the startling end."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

CHAPEL, CHARLES EDWARD. Fingerprinting; a manual of identification. 299p il $3.75
Coward-McCann

573.6 Finger prints. Crime and criminals —Identification (W) 41-3254

Covers the history of finger printing and its technique, and the classification and use of finger prints. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:320 Mr 15 '41

"This book should have a wide appeal, if only because it is unique in assembling its material for popular consumption. The layman will find that it takes him, 'step by step, through all the processes, from the examination of the scene of the crime to the trial and conviction of the criminal. Each step is explained so simply and carefully that no one should have any difficulty in mastering the basic principles of this fascinating phase of criminal investigation.'"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 F '41 220w

CHAPMAN, CHARLES E., and SEVEREID, HENRY L. Play ball! advice for young ballplayers; foreword by Bill McKechnie. 227p $1.50 Harper

796.357 Baseball (W) 41-6248

"A book about the national game from the point of view of the baseball scout, who tours the country on the lookout for talent. The first chapter tells what scouts look for in a ball player, after which there are discussions of the rudiments of baseball, batting, running the bases and of the requirements for each of the nine positions, from pitcher to outfielders. Of interest to boys and to older followers of the game equally." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

"Each section is packed tight with what a boy wants to know." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 13 '41 90w
Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

CHAPMAN, FREDERICK SPENCER. Helvellyn to Himalaya. 285p il map $3.50 Harper [18s Chatto]

796.52 Mountaineering. Chomolhari 41-12531

This book, in part autobiography, in part technical notes on mountaineering problems, recounts the author's adventures in mountain climbing—from his ascent of Helvellyn in the English Lake district, as a small boy, thru trips to the Alps, to Iceland and to Greenland, and finally to the climax in a "first" ascent of Chomolhari, in the Himalayas. Glossary. Index.

Books p11 Je 15 '41 390w

"A delightful book, human, sincere, and brimming with interest." R. N. R. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 13 '40 200w

"Readers of Northern Lights and Lhasa: The Holy City know that Mr. Chapman can write well; and although he explains that the war prevented him from revising his manuscript, there is very little to complain about in the present book. . . Mr. Chapman is a careful chronicler (but the Inaccessible Pinnacle is on Sgurr Dearg, not Sgurr nan Gillean), he has written a thoroughly good book of its kind, and his illustrations are numerous, varied and often dramatic." Michael Roberts

+ Spec 165:322 S 27 '40 420w

"The roughness, the gaps, the teasing glimpses, the broken rhythms of this narrative are well suited to the wild country which it traverses and the punishing pace at which it goes. It ends with a great story, the ascent of Chomolhari, and the only criticism which can be seriously levelled against it is that here Mr. Chapman drives the imagination and the geographical sense of his reader rather harder than anyone without some actual experience of Himalayan topography can easily sustain."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p478 S 21 '40 900w

CHAPPELL, CLOVIS GILLHAM. Faces about the cross. 217p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

232.96 Jesus Christ—Passion. Sermons 41-2232

A book of sermons dealing with the persons, "the faces," who were near Jesus in his last hours and played some part in the tragedy of his trial and death. The author is pastor of St Luke's Methodist Church, Oklahoma City.

"Dr. Chappell's sermons represent 'popular preaching' at a high level. . . The preacher never gets entangled in long illustrations or digressions that divert him from his theme. Applications are almost continuous. The sentences are simple and the sermons are short."

+ Christian Century 58:89 Ja 15 '41 90w

"These sixteen character sketches are presented with rare understanding, simplicity, and moving power. They drive their lessons home in gifted and personal preaching that is interesting, suggestive, and alive." S. L. R.

+ Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 80w

CHASE, GILBERT. Music of Spain. 375p il $4 Norton

780.946 Music—Spain 41-23158

"Mr. Chase, a scholarly musicologist in the music division of the Library of Congress, presents a history of [Spanish music] from the thirteenth century to the present time, fortified with extensive notes, a voluminous bibliography which must be practically complete, and a copious list of available recordings illustrative of the several chapters. In a vast array of interesting material, these items deserve special mention: the full treatment of popular and folk music; the discussion of the guitar, which Spain alone took seriously; the deservedly high praise of Cabezón, the blind 'Spanish Bach of the sixteenth century,' and the ample attention given to organ and symphonic music; the many references to the contribution of the Gypsies; the account, brief but informing, of the importation of Hispanic music into the Americas, which fortunately occurred when it was artistically at its best; the recognition of the musical significance of dance, theater and opera; and the adequate stress upon religious music through all the centuries." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"It cannot be said that Mr. Chase takes special pains to relate the history of music to other aspects of culture or to social and political history, as, for example, Mr. Láng does in his recent Music in Western Civilization. His theme is the music of Spain—no more and no less. Every student of Spanish history or of musical history will be in his debt."

+ Christian Century 58:1545 D 10 '41 240w

"The style is terse, yet readable. There are copious notes, a full bibliography, and an excellent record list." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 100w

"There are excellent chapters on folk music and on Hispanic music in the Americas, as well as a chapter on Portuguese music. Copious notes, bibliography, and a handy record list complete the book, a distinguished—and readable—contribution to American musicology." P. H. Lang

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 24 '42 360w

CHASE, JAMES HADLEY. Twelve Chinks and a woman. 260p $2 Howell, Soskin [7s 6d Jarrolds]

41-14542

Detective story.

"Highly derivative in style and therefore a little more phony than its models." Will Cuppy

— Books p16 S 7 '41 80w

"It's really rather funny. Nevertheless, it is not a book I can whole-heartedly recommend." Brian Howard

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:242 S 7 '40 500w

"This, according to the jacket blurb, is a book 'for mystery fans who like explosive action.' Explosive is right, figuratively and literally." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '41 160w

"Enough action for ten mysteries."

New Yorker 17:80 S 6 '41 40w

"About all the mystery there is in 'Twelve Chinks and a Woman' is which drowns which—blood or thunder."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 180w

"The slaughter has a high moral flavour to add zest to its spirit of Caribbean adventure, though it is not for the squeamish."

Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Ag 31 '40 110w

CHASE, MARY ELLEN. Windswept. 440p $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-21397

Windswept, a house on the Maine coast, on a high promontory overlooking the sea, is the real core of the story. The Marstons built the house in the early 1880's and thereafter made it the cherished center of their lives. The book is a chronicle of the fortunes of the family, their friends and relatives, from before the building of Windswept to 1939.

"This is Mary Ellen Chase's finest novel. It is also the most uneven because the novelist has set herself the ambitious task of dealing with several groups of people through a long period of time... The characterization is, for the most part, skillful." R. S. Hillyer

+ Atlantic D '41 340w

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"Out of a deep feeling for a stretch of sea-bitten land, out of a profound respect for simple humankind, out of a warm and friendly erudition, Mary Ellen Chase has fashioned a glowing and lasting novel. When most of this year's crop of fiction is forgotten readers will turn to 'Windswept,' to savor again its moods of nature, its diversity of character and its pervading philosophy of strength... Miss Chase brings to the telling of this story all the richness of her powers. One is caught and held by the fine penetration and analysis of spirit, the sensitive capture of the sounds and colors and moods of a Maine seacoast during every season of the year, the scholarly blending of the past with the present, and the exquisite language of one who uses words with a feeling for their rhythm and their beauty." Rose Feld

+ Books p1 N 16 '41 1300w

"Such a novel as Miss Chase's is a welcome relief from the current fashion of exalting the objectionable as the normal. She is a fine artist who takes her province seriously as one to do worthy work in."

+ Cath World 154:506 Ja '42 220w

"Some of the characterization is a real joy... Although the novelist develops intensively only a restricted milieu, the sweep of the story embraces much more. Echoes of the author's travels and reading sound clearly through many of the incidents and indicate that, with the gathering of wisdom, she has also got an understanding that is more than local in its range. She has clear glimpses of the One in her observation of the Many." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 58:1512 D 3 '41 500w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson

Churchman 156:18 Ja 15 '42 200w

"To read 'Windswept' is to be transported to the coast of Maine and with the Marstons through three generations to savor with almost aching awareness of its beauty the sea beating the headlands, the headlands sweet with blueberries in the sun, the sun or fog wrapping round the great stone house where flows so deep and rich a life that the reader will return to it in memory for the peace and strength that it holds." Sister Mariella

+ Commonweal 35:323 Ja 16 '42 360w

"Beautiful prose and excellent characterization. A book which will appeal to the discriminating reader. Recommended." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 80w

"Unfortunately, the writing is far better than the story, which has grown a little thin and familiar since 'Mary Peters' and 'Silas Crockett.'"

+ New Repub 106:94 Ja 19 '42 80w

"'Windswept' is the strongest and most beautiful novel that Mary Ellen Chase has written, the most distinguished in its innate indescribable quality and the most far-reaching in its significance. On a sterner coast than those of her previous stories, the author of 'Mary Peters' and 'Silas Crockett' has again wrought her sound and beautiful work of local recreation, and not only at Windswept but far away also the spirit of place is an almost tangible influence." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 N 16 '41 1000w

"A readable family chronicle, decorated with some first-class Maine weather."

New Yorker 17:109 N 15 '41 60w

"'Windswept' becomes a symbol of the kind of life America at its wisest and best can produce—a tolerant, kind, broad, humorous, humane, strong, humble—in short—a civilized life. Everyone in the book is likable, decent, sound. The Bohemians especially, to whom the author gives ample space, reveal not merely their own robust gift for life, but Miss Chase's profound belief in the 'foreigner's' enrichment of American life... What happens to this household is told without haste or frenzy.

CHASE, M. E.—Continued

There is plenty of time. . . Where there is so much to admire, it is perhaps unkind to complain that Miss Chase has somehow stopped short of a major achievement. High-mindedness and serene acceptance of what comes result in a kind of monotone of gentility. Ugliness slides too easily out of sight." Bess Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:12 N 15 '41 650w

"Miss Chase paints her characters with such loving and glowing skill that the observer suffers and rejoices with them and feels, when the book is closed that she has made new and intimate friends who will not soon be forgotten. Each has his strong and memorable identity. Chase has his contribution to make to the destiny of 'Windswept.' And through the book the cold, winy winds of Maine, laden with the smell of salt and of blueberries ripening in the sun, blow fresh and clear."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 900w

"Windswept is an ideal book for the Christmas lists, a gift for mother and for young nieces who want to write. . . Miss Chase has mastered almost too well the English fiction on which she lectures. She writes in the great genteel evasive tradition, clean as Jane Austen and rather sweeter. Windswept is a treasury of sound thoughts and syntax."

+ Time 38:100 N 17 '41 260w

Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41

CHASE, STUART. A primer of economics; il. by Lynd Ward. 60p $1 Random house; pa 40c Row

330 Economics (W) 41-51740

An ABC of economics, written for junior and senior high schools. Contents: What economics means to us; Before the machine; The push of new invention; World without money; World with money; The money part; A potato community; Indirect spending, or investing; Investments and debts; Why investing has declined; What is to be done.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

"In this small book, written primarily for young people, Mr. Chase makes economics, which has often been called the 'dismal science,' a very interesting subject. In his customary lucid and engaging style he tells what economics is, how the economic machine of the country works, and, alas, how it doesn't work." J. L. Snider

+ Horn Bk M 17:293 JI '41 220w

"A fine little manual, written for children, but to be appreciated also by adults. . . Recommended for junior and senior high schools." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 200w

"There is no one writing today who can make a tough subject more readable or do a better job of simplification than Mr. Chase. . . Mr. Chase did not intend to write a primer of freedom, but what he has to say has considerable bearing on how to make democracy work. The book is illustrated by diagrams and drawings which are both useful and decorative."

+ New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 110w

"Cold comfort to the harassed upper-middle class, it may send icy shivers down the backs of the rich. But to young people to whom it is addressed it will seem reasonable and reassuring. It should be put into the hands of boys and girls of high school age." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

CHATTERTON, ROLAND HENRY. Methods of lesson observing by preservice student-teachers; a comparative study. 137p $1.85 Teachers college

370.733 Teachers, Training of 41-13694

"A comparative study of observational methods most frequently used by observers of classroom methods. A uniform measure of observational ability was attained by means of a check list devised to detect the type of pupil activity and the amount of pupil participation. The check list, as well as the stenographic records of ten observed lessons, is reproduced in this book. . . Background for the study is furnished by a summary of fundamental controls revealed through previous observational research, and a classification of observational studies." Publisher's note

School & Society 54:96 Ag 9 '41 20w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

CHAVANNE, ROSE NELSON. David Farragut, midshipman; il. by [the author]. 152p $2 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Farragut, David Glasgow—Juvenile literature (W) 41-22894

Story of the life of David Farragut, from the age of five, to the age of thirteen, when after adventurous times as a midshipman under Captain Porter, he returned to America—"a veteran of the most sanguinary battle in the long and distinguished naval career that lay ahead of him." Bibliography.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p22 N 2 '41 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:32 Ja '42 100w

"The latter half of the book is filled with enough nautical adventure for the saltiest of readers, lightened by humorous episodes. It is, because of its terminology, not always the easiest of reading, but it is especially interesting and timely now in its description of naval life when our Navy was just making its power felt in the world, and vigorous illustrations by the author successfully convey the atmosphere of those robust days." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 N 23 '41 320w

"Authentic and ingenious." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 40w

CHAYKA, LOUIS. Inventing for profit. 231p $2.50 House of Field

608 Inventions. Patents 40-32901

"A popular book for the potential inventor describing a number of successful inventions of minor importance, inventions in general, the requirements of the Patent Office, the tests of patentability of new ideas, and ways to exploit inventions." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 37:237 F 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:26 Ap '41

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. Story of modern art. 643p il $5 Viking

759.91 Art—History. Painting. Painters (W) 41-26516

"History of the development of the modern movement from the French Revolution to the 1941 Americans. In substance, Cheney's book is a crusade against the literary art that persisted even after the camera came to negate the painter's earlier social function of natural transcription and sent him inward to plumb for a more creative reason for being. . . The physical structure of the Cheney book is logically simple. Before introducing his numerous lead characters, the author etches in with concise, graphic strokes each artist's setting in terms of concurrent political and artistic history. Then follows a brief biography made more human by the full accent placed on the artist's character in relation to his fellows. The artist, having been thus introduced before a backdrop of his own environment, is summed up by Cheney with insight into his individual contribution to the over-all picture of modern art." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:154 Ja 1 '42

"Tempering somewhat the enthusiasm with which one reads Cheney's history is his voluntary omission of modern sculpture. Because of this weakness his story is but half told, for many will disagree with his premise that 'the record of invention of what might be called the intention of the modern artist places the painters consistently above the sculptors and the architects.' Maillol, Lehmbruck and Brancusi alone prove that sculpture may share equally with painting in the story of modern art. Be that as it may, Cheney has done a convincing and thorough job of presenting the case for modern painting." Peyton Boswell
+ — Books p16 D 14 '41 900w

"This book is an attempt to explain the last century of art to people who are still struggling with such canons of appreciation as 'likeness to nature, literary cleverness, and smoothness of finish.' On the whole, it is about as successful an attempt as any I have seen, and it will certainly supersede a great number of other books in its field, including a few of Mr. Cheney's own. It is better illustrated than most other low-price books on the subject, it is both catholic and readable, it sustains an admirable balance between anecdote, contemporary setting and technical criticism, and it makes the artists it deals with credibly human. . . . Books in this field, particularly American ones, are apt to be riddled with a vaguely arty jargon which is the product of confused thinking and bad writing. Mr. Cheney on the whole escapes this charge, though it may be suggested that the few bits of jargon which have been allowed to remain . . . will only confirm the plain reader he is trying to reach in his prejudices." Helen Frye
+ — Canadian Forum 21:316 Ja '42 360w

"An interestingly written and fully informative account. . . . There are some considerations that prevent acceptance of Mr. Cheney's belief that modernism has contributed anything as valuable or as great as he would have us believe. . . . Despite these strictures Mr. Cheney has with great competence assembled and arranged a vast amount of information about the lives, ideas and work of a large number of artists who have been prominent during the past 150 years, and he has told the story in a manner that makes it readable from the first page to the last." Alvin Adey
+ — Current Hist 1:372 D '41 1200w

"Although containing a minimum of dates and historical facts, The Story of Modern Art will be used by reference librarians for concise biographical and critical estimates of outstanding painters. The one weak spot in the book is the final section on contemporary Americans. Written in a clear, vigorous style, unencumbered by meaningless phraseology so often employed in art criticism. Highly recommended." Rice Estes

+ — Library J 66:998 N 15 '41 90w

"A copiously illustrated volume whose more than 600 pages must not be permitted to scare away the casual reader. For Mr. Cheney has acquitted himself of this task in a manner that should prove fascinating to the average reader and should, at the same time, prove acceptable to all but the most violent right-wing partisans. Mr. Cheney believes in modern art and he has a thesis to expound. Granted those two facts, and his book in the main remains an excellent journalistic account of what has been going on in art for the last hundred years or more to bring 'modern' art into being." Howard Devree
+ N Y Times p3 D 14 '41 1500w

CHERADAME, ANDRE. Defense of the Americas; tr. from the French by George Swan Challies. 304p maps $3 Doubleday
355.45 American republics—Defenses. Europe—Politics. World war, 1939-. Pan-germanism (W) 41-10607

An exiled French writer, who claims that Pan-Germanism has been a menace to America since 1895, has written a study of present-day German aims in this hemisphere, and the quickest way to combat the menace.

Booklist 38:1 S '41

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes

Books p12 Je 15 '41 480w

"Sincerity is the dominant note of this book. Scholarship permeates it. Inexorable logic runs through it. It is an admirable production that would have been improved had the author appreciated the telling emphasis that lies in understatement." Pierre Crabitès
+ Cath World 153:766 S '41 410w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 27 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:206 O '41 50w

"Defense of the Americas is well illustrated with maps, especially those showing the various phases of the Pan-German drive for world conquest. But there is need for an index, which should be added in a later edition." Joachim Joesten

+ — Living Age 360:488 Jl '41 800w

"This volume, which is supplied with maps, is heavily documented, though not very closely argued, and obviously wild-eyed here and there. Proceed at your own risk."

— + New Yorker 17:79 Je 14 '41 100w

"Anyone who swallows a work like this deserves to be condemned to read the unabridged speeches of Senator Burton K. Wheeler." F. P.

— Sat R of Lit 24:18 Jl 5 '41 360w

"Lately a large number of excellent books have been published about Germany's plans and the danger which threatens America. M. Chéradame's book can claim a high place among them. There can be few readers who will not learn some new aspect of the all-inclusive problem of today, who will not gain greater clarity of outlook from it." Hans Kohn
+ Survey G 30:441 Ag '41 220w

"In spite of the title of the book, considerably less than a third of it is concerned directly with the defense of the Americas. An adequate treatment of this subject is urgently needed, but we do not find it here. M. Chéradame's chief concern is with the events in Europe, and he is quite correct in saying that any workable plan of American defense must be based on a thorough understanding of these events. Anyone interested in the general problem of American defense would do well to ponder his thesis." F. S. Dunn
Yale R n s 31:412 winter '42 850w

CHESS, ELLIOT. Walk away from 'em. 300p $2.50 Coward-McCann

41-15199

According to the author, a stunt flyer, "any crack-up's all right if you can walk away from it." In this first novel the remark applies to a young aviator who is trying to walk away from too many women: Jo, his ex-wife; Fran, a lovely young pursuer; and Toddy Fate, who finally walked away from the aviator.

"The story is first-rate, with plenty of mid-air melodrama and hard-boiled talk." Lisle Bell

+ Books p9 Ag 31 '41 160w

"Mr. Chess knows what he is writing about when he gives you his hero's sensation in a power dive. All his flying stuff seems very real to the reader. Whether he knows so much about girls is doubtful. . . . Mr. Chess writes a faint imitation of early Hemingway, staccato and probably lifelike and supposed to be pregnant with overtones. Everybody does a lot of drinking except Nick, who sticks to orange juice." Charlotte Dean
+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '41 160w

CHEYNE, GEORGE. Letters to the Countess of Huntingdon; ed. with an introd. by Charles F. Mullett. 64p $1.75 Huntington lib.

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Medicine 40-33874

"The writer of these letters is described by Professor Mullett as 'a highly articulate practitioner, representative of a large corps of physicians whose share in the historical development of medicine has been slighted in favor of the "great" names'. He was the author of a number of medical treatises and was regarded by his contemporaries as an important figure in the medical profession. The originals of the letters here published are, with one exception, in the Hastings Manuscripts in the Huntington Library." Am Hist R

Am Hist R 46:708 Ap '41 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p640 D 21 '40
50w

CHEYNEY, PETER. A trap for Bellamy [Eng title: Another little drink]. 237p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Collins]
Detective story.

"The unending sequence of drinks is a trifle boring, and Mr. Cheyney's succession of tough ladies scarcely less so, but at least he knows how to keep a story moving—one had almost said 'floating'—with plenty of exciting incident." E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 13 '41
100w

"The story is never convincing, and there is no real suggestion of war in its atmosphere. But you do keep wondering how it's going to turn out and Bellamy really has you guessing." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 O 5 '41 280w

"Fine drinking scenes, a clever plot, and a grand finale."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Jl 26 '41 50w

"Much drinking and pub crawling, a well managed murder, lively language and plot that keeps reader guessing until final pages. Acceptable."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Jl 26 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Jl 20 '40
260w

CHIANG, MEI-LING (SUNG) (MME CHIANG KAI-SHEK). China shall rise again; including ten official statements of China's present progress. 356p maps $3 Harper

915.1 National characteristics, Chinese, Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. China—Civilization. China—History (W) 41-51564

This new book by the wife of China's Generalissimo, is in three parts. Part one is made up of chapters written by Mme Chiang for a Chinese paper in which she deals sternly with China's failures in the past and her hopes for the future. Part two consists of reports on the conduct of China in wartime, written by ten officials in charge of government departments. Part three contains three more articles on "new China" ending with a chapter on the failure of the western democracies to help China in her hour of need.

"China is fortunate in having in a high post of leadership such a woman as Madame Chiang Kai-shek, who, along with passionate patriotism, possesses the gift of pleading her country's cause in terms that are best calculated to appeal to the Western liberal mind. Her voice rings out clear and vibrant from China's remote and much bombed inland capital of Chungking." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic F '41 260w

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

"One of China's greatest points of superiority over Japan is the ability of the highly educated Chinese to express himself in Western terms. . .

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, who shares with her husband the leadership of China's struggle against the Japanese invasion, possesses in full measure this gift of making her country, its problems and its hopes understandable to foreign readers. . . Every foreigner with experience in China will recognize the justice and accuracy of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's national self-indictment. . . But it is not on this note of criticism that Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's work is primarily pitched. It is rather a description, often vivid and moving, of the heroism and constancy of the simple Chinese people." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Books p6 Ja 26 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 28 '41 50w

"Even the ardent admirer of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek as a potent force for good often finds her writings, such as culled from the Central Daily News of Chungking to form the present volume, overly fervent and evangelical, lacking precision and conciseness. . . Of far greater interest and importance—at least to this reviewer—are the chapters on Social and Economic conditions, written by 10 officials in charge of various government departments. Dr. Kung contributes an invaluable article on fiscal matters, while Wong Wen-hao supplies an equally worthwhile account of industrial dislocation, caused by the war." P. J. Searles

+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 600w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Christian Century 58:323 Mr 5 '41 260w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson

Churchman 155:17 Mr '41 180w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:884 Jl '41 30w

"Not as delightful reading as This Is Our China, but a book which deserves patient reading for the sake of enlightenment about the potential greatness of a people who will unquestionably 'rise again.'" S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 1 '41 350w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson

New Repub 104:411 Mr 24 '41 550w

"The book is well arranged and well written and filled with facts. And in all its plan and process, war and reconstruction are shown in their necessary connection. This is a book which ought to be generally read and studied here." K. W.

+ N Y Times p8 F 16 '41 700w

New Yorker 16:55 F 1 '41 90w

"Not many years ago a book making as large claims for China as this one does—notwithstanding Madame Chiang's criticisms—could not have been taken seriously. While one is not prepared to endorse all of them, one is prepared to regard a high proportion as justifiable, and to urge people to acquaint themselves with the new balance of power which is being created in the Pacific." E. M. Gull

Spec 167:214 Ag 29 '41 600w

"A new—and intensely interesting—book. . . This is Mme. Chiang's second book within a year, and like 'This Is Our China,' it is written with frankness and sincerity, and with an unshakable belief in the ultimate resurgence of the Chinese nation." L. C. Rich

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41
950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p342 Jl 19 '41
700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:32 F '41

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Social science research committee. Eleven twenty-six; a decade of Social science research; contributors, Robert Maynard Hutchins [and others] ed. by Louis Wirth. 498p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

304 Social sciences—Addresses, essays, lectures 41-5488

"Contains papers and round table discussions at meetings in the Social science research building at the University of Chicago, held under the auspices of the Social science research committee to mark the close of the first decade in the building, with a bibliography (p. 296-486) of the publications emanating therefrom during that period." Library of Congress Card

Am Econ R 31:191 Mr '41 70w

Reviewed by J. M. Gaus

Am Pol Sci R 35:603 Je '41 220w

"Not only does this volume serve as an important historical document respecting the development of the social sciences in this country, but it also contains a useful bibliography of the publications which have come out of the group of scholars who have been housed since 1929 at 1126 East 59th Street, on the Midway." Kimball Young

+ Ann Am Acad 217:225 S '41 650w

CHICKERING, WILLIAM H. Within the sound of these waves; il. by John Kelly. 327p $3 Harcourt

996.9 Hawaiian Islands—History. Cook, James. Vancouver, George 41-22871

"The story of the kings of Hawaii Island, containing a full account of the death of Captain Cook, together with the Hawaiian adventures of George Vancouver and sundry other mariners." Subtitle

"The material in the historical sections of the book has been written about many times in the last few years. By telling the familiar story through the eyes of the Hawaiians, Mr. Chickering makes a fresh and fascinating narrative. His version of the visit of Captain Cook and his men especially gains from this point of view. . . 'Within the Sound of These Waves' is such a good popular history of the period it treats that one hesitates to divert from its factual value by describing it as history that reads like fiction. Yet the vigorous narrative is held in strong control, and carries the reader from chapter to chapter so speedily that he finds he has finished the book at a single sitting." F. B. Clark

+ Books p22 O 26 '41 650w

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 70w

Reviewed by J. L. Duff

Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 140w

"Well written except for an occasional luscious phrase, and as accurate historically as could be expected considering that much of the material is derived from the natives' word-of-mouth biographies and the diaries of mariners." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 O 11 '41 370w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

CHILD, MRS NELLISE. Wolf on the fold. 384p $2.75 Doubleday 41-27714

The chief characters in this story of a strange family are Sister Rosemary Furie Jones, a phenomenally successful woman evangelist, and her younger brother, Jerry Otis, who is by turns a complete rascal and a boy preacher whose success outshines that of his sister. The other characters include Simon Furie, the Micawber-like father, Clara, his wife, and Effie and Hanna, the two other daughters.

"This is a shocking story, written with delicacy and good taste. Nellise Child spent five years on her novel; care and competence are evident in it. Intelligence and wide experience provide her with rich material. As American history, the saga of the Furies seems authentic and devastating. But a country cannot be condemned for producing a rapacious Jerry Otis, if also it can produce a young writer with so much mercy and humor, discretion and skill." Nancy Flagg

+ Books p10 N 9 '41 500w

"As a first venture into the field of creative writing, 'Wolf on the Fold' has much to recommend it. Miss Child is so good on some of her characterization that one wonders how she can fall down so heavily on the others. Part of her trouble undoubtedly lies in the oversize dimensions of her canvas and her efforts to fill it with dramatic detail." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p5 N 2 '41 700w

"Nellise Child has created a character who takes up where Elmer Gantry left off, and who could teach astute politicians tricks. It is a book that will not be easily laid aside, even though at times the characters are overdrawn and the theme out of balance." G. F. P.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 360w

CHILDERS, JAMES SAXON. Mumbó Jumbo, esquire; a book about the two Africas. 421p il $5 Appleton-Century

916 Africa—Description and travel (W) 41-9588

The author traveled from Cape Town to Cairo and from Cairo to Tangiers. In his book he has attempted to picture the "two Africas" he saw, one primitive, wild, with native ceremonies, wild beasts, vast plains and mountains; the other modern, marked by European civilization, a continent of thriving cities, advertising signs, and automobiles, Boy Scouts and well equipped schools. Index.

"Do you think that Africa is a continent of jungles, wild beasts and wilder men? To bring you up to date, guide you through contemporary Africa, Mr. Childers has written this book and it is far easier reading than the 'South and East African Guide Book,' which is any Africa-bound traveler's Bible. . . If I had never been to Africa and were going, I would use his book as one guide. And if I wanted to know why Africa is important in this war-torn world I would read it for a quick, bird's-eye view, and then go on to more." M. C. Hubbard

+ Books p16 J1 6 '41 550w

Reviewed by Emma Olcott

Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 90w

"His constant underscoring of Africa's modernity seems a little naive—since surely few intelligent people need to be told of that continent's progress in up-to-date civilization. But his travels are full of lively observation and the book's many photographs are admirably illustrative."

+ — N Y Times p12 Je 29 '41 500w

"The major fault of the book is the author's assumption of the reader's ignorance. The charm of the work lies mostly in the author's casual asides, his relish of the taste of fresh water, his 'Bang! went another illusion!' his delight in a town named Bububu. And his photographs are excellent." Hassoldt Davis

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:11 Je 21 '41 480w

"Mr. Childers has written into his book his great enthusiasm for Africa. He has also 'debunked' some existing ideas gleaned from moving pictures, sentimentalists, and thrill seekers. He knows the value of inference and dramatic endings. His frequent contrasts and comparisons of people and scenes in Africa and the United States give point to many a statement. A Rhodes scholar, native of Birmingham, Alabama, lecturer, writer, and traveler, his story of the two Africas is truly enthralling. With no wish to sound like a 'blurb,' it is difficult to speak in moderate terms of his achievement."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 Je '41 340w

CHINARD, GILBERT, ed. and tr. George Washington as the French knew him; a collection of texts; with an introduction. 161p il $2.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Washington, George. U.S.—History—Revolution—French participation 41-3351

A collection of excerpts from letters, speeches and other writings of Lafayette, Rochambeau, other French officers who served

CHINARD, GILBERT—Continued
in America, travelers, diplomats, leaders of the French revolution and later admirers.
Index.

"In the view of the editor it is worthy of observation that before Mason L. Weems placed Washington on that lofty pedestal atop which he remained for a hundred years or more, Frenchmen were regarding him as one of the greatest figures in the history of the world. Nearly all the characterizations found here are, in fact, highly eulogistic. In assembling these otherwise all but inaccessible impressions and tributes Dr. Chinard has performed a valuable service."

+ Am Hist R 47:198 O '41 330w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p33 Mr 23 '41 1050w

CHIRGWIN, ARTHUR MITCHELL. Under fire;
the Christian church in a hostile world.
188p $1.50 Macmillan [5s Student]

270.8 Church history. Christianity and other religions [41-18463]

"M. Chirgwin, an English Protestant minister, finds hope for a world-wide church in the remarkable growth of native or so-called young churches in all lands and believes that 'A world church is God's answer to a divided world.' He traces wisely and briefly the present state of Christianity in Japan, China, India, Africa and Europe and devotes perhaps his strongest chapter to the racial problem as exemplified by the Negro." Churchman

"With succinctness and clarity it details the struggles which are taking place on a world-wide front to overthrow the church and to substitute for it fellowships and faiths which will make forever impossible the spiritual unity of the race. Without hysteria and with rare insight, the author analyzes the situation which in its totality amounts to a planet-wide uprising against the church. . .
It might be possible to read Under Fire in an evening, but no reader will forget it quickly. Its ringing affirmation of faith in the church universal provides a thundering echo to the words of a medieval bishop who warned a king who was intending to attack the church: 'Your majesty, that anvil has worn out many hammers!'" H. E. Fey + Christian Century 58:1338 O 29 '41
900w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray

Churchman 155:22 O 1 '41 50w

Reviewed by F. R. Barry

Spec 166:531 My 16 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p148 Mr 29
'41 270w

CHITTICK, VICTOR LOVITT OAKES, ed.
Ring-tailed roarers. 316p il $3.50 Caxton printers

41-3987

Collection of tall tales of the American frontier in the 1830s and 1840s. Paul Bunyan does not appear in this book, but other favorites such as Davy Crockett and Mike Fink are here. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

Reviewed by S. H. Holbrook

Books p22 F 23 '41 700w

"A great many [of the stories] are told in rough-neck dialect which, while not exactly easy to read, does at times reward you with really funny and extravagant phrases. It is not a book to be read at one sitting for such a dose of bragging and fantastic exaggeration quickly dulls the palate. But read singly and at intervals most of them are entertaining and full of coarse high spirits." Eleanor Godfrey

+ Canadian Forum 20:390 Mr '41 90w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 153:36 J1 12 '41 70w
Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

CHOATE, FLORENCE, and CURTIS, ELIZA-BETH. The crimson shawl; il. by the authors.
211p $1.75 Stokes

(W) 41-15924

Historical novel for young people. It is the story of an Acadian girl, who with her whole family is sent to Ipswich, Massachusetts, during the French and Indian wars. Mary and her two older brothers are bound out; the rest of the family is settled in an abandoned house. Mary is fortunate in being with kindly people, and is able to help both her own family and her adopted family in times of stress.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"Refugees then, as now, had to win their own welcome against distrust. This refugee story fills a gap in our own historical fiction for children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 19 '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"The coming of the friendly French household to the old New England town is touchingly and vividly related and is said to conform to history. There is, too, an element of romance which will interest the older girls in an unusually fine book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:365 S '41 140w

"An interesting tale with an unusual historical background and a hint of romance which will appeal to older girls. Illustrated in black and white by the authors." Jean Stewart

+ Library J 66:679 Ag '41 150w

"Older girls will find this distinguished story both moving and pertinent. New material supplies its historical background. It deserves a wide audience." I. S.

+ N Y Times p31 N 2 '41 280w

"The Landrey name, as well as that of the Breaus, is well-known in Ipswich for these families actually settled there and there is much more than fiction to this story. Girls will enjoy both text and the numerous drawings and will also learn much worth knowing."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 150w

CHOU, SHU-JEN (LUSIN, pseud). Ah Q, and others; selected stories; tr. by Chi-chen
Wang. 219p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

41-10678

A volume of short stories by a modern Chinese writer, born in 1881, died in 1936. The stories deal with the weaknesses of the Chinese character, particularly among the lower and middle classes.

"I cannot judge whether these stories by Lusin, the great modern Chinese writer, will appeal to Americans or not. They are well translated in the sense that they are clear and simple in their phraseology, and this would have pleased Lusin himself. No translation into English could give the peculiar style of Lusin, its terseness and deadly meaning. . .
These stories which Wang Chichen, the translator, has chosen, are some of Lusin's best.
Among them is the famous 'Our Story of Ah
Q,' which more than any other story in modern China has affected both the literary style and thought of Chinese." P. S. Buck
+ Books p4 Je 29 '41 900w

"Heartily recommended, but will have limited appeal." E. M. Olcott

+ Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 70w

"There is an excellent introduction by Chi-Chen Wang, whose translation is the best I have seen of Lusin. I recommend Lusin solely as good literature, but it should go without saying that as good literature it carries in itself, for those who are more than merely sympathetic, a real understanding of the China today." H. P. Lazarus

+ Nation 153:311 O 4 '41 1550w

Reviewed by Katherine Woods
N Y Times p7 J1 20 '41 800w

"A complex, a strange, and a fascinating book."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 28 '41 150w

"Mr. Wang is a competent and painstaking translator. In comparing his translation with the original, I was amazed at his achievement. In 'A Cake of Soap,' 'Kung-chi Hsueh-hui'... the translator should be thanked for avoiding the exploitation of the ideographical nature of the Chinese language, a temptation very much encouraged by Mrs. Pearl Buck. Even so, there are a number of words whose meaning could be easily rendered into English, such as tsai chien (good-bye), shao nai nai (young mistress) and lai (come). Their present transliterations appear unnecessarily exotic." Hsiao Chi'en

+ — Spec 167:560 D 12 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 400w

CHRISMAN, ARTHUR BOWIE. Treasures long hidden; old tales and new tales of the East; il. by Weda Yap. 303p $2.50 Dutton

Tales, Chinese 41-15194

Fifteen Chinese folk tales, retold for young readers or for use in storytelling. The stories are rich in Oriental touches and humor. Grades four to six.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"Though children at the fable age will welcome the collection, there is no age-limit for those to whom these treasures may be offered." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 2 '41 200w

"Mr. Chrisman here tells sixteen Chinese folk tales with the charm and convincing air of a native storyteller. Whatever the source, the stories abound with the humor, imagination and love of beauty that are typically Chinese. Most of them carry, too, a moral discreetly hidden." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK M 17:471 N '41 40w

"Storytellers will rejoice in this [book]. . . In simplicity and dignity the stories equal those in Shen of the Sea." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 130w

"Well-chosen tales depicting much of the dignity and justice and love for beauty traditional in old Cathay. Styled in simplicity, and abounding with word-pictures as colorful as China itself, the volume reveals that strangely haunting magic typical of its source. Mr. Chrisman's poetic prose does justice to the old legend of the multiplying dish under the title, 'Giving Fine Gifts.' . . Enhancing such an excellent text are fine black and white drawings by Weda Yap."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 250w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Evil under the sun. 260p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Collins]

41-19716

Detective story.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"Struck us as one of the best Christie numbers in a season or so, a regular fireworks display of her technical abilities, with a surprise conclusion of high voltage. You can't go wrong with this one. Get your copy." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 O 19 '41 160w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '41 200w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 22:164 Ag 16 '41 500w

"The murder is an elaborately planned affair—a little too much so for credibility, in view of the many possibilities of a slip-up somewhere along the way—but Poirot's reasoning is flawless, as it always is. 'Evil Under the Sun' adds another to the already long list of Agatha Christie's successful mystery tales." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 O 19 '41 180w

"Makes one wonder how Mrs. Christie can do this sort of thing year in and year out and do it so well."

+ New Yorker 17:104 O 11 '41 50w

"Worked out with characteristic Christie cunning and subtle deception. Poirot scintillates, but crime itself may take a heap of believing. 'Very slick.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

"Agatha Christie does not disappoint her admirers in Evil Under the Sun; the puzzle is deftly mounted with the customary economy, and is then broken by Poirot with the precise pomp which so nearly resembles a Guards regiment manoeuvring at the slow march. . . If one can make any objection it is that the weather is too good, a spell of unbroken fine weather outlasting a Poirot investigation on the Cornish coast strains the reader's credulity almost to breaking-point. The captious may also take exception to the way in which the fate of an unusually charming drug-trafficker is left in the air—but this is a minor point." John Fairfield

+ — Spec 166:638 Je 13 '41 170w

"Being a Poirot book, there is much study in character, and being a Christie story, the plot is fashioned with skill and the solution, though surprising, is wholly acceptable."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 240w
Time 38:96 N 3 '41 30w

"'Evil Under the Sun' will take a lot of beating. . . [Mrs] Christie casts the shadow of guilt upon first one and then another with such casual ease that it is difficult for the reader not to be led by the nose. Everybody is well aware that any character most strongly indicated is not a likely criminal; yet this guiding principle is forgotten when [Mrs] Christie persuades you that you are more discerning than you really are. Then she springs her secret like a land-mine."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Je 14 '41 150w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). N or M? 289p $2 Dodd (W) 41-10769

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Here's exactly the thing for those who want some fairly dangerous non-combatant war atmosphere, slick spy stuff and a sufficiently baffling puzzle all wrapped up in an attractive package by one who knows all there is to know about such matters." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Je 22 '41 180w

"It is exciting, full of surprises, laced with sentiment, and as good a Fifth Column thriller as is likely to be written." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:511 D 20 '41 90w

"In a story whose mystery and excitement follow not unfamiliar—but always interesting—lines, Agatha Christie has found room for a wit which is both keen and significant." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 22 '41 360w

"Crisp, quick reading in this story, but the reader should be able to put his finger on the guilty parties about halfway through the book."

+ New Yorker 17:56 J1 5 '41 50w

"Engaging characters, bright dialogue, capital sea-shore boarding-house scenery, and plementous thrills—with one or two rather unbelievable bits. Good hunting."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 29 '41 180w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). The patriotic murders [Eng title: One, two, buckle my shoe]. 240p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Collins]

41-3325

Detective story.

Booklist 37:361 Ap 1 '41

"In fine fettle, Poirot is always a jump or two ahead of Inspector Japp, one of those cops with a genius for picking the wrong motive. He arrives at a hair-raising solution after a third casualty by methods he alone can handle—so you probably won't guess it. As always, this author provides generous amounts of entertainment over and above the bare bones of a puzzle. This seems to be a major Christie, the best thing currently in sight for all-around mystery merit." Will Cuppy
+ Books p25 Mr 2 '41 200w

"Agatha Christie is tops as you probably know, and I think you will agree that her latest, 'The Patriotic Murders' is right at the head of the list." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 40w

"In to-day's slang a girl is said to be not pretty but 'easy to look at.' To adapt the phrase it may be said of Mrs. Agatha Christie that she is 'easy to read,' and to be 'easy to read,' if not the greatest of qualities a writer may possess, is one of the most valuable. In her new book... this quality of 'easy to read' is well shown." E. R. Punshon
+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 13 '40 230w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:590 D 7 '40 310w

"It's a real Agatha Christie thriller: exceedingly complicated in plot, briskly and compactly simple in narrative, with a swift course of unflinching suspense that leads to complete surprise. After closing the book one may murmur, 'Far-fetched,' or even 'Impossible.' But any such complaint will be voiced only after the story has been finished; there won't be a moment to think of such things, before." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '41 320w

"Quite up to Miss Christie's par."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Mr 15 '41 50w

"Admirable."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Mr 1 '41 40w

"[The book] is up to all but Mrs. Christie's highest standards; but she sails rather near the wind in the matter of holding up vital clues till the dénouement." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 165:558 N 22 '40 200w

"It is no unusual compliment to the adroit work of this author to say that the reader will never suspect the identity of the triple murderer, as she always manages this kind of deception with skill. It may be said, however, that she almost outdoes herself in this fast-moving yarn."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 240w

Time 37:104 Ap 7 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 180w

CHRISTOWE, STOYAN. The lion of Yanina. 432p maps $3 Modern age

B or 92 AlI, pasha of Janina 41-10242

"A tale about war, murders, rape, tortures, wholesale massacres and persecution. Mr. Christowe's hero, Ali Pasha, was an Albanian who lived in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The victims of his sadism were the Albanians, the Greeks, the Jews, the Turks, the members of his own family and all those who happened to cross his sanguinary path. The memory of his exploits is deep-rooted, in the mountains of Albania and Epirus where people still talk about him with a shudder." Books

"This reviewer is at a loss to understand why Mr. Christowe did not write a historically accurate book; it could have been just as interesting, and at the same time it could have supplied the need for a creditable book in English on this important Balkan personage. These criticisms ought not to leave the reader with the impression that he will not find here a book that possesses fine literary qualities—a style that is masterful in narration. The chapters are appropriately short and well rounded, and the thread of the story is never lost sight of in the simulated dialogues and thought processes of the characters. The total effect is a complete success in holding the attention of the reader." S. G. Chaconas
+ Am Hist R 47:400 Ja '42 280w

"Mr Christowe's knowledge of the Balkans, and of the way of living of the Balkan people is admirable. His descriptions of feasts in the Pasha's palace are fascinating and the details of the massacres so gruesome that one visualizes the scenes with horror. This book is romantic rather than historical biography." Sonia Tomara

Books p6 My 18 '41 750w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson

Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 90w

"Stoyan Christowe has written an absorbing tale, colored with the spirit of the Balkans, and embellished with historic facts, the fruits of scholarly research of careful choosing." N. J. Matsoukas

+ N Y Times p9 My 25 '41 1350w

"It would be more entertaining if a few, at least, of the characters were less fantastic, and more instructive if the author had condescended to give an occasional date and a bit more explanation of attending circumstances, but it will do as an example of the kind of Oriental thriller Byron relished, and it has enough action, blood, and harem scenes to satisfy the most voracious taste for that sort of thing. The quotation from 'Childe Harold' facing the first page about 'crimes that scorn the tender voice of Ruth' would make more sense if the last word were spelled with a small 'r'." Garrett Mattingly
Sat R of Lit 24:19 My 31 '41 470w

CHURCH, GRANVILLE. Bombs burst once. 249p $2 Mill

41-21886

A novel of adventure and intrigue in a Latin American country, with a young American engineer as the hero.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p30 N 23 '41 80w

Christian Century 58:1340 O 29 '41 10w

"Its title-page designates this 'a novel of adventure.' But it is hardly a novel, by any contortion of the term; a novelette, rather, or longish short-story, a swift and lively narrative packed with adventure, intrigue, suspense and culminating in fiery action." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 D 7 '41 210w

"A clever story with some factual foundation. Its movement is swift and the implications not too improbable."

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 30w

CHURCHILL, RUEL VANCE. Fourier series and boundary value problems. 206p $2.50 McGraw 517.35 Fourier's series. Differential equations, Partial, Functions, Orthogonal

41-6013

"This is an introductory treatment of Fourier series and their application to the solution of boundary value problems in the partial differential equations of physics and engineering. It is designed for students who have had an introductory course in ordinary differential equations and one semester of advanced calculus, or an equivalent preparation. The concepts from the field of physics which are involved here are kept on an elementary level." (Pref) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 26:24 Ap '41

"It is to be regretted that there is no mention of the influence of singular points of the differential equation on the solutions of the equation. It is also felt that physicists would be pleased to find some problems treated which appear in modern physics. For example, the Schroedinger wave equation is not mentioned in the book. An excellent feature is the collection of interesting and instructive problems which seem to be of just the correct degree of difficulty. The book is well written and the selection and arrangement of material are unusually good." J. S. Koehler

+ — R of Scientific Instruments 12:492 O '41 480w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Blood, sweat, and tears; with a pref. and notes by Randolph S. Churchill [Eng title: Into battle], 462p $3 Putnam [8s 6d Cassell]

940.534 Europe—Politics, Great Britain—Defenses. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-51654

Collection of the speeches of the Prime Minister of England delivered during the period from May, 1938, to February, 1941. The arrangement is chronological. No index.

Reviewed by S. M. Scott

Ann Am Acad 217:181 S '41 410w

"The statements on the invasion of Norway are definitely too optimistic in retrospect, and it is questionable whether Mr. Churchill before or after the war found the key to the Russia which he wittily describes as 'a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma.' But in general the speeches give an accurate survey of the course of the war, and their cumulative effect is tonic and bracing." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '41 220w

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 My '41

"These are household words now in the language of democracy aroused; these are the phrases, as this is the spirit, that will ring down the years. This is the voice of a great leader and a great fighter for democracy, standing in one of the greatest crises in the history of the world." Walter Millis

+ Books p1 Ap 13 '41 1550w

"These speeches are among the greatest works ever penned. No one could fail to be moved by their power, insight, poetry and downright human qualities." J. C. Skinner

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 800w

Cath World 153:380 Je '41 210w

Christian Century 58:757 Je 4 '41 330w

"To stress the power of Mr. Churchill's language would be superfluous in a world to which the radio has brought this language with all the telling inflections, crescendos, pauses, and overtones of which Mr. Churchill's delivery is capable. Nevertheless, it is remarkable how the eye confirms the ear's memory. His spoken words do not 'go cold' in type. Print becomes a voice. . . This could be a sad book. But it is not. Only free men and women can know why." C. W. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 Ap 14 '41 700w

"For the American reader one fears that this selection may be too big—one of those books to have in your library and not to read. It would be a pity if it were so regarded, and one could have wished that by some means or other the speeches had been sorted out, so that the casual reader could immediately pitch upon those which have universal and historic import, as apart from those which, important as they were at time of delivery, had a relatively temporary parliamentary interest. But the reader will find the effort of selection worthwhile." Norman Angell

+ Current Hist & Forum 53:2 Je '41 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:881 Jl '41 10w

"Recommended for adults." Isabel Douglas

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 90w

"A historical and human document of the first order. [It] will be read as one of the great classics of statesmanship wherever and whenever the standards of reading are not prescribed by Chancellor Hitler." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 152:534 My 3 '41 800w

"I don't like to use superlatives, but Churchill has earned the right to be called the best public speaker in the world today. Others better qualified will use the present volume as an opportunity to analyze his policies of war and peace; in essence they are simple enough, being aimed at the one goal of preserving Britain and her empire. My own impulse is to make a few comments on his manner of writing. Churchill is one of the few professional authors who have ever been chosen to rule a great nation. He not only makes laws for his people but writes their songs as well, in the sense that his speeches are battle cries, dirges for the fallen and hymns of victory. Since his style reflects and helps to shape the mind of the Englishman at war, it is a subject of more than literary interest." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:537 Ap 21 '41 1600w

"As one reads these brilliant and carefully prepared pieces of oratory one is impressed with the simplicity of Mr. Churchill's mind. I do not mean that it lacks content; on the contrary it is a cultured, powerful and well-stocked mind. But it is so concentrated on the fight, so oblivious on the surface at least—of all the moral conflicts and doubts which afflicted most of his contemporaries about whether this or any war could be right; whether our own failures and mistakes have not ruled us out as world leaders, and whether it was right to fight without a better prospect than we had last summer. This certainly is a necessary quality of leadership. . . It is the absolute certainty, as well as the robust courage and the genial eloquence of these speeches which make them memorable. This certainty is an invaluable quality in a crisis; the fact that it arises from an outlook that excludes so many underlying features is forgotten for the time." Kingsley Martin

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:276 Mr 15 '41 800w

"These speeches read together give an insight not only into the quality of his mind, the strength of his leadership, but they show pretty clearly how the crisis became ever more acute, how the tempo of the war quickened. Above all, they make plain what Mr. Churchill and the people he leads and represents are fighting for with all their might. There must be few who after reading these speeches can believe that a negotiated peace is possible so long as Winston Churchill guides the destiny of the British Empire, for if one thing shines clear through all these addresses it is the profound conviction that a truce with nazism means the ultimate death of freedom." Raymond Daniel

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 13 '41 1400w

"An authoritative appraisal must be left to hands more competent than mine, but there are two general comments I should think any perceptive reader would be capable of making. The first is that these speeches, viewed now in retrospect, prove Churchill was right nine times out of ten in his judgment of the varying phases of the world crisis. The second is that much of this book is literature." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:88 Ap 19 '41 480w

"The test of a great democratic leader is whether he can [evoke responses from the masses] without resorting to the false demagoguery of the totalitarians. Judged by this test, Mr. Churchill in this volume of speeches proves his greatness. For he is master both of the spoken and written word." R. L. Buell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ap 19 '41 1150w

CHURCHILL, W. L. S.—Continued

"Many histories of this time will come to be written, but none will be better than this. Just as Wordsworth's 'Sonnets to Liberty,' read with their connecting story, make almost the best history of our struggle with Napoleon, and Abraham Lincoln's speeches and letters give us the best history of the American Civil War, so these speeches (admirably elucidated by Mr. Randolph Churchill's summary of events) give us the best and most authentic history of this war." Isaac Foot

+ Spec 166:177 F 14 '41 1300w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:296 My '41 550w

Time 37:98 Ap 14 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

"This book could be analyzed with profit as an anthology of English prose wherefrom one might learn much concerning both the orator's technique and the Prime Minister's personality. It could be considered as the raw material of the historian. . . Or the book could be considered simply as dramatic narrative, for it amounts to a running commentary upon the preliminaries and development of the war, interspersed with descriptive passages as fine as anything to be found in British historiography. Any one of these considerations might be a study fit for the pen of a Morley, a Bryce, or a Stephen. But there is something else to consider about this book, and therein lies what will undoubtedly be its perennial appeal to later generations. For the fact is, Churchill's speeches have themselves become major events in the war." C. H. Driver

+ Yale R n s 30:812 summer '41 1400w

CHUTE, MARCHETTE GAYLORD. Rhymes about the country; il. by [the author]. 75p $1.50 Macmillan

811

(W) 41-4025

Verses about the activities of very small people in the country, illustrated with silhouettes.

Booklist 37:363 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Mr 9 '41 50w

"A charming book. . . The author's appealing silhouettes of these engaging wee ones and their various activities are as important as the verses they illustrate. Planned from cover to cover for the smallest members of the family, this is a book they will truly enjoy and we venture to expect that many older than they will appreciate it." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 31 '41 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 90w

Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

CHUTE, MARCHETTE GAYLORD. The search for God. 320p $2.75 Dutton

231 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. God (W) 41-2733

The author believes that the theologian, the scholar, and the historian are alike handicapped in their efforts to understand the Bible, which is above all, a "book of the spirit." She attempts to let the Bible illuminate itself. The argument is divided into four parts: a consideration of the Book of Job, which vindicates man's right to search; the object of the search as revealed in the text of Genesis; the search itself as it unfolds thru the Old Testament; and the end of the search as fulfilled in the life of Jesus.

"The findings of her intelligent mind are more enlightening than one might expect, though not strikingly original."

Christian Century 58:154 Ja 29 '41 90w

"No one can peruse this book without gaining a clearer understanding of the ceaseless search for God made by humanity and the reward in the revelation of Christ Jesus. The quotations throughout are from the Smith and Goodspeed translation published by the University Press which the author adopts for what seem excellent reasons." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 22 '41 900w

Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by F. D. Elmer, Jr.

J Religion 21:326 J1 '41 240w

"This reviewer believes that Miss Chute's book fulfills a real need, but he cannot refrain from asking, 'Has the search ended?'" O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 65:1087 D 15 '40 210w

Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

CISSEL, JAMES HARLAN. Stress analysis and design of elementary structures. 335p il $4 Wiley

624.1 Structures, Theory of. Strains and stresses 41-51505

"In this textbook, the author has attempted to collect and arrange in a logical order the basic principles and procedures which relate to the stress analysis and design of simple structures. The presentation of material is based on the assumption that the student has completed the study of statics and of strength of materials." (Pref) The author is professor of structural engineering at the University of Michigan. Index.

Booklist 37:237 F 1 '41

Eng N 126:72 Ap 24 '41 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:29 Ap '41

CIVIL SERVICE ASSEMBLY OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA. Committee on employee training in the public service. Employee training in the public service; a report by the Committee, Milton Hall, chairman. (Policies and practices in public personnel administration) 172p $2.50 The assembly 351.1 U.S.—Officials and employees. Education of adults. Civil service—U.S.

41-8988

"This volume is one of a series of 'practical manuals' on specific problems in public personnel administration, growing out of the deliberations of committees appointed by the Civil Service Assembly. The employee training committee consisted of twenty-seven persons, most of them actively engaged in training work. The chairman and author of three of the seven chapters was Milton Hall of the Farm Credit Administration. . . A dozen persons, only part of them members of the committee, contributed chapters or collaborated in the preparation thereof. The material presented is based upon intensive field research, including, it is claimed, contributions from three hundred contributors, and combining the experience of some four hundred participants. Upon the basis of full information as to what is actually being done, and a knowledge of what is needed, it is the purpose of this and companion volumes to present forward-looking policies and effective practices for the guidance of administrators in the personnel field." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by Leona Baumgartner

Am J Pub Health 31:1096 O '41 430w

"Personnel managers, executives, supervisors, and employees—public and private—should welcome this volume and the others to come as valuable additions to the too scanty literature on specific phases of personnel management, and the Civil Service Assembly is to be congratulated on the launching and early completion of so valuable an enterprise." E. A. Cottrell

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:991 O '41 750w

"The style is clear and direct. The tendency at times to list if not to elaborate the obvious is probably a necessary limitation of the manual form, which is concerned rather with the logical arrangement and cataloguing of existing information than with the development of the new." W. B. Graves

+ Ann Am Acad 218:228 N '41 550w

CLAGETT, MARSHALL. Giovanni Marliani and late medieval physics. 182p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

530.9 Marliani, Giovanni. Physics—History. Science, Medieval 41-10348

"Mr. Clagett begins with an accurate biography of his author for which he has utilized the available documents. It results that Giovanni Marliani was born in the first quarter of the fifteenth century in Milan, and that from 1441 to his death in 1483, except for a few brief interruptions, he was teaching natural philosophy and medicine at the University of Pavia. . . . The greater part of the study is dedicated to an analysis of Marliani's preserved writings, except for those contained in a manuscript at Pavia photostats of which could not be obtained because of the war." (J Philos) Index.

"Mr. Clagett presents these difficult and intricate problems in a clear and understandable form. Those interested in details will appreciate his ample quotations and bibliographical references. We hope that he will continue his researches in this important field." P. O. K.

+ J Philos 38:643 N 6 '41 700w

"Dr. Clagett's work is scholarly and of great value to the better understanding of this difficult period." W. I. Book

+ R of Scientific Instruments 12:506 O '41 650w

CLAPESATTLE, HELEN. The Doctors Mayo. 822p il $3.75 Univ. of Minn.

926.1 Mayo, Charles Horace. Mayo, William James. Mayo, William Worrall (W)

"The Doctors Mayo' is the story of three men, but also of far more. It spans nearly a century in American life, beginning with the spring of 1845, when the Old Doctor, then a boyish twenty-five, landed from England and went to work, probably as a pharmacist, in the shambles of New York's Bellevue. In the years that intervened before the death of his famous sons in 1939, there was the spectacular development of the Middle West with which the Mayos' own story is intertwined." (Books) The author is a trained historian, working under the sponsorship of the University of Minnesota. Illustrated with photographs. Bibliographical notes. Index.

Booklist 38:129 D 15 '41

"It is singularly fortunate that the concept of this biography was that of a historian, now president of the University of Minnesota. . . . It is equally fortunate that the writing of the book has been the work of another historian, who has savored, as well as studied, life on the frontier and the farms and in the towns which followed them, and especially in that almost fabulous town which became the symbol of the work of the brothers. . . . Miss Clapesattle writes directly, concretely and modestly, with no parade of learning. Throughout, moreover, her book is illumined by the spirit of these men—by their hopes, jokes, struggles and goals, as well as their achievements." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 D 14 '41 1550w

"The narrative is straightforward, non-technical, and will interest—besides doctors and the million or more former Mayo patients—all who like an exciting story. Of a caliber to rank with Dr. Cushing's great life of Osler." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 66:998 N 15 '41 100w

"[The character] traits [of the doctors Mayo] and many others are skillfully synthesized in Miss Clapesattle's ample biography. Equally admirable is the succinct depiction of many incidental personages. Thus the illustrious Halsted is deftly characterized as 'a shy, unapproachable perfectionist.' Such details tend to make the background of the book as vivid as the foreground. The integration, however, is excellent throughout, since the author has constantly attempted to show the relation between man and man, and between men and conditions. It is a pleasure to testify that her attempt has been successful." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

+ N Y Times p7 D 14 '41 1250w

"Miss Clapesattle has given us a careful, authoritative biography. It may contain too much detail for the general reader's taste, and its painstaking conscientiousness gives it more than an occasional Victorian flavor. One feels that somehow it should have been more exciting. Nevertheless, this is a significant and peculiarly American story ably told. Dr. Will and Dr. Charlie would have liked it." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 3 '42 1050w

"In conjunction with the story of the careers of these men, many anecdotes and incidents in their private lives are given. It is a well-rounded yarn, and in using this word we do not mean to detract from the basic importance of the book but rather to commend it. Their family life, their hobbies and recreations; their travels and honors all take their chronological place. Dr. Charlie's supreme gift for human contacts, Dr. Will's more studied kindness, the difference in physical appearance, the peculiar genius of each, and above all their teamwork are described with vigor and sympathy." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:1 Ja '42 1050w

"Truly the lives of these giants among surgeons is told so vividly and entertainingly by Helen Clapesattle that once started it is difficult to lay the book aside. It deserves to rank with the great biographies."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 900w

"The Doctors Mayo' is a big book in every sense of that term. It is hard to hold, but still harder to lay down." Mary Ross

+ Survey G 31:38 Ja '42 900w

CLAPHAM, JOHN HAROLD, ed. See Cambridge economic history of Europe

CLARK, MRS ANN NOLAN. In my mother's house; il. by Velino Herrera. 56p $2 Viking Indians of North America—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51741

The author, who has worked among the Indians for ten years, found a need for books written from the Indian point of view to be used in the Indian schools. The present book, based on Indian children's notebooks is the result. It is the story of everyday life in the pueblo villages, told in simple rhythmic prose, and illustrated with pictures in black and white, and in color.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

"The pictures would be enough to distinguish this book of the world as Indian children see it in a pueblo near Santa Fe. Herrera's technique is in the Indian tradition, though he is no traditionalist, and Indian art is pictorial. Moreover, his use of color has the balance between brightness and softness, between what we see and what we wish were there, that all children love. But the more one weighs relative importance of text and pictures the more one realizes that, while there have been other pictures as beautiful, it would be hard to find use of words—call it poetry or prose as you prefer—carrying a beautiful meaning more clearly to a young mind: what life means to a primitive community, close to earth and sky." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 11 '41 320w

CLARK, A. N.—Continued

"The book has great beauty. It is not only fully illustrated by a distinguished painter with complete understanding of Indian life and art, but it is a perfect picture book, because type and language are both suited to the 'easy-reading' stage. Schools all over the country should give warm welcome to this book based on the note books of Indian children in the West." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:102 Mr '41 110w

"Written to answer the need for books with the Indian point of view for use in Indian schools, the book has great significance for white children as well. . . Will probably be used by children from ten to twelve, although there is no age limit. A well-made book, good paper and print." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 20w

"Here is a realistic book for little children transfigured by imagination; a rare achievement and one very welcome in the field of children's books about the Indians. . . It gives to little children as no other book has a sense of knowing Indian boys and girls and the feeling of experiences shared. . . A distinguished American book." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 My 4 '41 400w

"At last a successful book about the Pueblo Indians."

+ New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

CLARK, DELBERT. Washington dateline. 322p $3 Stokes

071 Reporters and reporting. Journalism
41-21960

"Aims to inform the newspaper-reading public about the special problems encountered in reporting the nation's business. There are about five hundred correspondents in the 'elite corps of the American press,' ranging from the single representative of a small town newspaper to the reporters for the great press associations. Each of these must master the techniques suited to his particular assignment. Chapters are devoted to 'Syndicated Oracles,' women reporters, and the Office of Government Reports." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 38:151 Ja 1 '42

"It is a book which should be of interest to both the readers and the writers of Washington dispatches, and to perverse children who hope to grow up to be Washington correspondents." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p18 N 16 '41 650w

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins

Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 130w

"Tart and informative."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 15 '41 60w

CLARK, DOROTHY K., and others. Essays in modern English history, in honor of Wilbur Cortez Abbott. 404p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

942.004 Great Britain—History. Abbott, Wilbur Cortez
A41-572

Collection of essays by former pupils of Professor Abbott. Contents: A restoration Goldsmith-Banking house: the vine on Lombard street, by D. K. Clark; The reconcilers and the restoration (1660-1662), by E. W. Kirby; English party politics (1688-1714), by Robert Walcott, Jr.; Some sidelights upon the general election of 1715, by W. T. Morgan; Acadia and the beginnings of modern British imperialism, by L. H. Gipson; The organization of General Sullivan's army in the Rhode Island campaign of 1778, by E. E. Curtis; The Penobscot expedition, by W. S. Hayward; Madras in 1787, by Holden Furber; George III: historians and a royal reputation, by G. R. Crosby; Maritime adventures of New York in the Napoleonic era, by R. G. Albion; English game law reform, by Chester Kirby; From Huskisson to Peel: a study in mercantilism, by A. R. M. Lower.

Reviewed by J. H. Hexter

Am Hist R 47:329 Ja '42 900w

Reviewed by D. J. McDougall

Canadian Hist R 22:196 Je '41 750w

Christian Century 58:807 Je 18 '41 210w

New Repub 105:29 Jl 7 '41 50w

Social Studies 32:240 My '41 20w

"This book is a worthy tribute to Prof. Abbott, and its sponsors and contributors are to be congratulated for their effort. It is an excellent example of the applications of the conscientious historical methods Prof. Abbott advocated and taught. In addition, the essays themselves are of more general interest and significance than those found in many similar collections." D. D.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Je 23 '41
300w

CLARK, GEORGE LINDENBERG. Applied X-rays. 3d ed 674p il $6 (42s) McGraw

637.53 X-rays 40-31008

"The eight years since the appearance of the second edition of this book have been filled with intense research activities, industrial and chemical achievement, widening interest in and acceptance of the truth as it is disclosed by the invisible rays of Roentgen's discovery forty-five years ago. . . It was useless to retain more than mere fragments of the 1932 version. . . It has been necessary to bring the subject matter up to date, and this has involved not only expansion but also a changing viewpoint." (Pref) For second edition see Book Review Digest, 1933. Index.

Reviewed by C. D. West

Am Chem Soc J 63:887 Mr '41 160w

"In spite of the fact that during the past few years there has been a considerable increase in general knowledge of the applications of X-rays, the possibilities and limitations of this tool are not well understood by those not working in the field. Problems are constantly arising which could be more satisfactorily settled by X-ray methods than in any other way, yet those confronted with these problems in many instances are unaware of this. To them, this book may prove very useful. Perhaps because of this enthusiasm for his subject, the author occasionally includes statements (usually of a minor nature) which are either definitely incorrect or which give the reader an erroneous impression." M. L. Huggins

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:907 O 25 '40
400w

"One purpose of the author is to show the value of X-rays as a great practical research tool in industry. His success is unquestionable. . . Because of the complex nature of X-ray equipment and interpretation more than half the book is devoted to the scientific and instrumental basis of X-ray technique and is by far the best presentation available." W. L. Abramowitz

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:807 N '40 400w

"In spite of the inaccuracies the reviewer feels that the book is to be enthusiastically recommended. It should point the way to the solution of many problems in chemistry, physics, medicine, and industry, and deserves an even greater success than the earlier editions." H. P. Klug

+ J Phys Chem 45:1053 Je '41 600w

"Prof. Clark has produced an admirable guide to the applications of X-rays; his volume is expensive, but there is nothing quite like it in Great Britain. It can be sure of a welcome." F. I. G. Rawlins

+ Nature 148:36 Jl 12 '41 800w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:14 Ja '41

CLARK, GLENN. How to find health through prayer. 154p $1.50 Harper 615.852 Faith cure, Prayer 41-522

The author, after acknowledging the value of medicine and exercise in maintaining health, goes on to show how right thinking and a right attitude toward God and man can often cure or prevent disease.

"The skeptic will find himself unconvinced by many of Mr. Clark's unsupported assertions about the exact mental causes and cures for specific diseases."

Christian Century 58:123 Ja 22 '41 300w

"The author, professor of English at Macalester College, has the ability to write well and is filled with zeal and assurance. He can be defined, judging by this book, as one of the men who evolves out of his own consciousness his own religion. There is hardly a reference in the book to what any other person has said, and the lack of careful study of psychology, psychiatry, and psychotherapy is woefully evident. Stranger yet, the author's ability to read the scriptures for himself betrays an independence which makes this book sound like something we have read in Science in Health." H. J. Simpson
— Churchman 155:17 Je 1 '41 250w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt
Crozer Q 18:276 Jl '41 250w

"The treatment suggested for curing diseases by prayer, faith, and meditation sounds like Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures plus Buchmanism. The chapter on glands and Oriental mysticism is perhaps the weirdest in the book" H. W. Hansen
— J Religion 21:229 Ap '41 160w

CLARK, GRAHAME. Prehistoric England. (English countryside ser) 120p il map $3 Scribner [8s 6d Batsford]

913.42 England—Antiquities [A41-1326]

Description of prehistoric remains in England, with many photographs, some taken from the air showing outlines of former castle sites, fortifications, etc. Contents: Introductory; The food quest; Dwellings; Handicrafts; Mining and trade; Communications; Hill-forts; Burial; Sacred sites, Index.

"Now that this remarkable book has been added to the English Country-side series of illustrated monographs, it seems wonderful that this was not done before: the general reader has had nothing till now to reveal the amazing records of pre-Conquest culture and prehistoric life on the island. For this, indeed, a quite recent technique of illustration was required; it is only within the last decade that through aerial photography and improvements in this field that there could spring to life the outlines of farms, building sites, camps, fortifications, invisible on the ground but plainly seen as the high-flown camera picked up differences in soil remaining from millennial earth-disturbances."

+ Books p14 Je 29 '41 200w

"Admirable and discreet in text, and pictorially magnificent." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 22 '41 10w

Reviewed by H. N. Brailsford
New Statesman & Nation 21:189 F 22 '41 600w

"Mr. Clark's book is timely and attractive. Mr. Clark is a lucid though unpretentious writer. He knows how to state a fact without appendages, and how to produce a theory without evoking a myth. He limits himself to the task of presenting the material which may be confidently associated with man's life in early Britain." C. E. Vulliamy
+ Spec 166:124 Ja 31 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 11 '41 650w

CLARK, KENNETH WILLIS. Eight American praxapostoloi. 204p il $2 Univ. of Chicago press

225.48 Bible. New Testament—Manuscripts 41-3606

"'Praxapostoloi' are New Testament manuscripts containing Acts and the Epistles. There are ten of these in America, of which two—the Michigan-Beatty codex and the Washington-Freer codex—have been fully published and are well-known to specialists. In the present volume Dr. Clark describes the other eight, with facsimiles, and gives their special readings in a 'composite collation' that exhibits their nature and groupings verse by verse. . . . As all are medieval, ranging from the twelfth to the fourteenth century, they throw little light on the original text of the New Testament but help considerably toward understanding its history in the Middle Ages." (Churchman) Plates grouped at end of volume.

"Textual students will not need to be told what valuable source material has been placed in their hands by Professor Clark's painstaking work."

+ Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 170w
Churchman 155:35 My 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin
J Religion 21:327 Jl '41 260w

CLARK, RUTH. Because of Batty's boots; il. by Isobel Morton-Sale. 176p $2 Dodd [6s Dent]

Mystery story for ten-year-old readers, in which three English children chase a gang of cattle thieves.

"At every turn the unexpected keeps the story going. Its surprising feature is that the chaps really are thieves; the next is that though everybody is naturally lawabiding the three crusaders are playing all the time on the ragged edge of the law. A happy ending saves even the two malefactors from trouble, and drawings of unusual charm keep pace with the adventures." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ja 11 '42 360w

"An excellent shortish book. . . . There is a vivid sense of the marketing scene, of muddy country lanes and wintry farms. The characters are seen humorously but not patronisingly. Boys and girls from eight to twelve will enjoy this book very much." Rosamond Lehmann

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:576 D 7 '40 80w

"It is certainly surprising to find three English rectory children up to such monkeyshines, and it is as funny as it is unexpected. It takes a quick brain to keep up with the fast-moving complications of the plot and American children may find the English vernacular, which is freely employed a little confusing but they will scarcely grudge that in view of the sheer entertainment value. Isobel Morton-Sale has accented both background and comedy with her amusing and evocative illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 20 '41 500w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
Spec 165:618 D 6 '40 60w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEER. The west coast of South America. 358p il maps $3 Prentice-Hall

918 South America—Description and travel (W) 41-8241

A guidebook based on a thirty-eight day cruise from New York to Panama and down the west coast of South America to Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina. The work follows the same general plan as the author's earlier books on the South American East coast and Hawaii, and is divided into three sections: The foreground of the picture; The background of the picture; Yourself in the picture. Index.

CLARK, S. A.—Continued

Booklist 37:513 Jl 1 '41

Books p14 Je 1 '41 160w

"A valuable and timely book. . . There is valuable information in the book both for the one who travels for business and for the tourist, in addition to fascinating, historical information. Highly recommended." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 140w

CLARK, THOMAS BLAKE. Omai, first Polynesian ambassador to England. ltd ed 120p il on rag pa $3.50 Colt

B or 92 Omai of Ulaietea 41-4400

"Fanny Burney mentions him. Horace Walpole mentions him. Boswell mentions him. But Thomas Blake Clarke's book is the first full-length account of Omai (pronounced Oh. My!), the Polynesian Islander, who for two years (1774-76) was 'the Lyon of Lyons' of London drawing rooms." Time

"To tell a story of such contrast with absolutely flawless skill and effect is far from easy. The narrator must be equally master of both worlds. Mr. Clark is not always that. He sometimes expounds a little when he might have merely hinted or implied. He refers to Joseph Banks as Sir Joseph in 1774 when actually that Banks did not have a title till seven years afterward. But there are not many such slips in the book, and it must take a pleasant and lasting place in the literature concerned with Hawaii." Carl Van Doren

+ Books p13 Jl 6 '41 500w

"It is Omai's picturesque and amusing adventures in the British Isles that Thomas Blake Clark recounts with a spicy wit and a light touch. The author's qualifications for this task are peculiarly adequate, for he specialized in the field of eighteenth-century English literature and his life and experience as a teacher at the University of Hawaii have given him a thorough knowledge of native psychology. . . It is a gay tale, ornamented with the spoils of sound scholarship." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p5 D 29 '40 1300w

Time 37:74 Ja 27 '41 650w

CLARK, THOMAS BLAKE. Paradise limited. 299p il $2.75 Modern age

996.9 Hawaiian Islands—History 41-19538

"[This] 'Informal History of the Fabulous Hawaiians' . . . is largely anecdotal, spun from old wives' yarns and sailors' diaries. . . But the book is by no means frivolous. The development of Hawaiian industries, the fight towards statehood, the tragedy of racial absorption, are intelligently discussed between chapters of amusing gossip." Sat R of Lit

"This professor of English at the University of Hawaii has eschewed academic ponderousness and produced the most amusing and entertaining history of the Islands it has been my pleasure to read." P. J. Searles

+ Books p22 N 23 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder
Churchman 155:34 N 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by J. L. Duff
Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 140w

"Nothing very serious, but a lively story entertainingly told."

+ New Yorker 17:103 O 11 '41 40w

"The author has evidently reconstructed many scenes and conversations to fit his narrative, but they do fit perfectly and should trouble none but the most captious historian. He has dealt fairly with missionary, trader and politician, and the scandal he reports is rarely in poor taste. His book should be of interest not only to travel readers but to all who like vital characters, real or fictive, in a dramatic setting." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ja 3 '42 330w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 11 '41 420w

CLARKE, HERMANN FREDERICK. John Hull, a builder of the Bay colony. ltd ed 221p il on rag pa $10 Southworth-Anthoensen B or 92 Hull, John. Massachusetts—History. Silversmithing 41-4430

"John Hull was . . . a representative man of the Bay Colony, an officer of his church, master of the mint where the famous pine-tree shillings were coined, land speculator and horse trader, ship-owner and West India merchant, exporter of lumber and peltry, counselor, judge and treasurer of his beloved Bible Commonwealth. Mr. Clarke has written a most interesting account of this many-sided life, for which there is an amusing diary as principal source. And throughout this active public and mercantile career covering half a century, Hull and his partner Robert Saunderson, an English-trained goldsmith but a Puritan like himself, were turning out silverware for secular and ecclesiastical uses which (as the illustrations prove) will bear comparison with the simpler work of contemporary silversmiths in England or France." Books

Reviewed by S. E. Morison

Books p1 Ja 5 '41 500w

"On the whole, it is a scholarly, accurate book, written so that any gentleman can read it with advantage and enjoyment. It gives a good picture of John Hull, and a good picture of the Bay Colony. If there were more scholars who could write as interestingly, and more historical writers who knew half as much of what they were talking about, perhaps more students would be interested in the study of history." J. D. Phillips

+ New Eng Q 14:381 Je '41 650w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

"The book has been faintly damned as 'a good history of Boston,' since it leaves something lacking in its consideration of [Hull's] work as a silversmith." C. P. Rollins

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 25 '41 120w

CLARKE, THOMAS WOOD. Emigrés in the wilderness. 247p il maps $3 Macmillan

325.244 French in the United States 41-20014

An account of one of the early post-Revolution immigrations to the United States, that of the French refugees from revolutionary and Napoleonic France. These émigrés bought extensive lands in the wilderness of upper New York state, where tho they struggled with the hardships of pioneer living, they were yet able to build luxurious mansions and to live in a manner far surpassing other settlers. In general their "colonies" were not permanent and they disappeared leaving behind only ruined mansions and certain legends and traditions. Bibliography. Index.

"This is mild anecdotal history, simply and pleasantly told." Albert Guerard

Books p20 O 19 '41 400w

Christian Century 58:1242 O 8 '41 90w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 29 '41

New Repub 105:517 O 20 '41 80w

"Although it deals with events which took place from a century to a century and a half ago, Dr. Clarke's amazingly interesting volume has an extraordinary timeliness in this year of 1941. . . Wisely enough, however—for there are differences as apparent as the resemblances—Dr. Clarke does not stress the parallel. He leaves it to the reader's imagination. What he does instead is to throw the spotlight upon a dramatic and a much too little known series of episodes in American history, telling, in an undecorated but well-documented narrative, the straightforward story of French lords and ladies in the Susquehanna wilderness." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p3 S 28 '41 900w

"This study brings together isolated materials which well deserve treatment. As a whole, though, it is useful more for the avenues of thought it opens up than for its exploration of them." Donald Derby

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 O 16 '41 550w

CLARKE, WILLIAM KEMP LOWTHER, ed. The story of the Old Testament. 554p il pi maps $2 Macmillan

221.95 Bible. Old Testament—Selections. Bible. Old Testament—History of biblical events 41-3151

"Selections from the Old Testament, in the text of the Revised Version, arranged topically and so printed as to invite the eye and assist the understanding. The passages are sufficient in extent and variety to give the most important substance of the Old Testament, including the Apocrypha." (Christian Century) The book is divided into twelve chapters, following the main divisions of history.

"Perhaps intended for use in schools or by young people, but equally useful to adults who would like to be tempted to read these classics, and to read more than a chapter at a time."

+ Christian Century 57:353 Mr 13 '40 80w

Reviewed by L. W. Batten

Churchman 154:15 My 1 '40 160w

"This is an excellent presentation of an old theme. Wherever necessary simple interpretations and historical connections are briefly made. Excellent illustrations are frequent; maps and charts are found wherever necessary; most of the important archaeological material to date is presented; the lines of approved scholarship are, in general, followed with adequate explanation. . . This is an admirable book that ought to be widely used in educational work in the Sunday school." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 17:236 Jl '40 180w

CLASON, CLYDE B. Green shiver. 274p $2 Doubleday

41-607

Detective story.

"Good fun and a bargain lot of green shivers." Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 2 '41 140w

"A lot of modern Chinese history is involved, as well as some spiritual hocus-pocus. The Professor is an always-welcome detective." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 50w

"Mrs. Vayne is a collector of jade, and several of the other characters in the story are deeply interested in it in one way or another. Unless the reader shares that interest he is likely to find much of the narrative tiresome and confusing and to wonder whether he is reading a treatise on jade or a detective story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 F 2 '41 160w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 F 8 '41 40w

CLAWSON, HAMILTON PHELPS. By their works; il. from the collections in the Buffalo museum of science. 236p $4 Buffalo soc. of natural sciences, Buffalo museum of science, Humboldt park, Buffalo, N.Y.

570.74 Archeology. Ethnology 41-14794

"A concise factual survey of primitive cultures. . . Of 230 pages in the main text 107 are given over to extremely impressive photographs which show in their rich variety just what those 'works' were and are. The book is illustrated from the collections in the Buffalo Museum of Science, and was prepared by the aid of a Rockefeller Foundation grant under the auspices of the Buffalo Society of Natural Sciences; its interest, needless to say, is general, as it looks at the 'works of man' around the world and through uncounted millenniums before written history began." N Y Times

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

"The special value of this book is in its wide range and compact expression; and its photographs in themselves offer the beginnings of a knowledge to whose further pursuit they are a forceful stimulus."

+ N Y Times p31 O 19 '41 480w

CLAYTON, JOSEPH. Pope Innocent III and his times. (Science and culture ser) 204p maps $2.25 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Innocent III, pope 41-2891

"Innocent III was a very great Pope who gave his remarkable talents and energy to the work of peace, order and justice, to clarifying the truth and upholding the moral law at a time when error and violence and lust were hard to restrain. He has a message for any age. If Mr. Clayton merely wanted to tell a good story, he found plenty of dramatic incident and movement in a restless surging Europe of crusaders and anti-social heresies, of lawless kings, of great saints and sinners among the clergy. If he wished to pose as an historian of ideas and institutions, he had feudalism in its diverse forms, the empire torn by internal strife, Rome and its eternal factions." America

"The book is, on the whole, a good surface treatment of an important phase of European history. The author had abundant material in the six small volumes of Luchaire, whose general tone needed, incidentally, some correction. He also had a few scattered monographs on the period, besides rather full chapters in more general works. Finally, he could consult the numerous letters of Innocent in Migne. Some of his sweeping statements call for qualification. It can be left to the reader to pronounce on a literary style that abounds in inversions, parentheses and appositional phrases." R. Corrigan

+ — America 64:638 Mr 15 '41 490w

"If fidelity to truth means anything these days then this book is to be recommended. But only to those who want a popular life of the great medieval pope. Scholars looking for an authoritative, thorough and detailed account will be disappointed. It's a pity that the author and editor did not include in an appendix the more important bulls and encyclicals of this master statesman of Christendom."

+ — Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 70w

CLEAVELAND, MRS AGNES (MORLEY). No life for a lady; il. by Edward Borein. (Life in America ser) 356p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Ranch life. Frontier and pioneer life—New Mexico (W) 41-13022

Reminiscences of life on a New Mexico cattle ranch fifty years ago when the Wild West was considerably wilder than it is today, when cowboys didn't know they were picturesque, when horse rustlers were to be handled as seemed best on the occasion, when young ladies punched cows and hunted grizzlies in between school terms.

"The author's reminiscences make vivid the everyday details of the cattle industry from the earliest years of the open range. For that reason they make not only a hair-raising and spine-tingling personal narrative, but also a document of history." Wilson Follett

CLEVELAND, AGNES—Continued

+ Atlantic S '41 250w

+ Booklist 38:9 S '41

Bookmark 2:12 N '41

"A safe bet in these uncertain times: This personal history, telling of the ups and downs of a woman who was born in New Mexico in 1874 and is still going strong, will be immensely popular. . . . Moreover, the book will in large measure, deserve its success. It is authentic, well written and, in many passages, downright charming—unless 'charming' has come to be an ugly epithet. Nothing quite like it has come out of the Southwest. It is a valuable addition to the literature of what the boys in the back room have learned to call 'the American way of life.'" Stanley Walker

+ Books p3 Ag 10 '41 1400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 JI '41

"Our present concern with the affairs of every nation under the sun is creditable, but an occasional dip in books like this one will help to strike a balance; and, after all, it is well to have a good background knowledge of this country's growth. Mrs. Cleveland has done a good job in her own particular corner of this great nation." Maurice Lavanoux

+ Commonweal 34:497 S 12 '41 390w

"Her adventures are many, told with gusto in short chapters with captivating headings and line drawings. To enjoy this book a girl should be definitely interested in western ranch life in the early days." Mabel Williams

+ Horn Bk M 17:487 N '41 80w

"Good reading. Recommended generally." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 66:613 JI '41 70w

"Under Mrs. Cleveland's hand, the whole brightly hued pattern of cow-country life of the latter half of the last century emerges with clarity. She regrets the changes that have come with the years, the invasion of the country by literati and tourists, the theatrical changes in cowboys, the part the government has played in the division and control of land. But her regret is not bitter; the humor and good sense and philosophy that characterize all her reactions are not absent in her critical judgments." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '41 1450w

"Topnotch Americana, honestly and entertainingly told."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Ag 9 '41 30w

Reviewed by Fairfax Downey

Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 16 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

CLEAVINGER, JOHN SIMEON. Library personnel and training agencies in Michigan. 106p pa $1.25 A.L.A.

027.0774 Libraries—Michigan. Librarians. Library schools and training 40-13395

"This survey was undertaken in the autumn of 1938, under the sponsorship of the Board of Education for Librarianship of the American Library Association, to find out something about the people in Michigan libraries; about their qualifications, the effect of working conditions on their educational and professional development, and the opportunities offered in the state for training for the various kinds and levels of library service. It is not an attempt to appraise the effectiveness of the libraries in their service to their constituents." (p.5) Index.

Booklist 37:5 S '40

"The survey by Mr. Cleavinger has brought out many facts which should be helpful to other parts of the country as well as to the state of Michigan. The results are objectively presented and constitute a good teaching tool for use in library administration classes."

H. E. Howe

+ Library Q 11:364 JI '41 1950w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Republican letters; ed. by Cyril Clemens; foreword by Hugh Walpole. 51p il $2 Int. Mark Twain soc.

817

41-17115

"This little book is made up for the most part of articles Mark Twain wrote for the Chicago Republican in 1868. They comprise a description of Mark's voyage from New York to California via steamer and the Panama railroad; a story told him by Captain Ned Wakeman, with whom Mark sailed from California in 1866; a description of springtime in the Rockies, and one or two other small items." Christian Science Monitor

"For the most part these Republican pieces are slapdash humor, but there are touches of Mark Twain eloquence in descriptions of landscape."

+ — Books p14 JI 20 '41 240w

"This is a good example of his pre-Innocent Abroad days. Collectors will of course want to include it among their Twainiana."

+ Christian Century 58:911 JI 16 '41 90w

"These slight sketches which Mark doubtless tossed off with his left hand add nothing to the essential Mark Twain. But still I am glad to have read them for one or two moments." Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 11 '41 390w

CLEMENTS, EILEEN HELEN. Bright intervals. 260p $2 Dutton [8s 3d Hodder]

40-35459

A sequel to the author's Let Him Die (Book Review Digest, 1940). The earlier novel was classed as a mystery story, involving a murder and its detection, but in this one, following again the fortunes of the Chattan family, the author has given them "a holiday . . . [with] such small adventures as they have . . . due to Natural Causes—to wind and water."

"It is a captivating story, flavored with good talk and wise analysis." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 Ja 5 '41 250w

"A sparkling, easy read story of extremely pleasant, attractive people living in luxury and dolce far niente idleness at a Devon coast resort. . . . We do wish that the Chattans' neighbors, in order to be their foils, need not be quite so incredibly crude and insulting. But perhaps we are unnecessarily carping, for in pure comedy like this, its entertainment is the thing." Ruth Blodgett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 240w

"In her foreword Miss Clements apologizes to readers of her mystery story, 'Let Him Die,' who may 'consider that, in the present volume, they are not getting their money's worth.' The apology is, actually, unnecessary, for if the five Chattans of the previous book are not, here, grouped round a corpse, so versatile and unusual a family was bound, even in a bright holiday interval, to provide excitement, danger and tension enough to keep the average glutton for suspense glued to the page." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 5 '41 700w

"The story is intriguing in action, albeit rather slangy in the mouths of otherwise pleasant companions."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Ag 31 '40 150w

CLEMENTS, EILEEN HELEN. Rain every day. 310p $2.50 Dutton [8s 3d Hodder]

41-14659

"Andrew Lassan, the vague novelist who had no trace of the genius that his admirers invented for him, and his long-suffering wife and nine if precocious children, all living in a ramshackle old farm in Cornwall, accept with equanimity the various representatives of the intelligentsia from London who descend upon them and try to pull each his own string to extricate the so-called genius from his environment. But Sandy, if not the type of genius that his friends thought him, has quite another genius of his own and succeeds, with the help of his self-effacing wife, in being true to this." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This crisp comedy has bite and wisdom as well as gayety. E. H. Clements was fluent and sophisticated in 'Bright Intervals,' writing with an ease which is equally evident in 'Rain Every Day,' but here she has a plot with more ballast and one which calls upon a less obvious exercise of the tools of craftsmanship. She meets the requirements to a highly satisfying degree." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 S 28 '41 600w

"I do not know who Miss E. H. Clements is, but her novel, 'Rain Every Day,' is a beautiful and distinguished book." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 18 '41 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '41 200w

"Miss Clements has a sly way with her, and it is hard to guess whether she is taken in by her hero's charm until the last page, which is one of the most amusing in a clever and diverting book." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p7 S 21 '41 550w

"It is a very pleasant story. There are many nice people in it—Valerie, Sandy's wife, and the three children, and A. B. Cowdrey, who writes humorous verse, are the nicest. The so-called 'intellectuals,' the Phayers and Douglas Vesey and Edward Forth, are as the author presents them almost too good to be true, but they certainly add gaiety to the scene."

+ Springfield Republican p7e S 21 '41 360w

"There is a great deal more restraint in 'Rain Every Day' than there was in Miss Clements's earlier work, and with this restraint she has combined the happy knack of letting her characters go their own way, behave perfectly naturally, and chatter just as the spirit moves them; the result is both restful and entertaining."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Ag 30 '41 250w

CLEMMER, DONALD. The prison community. 341p $4 Christopher

365 Crime and criminals—U.S. Criminal anthropology. Prisons 40-14007

"Analysis of the sociological influences of prison life upon the 2300 inmates confined in a typical American State penitentiary. . . . The author is a trained sociologist and criminologist who has been for almost ten years on the staffs of the Classification Board and Mental Health Office of the Illinois State prison system. . . . The methodology has employed statistical comparisons, case studies, questionnaires and attitude scales, inmates' autobiographies, and essays written upon a variety of pertinent themes." Social Forces

"The criminologist and penologist should find this book about an Illinois penitentiary useful, for not only is it fact crammed but it also attempts a comprehensive interpretation of 'the culture of the prison.' Nonspecialists too should find it interesting, not only as a study of an important kind of contemporary social institution but also as a study of the influence of the group on the individual." Buford Junker

+ Am J Soc 46:916 My '41 220w

"As far as this reviewer is concerned this is one of the most important works devoted exclusively to the sociology of imprisonment that has ever been written. Penologists would do well to read and study this volume and, particularly, to grasp clearly the author's concept of 'prisonization.' In characteristic American fashion I will take a small bet that this book has an even chance of becoming a classic in its field." J. P. Shalloo

+ Am Soc R 6:766 O '41 400w

Reviewed by S. G. Kling

Harvard Law R 54:722 F '41 600w

Reviewed by Luton Ackerson

Social Forces 19:442 Mr '41 1000w

"This reviewer is of the opinion that this book is easily the finest example of correction or penal sociology that has ever been produced by an American sociologist." J. P. Shalloo

+ Social Studies 32:330 N '41 220w

CLIFFORD, CHARLES L. While the bells rang. 275p $2 Doubleday

41-13930

Mystery story.

"'While the Bells Rang' is a mildly romantic tale of mystery and adventure, with a fairly picturesque background." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p13 Ag 3 '41 120w

"Scenes at gaudy rancho and in Tex-Mex border dives colorful, emotions run high, and yarn ends in proper clinch. Fervid."

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 2 '41 40w

CLIFFORD, JAMES LOWRY. Hester Lynch Piozzi (Mrs Thrale). 505p il $6.50 (21s) Oxford

B or 92 Piozzi, Mrs Hester Lynch (Salisbury) Thrale [41-12950]

"Among the many entertaining ladies who decorate the social and literary life of the eighteenth century Mrs. Piozzi holds an increasingly important place. This energetic Welsh woman has many claims to be remembered. She was married twice, to Thrale, the brewer and philanderer, and to the gentler Italian Piozzi. She had thirteen children. . . . With all this she continued a long and intimate friendship with Dr. Johnson, a social vivacity which nothing could destroy, and a literary activity varying from diaries, letters, and memories of Johnson to attempts at philology which were more imaginative than accurate. Mr. Clifford, an American scholar, has now written her biography with a detail which fills one with awe—nearly five hundred closely printed pages, with a myriad notes and references." Manchester Guardian

"There is a great deal of interest in this charming book. Goldsmith, Reynolds, Burke and Mrs. Siddons may be named among the number of famous people who live again in its pages. The story of Mrs. Piozzi's life in Italy and her connection with the notorious group of Della-Cruscan poets is amusingly told. The lavish splendor of life at Streatham and in Southwark during the years of her first marriage makes a brilliant picture, while more subdued in coloring is the narrative of her latest years . . . when she lived in Bath, still frequenting intellectual society, still engaged upon literary projects, still garrulous and entertaining and indiscreet, a fine though not faultless relic of a great age that was gone." S. C. Chew

+ Books p28 N 30 '41 1000w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 19 '41 600w

CLIFFORD, J. L.—Continued

"With all its limitations, Mr. Clifford's 'life' gives us a detailed picture of eighteenth-century society and of a lady whose energy and liveliness life failed to destroy." B. I. Evans
Manchester Guardian p7 F 25 '41 370w

"No one can destroy Boswell's sketch of Mrs. Thrale. It is done with such venom and such vivacity; it contains so much of Boswell himself, and, like all Boswell's portraits, it fits so perfectly into its place in the picture. But Mr. Clifford has done what is far more valuable and more difficult. He has gone behind Boswell's sketch and beyond it. He has amplified it and solidified it. He has brought Mrs. Thrale herself into the foreground. And by so doing he has changed the proportions of the picture." Virginia Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 21:250 Mr 8 '41 1700w

"Mr. Clifford gives a careful examination to actions, motives, questions, which have been much talked over, and seeks a full and fair delineation of Mrs. Plozzi's character, all her life. And in the very fullness of his report lies his weakness as biographer. His book is not so much a portrait-narrative as a patient assembling of material. It is detail which makes the work interesting, but the mass of detail as a whole is inclusive rather than selective, and painstaking research is more in evidence than dexterity. . . But toward the end the portrait takes on more substance and vitality. And in retrospect we go back to certain excellent sentences and paragraphs, to accumulated facts and attentive judgments, and ourselves create a living picture from the mosaic pieces here to hand." Katherine Woods
N Y Times p5 Je 29 '41 1400w

"This book is one of those useful and informative works which really throw light on persons and periods. Investigation could not further go." Professor Clifford's industry is appalling but intelligent. And though one may not always accept his explanations, one has got to accept his facts. The worst that can be said of his book is that his style is not always exciting. But on the other hand it is always gentlemanly and there is no fake about it." Leonard Bacon
Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 9 '41 650w

"Mr. Clifford has admittedly produced a most impressive piece of scholarship in a form which, academically, is worthy of emulation. What I cannot understand is why he should have devoted so much of his time and his industry to this unedifying object." C. E. Vulliamy
Spec 166:320 Mr 21 '41 900w

"Considered as a work of literary and social history, 'Hester Lynch Plozzi' is an important book. But, even to those unversed in the period with which he deals, the drama Mr. Clifford presents must be of absorbing interest."

Times [London] Lit Sup p51 F 1 '41 2500w

CLINTON-BADDELEY, VICTOR CLINTON.
 Words for music. 168p $2.25 Macmillan
 [7s 6d Cambridge]

808.1 Poetry. Songs. Music and literature
 [A41-3905]

"This short book, rich in quotations from the Elizabethans, and from Dryden, Burns, Johnson, Mozart, Valéry and, above all, W. B. Yeats, is a plea for an art of song in which words and music would carry equal weight. Mr. Clinton-Baddeley distinguishes between poetry that can be said but not sung, and poetry that cannot be read aloud, but must be sung or left alone." (Spec) Index.

"I recommend Words for Music as a well-written introduction to its subject, and hasten to add that it is only considerations of space which have made me appear to disagree more than I agree with its author. Most of what he says is excellent sense, and he is often amusing; as when he remarks that the words of modern popular ballads are 'always wildly untrue.'" Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 21:491 My 10 '41 1400w

"Mr. Clinton-Baddeley speaks with proper respect of the diverse efforts of Gilbert, Yeats, John Masefield and Walter de la Mare to rescue song from the low level of the Victorian drawing-room, and he laments the inarticulacy of the modern popular dance-lyric. When, however, he complains that these popular songs are devoted to the antique ('the old-fashioned mother') and fail to use contemporary imagery, he is perhaps forgetting that it may be the modern world, not the modern song, that is at fault. In making room for more people in the world we have perhaps thrown away some of the things that make life worth living and worth singing about."

Spec 166:594 My 30 '41 320w

CLOETE, STUART. The hill of doves. 637p $2.75 Houghton

(W) 41-21274

Historical novel of the Transvaal during the war of 1880. Its central character is Lena du Toit, whose marriage to Dirk van der Berg is the closing scene of the book. It continues the saga of the families of which Watch for the Dawn (Book Review Digest, 1939) was a part. Glossary.

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"This is a good book not only to enliven an evening by the fire, but also to send one out the next morning feeling that living is a more substantial matter and more interesting and important than one remembered." Mary Ross
Books p5 N 2 '41 900w

"Recommended." M. E. Clark

Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 50w

"The qualities that made 'The Turning Wheels' and 'Watch for the Dawn' so outstandingly delightful as fiction are here enriched. Humor, not only of phrase and speech but of character." J. S. Southron

N Y Times p6 O 26 '41 1050w

"Picturesque people, lots of action, plenty of significant background, here and there some humor. A capable job, if slightly on the pedestrian side."

New Yorker 17:91 O 25 '41 40w

"Stuart Cloete's saga of South African history plods on across the years, sometimes at a pace reminiscent of the ox-drawn wagons of the Boers, but always with their honest, workmanlike solidity and sometimes with an exhilarating sense of the waiting earth beneath them and the broad horizons between which they move." Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 24:20 N 22 '41 400w

CLOETE, STUART. The young men and the old. 37p $1.50 Houghton

821

41-11932

Poems by the South African novelist, author of The Turning Wheels, Watch for the Dawn, etc. Most of the poems are concerned with the present war.

Reviewed by Lloyd Frankenberg
Poetry 59:53 O '41 190w

"There is no singing in these poems by Stuart Cloete. For the world is too much with him. His song seems silenced by the roar of the world's destruction."

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 12 '41 290w

CLOMAN, MRS FLORA (SMITH) CLEMENT.
 I'd live it over. 380p il $3 Farrar

B or 92

(W) 41-6962

This autobiography begins with Flora Cloman's early years on the American frontier, in Minnesota where her English-born father attempted to fashion "an estate" in the wilderness, and in Idaho where she and her sisters earned their own living. Two marriages, the first to a mining engineer, the second to an army officer, carried Mrs Cloman from mining camps to European capitals and lonely frontier posts, to South Africa, London, the Philippines, Arizona and finally Washington.

Booklist 37:463 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:14 N '41

"One could make ponderous sociological observations on the strikes Mrs. Cloman witnessed, or the passing of the frontier; but this is one woman's life and is properly written from the feminine and personal point of view. She had a good time, and she imparts it to the reader." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p3 My 4 '41 1350w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 23 '41 440w

"Flora Cloman's life has been packed with dramatic event, most of it set against backgrounds, all around the world, which have now vanished. Yet her own spirit remains one of the important factors in the rare and engrossing interest of that life's story." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 My 11 '41 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

CLOUGH, FRANK C. William Allen White of Emporia. (Whittlesey house publication) 265p il $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 White, William Allen (W) 41-18562

Anecdotal biography of William Allen White, by the managing editor of the Emporia Gazette. It shows him at home, in the office, in his campaign against the Ku Klux Klan, and in his many activities in national and international affairs. Index.

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"A cosy, chatty personality story of the Emporia editor. It is extremely entertaining reminiscence rather than formal biography." P. I. Wellman

+ Books p5 O 19 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 155:18 N 1 '41 250w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:201 D 12 '41 110w

"Easier reading than the more exhaustive and interpretative Rich biography." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 66:839 O 1 '41 110w

Reviewed by Max Gissen

New Repub 105:560 O 27 '41 480w

"William Allen White is obviously one of those unusual men who can be something of a genius without losing the common interest and common touch. He symbolizes in many ways what Emporia, the Middle West and America are, or wish they were, and gets the symbol into his living as well as into his writing. He is no revolutionist, but he is a resolute forward marcher. These aspects of him get into Mr. Clough's book, and they are normal, wholesome, and stimulating. They add to one's confidence in his country." R. L. D.

+ N Y Times p4 O 26 '41 600w

"Frank C. Clough . . . has done a good job of reporting in this book. As a good reporter he has taken his own assignment to write the story of the town life of the small-town editor whose name has become a household word over three or four continents and on most of the seven seas. . . Literally, he has not 'explained' William Allen White; actually, he has put between the lines a really excellent character sketch of the man who has remained a small-town editor after becoming a cosmopolitan writer—and he does it without making his subject a literary Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Arthur Capper

+ Yale R n s 31:382 winter '42 900w

CLUTTON-BROCK, ALAN FRANCIS. Murder at Liberty hall. 280p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Lane]

41-12688

"Liberty Hall is a spirited satire on one of these modern co-educational schools where the children do the teaching and the teachers the learning. There is a delightful cricket match between 'Liberty Hall' and a minor public school, from which Mr. Clutton-Brock extracts considerable amusement for every ball bowled. One of the staff of Liberty Hall is poisoned at a bottle party. Anyone present could have poisoned the sherry, so the solution depends on motive, and for that Mr. Clutton-Brock has borrowed a magnificent idea from the armoury of poetic justice." New Statesman & Nation

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"We recommend this unusual production for various and sundry merits, even though it does seem to bog down a little toward the middle. It has a timely tone (England in 1939) and a workable enough plot." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p9 Ag 10 '41 140w

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 10w

"As with people, so with books, there are some towards whom (or which) one feels instinctively friendly. In the case of 'Murder at Liberty Hall' this is due perhaps to the engaging air of youth there is about the tale. Not, assuredly, youth in the sense of immaturity, but in that of gaiety of vivacity of spirit, of freshness of outlook." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 8 '41 150w

"The style is fluent and scholarly, as if Mr. Clutton-Brock had been writing novels for the intelligentsia all his life." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:416 Ap 19 '41 120w

"This author's burlesque proceeds by slyness, apparent irrelevance and suggestive understatement rather than, say, such horseplay as Elliot Paul's. The effect is always amusing, even when the method veers a bit to the precious side. And oh, yes, there's a perfectly good mystery." K. I.

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '41 180w

"This story, which starts out to be very funny, fades away into almost nothing. Pleasant in an aggravating way."

+ — New Yorker 17:60 Ag 9 '41 40w

"Excellent basic idea, much sly humor and a good puzzle, but pace of yarn is lethargic to say the least. Slow—but sure."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 16 '41 40w

"Mr. Clutton-Brock is the brightest newcomer upon the scene of the crime since the appearance of C. H. B. Kitchin and Michael Innes. He has, too, certain affinities with each of these writers: something of Mr. Kitchin's refinement in atmosphere and power of developing character, and all Mr. Innes' liveliness and love of good talk. He is, moreover, extremely witty." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 166:454 Ap 25 '41 170w

"There is no doubt the author knows how to write with tongue in cheek, and entertain the reader with a clever mystery yarn."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 300w

"It has the plot of a murder mystery (a very good one), but what excites delight on every page is not the thrill of puzzle-hunting but the relief of at last undamming long pent-up laughter. . . Who is murdered and why? This is of minor importance. Yet the author must be given full credit for at least solving by psychology problems that could not be solved more easily by picking up tangible evidence."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p105 Mr 1 '41 270w

COATES, HELEN. Weaving for amateurs; il. by the author. (How to do it ser) 80p $3.50 (8s 6d) Studio 677 Weaving (W) 41-51827

Graphic instructions for the beginning weaver, with discussions of every aspect from carding and spinning to the making of the most complicated patterns in weaving. Copiously illustrated with photographs and diagrams. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:493 Je 15 '41

"The author is not only a skilled weaver but has spent many years teaching children to weave, and her explanations of methods of weaving would make it possible for a novice to start on a loom. The book is illustrated by photographs of materials and old as well as new looms, and a series of excellent diagrams by Miss Muriel Morley-Asquith."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr 29 '41 70w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). The trunk. 228p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 41-51623

Una Hancock, a fastidious and entirely conventional woman, and Richard, her artist husband are the central characters. This story of a crisis in their lives takes place on a tropical island, where Una wilts in the heat, while Richard paints passionately in an effort to achieve something worthwhile.

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

"Miss Coatsworth displays the happy faculty of seeing sides without taking sides; her touch is warm, but impartial. Richard Hancock and Una are two people in love confronting a crisis in which one or the other must yield, not selfishly or grudgingly, but generously. 'The Trunk' turns out well because it comes out right." David Tilden

+ Books p10 Mr 30 '41 400w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 100w

"This reader did not share the husband's confidence and faith in his capacity for growth. He seems a cad. The tropical jungle background with its color and mystery is skillfully drawn. The author has had opportunity to observe this luxuriant wild milieu and realizes the effect of such environment on disposition and character. The secondary actors offer many interesting psychological problems. In fact, they seem more convincing in their emotions and actions than the painter himself." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 58:463 Ap 2 '41 110w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 10 '41 550w

Reviewed by L. M. Field
N Y Times p28 Mr 23 '41 550w

New Yorker 17:86 Mr 22 '41 30w

"Though Una is somewhat of a prig, her problem is a real one. The tropical background is well suggested. The author evidently knows Central America as well as New England, the more usual background for her stories." R. C. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 21 '41 230w

"An absorbing story. There is a well-sustained atmosphere of growing tension, and the climax of the novel is in keeping with what has gone before. Readers will find in 'The Trunk' the pleasant writing and interesting people that distinguished Miss Coatsworth's previous books, and there is the added attraction of a tropical setting and some good melodrama."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41 360w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). You shall have a carriage; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 138p $2 Macmillan (W) 41-17878

Jed Mitchell and his widowed mother lived on a small farm in the southern bayou country. It was Jed's ambition that his mother should ride in her own carriage. After a bad river flood the boy persuaded his mother to invest all her remaining money in an old plantation, and between them they managed to make it a prosperous venture. A pot of pearls discovered in an old Indian grave and a ghost of a Negro slave add a touch of mystery to this tale for children of eleven to fourteen.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 N 23 '41 280w

"Told in [Miss Coatsworth's] beautiful limpid prose... The atmosphere of plantation life gives the story added interest." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:367 S '41 120w

"It is an excellent piece of writing. Good type and margins. Illustrated by Henry Pitz. Recommended for children eleven to fourteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 140w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 50w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. Exit laughing. 572p $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-51624

Recollections of the author's life as reporter, war correspondent during the first World war, author, and lecturer. The book is filled with anecdotes, witty and otherwise, about prominent people he has met, or about local characters met during his travels or at home. Index.

"Exit Laughing exceeds even my rosy expectations. What he has written is a smiling and anecdotal book, salty with common sense; shrewd and affectionate in its thumbnail sketches of men he liked... Biting in his condemnation of a Democrat like Woodrow Wilson who disappointed his Southern fervor; amusing in his account of his writing habits, his quest for source material, and his encounter with English novelists; prejudiced, as in his hatred of motors and his fondness for Hollywood, and agreeably garrulous, as a man who loves a good story and sometimes tells too many." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '41 220w

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

"'Exit Laughing' is a lot of book. It rambles, and it is unconsciously wordy in spots, but it is friendly and human—genuine Cobb." Stanley Walker

+ Books p1 Mr 16 '41 1400w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 400w

"Six hundred pages chock-full of happenings worth recording, and chock-full of portraits worth remembering."

+ Cath World 153:253 My '41 230w

"If it seems necessary to the rounding out of his story to speak of an unlovely trait of character or a not altogether commendable act, he does not reveal the identity of the person concerned, if the incident might reflect on the individual; he has kind things to say about a number of public figures of recent years who have been the target of bitter criticism; and the humorous stories, with which the book abounds, as often as otherwise make the author the butt of the joke. It is a rare and delightful type of humor whose shafts point backward and have no barbs with which needlessly to wound others." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 1 '41 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

"A biography that will be generally in demand." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 60w

Reviewed by George Joel

Nation 152:590 My 17 '41 300w

"This old material, cast in new phrases and garnished with fresh anecdotes, makes the best part of this not-necessarily final autobiography." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '41 1150w

"In all candor I must say that I opened Mr. Cobb's book with no elevated expectations and read it all the way through with pleasure." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:84 Mr 22 '41 140w

Pratt p5 D '41

"I know of no book published in recent years which is so American as 'Exit Laughing.' Its humor is falstaffian. Shakespeare, on the whole, laughed with people, and not at them, and the Shakespearian quality of these pages, even if sometimes the rhetoric is a bit stagey, somewhat consciously mirthful, still, at the same time, is honest. It is always kind and wise." W. A. White

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Mr 22 '41 1450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41 2350w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

COBLENTZ, STANTON ARTHUR. The triumph of the teapot poet. 84p $1.50 Wings 808.1 41-7901

"A small collection of very brief essays. . . The author used them as editorials in Wings: A Quarterly of Verse. Mr Coblentz takes up the cudgels valiantly, if somewhat irritatingly, in defense of traditionalism in both the manner and matter of poetry." Springf'd Republican

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 90w

"If the reader can overlook [certain] faults of presentation, he will find much with which he can sympathize. The defense of the reader as an independent critic, the author's love of warmth in poetry, the deploring of meaningless rhythms which find their excuse for being in their 'originality.' Those who learned to love poetry from the classicists will understand the Coblentz theses, while regretting the note of intolerance in his utterance."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 230w

COCHRANE, CHARLES NORRIS. Christianity and classical culture; a study of thought and action from Augustus to Augustine. 530p $8 (30s) Oxford

901 Civilization, Christian. Church history—Primitive and early church. Civilization, Greco-Roman [A41-3817]

"Mr. Cochrane is the author of an earlier book of Thucydides and the Science of History; but, in his new study of the contrast between the Greek-Roman and the Christian conceptions of life, he deals . . . not directly with ethics but only with the general assumptions of two types of civilization which underlie social organization and moral progress. . . The book begins with a study of the Roman system as established by Augustus and developed into military dictatorship and worship of the emperor, in what the author calls the 'apotheosis of power.' . . The second part of the book deals with 'renovation' of the old order. The emperor, Constantine, is regarded as having granted liberty to the Christian churches in the hope that they would maintain the established order of military dictatorship and the classical tradition of culture. . . The third part of the book deals with 'regeneration' by which the author means the first attempt at the end of the fourth century to establish entirely new assumptions derived from Christianity and not from the Roman tradition as the basis for social justice and personal virtue. In the discussion of this attempt the works of St. Augustine naturally receive the greatest consideration." Ethics

"Although this book may arouse strong disagreement, it should be studied by all serious students of the Roman Imperial Age." M. L. W. Laistner

Am Hist R 47:314 Ja '42 800w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns

Ethics 51:236 Ja '41 1200w

"A criticism may be ventured, in conclusion, of the author's discursive and repetitious manner of presentation. Though the general argument is clear, the style often becomes ponderous in the mass of detail; yet at times it rises to heights of brilliance and wit. The reader will have to take the book in small doses, and this will not help in making connections. But every paragraph closely studied will be richly rewarding. This is the sort of book one can turn to again and again without its growing stale." M. H. Shepherd, Jr.

+ J Religion 21:480 O '41 1250w

Reviewed by Sir R. Livingstone

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 30 '40 650w

"Those of us who believe that human dignity is worth fighting for, as the keystone to the arch of our social order, will welcome the evidence of this remarkable book." Kenneth Bell

+ Spec 167:209 Ag 29 '41 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Ag 17 '40 800w

COFFIN, CARLYN. Mare's Nest. 293p $2 Farrar

Detective story.

41-14660

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"Here you get full value in mysterious gambits, some of them fairly familiar to old hands and some of them not so much so—such as the poison. The climax is impressive and credible. . . Carlyn Coffin looks like a sure bet for more laurels, for she knows the game and writes well—sort of like Mrs. Rinehart, in a way." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 3 '41 200w

N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '41 210w

"A new method of poisoning makes this neatly written story worth reading."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Jl 26 '41 40w

Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 9 '41 40w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Thomas-Thomas-Ancil-Thomas. 342p $2.50 Macmillan

41-6046

The theme of this novel, written in poetic prose, is the continuing life passing from father to son thruout many generations. The contemporary hero, a Maine farmer, is not only himself, but his father, his grandfather, his great-grandfather, and his own sons, as he becomes aware from time to time of forgotten memories of the past, of visions of the future.

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

"The unusual form of this novel may confuse and so offend some readers, as the present Thomas, in interludes, lives moments of those who have preceded him. Its frank joy in the whole-hearted acceptance of life by the Coombs men and their women is a far cry from the imputed asceticism of New England. And in that joy and in the beauty which Mr. Coffin finds in, and gives to, the endless linked chain of the hopes, desires and loyalties of successive generations, the little span of an individual life gains exhilarating perspective."

Mary Ross

+ Books p6 Ap 13 '41 850w

COFFIN, R. P. T.—Continued

"This is the kind of story which fills us with objections. Mr. Coffin has this Coombs line start in the 17th century in America. The Thomas who fought in France in 1918 is a replica of the 17th century ancestor. It may keep the line alive but it makes for monotony. Moreover, while it relieves the individual of responsibility to feel that his ancestors are acting through him, fulfilling good and bad instincts over which he has no control, is there not something definitely lacking in such a theory? . . . There is so great a monotony in this theory of life that we are prone to acknowledge that we prefer Nature's way to Mr. Coffin's." D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 500w

"Once you become accustomed to its rather startling four-dimensional approach, the novel takes shape as a warmly felt story of America's past and present, and a paean to manhood's prime vigor, written in a poet's prose." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 153:39 J1 12 '41 200w

"Obviously, 'Thomas-Thomas-Ancil-Thomas' is not a book to recommend indiscriminately. The mere novelty of its technique will attract some readers. It may baffle and repel others. To those who like fine writing and rich word painting for its own sake Mr. Coffin's book will be a rewarding experience." Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:86 Ap 12 '41 50w

"Mr. Coffin has made a pleasant compromise here between Alice Toklas and intelligibility. Thomas-Thomas-Ancil-Thomas is not, however, a purely objective derivative from purely subjective materials, he is a solid enough young boy whose chromosomes have retained more specific memories than most geneticists have discovered in the young of the species. Christopher Morley did a very similar and equally charming book some years ago, 'Thunder on the Left.'" Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 My 17 '41 280w

COHEN, MRS ANNE (NATHAN), and COHEN, HARRY ISAAC. The man who stayed in Texas; the life of Rabbi Henry Cohen. (Whittlesey house publication) 32p $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Cohen, Henry 41-9273

Life story of a seventy-five-year-old Jewish rabbi. Rabbi Cohen was born in London, and started his life work distributing food tickets to the London poor. After a time in South Africa and Jamaica, he came to America, and for fifty-two years has lived in Galveston, Texas. He is widely known and honored for his liberal views and humanitarian principles. Glossary. Bibliography.

"This account of the life of Rabbi Cohen is exceedingly friendly—probably a bit too much on the non-critical side. That is a common fault of writers who attempt to put local heroes (especially Texans and Southerners) between book covers. It does smack of hero worship, which is something the rabbi never asked or wanted. But he's a great man all the same—a scholar, a humanitarian and a most potent symbol of tolerance and good will, but a fighter with it all." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p24 My 11 '41 650w

"Christians who never read the life of a rabbi—and how many have?—owe it to themselves to read one, and they could not find a better place to start than right here. It is a thoroughly live book about a man who, in his own lifetime, has become both a legend and an institution."

+ Christian Century 58:564 Ap 23 '41 100w

"This book is full of human anecdotes. It is a noble human book."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 27 '41 600w

Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 70w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Kid Tinsel. 281p $2
Appleton-Century

41-5105

"A pretty young lady who was just beginning to get the hang of the fashion-designing business inherited a middleweight boxer and took her responsibility seriously. Her father had managed him, thought him a strong probability for the championship, and Pat, who was prejudiced because she was in love with Eddie, was determined to see him get to the top." N Y Times

"It's quite a good story." Lisle Bell

+ Books p19 Mr 9 '41 280w

"It is a swift, readable yarn." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '41 160w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Lady in armor. 300p $2.50
Appleton-Century

41-15434

The women of a Southern county decide to clean up the place when one of their number is elected sheriff. The county is suffering from a crime wave, and the young and attractive sheriff has her hands full, but Southern chivalry is to the fore.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 S 7 '41 200w

"For a Southern county it is all very vigorous. Crookedness is not the result of indifference but is on the aggressive side, and the young woman sheriff's pursuit of the villains is equally lively. It is a Western adventure story set in the South." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 O 5 '41 180w

COHEN, VICTOR. Life and times of Masaryk, the president-liberator; a biographical study of central Europe since 1848; pref. by Jan Masaryk. 272p il $2.25 Transatlantic arts, 69-81 108th st, Forest Hills, N.Y. [7s 6d Murray, J]

B or 92 Masaryk, Thomas Garrigue

[A41-4009]

"What Mr. Cohen has done is to give an account of Masaryk's life 'well, honestly and intelligently'—to quote the words of Mr. Jan Masaryk in his prefatory remarks—in relation to the general European background against which the eighty-seven years of his astonishing existence were passed. . . The first two chapters on 'The Re-Birth of a Nation' and 'Race Problems in Austria-Hungary' respectively, are followed by one chapter on Masaryk's early years, after which comes a chapter headed 'The Italian War of Liberation, 1859,' but containing also a few more pages about Masaryk, while Chapter V is devoted entirely to the Austro-Prussian War of 1866, and the next chapter deals with the 'Ausgleich' of 1867." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"The historical setting is little more than a smudge, vague and inaccurate. . . What is needed is not further lives of Masaryk, but a serious discussion of his work, of his failures as well as of his successes." A. J. P. Taylor

— Spec 167:212 Ag 29 '41 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p360 J1 26 '41 600w

COLE, FRANKLIN P. They preached liberty. 174p il $1.50 Revell

973.315 Liberty. U.S.—Politics and government—Revolution. Clergy 41-8014

"An anthology of timely quotations from New England ministers of the American revolution on the subject of liberty: its source, nature, obligations, types, and blessings; with an introductory essay and biographical sketches." (Subtitle) Index.

"A pertinent tract for our own times."

+ Christian Century 58:428 Mr 26 '41
140w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 13 '41
240w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MRS MARGARET ISABEL (POST-GATE). Counterpoint murder. 245p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins]

41-5218

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p22 Mr 23 '41 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 50w

"The curiously disconnected method of telling the story does seem to reduce the tension of the tale, since the attention of the reader is so frequently drawn to new scenes and characters. But the cleverness with which it is done is undeniable." E. R. Funshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 28 '41
120w

Reviewed by Mort. Post
New Repub 104:302 Je 9 '41 50w

"The plot of this story is unusually clever and ingenious. It compares favorably with the earliest mysteries by the Coles and is far superior to their more recent efforts." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '41 150w

"In true magician style authors 'explain' story in opening chapter, but most readers won't guess solution 'til very end. Excellent."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 40w

"Shows the Coles at their best again." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 166:44 Ja 10 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41
180w

"The plot of 'Counterpoint Murder' has all the appearance of novelty, and that it is refreshingly unusual should not be denied. The Coles have found a puzzle worthy of the powers they claim for Superintendent Wilson."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p619 D 7 '40
210w

COLE, MRS NATALIE ROBINSON. Arts in the classroom; with phot. by C. K. Eaton.
137p $1.75 Day

707 Art—Study and teaching. Children as artists. Child study 40-30771

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The book is worth reading several times.
With each reading, one discovers something new. . . The best parts of the book are the ones in which the author describes her pupils at work. Occasionally, however, she makes statements about children in general which she would have difficulty in proving." Jessie Todd

+ El School J 41:635 Ap '41 480w

Reviewed by Kathryn Jewell
Horn Bk M 17:106 Mr '41 280w

"The book gives the classroom teacher plenty of inspiration and the necessary guidance to work it out practically." C. C. Crawford

+ School & Society 53:640 My 17 '41 60w

"The Arts in the Classroom' is a book for the classroom teacher who has to function as best she can under ordinary conditions and with limited materials. It is also a book for principals and supervisors, to help them give the teacher the confidence and faith necessary to dare to discover her own creative abilities."

+ School Arts 40:13a Mr '41 100w

COLE, ROBERT C. Vocational guidance for boys; a program for schools and social agencies. 252p $2.50 Assn. press; Harper

371.425 Profession, Choice of. Boys
(W) 41-6317

"The book is an attempt to put in writing some of the more important and practical phases of guidance the author has found useful. Theoretical and purely technical discussions have been avoided. Steps for starting a program have been outlined, and typical forms of guidance organizations which may be adapted to meet the needs of divers institutions have been considered. The techniques of group and individual counseling have been discussed and illustrated in some detail because the author regards these as the most essential part of any guidance program. The study of the individual, psychological and aptitude testing, tryouts, placement, and follow-up have been treated from the point of view of their practical application. In the last two chapters the author has tried to bring together the various phases of guidance discussed, and to show how these may be applied in meeting problems of young people in and out of school." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

"This book, interestingly written and covering all phases of the counseling and guidance field, should be on the desk of every person doing counseling work. It is particularly useful for beginners, but counselors with considerable experience will find it valuable, in that it restates clearly and concisely the concepts and programs which are the very core of the counselor's work." C. W. Cook

+ Survey 77:312 O '41 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 Jl '41

COLEBROOK, JOAN. All that seemed final.
299p $2.50 Houghton

41-21398

The experiences of a group of Londoners between March, 1939, and the late summer of 1940. "Against the ominous background of political indecision, aimlessness and outright blindness, it projects like a magic lantern the pink and silver colored dream world of London's social and semi-intellectual élite, the last phases of a way of life which, seemingly final, was doomed to collapse under the sudden reality of war and death." (N Y Times)

"The strength of the book lies in the fact that, although the episodes and characters are presented with the sharpness of the modern method, they are rounded out to three dimensions. In other words, Miss Colebrook has availed herself of the economy of the modern narrative without sacrificing the depth—the underpainting—of the old. I should not like to have missed this novel." R. S. Hillyer

+ Atlantic D '41 350w

Reviewed by Diana Forbes-Robertson
Books p10 N 9 '41 500w

"It is a fine, clever book, well written and thoroughly convincing." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 O 26 '41 750w

"The characters don't really amount to much, perhaps, but Miss Colebrook has made them interesting and only too credible."

+ New Yorker 17:91 O 25 '41 60w

"It may be easy to confuse or even to forget the characters in the book but the author somehow has the power to make one quite nostalgic for the London before the blitz."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 160w

COLEMAN, ARTHUR PHILEMON. The last million years; a history of the pleistocene in North America; ed. by George F. Kay.
216p il $3.50 Univ. of Toronto press [Canadian publication]

551.79 Geology—North America. Glacial epoch 41-14228

"The results of over 50 years of observation on glacial phenomena by the late Dr. Coleman,

COLEMAN, A. P.—Continued
one of the world's authorities on Pleistocene glaciation." School & Society

Booklist 38:3 S '41

School & Society 53:520 Ap 19 '41 20w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE
FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL
HENRY COLES. Drink to yesterday. 270p $2
Knopf [9s Hodder]

(W) 41-2203

Story of an English spy in Germany during the last war. He so impresses a German intelligence officer with his hatred of England and devotion to the German cause that he is sent to England as a spy, thus making it easy for him to convey information to the War Office but compelling him to live a double life.
When he returns to England after the war he is so changed by the experiences he has undergone that he is unable to take up his old life.

Booklist 37:361 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p16 F 16 '41

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 12 '40
120w

"The tragic story that [the authors] tell impresses one as being a true picture of what spy work would do to a man young enough and sensitive enough not to be completely brutalized by it." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p21 F 9 '41 550w

"Tremendously effective and entirely thrilling tale of man whose split nationality and tragically divided personal loyalties changed his whole life. Brilliant."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 120w

"The book is well written to the point of suggesting reality, and deserves an assured position on the library shelf."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p233 My 11
'40 90w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE
FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL
HENRY COLES. A toast to tomorrow [Eng title: Pray silence]. 310p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

(W) 41-6171

"In Berlin, in 1933, Klaus Lehmann, Deputy Chief of the German Police, listens to a local broadcast of his play, 'The Radio Operator.'
The English boys in the Foreign Office listen too, and hear an old code which has been lying around since the World War. This novel of spying and counterspying leads up to the crisis at Danzig." New Yorker

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Rejoice, spy fanciers! For those British authors who gave us 'Drink to Yesterday' some months ago—Miss Adelaide Manning and Henry Coles—have turned out another top-flight example of your favorite genre." Will Cuppy
+ Books p13 My 4 '41 160w

Reviewed by Mort. Post
New Repub 104:802 Je 9 '41 220w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 My 4 '41 240w

"Exciting and beautifully written."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 3 '41 50w

"Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 10 '41 40w

"Timely, well done and not very corny."

+ Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 50w

COLLIER, JOHN. Presenting moonshine; stories. 327p $2.50 Viking

41-976

Collection of twenty-four bizarre and ingenious tales by an English author now living in Virginia. Many of the stories have been previously published in periodicals—five of them in The New Yorker.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

"Let no one make the mistake of gulping down whole this new collection of stories.
They should be taken singly. Otherwise the reader must surely suffer from severe indigestion, so richly spiced and strongly flavored is most of the material. And, besides, it is possible to shudder only a certain amount...
Some of the items included here are considerably less successful than others. Mr. Collier is magnificently able to stretch one's credu-lity—descends into hell, hallucinations, jinns in and out of bottles occur naturally—but the behavior of the ominous bird that hatches out of the egg of Mrs. Spalding's parrot is somehow not quite acceptable." Iris Barry

+ — Books p2 Ja 26 '41 700w

"His tales are nicely turned, with just the proper element of common-sense to set in bold relief his nonsensical subject-matter. If you are bored or disgusted with the slice-of-life type of reading, give your imagination a treat with Collier's delightful fantasy."

E. G. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 220w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 13 '41 70w

"A madcap collection of the eeriest, screwi-est tales this side of Never-Never Land, by a man who is Dunsany, 'Saki,' and S. J. Perelman all rolled into one, not to mention Anatole France, Sax Rohmer, and J. B. Cabell. It shouldn't be missed by those who like to take their peris, goblins, and bottle imps straight, or with a grain of salaciousness and a dash of pungent innuendo."

+ Nation 152:136 F 1 '41 50w

"John Collier in his short stories has opened up a vein of fiction that comes strangely in this time... They are matter-of-fact in tone, smoothly joined in the writing, and deal in one way or another with the supernatural. I don't like them. They are clever and at times brilliant; they start where Poe leaves off, without ever quite achieving the memorable effect of the occasional Poe success...
Their restraint and humor and well breeding in the presence of the clammy grotesque must inevitably suggest an exercise, controlled and deliberate; and I don't like them. There is a fascination, though, as of rare deep-sea creatures and the life under a damp flagstone, and this sort of life beneath life is exquisitely cultivated." Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:155 F 3 '41 650w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 22:18 Jl 5 '41
50w

"Most of the tales are more or less cock-eyed, yet they have plenty of variety... Very well written, in a style at once sure and flexible, with a use of words not merely free from carelessness but actually felicitous, these tales should prove stimulating to the more fastidious type of literary appetite." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 26 '41 700w

"The small, neat mantle of Saki has apparently been handed down to a young Englishman named John Collier... He is a great hand at grisly little affairs involving devils, ghosts, supernatural parrots, glandular monstrosities, surrealist painters, and similar fantastics. He exploits his unseriousness rather too obviously, perhaps, but every once in a while turns out a bit of perverse nonsense that's preciously perfect." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:68 Ja 25 '41 340w

"By these tales, more imaginative readers will be delighted, for almost every one of the double-dozen can be labeled accurately: Collier —Grade A. And that is a respectable label.
Moving among occult phenomena with the familiarity of a Machen or a Blackwood, Mr. Collier moves without their solemnity. In the presence of the supernatural and magical, he is gay and impudent. He is a collector of demons, a connoisseur of jinn, and an old acquaintance of the Devil himself, who has more than once provided him with admirable copy." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 F 1 '41 490w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 166:662 Je 20 '41 340w

"A collection of 24 fairy stories for adults, stories bizarre, occult, and ingeniously improbable that thrill and amuse but do not grasp plausibility. The work will be admired for the artistic prose the author employs."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 240w

"There is not one decent, sensible story in Presenting Moonshine. Author John Collier is crazy as a hoot owl. But perched on the gnarled limb of satire, he blinks down with dry wisdom at a world much crazier than he. Effortlessly he glides into madness."

Time 37:76 Ja 27 '41 410w

"Mr. John Collier is something of a rare bird. He does not make himself heard frequently, but his note is a distinctive one. 'Presenting Moonshine' is a collection of twenty-four short stories, and as a collection it has about twenty-four times as much character as most such volumes. His is an original and highly amusing turn of fancy, delicately frivolous and blandly sophisticated by turns and always susceptible to some salutary moral lesson or other."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p273 Je 7 '41 950w

COLLIER, TARLETON. Fire in the sky. 457p $2.50 Houghton

41-15914

This is the life story of Lolly Rickett, daughter of a woman sharecropper and an unknown father. Lolly's mother died when she was ten; at sixteen she married and had a year of happiness and contentment. Then, her husband killed by a rowdy, Lolly once more took up single handed the battle for security for herself and her child. At forty Lolly won out and saw her daughter safe and happy as well.

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"'Fire in the Sky' is told in a comfortable, leisurely fashion, taking time to develop its characters with care and honesty, to paint scenes abundantly, giving them their utmost value. A first novel, it is written with tremendous zest and enthusiasm. . . It might be said that it is over-written in places, occasionally obscured with symbolism and a loose stream-of-consciousness style, but it is generally well written, and a generous heart-warming tale." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p8 S 7 '41 650w

"Because this novel has so much that is good and fresh and original in it, one is tempted to treat it over-leniently. Mr. Collier has something to say and he says it very well; in particular, the sharecropper scenes of Lolly's childhood are admirable. I feel, however, that 'Fire in the Sky' is marred by his breathless mannerisms of style, by a kind of literary lyricism which in the end rings false. Again, Lolly's climb to power in the hotel world becomes a little monotonous, and her relationship with Lon is curiously unconvincing." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 S 7 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:77 S 6 '41 30w

"Although this is Mr. Collier's first novel, it doesn't read like one. It is free of uncertainty and unbalance. There is a lot in it and not too much of anything. . . Lolly is forty when the book ends. By that time she and the reader have met many sorts of people and institutions. Not all of them are handled with equal conviction. The hotel business, in which Lolly makes her way, has been more successfully explored in other novels." Francis Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 6 '41 400w

"Collier's 'message' on America, though belonging in the same category as that of 'Tobacco Road' and 'The Grapes of Wrath,' is by no means so forceful and arresting. His diagnosis is a bit superficial, his sense that something is wrong . . . is far too vague. . . The one thing that carries us to the end and that renders 'Fire in the Sky' readable is Collier's grip on his pen. His style is exciting and colorful, and always adequate; his choice of language is full of unexpected quirks of authentic dialect." Sarah Schiff

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 550w

COLLIER'S, the national weekly. Collier's collects its wits; ed. by Gurney Williams. 161p pa $2.50 Harcourt

741 Caricatures and cartoons. Artists

"A collection of 339 cartoons by 103 contemporary artists, with self-caricatures of, and biographical material about, 66 of them. Practically no politics or world affairs." Christian Century

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42

Books p5 D 21 '41 160w

"These clever quips and masterly drawings illustrate the truth that life goes on in its usual whimsical ways even when the world is in convulsion—and they help it to go on."

+ Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 140w

COLLIN, HEDVIG. Two Viking boys (Rolf Krake's saga). 67p il $2 Dodd

41-27323

"From an Icelandic saga Hedvig Collin, the Danish artist, has retold the story of one of the earliest kings of her country and his small brother. . . We see them in bed, dressing, and at mealtime, with details supplied by many pictures, before the story proper, as it was sung centuries ago, begins. This is the immemorial theme, always appealing, of escape from a greedy uncle who has murdered their father and seized the throne, of their fugitive existence, of their desperate courage, and the devotion of their father's warriors as, at a New Year's banquet, the Vikings rally to the rightful small king." N Y Times

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

"A valuable book to supplement the first studies about the vikings." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 67:41 Ja 1 '42 90w

"The method of narration is episodic and lacks the majesty and beauty with which Andrew Lang invested his retelling of the Norse tales, yet with the aid of the many sketches it gives to children of the middle years fascinating details of a Viking boyhood, and the story is essentially one of high adventure and suspense." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 7 '41 240w

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Amateur photographer's handbook; rev. [and enl] by Aaron Sussman. 402p il pl $2.50 Crowell

770 Photography—Handbooks, manuals, etc. (W) 41-10035

"An illustrated, fairly comprehensive guide, with explicit directions, and few technicalities, which was first published in 1925 [Book Review Digest, 1925]. It is now revised, enlarged and partly rewritten." Booklist

Booklist 37:548 J1 15 '41

"It is a thoroughly practical guide, treating with all possible clarity a subject which grows constantly more complicated, as well as more fascinating, with the introduction of new equipment, formulas and processes."

+ Christian Century 58:724 My 28 '41 50w

COLLINS, A. F.—Continued

"Because of the revisions and enlargement provided by Aaron Sussman, this standard manual for amateur camera workers has become in large part a new book. The volume retains its original practical quality in the face of today's tendency to develop more and more complicated phases of laboratory work in picture-making. All such refinements are left to the specializing photographer and the book remains simple and understandable enough to be of use to the beginner."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 19 '41 100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 J1 '41

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Keeping your house in repair. 314p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

643.7 Architecture—Conservation and restoration. Dwellings (W) 41-51861

This book is written "for the man of moderate means who owns his house, and [desires to] keep it in repair himself." Contents: Making carpentry repairs; Making roof repairs; Masonry and plastering repairs; Making stucco and concrete repairs; Painting the outside of your house; Finishing the inside of your house; Papering the rooms of your house; Making glazing repairs; Repairing the plumbing system; Repairing your heating plant; Repairing the electric installation; Repairing builder's hardware. Index.

Booklist 38:3 S '41

"If you are a home owner or lessee, 'Keeping Your House in Repair,' by A. Frederick Collins is practically a 'must.' . . . More than a hundred illustrations, simple and exact, lend clarity to the text."

+ Books p18 S 14 '41 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '41

J Home Econ 33:604 O '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

COLLINS, HENRY HILL. America's own refugees. 323p $3 Princeton univ. press

331.796 Migration of workers. Migration, Internal. U.S.—Social conditions

"Henry Hill Collins Jr. presents the subject of migrant labor on a national scale. According to his findings, there are four million Americans continually on the march in search of jobs, which are often non-existent. 'Worn-out soil, mechanization, unemployment, a growing population and declining opportunities,' he writes, 'have changed (these) settled citizens into migrants. Half a million of them are unattached youth, 1,300,000 are still younger children.'" Books

Booklist 38:183 F 1 '42

"For statistical purposes it might perhaps have been better if Mr. Collins had given his figures in terms of families or of unemployed adult members. For while he is concerned with the social conditions of this army, with their health, education and housing, he properly envisages the problem as one of finding work for adults who need it. The facts are sufficiently impressive without the introduction of the child factor." Rose Feld

+ — Books p10 D 21 '41 1450w

"The descriptions of the plight of this lowest tenth of the submerged third of our population are so marred by emotionally-toned words and sob stories as to reduce their effectiveness considerably." A. G. Higgins

Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 100w

"The book is an important addition to our literature on a problem which the author shows cannot be handled except on a national basis, not to throttle migrancy, but to guide it and to reduce some of the hazards. The author's style is flowery at points, but this does not apply to the case stories or to his examination of a problem which is going to be more of a challenge later than it has been, or is now." Nels Anderson

+ Survey 78:30 Ja '42 300w

COLLINS, MRS MARY. The fog comes. 249p $2 Scribner

41-5295

Detective story.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

"Mary Collins appears to be off to a prosperous start as a purveyor of polite but swift and shivery puzzlement." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 9 '41 130w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 40w

"This is Mary Collins's first appearance in the mystery field, and it is a very creditable beginning." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 16 '41 170w

"New writer. Characters, natural. Dialog, swell. Suspense to last gasp. Move over—Ford, Eberhart, Rinehart. We got another boarder. Gold!"

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 40w

"The solution may well be described as 'un-guessable' even by the most astute followers of mystery stories."

Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 J1 '41

COLSON, EDNA MEADE. An analysis of the specific references to Negroes in selected curricula for the education of teachers. 178p $2 Teachers college

375.32526 Negroes. Normal schools 41-8012

"The American public considers itself democratic. Yet . . . many individuals admit that they know little of Negroes as a group. The public school bears a part of the responsibility for this lack of understanding and knowledge. Dr. Colson's study reports on what our schools are teaching about Negroes. She has analyzed specific references to Negroes in eighty-two selected curricula for the education of teachers and has summarized one hundred courses of study for elementary schools." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

School & Society 53:488 Ap 12 '41 40w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 20w

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. LIBRARY. Seventy books about bookmaking. See Lehmann-Haupt, H.

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Adventure in the West, by [the author] (with Jack Colver, who lived most of this story before it was written and edited all of it afterward). 230p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-7939

A story based on the experiences of the author's young son during a summer spent on a western ranch. Judy, the heroine, is, the author says, a wholly fictitious character and some of the incidents are invented or touched up, but the book as a whole represents a New England boy's actual impressions of western life.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Je 15 '41 280w

"The plot is obvious, the style trite, but the mediocrity is somewhat redeemed by the wholesome quality and genuine western background." Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:619 J1 '41 30w

"You could skip the friendly dedication of this book which tells how it grew from the actual experiences of the author's son and still know that it springs from a real knowledge of the West today and, more importantly, of modern young people, so convincing is its portrayal of both." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 8 '41 300w

"A good Western." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 20w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Not just to remember. 256p $2 Macrae Smith co. 41-21399

Sharleen, a New York stenographer with a Park avenue background, is the heroine. Three men loved her—Dale, her employer; Larry, the playboy she had known all her life; and Kirk, the explorer, who ruled over his own South American estate, and wanted Sharleen to share it. And with Sharleen it was love at first—and second—sight.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p36 N 2 '41 60w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 O 26 '41 160w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). There's only one. 240p $2 Macrae Smith co. 41-3903

New York and Long Island form the background for this story of the tangled relations of three young women and their attendant suitors.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p19 Mr 9 '41 110w

"It may look easy to guess which girl and boy belong together, but the author has a way of bringing about compromising situations and misunderstandings, so there is enough suspense." C. D.

N Y Times p21 F 23 '41 140w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 Jl '41

COLVER, ANNE. Theodosia, daughter of Aaron Burr; il, by Elinore Blaisdell. 291p $2 Farrar B or 92 Alston, Mrs Theodosia (Burr)—Juvenile literature. Burr, Aaron—Juvenile literature (W) 41-3684

Fictionized biography of Aaron Burr's beloved daughter, Theodosia, for girls of thirteen to fifteen. "The book shows her as a charming girl, learning subjects far beyond the comprehension of ordinary children, and, at eleven, after the death of her mother, assuming the position of lady of the manor, greeting her father's distinguished guests with grace, poise, and gaiety. Even after her marriage much of her life was spent with her father." (Library J)

"In a season whose literature for old and young has done well by the Burr family, this biography . . . fills a place all its own. It gives readers in the teens, especially girls, a sense of taking part in the life of our young, lively Republic and its political passions and waves of popular sentiment, as they affect a girl! it would be hard not to like. Moreover, it gives them Aaron Burr, at his best to be sure, but undoubtedly at his real best." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 18 '41 440w

"The characters are well portrayed. The plots and counter-plots of Aaron Burr are recorded lightly, and Theodosia's blind idolism of her father is clearly shown. The swift-moving story creates in the reader a great fondness for Theodosia and a not too great horror of her father's questionable actions. Illustrations by Eleanor Blaisdell blend in exceedingly well. Comparison with other biographical material indicates accuracy of the facts." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 66:310 Ap 1 '41 160w

"Interpreted by an unimaginative writer, Theodosia could easily appear as an appalling paragon of all the virtues, but in Miss Colver's sympathetic fictionized biography for older girls she emerges as a credible and appealing human." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 11 '41 370w

Wis Lib Bul 37:160 O '41

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT, and STANLEY, FRANK ARTHUR. Running a machine shop. 449p il $3.50 McGraw

621.75 Machine shop practice. Factory management (W) 41-8968

Manual of plans and methods of shop lay-out equipment, production and personnel management for large and small shops. Partial contents: Planning a shop; Shop equipment; Tool-rooms and tool cribs; Estimating; Apprenticeship and training; Foremen and personnel relations. Index.

Booklist 37:541 Jl 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

COMFORT, WILLIAM WISTAR. Just among Friends; the Quaker way of life [introd. by Henry Seidel Canby]. 210p $2 Macmillan

289.6 Friends, Society of 41-5770

The book is "neither a history of the Friends nor an account of their achievements, though it touches upon both. It is a simple and persuasive explanation of their way of life, and an account of how it came about, how it is perpetuated, and its results." (Introd) The author is a member of the Religious Society of Friends and comes from a long line of Quaker ancestors. He was for many years president of Haverford college. Select bibliography.

Booklist 37:457 Je 1 '41

"Written primarily for persons interested in successful Christian progress, this book about Quakers, their way of life, its origin, perpetuation and results, by a scholarly, well informed member of the society should command a wide reading, for it is an interesting, authentic and sincere explanation of a people often credited with possessing one of the few really workable faiths for a future which now seems dark." L. R. Hiestand

+ Christian Century 58:982 Ag 6 '41 650w

"In style, character and arrangement the book gives one everything necessary to form a clear, sympathetic picture of these admirable Christians. An excellent bibliography is included." M. L. E.

+ Churchman 155:35 Je 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Franklin

Crozer Q 18:257 Jl '41 700w

"To those who, to quote the author, express their knowledge of Friends in such a statement as 'The Quakers are a queer people who say "thee" and "thou" to each other and don't believe in war, but I guess are pretty good citizens,' a reading of this book will bring a fuller acquaintance. And to all readers it will prove an interesting and informing volume." C. T. Holman

+ J Religion 21:327 Jl '41 170w

"Dr. Comfort outlines the society's direct activities of justice in peacetime, merciful relief in war. He writes, too, of Quaker, educational principles and establishments, of Quakers in business. He follows the Quaker way of life, in short, into the practicalities of everyday existence. They will be dull or bigoted souls, surely, that cannot see the importance of such an actuating way of life in any hopeful future for humanity."

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 13 '41 800w

"The style while sober and sedate contains many phrases characteristic of Quaker speech, which give it a special interest and flavor. Inevitably and rightly the facts are presented from the Friends' point of view. . . None the less the book is in no sense propaganda. It contains no special pleading, but is a statement of the historical as well as the contemporary facts regarding Quaker discipline by an author who is thoroughly informed regarding them and knows by experiences their spiritual value." H. T. Flexner

COMFORT, W. W.—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ap 26 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:38 My '41

COMMINS, MRS DOROTHY BERLINER, comp. Lullabies of many lands; il. by Nellie Farnam. 72p $1.50 Harper

734.4 Lullabies (W) 41-12154

Sixteen lullabies from as many countries. Each is given in its native tongue and in English, with musical accompaniment. The background of each is described briefly, and there are full-page illustrations in two colors.

"This is the only good collection of folk lullabies that I myself have seen; others may exist somewhere but none till now has come my way." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 18 '41 240w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 30w

"A gracious and appealing book, one that will please young and old and one that children and parents can enjoy together. . . Children have a lively interest in the way of life in other countries, and from 8 years on boys and girls will enjoy this volume as a picture book, while in those fortunate households where family singing is the custom, 'Lullabies of Many Lands' will be a delightful addition to the home library." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Je 29 '41 260w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN. The city of man. See Agar, H., and others

COMMODITY RESEARCH BUREAU, INC. Commodity year book, 1940; v 2, Commodities in industry. 708p il maps $7.50 c1940 The bureau, 82 Beaver st, N.Y.

338 Commercial products. Prices. Commercial statistics (39-11418)

"The Commodity Year Book is an encyclopedia of the raw materials of industry and is intended especially for business people dealing with commodities in any form. . . In the beginning of the volume are four special studies similar in scope to those in the previous volume. They are as follows: War and commodities; Trends in per capita commodity consumption; Are synthetics displacing raw materials in industry, and Weather forecasting. Each article is brief but gives the background of the field and outlines present conditions. The main part of the volume is given over to the study of 75 separate commodities which are arranged alphabetically. . . A concise description of each commodity is given showing the various steps in changing the raw material into a finished product." Subscription Bks Bul

"The volume will be useful in libraries that need concise compilation of statistics of commodities and in college libraries where courses in industrial chemistry or in business are given in the college. Public libraries will find it useful for high school reference. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:5 Ja '41 550w

CONDLIFFE, JOHN BELL. The reconstruction of world trade; a survey of international economic relations. 427p $3.75 Norton

337 Economic policy. Commercial policy. World politics 40-29409

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"This is a useful book. The reviewer finds little ground for criticism in the analysis of the effects of the restrictive policies of recent years. As to the future, the author's prognosis seems at least as reasonable as any other. Some of Mr. Condliffe's views may not find universal acceptance; for example, his opinion as to the impracticability of monetary nationalism in the form of flexible exchange rates, and his view that quantitative controls are incompatible with multilateral trade. But his main thesis that international commerce cannot be revived in a world divided by political animosities will meet with general agreement." R. E. Freeman

+ Am Econ R 31:151 Mr '41 850w

"Despite the tacit promise of its title, this book offers neither a blue-print nor a prophecy for the post-war world. A scientist rather than an architect or a soothsayer, Professor Condliffe presents a careful survey of the processes by which the traditional pattern of world trade has disintegrated and new forms have arisen, analyzes the major contributing factors, and assesses some of the conditions and pressures with which future economic statecraft will have to reckon. In so doing, he has provided a document which, because of its close adherence to political and economic realities, and its sane, judicious temper, represents a more fruitful addition to the growing bookshelf on the shape of the world to come than many of its more stylish contemporaries. If it were less ponderous in composition, more incisive in narrative and argument, the book would achieve the wider circulation its material deserves. It is a pity that good political economy must sometimes be dull political economy." W. P. Maddox

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:574 Je '41 700w

"It is no fault of Professor Condliffe that his book—though characterized by his usual virtues of writing—fails to offer any concrete or tangible answer to the problem. . . As it stands, however, this work offers a valuable description of the history and breakdown of international trade during an interwar period of political disintegration, and puts clearly and provokingly the problems which we have to face during the coming period of reconstruction. It is a timely book." John Lindberg

+ Ann Am Acad 214:259 Mr '41 490w

Foreign Affairs 19:676 Ap '41 150w

"The book strikes me as excellent and sound throughout, except for a few small points. The author slips in not making clear that the disturbing effects of a tariff revision on a given trade situation are not related to the height of the tariff but to the scope of recent increases. . . Americans should read the book and ponder America's role in the world. Economists should read the book and join the Political Science Association, for politics dominates economics." B. B. Wallace

+ — J Pol Econ 49:631 Ag '41 850w

Nation 153:409 O 25 '41 160w

Reviewed by A. F. W. Plumtre

Pacific Affairs 14:375 S '41 2100w

"This is a meaty book. Professor Condliffe has made extensive and effective use of the studies on Economic Policies in Relation to World Peace, prepared by scholars from various nations for the Bergen meeting of the International Studies Conference. He has also drawn liberally upon the fund of knowledge, and wisdom, acquired as author of the annual World Economic Survey of the League of Nations (1931-1937)." P. W. Bidwell

+ Pol Sci Q 56:133 Mr '41 1150w

"A really important book dealing with fundamental issues which will have to be decided in the post-war world. . . This is at once a wise, an informative and a timely book." C. W. Guillebaud

+ Spec 167:112 Ag 1 '41 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p294 Je 21 '41 850w

CONDON, HELEN B. Two career girls. 303p il $2 Penn

40-34537

"Gail Adams' dream of going to college with her chum Nancy seemed frustrated by lack of funds. Then Nancy conceived the idea of opening Cherry Knoll, her aunt's farm, for summer tourists. The two girls become involved not only with tourists, but a slight mystery concerning an old mansion and the opening of a public library in the small Michigan community." Library J

"The machinery of both story and dialogue moves rather heavily. For teen age girls," Emily Hutson

Library J 65:1044 D 1 '40 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:23 Ja '41

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA. Laws, statutes, etc. Laws and joint resolutions of the last session of the Confederate congress (Nov. 7, 1864-Mar. 18, 1865) together with the Secret acts of previous congresses; with an introd. and a bibliographical note, by Charles W. Ramsdell, editor. 183p $2.50 Duke univ.

345.12 U.S.—History—Civil war 41-5783

"[This volume] is published in memory of William Kennedy Boyd, who assembled at Duke University the Flowers collection of source materials in Southern history. Professor Ramsdell found in the Flowers Collection ninety-two manuscript enrolled acts passed at the final session of the confederate Congress. After exhaustive research, he was able to supplement this original nucleus with the texts of the approximately one hundred missing acts, thus producing a unique and complete edition of hitherto unpublished 'last laws.'" (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by W. M. Robinson, Jr.

Am Hist R 47:206 O '41 280w

"A valuable reference work. . . It is not, however, 'dry-as-dust'; the scholar with historical imagination can sense the attitude of that harried session when Congress had to provide for its own removal should 'the public emergencies' make remaining 'impolitic.' The political scientist will be specially interested in these last efforts of civil authorities to maintain the public routine even when military defeat was imminent." M. D. Irish

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:808 Ag '41 190w

"The work of collecting and editing this collection here printed was 'an absorbing adventure' which also involved much digging and piecing together. This work has been done in Dr. Ramsdell's usual thorough, painstaking manner. The result is a valuable addition to the history of the Southern Confederacy. There is a careful and informative historical introduction, a bibliographical note and a good index. Each law or resolution is identified as to its present locality whether printed or unprinted." T. R. Hay

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 27 '41 220w

CONGDON, HERBERT WHEATON. The covered bridge, an old American landmark whose romance, stability and craftsmanship are typified by the structures remaining in Vermont; il. by Edmund Homer Royce. 150p $3.50 Daye

624.62 Bridges—Vermont 41-22060

"From every point of view, and with a mass of diverse local reference, Mr. Congdon has studied the old covered bridges and has written a book which is both picturesque and informative. And the beautiful pictures are informative too. Edmund Homer Royce has also found amazing variety in his views of Vermont bridges—their portals, their lattice-work, their place in the scene. And he has photographed details, too, of construction, which illustrate the bridges' stability and craftsmanship as well as their romance." N Y Times

"Many covered bridge books are mainly photographs and statistics—dull as the photograph albums of other people's families. But Mr. Congdon has taken a difficult subject and made it absorbing and flavorful—so that the text of 'The Covered Bridge' is fully as important as Mr. Royce's lovely illustrations." R. H. Bonner

+ Books p10 D 14 '41 240w

+ N Y Times p10 N 9 '41 470w

"In a true Yankee sense, here is an honest book on an honest subject. With dignity and beauty, a New England institution is eulogized for all time." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 15 '41 700w

CONNELL, VIVIAN. The peacock is a gentleman. 272p $2 Dial press

41-15435

Paul Beecham, after twelve years in the ledger room of a huge London cement firm, decided to run away. He had a good classical education and spoke French, so fixed his mind on France. Investing part of his savings in an excellent wardrobe, bought second hand, he traveled to Paris first class. In Paris he met and mingled with people of wealth and title, became quite a man of the world, but confessed his deception finally, because "the peacock is a gentleman."

"A story of Paris before the war, delightfully improbable but told with a zest and tempo that almost persuades you that it could have happened. . . Vivian Connell knows Paris intimately and describes it in glowing colors. He has written a deft and amusing novel, especially for those who cherish memories of bois, boite and bistro." Lisle Bell

+ Books p9 Ag 31 '41 280w

"It is a very class-conscious book, moderately well written, making generous use of a lavish vocabulary and on the whole pleasantly diverting." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 24 '41 190w

CONNINGTON, J. J., pseud. See Stewart, A. W.

CONRAD, BRENDA. The stars give warning. 250p $2 Scribner

41-15436

A story of Nazi spies and American secret service men in the Canal Zone.

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 S 7 '41 120w

"It is a pretty good spy story, with a fine picture of Panama for its background." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 O 5 '41 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 240w

CONSTANT DE REBECQUE, HENRI BEN-JAMIN. Prophecy from the past; on conquest and usurpation; ed. and tr. by Helen Byrne Lippmann. 122p $1.25 Reynal

321.6 Militarism. Despotism. France—Politics and government 41-4607

"This analysis of the evils of dictatorship and aggression, written over a century ago by Benjamin Constant who was then a French refugee in Germany with Napoleon still master of Europe, reads like a tract for our times. The reasoning, which goes deeper than the political to the moral issues involved, predicts that dictatorships cannot maintain themselves and must ultimately collapse either from revolutions, attacks from without or decay from within. Dictatorship is doomed to be its own grave digger, because it stifles all freedom and intellectual progress, corrupts morality and uses other self-defeating means." Commonweal

Reviewed by Emmanuel Chapman

Commonweal 33:626 Ap 11 '41 320w

Nation 153:547 N 29 '41 80w

CONSTANT DE REBECQUE, H. B.—Cont.

"The ideas in this book are well-conceived, and they are presented with conviction. It is a little disturbing to recall that a very short time after he wrote this Constant was busily working with Napoleon to organize the 'constitutional' government of the Hundred Days." D. D.

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 4 '41 600w

COOK, MRS FANNIE (FRANK). Boot-heel doctor. 268p $2.50 Dodd

41-17611

Southeastern Missouri, where it juts down into Arkansas forming a section of land roughly suggesting the heel of a boot, is the location of this realistic novel. It is the story of the sharecroppers, bravely trying to make a living in the face of great odds, and of the compassionate, understanding doctor, who scolds and cajoles them and heals their illnesses when possible. The great flood which holds the center of the stage, brings some concerted action into their drab lives.

"'Boot-Heel Doctor' is a fine tribute to a character with the sturdy virtues of the true healer." George Conrad

+ Books p8 S 14 '41 370w

Cath World 154:506 Ja '42 180w

"Mrs. Cook writes with quiet beauty and realism. Her word pictures and figures of speech are particularly good, though occasionally strained. The climax, in which the doctor saves the Negro ringleader from lynching, is swift and powerful. However, the story starts slowly, with its movement more apparent in retrospect than at the time of reading." R. J. Blakely

+ New Repub 105:629 N 10 '41 480w

"'Boot-Heel Doctor' is a fine regional novel, excellent not alone for its dramatic story but for its sympathetic treatment of humans caught in a grave national problem. This book will be remembered not so much for the portrait of its main character, which errs a little on the side of the conventional saintly, but for the portrayal of little men who, under the lash of persecution, rise to the stature of self-respecting manhood." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 S 14 '41 900w

"The grotesque humor of Caldwell and the harshness of Steinbeck are missing, but the novel is never soft or romantic. In the early part of the book the writing is self-conscious and studded with overvigorous figures of speech, but after a few pages it relaxes into a fresh and easy vernacular appropriate to character and scene." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 S 20 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 80w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey G 30:712 D '41 130w

COOKE, DAVID C. War wings; fighting planes of the American and British air forces; with a foreword by Al Williams. 218p il $2.75 McBride

623.746 Airplanes (W) 41-52010

"What types of planes are being utilized in the fight against Hitlerism and to build up the American Air Services? What do these planes look like, how are they constructed, how fast do they fly, and what armament do they carry? The purpose of this volume is to answer those questions and to present actual photographs of both American and English military machines." Intro.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald

Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 50w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 20w

"Mr. Cooke is an authority on aviation and this is reflected throughout the well-organized chapters of his book which should appeal to adults as well as youthful aviation enthusiasts."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 O 31 '41 240w

COOLIDGE, DANE. Bear Paw. 252p $2 Dutton 41-7795

Western story.

"Romantic and exciting." Will Cuppy
+ Books p11 Je 29 '41 90w

"Although the tale is wholly different in set-up from any other in the long list of his Western stories, the late Dane Coolidge never wrote with surer touch or surer grasp of his materials. And he certainly knew how to hold his reader's interest." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p18 J1 20 '41 190w

COONEY, BARBARA. King of Wreck island; il. by [the author]. 91p $1.50 Farrar

41-11236

The island in the Maine bay was absolutely inaccessible to ships, and was called Wreck Island. There came a winter when the bay froze over, and an elderly man walked ashore. He had been stranded on the island when a boy, and this was his first chance to reach the mainland. The story of his adventures are told to a small boy, who goes back over the ice to the island to become its prince. For ages ten to twelve.

"The pictures for this joyous and amusing story as are perfect as its Maine village life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:368 S '41 100w

"A shipwreck story that will delight fourth and fifth graders, humorously told. Both story and black and white illustrations by the author send forth a breath of Maine, with its stormy coast, its shipping, and its interesting characters." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 130w

COOPER, ALFRED M. How to supervise people. 150p $1.75 McGraw

658.31243 Foremen. Employment management 41-5119

Manual of advice for industrial supervisors. Partial contents: How to become a supervisor; The responsibilities that come with authority; The physical condition of your subordinates; How to develop group morale; This thing called cooperation; Hiring, reprimanding, and firing; When and how to delegate authority; Questions for group discussion. Index.

Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

"This book is distinctly a 'must' for three classes of people in business: upper executives who want to arrange conference programs for the development of their supervisory force; foremen and supervisors who want to improve their own executive techniques; and ambitious employees who want to climb out of the ranks. The organization of material is logical, and the style is lucid." Carl Heyel

+ Management R 30:314 Ag '41 400w

COPLAND, AARON. Our new music. (Whit-tlesley house publication) 305p $2.50 McGraw 780.9 Music—History and criticism Musicians (W) 41-19296

Survey of contemporary music trends and personalities, both European and American, beginning with Glinka and ending with Stravinsky, and placing each composer considered as to his share in the development of modern music. Contains also a short discussion of music for the phonograph, radio and the film, and a list of available recordings of the composers included. Index.

Booklist 38:109 D 1 '41

"Mr. Copland has the heart and mind to speak constructively on all phases of music, and his brief account of his own career is generous and manly, recording difficulties without complaining and successes without boastfulness." John Erskine

+ Books p12 Ja 11 '42 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

Reviewed by H. E. Bush

Library J 66:729 S 1 '41 90w

"Mr. Copland's book, little more than an extended pamphlet, is too sketchy to be considered as bona-fide literature on music. It is rather written in the manner of good-natured shop talk, interesting and quite to the point when dealing with a few representative American composers, but, when the author attempts to give a bird's-eye view of the prelude to the 'modern era,' disclosing unfamiliarity with the history of music, and a surprisingly insecure judgment. . . . The autobiographical essay, which makes up the third part of the book, is naive and rather commonplace. Mr. Copland is decidedly more competent when examining his confrères, the nature of whose art he has grasped with shrewdness and sympathy." P. H. Lang

+ Sat R of Lit 24:35 D 6 '41 300w

"Readable and fairly provocative book. . . . Mr. Copland is at his best in his general survey of the activities of the European and American composers of the present century and his assessment of their relative positions in the musical world of today."

+ Theatre Arts 26:66 Ja '42 850w

"Aaron Copland is one of our most prominent American composers. His music is frequently played, is highly regarded by musicians, and is gradually making its way with the public so that some of it even is available on records—still an achievement for an American composer. But despite this position, with his head exposed, so to speak, above the parapet, he has had the courage to write an engagingly frank book about twentieth-century music in general and a number of composers in particular. He is ideally suited to undertake such a work because beyond the fact that he writes agreeably he has an unusual enthusiasm for other men's music which is not confined to those safely dead." Douglas Moore

+ Yale R n s 31:391 winter '42 1350w

COPPOCK, JOSEPH D. Government agencies of consumer instalment credit. (Financial research program. Studies in consumer instalment financing) 216p $2.50 Nat. bur. of economic research

658.883 U.S. Federal housing administration. Electric home and farm authority, incorporated. Instalment plan 41-4040

"A factual discussion of the activities of the two government agencies that participate in consumer instalment financing: The Federal Housing Administration [and the] . . . Electric Home and Farm Authority. . . . The material for this study was obtained from the agencies themselves, and in analyzing the data it has been attempted to present a complete factual picture rather than an expression of opinion." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by C. O. Fisher

Am Econ R 31:422 Je '41 210w

"In the study of the F.H.A. and E.H.F.A., only the original plan, which lapsed in 1937, has been considered. This limitation, and the short period of existence of these agencies, hardly provide an adequate basis for evaluation. Consequently, the conclusions which Mr. Coppock felt impelled to make are not very significant." J. H. Cover

Ann Am Acad 216:205 Jl '41 180w

Management R 30:235 Je '41 30w

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Faye's Folly. 312p $2.50 Appleton-Century (W) 41-15915

Faye's Folly was a flourishing Illinois farm, built up on government land which Frederick

Faye had taken up in 1839. His daughter, Sheba, who loved the land with all her father's passion, is the heroine of this Civil War romance. The man Sheba loved was an officer in the Northern army, and, unfortunately, married to the wrong woman. With the assassination of Lincoln, Frederick Faye's health began to fail and Sheba's difficulties to increase. Eventually the treachery of one person, brought happiness to another.

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 S 14 '41 280w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '41 500w

"The stirring war setting and the difficult romance make a readable and entertaining story. It hasn't the charm and wit of Miss Corbett's stories about Mrs. Meigs; and the emphasis on the proprieties to be observed in a young girl's behavior and thinking make it seem more closely related to the author's stories about the Graper girls. Its prime interest indeed lies in its sincere presentation of a young girl's individual point of view on politics, patriotism, family loyalty, the farm and romance in the troubled Civil War years." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 S 14 '41 430w

"It is really a quiet little story of love and charm." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 S 13 '41 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Out at the Soldiers' home; a memory book; il. by Edward C. Caswell. 266p $2.50 Appleton-Century

B or 92 (W) 41-4568

Memories of the author's childhood and adolescence, spent "out at the Soldiers' home," where her father was an official. In her twenty-five years of residence she collected many amusing anecdotes of the rugged individualists among the old soldiers, and many of these stories are retold here.

Booklist 37:386 Ap 15 '41

"The author of the indomitable Mrs. Meigs makes the friendly, fierce, often curiously twisted individualists in the soldiers' home a lovable company. As seen through the sympathetic eyes of Betty, their story is a nostalgic record of an American yesterday." Page Cooper

+ Books p20 Mr 2 '41 500w

"Miss Corbett's sharp composite picture of the man of the Civil War generation formed by the anecdotes and character sketches chosen for this memory book is a vivid little water color that the huge gallery of American portraits has lacked. 'Out at the Soldiers' Home' hangs with honor beside the battle pictures of the war." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 160w

Christian Century 58:329 Mr 5 '41 60w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 5 '41 550w

"Recommended for all libraries and for senior high school lists." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 80w

"The 'memory book' of [Miss Corbett's] childhood and adolescence is also a memorial, both nostalgic and entertaining, to a vanished institution and its very individual human life. For the old soldiers, she makes her readers understand at once, were individuals every one."

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '41 440w

Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 21 '41 190w

Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 4 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

COREY, ALBERT BICKMORE. Crisis of 1830-1842 in Canadian-American relations. 203p maps $2.50 Yale univ. press 971.038 U.S.—Foreign relations—Canada.

Canada—Foreign relations—U.S. 41-20689

"This is another in the Carnegie Endowment series on Canadian-American relations edited by Professor Shotwell. Professor Corey of St. Lawrence University tells the story of some of the most famous and exciting incidents of all the long history of 'peace with friction' in the relations of the two North American countries. The core of his narrative is the crisis produced by [the] Canadian rebellion of 1837. But he begins earlier than that and brings his narrative down to the Webster-Ashburton treaty." (Canadian Forum) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. G. Skilling

Am Pol Sci R 35:1212 D '41 150w

"Dr. Corey writes clearly and with scholarly accuracy and detachment. From his study of the original sources, he has been able to add new details. By his liberal use of newspapers and legislative debates, he has been able to portray public opinion in Canada and the United States, and particularly the hearsay evidence, prejudice, and imperfect knowledge upon which it was based. There is a good bibliography and five excellent black-and-white maps." Carl Wittke

+ Ann Am Acad 219:182 Ja '42 550w

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill

Canadian Forum 21:284 D '41 270w

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes

Christian Century 58:1512 D 3 '41 150w

"Professor Corey has done a thorough, scholarly job, and, apart from sections in Chapters II and III which involve, perhaps, over-much newspaper quotation, an artistic one. In view of the completeness of the documentation and the high judicial level of the argument, dispute is almost presumptuous. Yet in one minor matter of interpretation, this reviewer believes the author has erred. Time has not confirmed the opinion of those contemporaries who believed the leaders of the Canadian rebellions to be 'men of heroic proportions.' Papineau, despite his enigmatic cloak, was a lightweight, and the truculent Mackenzie, although he stood for a great principle, lacked the stability and the warmth of personality which nations demand in some degree of their heroes." G. S. Graham

+ — New Eng Q 14:761 D '41 600w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 30w

COREY, PAUL. County seat. 418p $2.50 Bobbs (W) 41-14431

The third volume in a series portraying the life of a whole Iowa community, thru the medium of the Mantz family. The first two books were Three Miles Square and The Road Returns (Book Review Digest, 1939, 1940). The present book takes the family thru the years of prosperity at the end of the twenties, and ends with the tightening of money in 1929. During that time the youngest Mantz, Otto, finished college and found a white collar job in Chicago, only to lose it again in the early months of the depression. With his return to Elm and the taking over of the family farm, his ambitious mother saw the end of her dream of importance achieved thru her favorite son.

"Real it is; interesting it is, too—even uncommonly exciting; and the only protest against his choice of the facts to present will be from the squeamish reader who is bound to wish he would not bear down quite so uncompromisingly on the kind of fact known as 'raw.'" Wilson Follett

+ — Atlantic O '41 360w

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"Mrs. Mantz was the grim yet sometimes sympathetic and pitiable heroine of three novels by Paul Corey which together make as true and recognizable a picture of one large phase of American life as has been written. . . All three books have the peculiar absorbing quality of a familiar photographed scene in which there is an abundance of clearly lighted details in each one of which one finds a nostalgic pleasure. The books too are remarkable in the accuracy of detail in picturing the past thirty or thirty-five years in a small Middle-Western world. . . 'County Seat' is a true and absorbing book, and the three together make a notable achievement in American writing." Louis Bromfield

+ Books p5 S 14 '41 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Corey crowds his scene with character and incident, some touching the Mantzes closely, others contributing only to the background against which they move. The novel achieves distinction through virtue of its accent on mediocrity; through Corey's deep-rooted respect for the dignity and endeavors of ordinary men. He is probably not yet through with the Mantzes. Otto's experiences on Iowa acres during the difficult Thirties will undoubtedly make his next novel." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 S 7 '41 950w

"The trio make up what must be in some ways a true picture of life on an American farm and in a small town during the last forty-five years. But it is a dreary story as Mr. Corey tells it, without humor, salt or passion. The people are mean and grasping or inarticulate and noble. Pretty grim, in short."

New Yorker 17:77 S 6 '41 60w

"The word 'pregnant' which is quite unjustifiably considered a mild obscenity, or at least a word in bad taste, runs through this book like a chorus from Aeschylus. Everything is always being that way to the great satisfaction or discomfort of the parties concerned. . . Mr. Corey tells a great many stories, slightly related, in his effort to get down the whole behavior of an entire county in Iowa in late Prohibition days. Most of them are accurate and interesting." Phil Stong

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 30 '41 300w

"Mr Corey has painted a broad canvas with an economy of stroke which has a little the effect of resembling an extended synopsis. Nevertheless he is interestingly successful in depicting the undefined emotions and blind gropings which actuate practically all of us in our approach to life and which we so easily . . . substitute for and confuse with the expression of conscious will." B. I.

Spring'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 300w

CORLE, EDWIN. Desert country. (American folkways ser) 357p $3 Duell

917.9 Southwest. Deserts (W) 41-51799

Description and anecdotal history of America's desert country—"the arid land of the American Southwest, in general that area between the Pacific Coast Range and the Rocky Mountain chain, that great basin region which includes such deserts as the Mojave, the Colorado, the Amargosa, and Arizona's western slope." (page 3) Index.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

"This admirable study of our desert country is the first of the projected series of 'American Folkway' books, under the editorship of Erskine Caldwell. Mr. Corle, who knows his blistered lands intimately and whose scholarship is impeccable, has started off the series successfully." Stanley Walker

+ Books p1 Je 1 '41 1500w

"Edwin Corle knows this country well, for he has spent months visiting every corner of it, gathering facts and legends about its early settlers and its many Indian tribes. His book is well written, crammed with facts, and intensely interesting."

+ Cath World 154:253 N '41 170w

"Useful in small libraries and recommended for purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 110w

"Mr. Corle has an easy, happy-go-lucky style, a modern distaste for sentimentalism, and a realistic approach which doubtless comes from close acquaintance with his selected field. He is the reverse of rhapsodic. He does not idealize pioneers . . . or the Indians. . . He makes it clear that the desert is big enough to stand all the realism that can be used in describing it and still remain strikingly unreal." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Je 1 '41 1250w

"Occasionally wordy or slightly pretentious, but a fascinating review."

+ New Yorker 17:71 My 31 '41 50w

"Mr. Corle evidently knows the background of his subject in terms of natural phenomena and moral history. Clearly he has gone about and seen the desert at first hand. There is nothing superficial about his account." P. B. Sears

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 Je 21 '41 800w

"'Desert Country' makes fascinating reading."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 JI '41 160w
Wis Lib Bul 37:137 JI '41

CORLEY, FRANCIS JOSEPH, and WILLMES, ROBERT JOSEPH. Wings of eagles; the Jesuit saints and blessed. (Science and culture ser) 206p $2.50 Bruce pub.

271.5 Saints. Jesuits—Biography 41-5092

"[The lives of] one hundred and sixty-five Jesuit Saints and Blessed are chronicled in these interesting pages. The biographies are necessarily brief, for the book contains only two hundred pages. But they are valuable from the fact that no other complete record exists in English, and the reader is referred to more extensive lives at the close of each chapter. The authors have consulted the standard authorities in various languages, and, where no standard lives existed, have gathered their facts from the most reliable sources." Cath World

Cath World 154:249 N '41 230w

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan

Commonweal 33:605 Ap 4 '41 180w

CORLEY, PAULINE. The world and Richard. 324p $2 Random house

41-19641

Story of a terribly handicapped small boy, whose twisted body and mind were considered incurable, until a patient, understanding woman took him in charge.

"'The World and Richard' is a fairy tale for grownups, with a frank sentimentality which, for many readers, will soon blur the loosely strung pattern of events which governed Richard's existence. Despite that aura, the portrait of the child is distinct, and individual and will linger in your memory long after the rest is forgotten." Mary Ross

+ Books p12 O 5 '41 360w

"Judgment of this novel is difficult because it appeals so directly and winningly to the emotions that one is inclined to overlook its faults. Personally, I cannot help feeling that it is pretty sentimental and that its more romantic passages are painfully reminiscent of the women's magazines. Where Richard is concerned, however, Pauline Corley does a good job and a moving one. She makes one see and believe in him perfectly. . . 'The World and Richard' must have been a hard book to write. With the above reservations, I think it is surprisingly well done, and I also imagine that its public will be a large one." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 S 28 '41 850w

"Sometimes the story is moving for a few pages but most of it is too blatantly sentimental to affect the reader with anything more than embarrassment." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 S 27 '41 330w

CORMACK, MARIBELLE, and ALEXANDER, WILLIAM PRINDLE. The luck of the Comstocks; a story of Block island; il. by Hilda Frommholz. 298p $2 Appleton-Century (W) 41-19199

The lighthouse keeper on Block island, off the Rhode Island coast, was a Comstock from the Isle of Wight. During a gale an old schooner makes port, and the American Comstock finds that the owner is an eighteen-year-old girl, the last of the English Comstocks. The story tells about the history of Block island, its early settlers, its traditions, something of archeology and Viking lore, and sailing. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"This plot surely does move. . . This is the speediest story of these favorite collaborators." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 N 2 '41 280w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 30w

"The background, with its legends and its seagoing traditions, is indeed the best part of this junior novel. The younger people are not drawn with the same sharpness as are the salty, amusing old sailors who give real character to the book, but it is, nevertheless, an engrossing tale which deftly carries its double theme to a satisfying conclusion." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p28 N 2 '41 220w

"Engrossing." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 40w

CORNBERG, SOL, and GEBAUER, EMANUEL L. A stage crew handbook; drawings by Jack Forman. 265p $3 Harper

792 Theaters—Stage-setting and scenery 41-9337

The authors are "two of the most experienced hands in the tributary field, Sol Cornberg, the technical director of the Cleveland Playhouse, and Emanuel Gebauer of the John Hay High School in Cleveland. These men know by long experience all the details involved in stage carpentry, in making and painting scenery, in lighting the stage, in creating sound effects. More than that, they know how to handle all the elements of production (and, in turn, the men who do the handling) while the settings and their accompaniments are being constructed, are being set for action when the play is on, or taken off stage when it is done. [They] make their book in the form of question and answer, each question being reduced almost to its smallest element and illustrated. . . The big questions which puzzle all but the expert craftsmen are there, too, with the answers carefully studied to make understanding easy for the man who is not technically minded." (Theatre Arts) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:542 JI 15 '41

"Instead of limiting the natural audience for the book to students, stage crew men and directors, the authors might well have suggested its use by every architect who aims to build a workable theatre or auditorium, for it is the architect's ignorance of backstage requirements in space and form, the necessary things he leaves out, the wrong things he puts in, which make the work of the technical director and his men so difficult and often so unnecessarily complicated. Perhaps some of the young men who use A Stage Crew Handbook as a text will develop into theatre architects themselves and thus solve the whole problem."

+ Theatre Arts 25:471 Je '41 600w

CORSARI, WILLY. Man without uniform; tr. from the Dutch by S. L. Salzedo. 358p $2.50 Greenberg [8s 6d Hutchinsonson] 41-16596

"Remco de Raai, who was born in a Dutch village, studies medicine under his uncle's guidance and rises to fame as a research scientist and practicing physician. He chooses his profession out of a strong inner conviction, and his work dominates his actions and private decisions. He breaks off his engagement with a clever, charming girl, knowing that he must follow his road alone. In his later marriage to Gerda, a shy, frustrated widow, he is the physician rather than the husband." N Y Times

CORSARI, WILLY—Continued

"The narrative is somber and sharply realistic." David Tilden
Books p11 S 21 '41 130w

"This is an exceptionally able example of the novel with a thesis, and, what is rare in these days, its hero is truly a man on heroic scale, which in itself is remarkably exhilarating to the reader surfeited by a diet of novels relating the life-stories of nonentities." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 19 '40 300w

Reviewed by John Mair

New Statesman & Nation 19:110 Ja 27 '40 70w

"The characters are drawn vividly, with penetrating psychological insight. The author's passion for intensity of character lends vigor to his most casual descriptions. The patients we meet on Remco's daily rounds are, unlike the 'cases' in so many physicians' novels, real people whose suffering, hopes and delusions are woven closely into the broad pattern of the tale. Even if we feel at times that the author did not give all he could, he has given much, enough to make this book a beautiful, unusual experience." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p22 S 14 '41 600w

"No solution to the problem is offered and the book ends on the same note of despair that has sounded throughout its pages, its very sincerity being also its pitfall, for everything seems to have been swept on one side for the sake of the theme—plot and characterization would appear to have been mere details in the author's mind, and the style in which it is written (or possibly the manner in which it is translated?) necessitates continual effort on the part of the reader to give to the book the attention that it deserves."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p75 F 10 '40 150w

CORWIN, EDWARD SAMUEL. Constitutional revolution, ltd. 121p $2 Associated colleges, Harper hall, Claremont, Calif.

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional law. U.S. Supreme court. U.S.—Politics and government 41:13679

"Three lectures recently delivered at Pomona and the allied colleges at Claremont on the decline and fall of laissez faire, the rise of new functions of government to protect the 'equality' of citizens at the expense of a doctrinaire 'liberty,' the concentration of power in the federal government at the expense of the states and in the executive at the expense of the legislative and judicial branches, and the revolutionary changes in constitutional interpretation by which these have been effected and rationalized." Christian Century

Am Econ R 31:652 S '41 40w

"The first part of the second lecture takes up the rulings in the Schechter, Gold Clause, Carter, and Butler cases. One who seeks a methodical analysis of this group of cases will find it here, but he will find a number of pungent and, at times, suggestive comments upon the character and course of this series of decisions. Beginning in the middle of the chapter, the great change signalized in the N.L.R.B. and Social Security Cases is discussed. . . . It is the last chapter in which appear Professor Corwin's observations on the results of the switch beginning in 1937. . . . With his classification of the changes produced by the recent revolution I agree. More than that, I have found this brief chapter the most interesting series of observations upon the recent history of our most peculiar institution that I have read. But if I both agree with and applaud the general argument of the chapter, there are several interstitial points with which I do not entirely concur." B. F. Wright

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1164 D '41 750w

"Penetrating analysis, wise appraisal, and lucid exposition of American constitutional development make this an important book." R. E. Cushman

+ Ann Am Acad 219:186 Ja '42 550w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p10 Ja 18 '42 1000w

Christian Century 58:935 Jl 23 '41 110w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by P. T. Fenn, Jr.

Harvard Law R 55:308 D '41 350w

Reviewed by H. C. Mansfield

Yale Law J 51:357 D '41 1050w

CORWIN, EDWARD SAMUEL. The president: office and powers; history and analysis of practice and opinion. 476p $5 N.Y. univ. press [21s Oxford]

353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. U.S.—Politics and government, U.S.—Constitutional law 40:32729

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Needless to say, Corwin's book is enriched with the historical learning of its author." James Hart

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:142 F '41 500w

Reviewed by Pendleton Herring

Ann Am Acad 214:239 Mr '41 360w

"Here is a book for the lawyer and the layman alike. One hundred and thirty-two invaluable pages of notes (with many extensive quotations) attest its scholarship. The style is as pleasing as the analysis is acute—and timely." Phillips Bradley

+ Columbia Law R 41:770 Ap '41 1100w

Foreign Affairs 19:681 Ap '41 20w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Harvard Law R 54:354 D '40 550w

"Professor Corwin has long been known as one of the outstanding students of the American Constitution, and this book is in many ways his most remarkable achievement. With abundant knowledge and with great clarity he describes the working of the Presidential office in a fashion that makes it a living and real institution. If the book has a defect it is the care with which Professor Corwin has suppressed his own view of the evolving future." H. J. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 25 '41 260w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski

New Statesman & Nation 21:142 F 8 '41 800w

"Professor Corwin's volume is a mine which can be easily worked and which will lighten the research labors of students and future commentators. Mr. Corwin has done much of their work for them." Lindsay Rogers

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '41 1050w

"Based on the profound learning that marks all Professor Corwin's work and illuminated by an independent judgment, this book is a notable contribution to the study of a great office."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p59 F 1 '41 150w

COTHREN, MRS MARION (BENEDICT). The adventures of Dudley and Gilderoy; pictures by F. Rojankovsky. 32p $1 Dutton

(W) 41-1362

An adaptation of Algernon Blackwood's Dudley and Gilderoy which appeared some years ago (Book Review Digest, 1929). It describes the firm friendship of a grey parrot and a disreputable ginger cat, who ran away to London.

"There is a genial rakishness about Gilderooy that made him from the first a beloved object to all cat-fanciers who collect books. In the original story—of which this is a thoroughly successful version for children—the friendship of this battered, resourceful, arrogant cat with Dudley the expensive and pampered parrot, was the most natural thing in the world. . . The pictures are a joy, every one: they are Rojankovsky at his gayest and wiriest, even without color. There is one on the title page, with the parrot affectionately biting the cat's ear, that belongs with distinguished portraits of alley characters. . . Blackwood, who gave his benediction to this version, must be having a great time with these new pictures of his old friends." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 9 '41 200w

"While one could wish that greater care might have been given to the design and make-up of this book, its appeal to children is immediate. . . While the story as Blackwood wrote it is far too long and too subtle for children, the adventures and comradeship existing between a lordly King Grey parrot and a ginger-colored stray cat have a lively appeal to the imagination and were greeted with uproarious laughter by the group of English children." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:98 Mr '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 240w

COURNOS, JOHN. A boy named John; with il. by Woodi Ishmael. 117p $1.75 Scribner B or 92 41-18711

Autobiography describing the author's childhood, up to the time of his first regular job—as office boy on a newspaper. He came to this country as a Russian immigrant, and the book is especially valuable as showing the feelings of foreign born Americans. For boys of nine to fourteen.

"It is, in a sense, a success story, yet it is told with so much simplicity and grace that it has none of the unhappy earmarks of that genre. . . Strongly recommended for boys and girls, eight up." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 25:111 N 21 '41 80w

"A career book that is sincere, dramatic, and well told. Highly recommended." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 80w

COVERT, MRS ALICE LENT. Fighting parson. 276p $2.50 Kinsey

41-22773

Story of a lonely little community somewhere near the Rockies, where the settlers are harassed by a gang of night riders. The circuit rider, Nath Owen, leads his flock in a desperate attempt to fight off their oppressors, and after a bloody struggle, the outlaws are conquered.

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"Mrs. Covert has created a warm and appealing character, humbly unaware of his greatness. And in the minor characters of the frontier she has presented a gallery of picturesque and sturdy types, close to reality." Lisle Bell

+ Books p9 D 21 '41 230w

"In telling this somewhat artless but mildly exciting little tale, Mrs. Covert has made a real attempt to present her characters in the round. Nath, who talks with God in such familiar, homely fashion; Milly his meddling sister; the handsome school teacher Hannah—all these dominant figures are quite credibly drawn. They are not the complete stock types which one expects, and gets, from a Western. In fact, though one deplores its mysterious vagueness concerning time and place, 'Fighting Parson' is a pretty passable picture of a frontier community and of the kind of people who at one time could be found here. Completely mediocre, it is nevertheless a perfectly acceptable little novel." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p30 N 30 '41 440w

"A character to be remembered is Brother Nath Owen of 'Fighting Parson'. The homely, everyday religion of the fearless circuit rider high-lights a story that might have become just another western."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41

COVERT, MRS ALICE LENT. The months of rain. 341p $2.50 Kinsey

41-2430

An Oklahoma farm community in the years following the first World war is the scene of this story of Jerd Wair, and his wife, Callie. Tragedy overtakes them, but the Wairs are the kind who stay with the land, and attempt to instill dignity into their shattered homes and lives. By the author of Return to Dust (Book Review Digest, 1939).

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

"In outline, this may appear to be a story of unrelieved gloom, but Mrs. Covert has made it something more. The steady courage of Jerd and his wife, the valiant uphill battle of Celia Lou, the readiness of these simple neighbors to help another—these are the elements which give the novel a reassuring message." George Conrad

+ Books p10 Mr 30 '41 650w

Library J 66:34 Ja 1 '41 50w

"[Mrs] Covert's homely, folksy, deeply felt story . . . is a novel of sensibility, sentimental but on a realistic plane." F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p4 F 16 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Blithe spirit. 189p $2 Doubleday

822

(W) 42-67

"This is an 'impossible comedy' of a man whose first wife is materialized at a seance and comes to live with him and his second wife. She is an astral gadfly. After the death of his second wife, the husband is tormented by both in gay and delightful fashion before he manages to exorcise them." Library J

Booklist 38:187 F 1 '42

"In 'Blithe Spirit' Mr. Coward writes of this world with his usual wit and his usual light-heartedness. The trouble is that this time he brings in the world beyond the grave. . . He does make the ghosts amusing, even, for an act or so, fascinating. But after a while we begin to ask for something more. To make death a joke doesn't bear extended treatment. A full length play dealing with death, even a three act comedy, must have in it more meat than Mr. Coward gives us. Before we are through with 'Blithe Spirit,' the ghosts of the two wives become so evanescent that they no longer interest. Frivolity is all very well as long as it is kept this side of the grave."

+ Commonweal 35:123 N 21 '41 430w (Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by John Gassner
Current Hist 1:472 Ja '42 800w

"Brilliant dialogue and characterization abound in this smash hit of the 1941-42 season. Will be in considerable demand. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:1093 D 15 '41 100w

"Dr. Johnson once said that the personages in Shakespeare's romantic comedies acted exactly as such people would undoubtedly have acted if they had ever existed. Much the same might be said for Mr. Coward's ghostly spouse and her unwilling hosts." J. W. Krutch

COWARD, N. P.—Continued

+ Nation 153:491 N 15 '41 430w (Dramatic criticism)

"Mr. Noel Coward's latest play has a delicious and bouncing idea. It is an idea capable either of farcicality or of complication in the directions of depth and meaning. As the play stands it wobbles between the two, though the farce elements survive best. . . . The last act to 'Blithe Spirit' drags and repeats, and throws away many of the farce chances even, not to mention the real implications that are present. The final moments . . . are fairly stupid, not to say banal." Stark Young

+ — New Repub 105:701 N 24 '41 450w (Dramatic criticism)

COWGILL, DONALD OLEN. Mobile homes; a study of trailer life. 127p pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

331.833 Automobiles—Trailers. Migration, Internal [41-12102]

"The author who has traveled in his own trailer over a period of two years has summarized data collected from 131 trailer families. He recognizes the impossibility of getting a complete and accurate picture of the trailer population, but he has secured a representative sample of trailerites that one would meet in traveling about the country. This little book is packed full of tables which are discussed. Interest is added to the story by the inclusion of quotations from fellow trailerites on various questions under discussion in the report and by many personal observations." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by A. H. Fletcher

Am J Pub Health 31:1322 D '41 400w

Reviewed by B. M. Gross

Nation 153:231 S 13 '41 320w

COWLES, EDWARD SPENCER. Don't be afraid! how to get rid of fear and fatigue; foreword by Maurice Maeterlinck. (Whittlesey house publication) 229p $2 McGraw

131.337 Psychology, Pathological. Fatigue. Fear 41-22810

In this book, Dr Cowles, head of the Body and Mind Clinic in New York, writing for the general reader, discusses the interrelationships between body and mental fatigue, fear, physical disorders and mental diseases. His method of treatment includes both medication and suggestion.

"A luminously sensible book on a subject on which much nonsense has been written—how to get rid of fear and fatigue."

+ Books p14 Ja 25 '42 180w

Christian Century 58:1381 N 5 '41 90w

"In these pages Dr. Cowles never strays from the scientific approach, but combines with it an appealing human note." E. C. Chorley

+ Churchman 155:13 N 1 '41 200w

J Home Econ 33:747 D '41 150w

COWLES, VIRGINIA. Looking for trouble. 447p $3 Harper [12s 6d Hamilton, H]

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-14377

The memoirs of an American woman journalist who has covered most of the important European events of the last five years. Her book tells of her experiences in Spain during the Civil war, of visits to Russia, Germany, Prague and Paris before and after Munich, and her observations of English courage during the summer and fall of 1940. Index.

"The primary appeal of the book lies in its wealth of dramatic episodes; but the author possesses enough grasp of politics and history to convey a sense of underlying unity to the incidents she reports so vividly." W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic O '41 250w

Booklist 38:7 S '41

"This book is anything but dignified. Miss Cowles is a Boston girl who wandered around Europe combining occasional assignments for Mr. Hearst and 'The Sunday Times' of London with visits to an imposing list of friends inside the social, diplomatic and journalistic aristocracy of western Europe. From 1935 through the worst bombings of London last year, she looked for trouble with considerable personal courage, and had no difficulty finding it. She has written a hit-and-run record of the trouble in this book, and it reflects the crazy, drugged, dishonest world she lived in even if it doesn't explain it." Joseph Barnes

Books p4 Ag 10 '41 850w

"Possessing plenty of nerve, poise, and many personal friends on whom she did not hesitate to call, Miss Cowles had plenty of adventures. In retrospect, some of them probably seem foolhardy, but her policy of always being on the spot when a crisis came has enabled her to produce a fascinating book." M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 8 '41 500w

"Some of her facts are hazy, some of her statements broader than the most learned person on the subject would dare to make, and misspelling of some important names may disturb a few readers. These things, however, fade in importance, for not only are the facts of her talks with great people interesting in themselves but Miss Cowles presents them vividly and clearly in a style of writing that is dramatic, intense and sharply defined." G. E. Shippler, Jr.

+ — Churchman 155:19 S 15 '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by Mabel Williams

Horn Bk M 17:486 N '41 70w

"This is one of the most interesting books to come from the war zones and is recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 11 '41 300w

"It is a hard assignment for a journalist at this date to write a 'different' book about the same crises, but Miss Cowles achieves it. . . . [She] also did a great deal of difficult traveling under conditions of severe hardship. She gives the impression of being as faithful a reporter as is humanly possible; but being human and having apparently finished her book before the recent Soviet-German break, she slipped up slightly on Russia."

+ — Nation 153:233 S 13 '41 160w

"Her book is readable as long as she stays out of England. . . . But Looking for Trouble is quite unreadable whenever Miss Cowles gets to this country. She is evidently one of those Americans who flatter us by imitating our worst failings. American reporting is, as a class, distinguished for its vitality and freshness. Miss Cowles revives an English style which I had imagined to have died with its originator, the Bystander." T. C. Worsley

+ — New Statesman & Nation 22:66 Jl 19 '41 850w

"As the compact yet comprehensive record of a woman correspondent's unique experience her story makes one of the most engrossing and most illuminatingly effective books that the war has produced. And in all its diverse richness of drama and compassion and penetration and wit it shows us the relentless progress of tragically integrated events, in a world where democratic civilization itself was fatally 'looking for trouble' by trying with all its might to look the other way." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 10 '41 1200w

"Colorful, sensible, shrewd about people, and altogether one of the best of the correspondents' memoirs. Lots of new material. You might try this when you've finished with Mr. Shirer's 'Berlin Diary.'"

+ New Yorker 17:58 Ag 9 '41 50w

"Looking for Trouble' certainly integrates events and personalities into a compact picture which is as absorbing as it is worthwhile—absorbing because it vividly depicts a courageous American newspaper woman struggling for her stories in the flaming vortex of war; worthwhile because it reveals clearly the history-making things she saw and heard as one nation after another died." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Ag 9 '41 700w

"Miss Cowles is a good journalist, with a nose for news, a very personal talent for putting news over freshly, and an ability rare among members of her profession to indicate the relation of the small episode to the larger issue. This book is a triumphant monument to her presence in being consistently in the right place at the right time over a number of years. As a book it is marred chiefly by two things—an apparent passion for the cliché, which is odd in so efficient a writer, and an equally curious persistence in recording the obiter dicta of the nobly born; nor do her occasional incursions into political theory possess the interest of her descriptions of events."

+ — Spec 167:116 Ag 1 '41 190w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 1250w

"Miss Virginia Cowles adds yet another to the mounting total of books on the European travail with which in recent years American journalists have excited or enlightened us. Hers is not the least excellent of them. Other American writers have been more profound; she is always personal and sometimes socially superficial and circumscribed. . . Her episodic and anecdotic manner goes far, however, to compensate for other defects, and in her bright, blithe way she gives us some revealing and entertaining sidelights on men and affairs."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p294 Je 21 '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

COWLEY, ELIZABETH BUCHANAN. Free learning. 334p $3 Humphries

379.73 Public schools—U.S. Education—History 41-20899

"The aim of [this] non-pedagogical book is to give a brief account of the struggles which the American people have made to work out for themselves a scheme of general education suited to the needs of their republican form of government. The story is told mainly in the words of representatives of the people. This includes state laws, messages of state governors, and state constitutions. . . In the interest of brevity, strength, and clarity it has been necessary to limit the discussion to a few of those states whose work has been especially significant: [Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Michigan, California]. . . Attention has been focused upon one decade, 1830-1840, with such accounts of periods that preceded or followed as were required to give adequate settings." Foreword

School & Society 54:80 Ag 2 '41 80w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 20w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Mrs Murdock takes a case. 263p $2 Knopf

41-11682

Detective story.

"This struck us as one of Mr. Cox's best outgivings, not quite as hardboiled as some and just as exciting." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 Ag 3 '41 380w

"This is a thriller of many-sided interest, in which two murders, personal fraud, a Nazi plot and romantic loyalty are well knit together in a smooth and lively narrative." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '41 160w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 9 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 100w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. No time to kill. 272p $2 Knopf

41-3982

Detective story.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

"Gary Marshall, Mr. Cox's new detective, is a winner. He is none of your brassy killer-dillers but a young lawyer with an agreeable nature and more than enough brains to solve the puzzle with which he is faced. . . Mr. Cox has found a smoother way to describe the ladies, too—not so specific and running more to costume." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Mr 16 '41 180w

"The murderer, whom you won't guess, fits in perfectly with the fashionable notion of the decadence of Boston high life. If you enjoy mysteries that whiz, read Mr. Cox's."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 120w

"This is a love story as well as a detective story, and it is worth while on either count." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 16 '41 160w

"Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 200w

COXE, HOWARD. Commend the devil. 245p $2.50 Duell

41-6546

"The story concerns Carlotta Farragut, who is anxious and middle-aged, and her two wayward, baffling, hedonistic children. Carlotta owns a lovely old estate at Port Credit on the Hudson which has for years been a center for gracious and cultivated living. Joel and Evelyn still think of Port Credit as their home, but they pervert it to uses which leave Carlotta balked and frantic. . . Both of them strike out blindly and cruelly against her attempts to guide them. They will go to hell, if they must, in their own way." N Y Times

"Despite the fact that 'Commend the Devil' is, on the surface, a casual, flip-mannered study of cynical smart-set people, its underlying mood is almost tragically serious. Like its central characters it is bland, off-handed and ironic, but like them it has chinks in its hard glassy shell through which one may see, as if under spotlight, anguished groping, sick bewilderment, frustration." Milton Rugoff

Books p18 Mr 2 '41 650w

"'Commend the Devil' is glib, crisp, civilized, entertaining. Taken in conjunction with his other novels, it causes one to regret very genuinely Mr. Cox's recent death. The chief flaw in this book is that it attempts to attach too great a burden of meaning to Joel and Evie's story." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '41 700w

"The tone of the book is wholly casual. Throughout the most melodramatic episodes the author maintains a style that borders on flippancy. From the point of pure craftsmanship the story is neatly done. But on the whole the book is shallow, and it presents an image of life that has been projected more vividly many times before." Carson McCullers

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:15 Mr 15 '41 500w

CRAGG, ALLISTON. Do you need some money? consumer credit as a means to economic stability. 271p $2.25 Harper

332.3 Credit. Loans 41-4186

"From the extension of credit by retail stores to personal loans by banks, many agencies

CRAGG, ALLISTON—Continued
now compete for the privilege of arranging personal credit or cash loans on the basis of employment or acceptable assets, and this service has become a major factor in the modern business world. Since it is concerned primarily with individuals who employ the money or credit to obtain needed consumer goods or services for personal satisfaction it is known as consumer credit. . . It is hoped that this book will help consumers who may have personal financing problems toward a solution of those problems, and toward a fuller understanding of their rights, fundamental importance, and proper place in the economic world." (Pref) Bibliography.

"The material is useful, but the author strays from his subject toward the close. Although his conclusions have value, they are oversimplified."

+ — Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:411 Je '41 150w

Management R 30:116 Mr '41 40w

"Do You Need More Money?" with its eye-catching title, may fool some into thinking it can give them the Midas touch for only $2.25. Actually it is a readable treatise on consumer credit, discussed from the social viewpoint rather than aimed at showing any particular H. C. L. victim how to keep ahead of the sheriff. . . Even the reader who just yearns to believe all this will close the book with a troubled feeling that, even if Mr. Cragg wants to write a 'popular' book on economics, he needn't paint the depression as a pushover. Because the reader attended that affair; personally."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 220w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 Jl '41

CRAIG, EDWARD ANTHONY (EDWARD CARRICK, pseud.) Designing for moving pictures. (How to do it ser) 104p il $3.50 (8s 6d) Studio

791.4 Moving pictures

The author, who is the son of Gordon Craig, has worked as an art director for several British and American film companies. His book contains comments on the esthetics and fundamental principles of art directing as well as practical suggestions on designing and building sets. Index.

Booklist 37:548 Jl 15 '41

New Statesman & Nation 21:589 Je 7 '41 240w

"It may be that much of the information contained in this book is known to practising designers, but it can hardly have been so well arranged before or considered so seriously and at the same time, in spite of [a] single outburst into capitals and credos, with so little affectation. The many illustrations are generally well chosen and to the point."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p219 My 3 '41 260w

CRAIG, HAZEL THOMPSON, and RUSH, MRS OLA DAY. Clothes with character [with Charm chart]. 260p il $1.40; also separate chart 12c Little

646 Clothing and dress (W) 41-9825

"A teacher of clothing and applied art and the head of the home economics department of the District of Columbia public schools have joined forces to interpret 'the basic factors in the development of an attractive personality' in a way that will be interesting, educational, and practical for high school classes in clothing. Throughout the discussions of design, color, fabrics, budgeting, and the history of costume, and in the practical suggestions for grooming and for clothing selection and construction, the emphasis is on colors and designs suitable for different types of wearers and the adaptation of the wardrobe to the physical type, personality, and situation of the wearer. Outline drawings of different types of figures and faces and similar devices provide a 'charm chart' that parallels the text." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:4 S '41

J Home Econ 33:604 O '41 150w

CRAIG, JOSEPHINE, and CRAIG, AUSTIN. Farthest westing; a Philippine footnote. 197p il $2.50 Dorrance

919.14 Philippine Islands—Social life and customs 41-4116

"Consisting chiefly of letters exchanged by America's foremost authority on Philippine history and his sister, this volume offers a lively picture of Filipino daily life, customs and ideology—a comprehensive social study rather than a footnote." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 50w

Churchman 155:35 F 15 '41 70w

CRAIGE, JOHN HOUSTON. What the citizen should know about the marines; il. by Charles E. Pont. 211p $2 Norton

359 U.S.—Marine corps (W) 41-51951

Outlines the organization and duties of the United States marine corps. Partial contents: The mission of the marine corps; The enlisted man; The officer; Organization and beginnings; International police squads; Detached for duty with the army; Artillery, tanks, and planes; Theory and tactics of marine operation. Index.

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"As one who has served with the marines afloat and ashore I can heartily recommend Captain Craige's book." P. J. Searles

+ Books p2 Ja 25 '42 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"Captain Craige sets a mass of information before his readers in clear and stimulating detail."

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '41 280w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 26 '41 140w

CRAMER, MAURICE BROWNING. Phoenix at East Hadley. 307p $2.50 Houghton

41-21275

The scene of this novel is a New England village in the 1930's, with lingering memories of a long past history. The chief character is sixty-year-old Luella Pickering, suffering from rheumatism and approaching old age, but still exuberant and eager for life. Luella's inherited belief in the Resurrection of the Body brings her into conflict with the new minister and his backers in the church, but several episodes here related, go to strengthen that belief.

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"The story of Luella Pickering's phoenixes and of her faith is a rare and beautiful one. Luella may be confused in her mysticism, but Mr. Cramer is never confused in portraying her. She emerges from the narrative as a complex but a very lovable person. He writes with conviction and understanding; and he writes a firm clear prose that promises well for the future." J. E. Carver

+ Books p14 N 9 '41 480w

"Somebody's been reading Hawthorne and doesn't quite know how to bring him up to date."

New Repub 106:30 Ja 5 '42 60w

"Early in the book there is a vivid and interesting description of the hurricane of September, 1939, the account of the dancing phoenixes has grace and charm, and Mrs. Pickering's two sisters, Liz and Aggie, are often amusing. It cannot, however, be said that Mr. Cramer's attempt to combine ancient legend, realism, mysticism and theology has been altogether successful." L. M. Field

N Y Times p35 O 26 '41 700w

"The tone is minor but warm and winning, and suggests Sarah Orne Jewett."
+ New Yorker 17:90 N 1 '41 50w

"Despite momentary lapses into stiltedness and a perhaps too conscious antiquarianism, Mr. Cramer's book of New England sketches proves his talent for shrewd observations, controlled writing, and unhackneyed themes. Indeed, if he had been able to sustain the promise of his first few chapters, he might have taken a by no means lowly place among that exalted company of writers who have presented New England less as a region than as a point of view." M. J. Bess
+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 N 29 '41 500w

"This is a novel of more than ordinary interest and worth in spite of being cast in the familiar pattern of New England village life, a subject which too often gets lost in the woods behind the Grange hall and circles until it dies in its own tracks."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 550w

CRAMPTON, CHARLES WARD. Start today; your guide to physical fitness. 224p il $1.75 Barnes, A.S.

613.71 Gymnastics, Medical 41-10685

Guide to exercises to build up physical fitness, written by a doctor. Partial contents: The medical examination; What is physical exercise? What exercise do you need? Diet. Index.

Booklist 37:541 JI 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 JI '41

"'Start Today' is well organized and evidently has not been written in a hurry and to meet some emergency. It is abundantly illustrated and has practical, authoritative and friendly advice that the great majority of popular works on keeping physically fit do not have." Clifford Moore
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 600w

CRANE, CHARLES EDWARD. Winter in Vermont. 312p $3.50 Knopf

917.43 Vermont—Social life and customs. Winter. Vermont—Description and travel 41-20683

A Vermonter, interested in the folkways of his own state, writes of winter in Vermont in a series of more or less related chapters. Among his subjects are weather lore, social activities, food, winter sports, traditions, unusual characters, town meeting, sugaring off, and "winter reading and the book wagon." Illustrated with 90 photographs in gravure. Index.

"Mr. Crane as a Vermont townsman regards the dairy farmer rather with a distant if sympathetic admiration than with any feeling of sodality; you might read these forty-odd brief topical chapters backward and forward till the cows come home without unearthing a clue to the fact that the Vermont town is just one of the farmer's public utilities and could not have existed without him. With these reservations—which the author very likely accepts with full awareness as inherent limitations upon his subject—one can and does abandon oneself to enjoyment. For Mr. Crane is always enjoyable on any aspect of Vermont life." Wilson Follett
+ Atlantic F '42 250w

"Whenever I read Charles Crane on Vermont subjects, I feel like heaping immoderate praise on his modest head. There is no better prose on the subject extant, no deeper understanding. The many photographs, few of which I have seen before, could not be better suited for the purpose. Some of them, like 'Main Street in Woodstock' and 'Blizzard on Molly Stark Trail,' are really poems to the kind of winter they often have in Vermont." Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p6 N 23 '41 1000w

"Even to one who has lived many winters in this north country, Mr. Crane has some surprises to offer, and his book is highly recommended as collateral reading to those whose notions of Vermont in winter are gathered from a weekend snowtrain." Mason Wade
+ Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 200w

"Illustrations are significant. A valuable addition to regional material, with considerable reference usefulness." J. S. Cleavinger
+ Library J 66:791 S 15 '41 110w

"Mr. Crane tackles everything from birds to blizzards with genuine interest but in a style which only grandma might have thought lively. The pieces on winter sports are disappointing fillers from the publicity barrel. Nearly a hundred photographs, most of them very good."

New Repub 105:869 D 22 '41 40w

"In 'Winter in Vermont' Mr. Crane has done the best book of its sort. Thereby he implicitly proclaims what to Vermont minds must be a regrettable nativity, since Green Mountaineers deem it a misfortune to be born elsewhere. Northland Yankees don't talk much about themselves or their State. It must be Illinois, as well as Mr. Crane, who should be thanked for an accurate, interpretive and extremely readable picture of a region and a season." F. F. Van De Water
+ N Y Times p10 N 9 '41 800w

"The book is chiefly distinguished by 90 unusually fine winter photographs, and very complete and timely information on winter sports areas and personalities. Aside from these features, the most interesting of the 40-odd topics Mr. Crane discusses are the less well-known events and legends in Vermont's winter history."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 370w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). The Turquoise shop. 313p $2 Lippincott 41-17318

Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"Unless we gravely err, here is Grade A stuff." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Ag 31 '41 210w

"This story has a picturesque background and some real interest in its plot. It is marred by amateurish treatment, but its author may do better work when she learns to hold her material more tightly in hand." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p24 S 21 '41 160w

"A sound plot, deftly drawn characters, and some precise, clear writing are three reasons for reading [Mrs] Crane's first mystery."
+ New Yorker 17:80 S 6 '41 40w

"Distinguished for one of nastiest females in contemporary mysteries, a likable heroine and sleuth whose methods are logical and interesting. Good stuff."
+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 6 '41 40w

"The Turquoise Shop' is the author's first mystery novel but readers will be inclined to hope it is not her last. . . It's a very pleasantly written murder mystery that stays mysteriously right to the end."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 150w

CRANWELL, JOHN PHILIPS. The destiny of sea power and its influence on land power and air power. 262p $2.75 Norton

355.43 Strategy. Sea power. Mechanization. Military 41-25243

"Post-Mahan grand strategy, in which the author suggests that the mechanization of sea warfare, already highly developed, may have something to teach us about parallel mechanization on land and in the air. He believes that air fleets, both commercial and military, will eventually dominate the sea routes." New Yorker

CRANWELL, J. P.—Continued

Reviewed by J. B. Fogg

Library J 66:998 N 15 '41 90w

"Mr. Cranwell has simplified the presentation of his subject to the final degree; it ought to have a particular appeal to the uninitiated anxious to read up on questions like these." Lawrence Fernsworth

New Repub 106:93 Ja 19 '42 170w

"A clear and remarkably interesting analysis, though occasionally labored."

+ New Yorker 17:134 D 6 '41 60w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 24:6 D 20 '41 650w

CRANWELL, JOHN PHILIPS. Spoilers of the sea; wartime raiders in the age of steam. 308p il maps $3 Norton

359 Naval history. Merchant marine (W) 41-7035

With the coming of the U-boat and the airplane, the value of the old time sea raiders is about gone, says the author. In this book he reviews the story of the sea raider first in our own Civil war, then in the first World war, and finally during the early months of the present war. The last chapter relates the stories of the Graf Spee and the Jervis Bay. Index.

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

"There may be the historic interest of a vanishing phase of battle in this record of great raiders of eighty years. Certainly there is the breathless challenge of adventure, in brave tales well told."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '41 550w

CRAVEN, AVERY ODELL. Democracy in American life; a historical view. 150p $1 Univ. of Chicago press

973 Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government 41-14808

Lectures delivered at the University of Chicago under the Walgreen foundation, by the professor of American history at the university. Contents: Thomas Jefferson and the democratic dogma; The West and democracy; Democracy and the Civil war; Democracy and industrial capitalism. Index.

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

"The reader will find many interesting and provocative asides in this little book." Louis Hacker

+ Books p14 Ag 24 '41 1300w

Christian Century 58:1007 Ag 13 '41 100w

"An exciting, sophisticated (in the sense that it is free from mythology) and brilliant little book." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 34:573 O 3 '41 240w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 10w

"Clearly written. Addressed to students and the general reader." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 90w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '41 90w

CRAWFORD, ARTHUR WHIPPLE. Monetary management under the new deal; the evolution of a managed currency system—its problems and results. 382p $3.75; pa $3.25 Am. council on public affairs

332.4 Money—U.S. Currency question—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government 40-32489

"This study gives an account of the monetary developments under the New Deal by one whose 'first-hand knowledge of policies and actions in Washington was supplemented by attendance at the World Monetary and Economic Conference at London in 1933.' It is divided into three parts. In Part I the author gives a brief account of monetary trends during the Hoover administration, and of the way in which monetary issues were handled during the Presidential campaign of 1932. In Part 2 he describes the evolution of the various parts of the New Deal's monetary program under the impact of the economic and political pressures which were being applied to the Roosevelt administration. In Part 3 he undertakes the task of appraisal and judgment." Am Econ R

"The chief merit of the book lies, perhaps, in the author's ability to place the monetary developments of the New Deal in their proper political setting. In giving the reader a clear picture of the political background against which the drama of monetary evolution or revolution has been played during the past eight years, he has made a definite contribution to our understanding of this period of monetary history. On the other hand, its principal defect appears to be a lack of perspective in those chapters where the author attempts to appraise and evaluate the results of the New Deal's monetary program." E. G. Keith

+ Am Econ R 31:177 Mr '41 550w

"The author has no axe to grind, and his material is offered in a thoroughly readable style." J. G. Herndon

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1198 D '41 190w

"The book should prove useful as a catalogue of legal and legislative events and incidents pertaining to the monetary history of the period. Its chief limitation arises out of the author's failure to subject the material presented to rigorous scrutiny and analysis. The statements of high governmental officials as to the reasons for their action—or inaction—and as to the effects of the steps taken, are frequently accepted without examination. Virtually no use has been made of the newer researches into monetary and cycle theory, much of which would appear to be highly pertinent to the subject under investigation." C. R. Whittlesey

+ Ann Am Acad 214:257 Mr '41 450w

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic Ja '42 360w

Management R 30:196 My '41 60w

"Regardless of the fact that it cannot be expected that all readers will agree with all of Dr. Crawford's statements of appraisal and interpretation, it seems clear that all readers should find this a useful and informing book. Even those monetary economists who have worked intensively in the field should find it a handy reference work. The amount of research which Dr. Crawford had put into this study is tremendous. He has surveyed and digested a very large number of government documents, as well as the pertinent standard works and monographs, which throw light upon the questions examined. This work should be on the shelf of everyone interested in the monetary experiences of this country in recent years and in our monetary structure today." W. E. Spahr

+ Pol Sci Q 56:293 Je '41 700w

CRAWFORD, MORRIS DE CAMP. Ways of fashion. 320p $3 Putnam

338.4 Clothing trade, Fashion 41-26110

"The 'ways' of fashion described in this study by an authority are not the ways of passing modes but of an industry. M. D. C. Crawford is editor of the trade publication, Women's Wear Daily, and an authority on textiles. The book specifically attacks the problem of fashion in a world which must be independent of Paris. But its material falls into two classes, and its interest is twofold. The first grouping of material—the serious purpose of a serious work—is in a survey of the style industry, with facts and figures and forecasts of probability. The second is in the crisp personal presentation of individuals who have made the 'haute couture' of the recent past in France and of the recent past and the present in America." N Y Times

Booklist 38:183 F 1 '42

"The present situation of the fashion trades in America, surveyed by one whose researches in this field have put him among the experts, has more than specialized interest. To those in costume and fabric industries it has direct practical value, but because its subject is so thoroughly involved with national economics and personal interests, it appeals also to a great many general readers."

+ Books p18 Ja 11 '42 220w

"As a book of general interest, 'The Ways of Fashion' deserves praise not only for its comprehensive information but for its balanced thought."

+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '41 350w

CRAWFORD, PHYLLIS (JOSIE TURNER, pseud). Posie didn't say. 330p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

(W) 41-14661

A jaunty love story, the scene of which is New York city in 1904, when automobiles and the moving picture industry were both in their infancy. Posie, the gay, beautiful heroine, reputed to be naughty, was a daring pioneer in those puritanical days, and successful in everything she tried from love to automobiles.

"Coming right down to it [this is] a story in which every item of furniture, bit of slang, object of domestic art, snatch of song, political catchword, specimen of underwear, or mishap in motoring will be instantly recognized by any one who was alive and conscious in 1905. It is a novel in which all the details are accurate and none of the people alive, and there are so many details that three hundred pages leave one with a sense of having put together too large a jigsaw puzzle of which too many pieces were only sky." M. L. Becker

+ — Books p9 Ag 31 '41 380w

"It is all lightly amusing and gently informative. 'Improbable as an old snapshot album,' the book is refreshingly remote from 1941 stresses. The author's pixie delight in father's soap troubles and her coy exploitation of Posie's dilemma take the bloom from the reader's discovery for himself of the inherent humor in their situations. Quand même, as Aunt Hildgarde would say, 'Posie's story is good fun.'" Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '41 600w

"Miss Turner has done rather too much homework on the slang of the day, but since it's all in fun, nobody will mind much."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Ag 30 '41 60w

CRAWFORD, PHYLLIS (JOSIE TURNER, pseud). Secret brother; il. by Mabel Jones Woodbury. 238p $1.50 Holt

(W) 41-1236

"Because both of their parents were working, Tilly and Bill were left all day to find their own amusements. Most of their time was spent in the big wood near their home. There they built a playhouse. Tilly was most happy when a stray little boy took refuge there. The children determined to keep him for a secret brother. Complications arose in providing food and clothing for the small waif. On Tilly's birthday she received her dearest wish in a way that brought every difficulty to a happy conclusion." Library J

"There is a romantic charm about this story for seven-year-olds; I do not see how one of them could resist it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 30 '41 320w

"The everyday doings of Tilly and Bill are sure to please boys and girls of eight to ten years. The thread of suspense will hold them until the very last page." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 130w

"Once the central situation is accepted, the plot seems credibly worked out, and the family relationships are happy and kindly. Because of its direct and simple style, its short sentences and clear type, 'The Secret Brother' will be popular with the less able readers."

A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '41 420w

"Agreeably simple-hearted reading."

+ New Yorker 17:87 My 24 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:96 My '41

CREIGHTON, FRANK WHITTINGTON, bp. Christianity is life. 96p $1 Morehouse

248 Christian life

41-5573

This small book contains five talks delivered by the bishop of Michigan at the Cranbrook conference of his diocese. The audience while including some clergy and adult laymen was made up chiefly of young people of sixteen years and up. Contents: Human relations; Family and friends; Keeping fit; Attitudes; Church going and religion.

"A meaty little book."

+ Christian Century 58:465 Ap 2 '41 30w

"The talks are interesting and practical and Christian, full of excellent illustrations, and would provide stimulating suggestions for those who address such groups." W. L. C.

+ Churchman 155:35 My 1 '41 50w

CRILE, GEORGE WASHINGTON. Intelligence, power and personality; ed. by Grace Crile. (Whittlesey house publication) 347p il maps $3 McGraw

591.4 Anatomy, Comparative. Physiology, Comparative. Psychology, Comparative. Vital force 42-719

"This book is the report of an exhaustive piece of research inaugurated 'to find for man an energy formula distinct from that for wild and domestic animals, and, further, an energy formula for civilized man.' The quest involved the analysis, measurement, and comparison of the organs of the energy-controlling system—the brain, heart, thyroid and adrenal glands, the celiac ganglia, and the sympathetic system—of fish, reptiles, birds, and mammals. . . . The studies and collections were made in field laboratories in Arizona, Ohio, on Cumberland Island, off Georgia, in Panama, at Key West, in the Rift Valley in Africa, at Hudson Bay, and in Guatemala. . . . The book has four parts: 'Energy'; 'Comparative Anatomy and Physiology,' written in collaboration with Dr. Daniel P. Quiring; 'Civilized Man'; 'Summary and Discussion.' In these are found the details of the various expeditions and the truly absorbing comparisons, done in pictures, figures, and description, of the difference in size of the energy-controlling organs that were analyzed." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Books p18 Ja 11 '42 500w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 N '41 350w

CRISS, MILDRED (MRS G. L. CATLIN). Isabella, young queen of Spain; il. by Marc Simont. 219p $2.50 Dodd

B or 92 Isabel I, queen of Spain—Juvenile literature (W) 41-19319

Biography of Isabella of Castile, describing her education, the dangers which beset her childhood and youth, her romance with Ferdinand of Aragon, and her ambitions for her country. Includes only the years of her youth. For boys and girls of twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

CRISS, MILDRED—Continued

"Excitement holds throughout the story; it does not calm till the purpose of Isabella has been fulfilled, the crowns of Castile and Aragon united, and Spain, as a nation, born. Striking drawings show the rush of events from 1453 to the setting out of the Santa Maria."

M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 N 2 '41 280w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:382 D '41 140w

"Not inspired writing, but very usable historical material for young readers." Agatha Shea

+ Library J 66:1000 N 15 '41 60w

"The author rather idealizes the Queen and her regime. Capable." Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 30w

CRIVELLI, ALBERT F. Shipfitter's manual. 145p $1.50 Pitman

623.8 Shipbuilding

41-17742

"Written as a guide for student shipfitters. Deals with the terminology, the materials used in construction, the principal structural members of a ship, the mold loft, shop layout of equipment, machine and hand tools, general phases of shipfitting, structural shop personnel, shop safety, hull structural plan reading, and electric arc welding. Illustrations are in line drawings, and the book concludes with an appendix of answers to questions in the text." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:47 J1 '41

CROCE, BENEDETTO. History as the story of liberty; tr. from the Italian by Sylvia Sprigge. 324p $3.75 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G.]

907 History—Philosophy, Liberty, History—Historiography 41-51843

The foreword to this new volume by a famous Italian historian and philosopher is dated Naples, 1938. In this foreword the author says: "I propose in this volume to take up again the subject of the Theory and History of the Writing of History which I wrote in 1912-13, and which was continued in my History of Italian Historiography in the Nineteenth Century and in several other shorter works. I do not wish to offer this book in replacement of the previous book, but only to add new considerations born of my further studies and stimulated by new experience of life. In conformity with its origin, this book consists of a series of essays which share an implicit unity in the thought which runs through them all, and to which I have given also an explicit unity by means of the first essay, which serves as an introduction." Index.

Booklist 37:543 J1 15 '41

"Benedetto Croce presupposes an erudition, an earnestness of application, an eagerness to wrestle with the philosophical aspects of life that few readers, especially on this side of the Atlantic, can muster. Yet somehow the poetic fire is always there, the mental stimulus, the ethical inspiration. A high sense of intellectual integrity, a courage that never flinches before the truth, however disconcerting the truth may be, a magnificent sense of the dignity of man, and especially of the thinking man, a certain crisp and intensely virile awe before the mysteries of the universe, a certain reassuring calm and optimism in the presence of the bewildering flux of events—these attitudes, these faiths, make themselves apparent in every line that Croce writes." Arthur Livingston

+ Books p6 My 18 '41 1250w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 58:1507 D 3 '41 1000w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan

Commonweal 34:115 My 23 '41 550w

"This book is a translation. And the translation has been so admirably done that notice should be taken of that fact before discussing the author's theme. The translation reads as if the book had been written in English, in spite of the fact that the obscurities of Croce's theory cannot be wholly avoided. . . . The book contains many valuable comments and criticisms and some illuminating suggestions with respect to social history. But it suffers from the defect of Croce's version of Hegelianism."

C. D. B.

+ — Ethics 52:116 O '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:373 Ja '42 50w

"It seems unlikely to the present reviewer that, even though the translation of the volume were ten times better than it is, the work would greatly increase the influence of Croce in the Anglo-Saxon world for some years to come. In addition to the eclipse of all philosophical idealism, there is another factor to be reckoned with, the weakness of moral intuitionism as the key to the 'logic of freedom' in a world which has seen it prostituted to the ugliest sorts of fanaticism. The optimism of the extremely long view may sustain the very patient, but it may also weaken the efforts of those who see some chance of doing immediate battle with the excesses of 'vitality.' Thus while we hail Croce for his courageous championship of humanistic ends, and his exalted vision of the highly-educated philosopher-historian, it is unlikely that we shall choose him for our guide in selecting the means for reaching those ends which are likely to prove aptest in our historical circumstances." H. A. Larra-bee

+ — J Philos 38:635 N 6 '41 3150w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 152:699 Je 14 '41 1250w

Reviewed by Gaudens Megaro

New Repub 104:702 My 19 '41 1000w

"Admiration and sympathy cannot absolve the critic from criticism, and when it comes to Croce's historical and philosophical doctrine, there is much to criticize in it." Leonard Woolf

+ — New Statesman & Nation 21:390 Ap 12 '41 1150w

"What must perplex the reader, as it has perplexed me, is how did Mussolini ever permit this truly noble book, hostile to him and his ilk, to get out of Italy." John Cournois

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 3 '41 650w

"A work in the main humanist tradition, argued on a high and fairly difficult level. Expertly translated."

+ New Yorker 17:87 My 3 '41 60w

Pratt p13 autumn '41

"The book is one to study rather than read, even though it is possible at a first glance to see the many practical ways in which Croce's philosophy 'makes a difference.'" Jacques Barzun

Sat R of Lit 24:15 My 17 '41 900w

Reviewed by C. W. Hendel

Yale R n s 31:396 winter '42 1600w

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS, ed. Steam-turbine principles and practice; rev. by S. A. Tucker. 2d ed 298p il $3 McGraw

621.165 Steam turbines

41-239

"A book first published in 1923 [Book Review Digest, 1923] partly rewritten and generally revised in view of modern design; a new chapter describes the engineering principles involved in the selection of turbines and heat balance." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:273 F 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:29 Ap '41

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Circumstantial evidence [Eng title: James Tarrant, adventurer]. 300p $2 Dodd [8s 3d Hodder]

41-4714

Detective story.

"We recommend this new work of Mr. Crofts, one of the honorable veterans among English bafflers. It is a meaty, well built and fundamentally sound story, starring the admirable Inspector Joseph French, second to none in his own brand of ground and lofty thinking." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 Mr 23 '41 160w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 50w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 1 '41 60w

"A good tale, with a carefully built-up skunk inviting extirpation from half a dozen different hands, but it is less a triumph for the inspector's skill than for his humane instincts." Mort. Post

+ — New Repub 104:477 Ap 7 '41 180w

"Mr. Crofts tells the story with his usual faithful attention to police and court procedure and with his usual sparing use of devices that might have brightened the narrative and made it more exciting." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '41 200w

"Events—interesting enough—leading up to crime consume almost half of book. French does his stuff methodically, but ending is fortuitous. Grade-B French."

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 29 '41 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 166:640 Je 13 '41 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p253 My 24 '41 240w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. A losing game. 308p $2 Dodd

41-21887

Detective story.

"Inspector French, still a whiz on alibis, gives a stirring performance in this genuine detective story—the kind the experts are always raving about." Will Cuppy

+ Books p40 N 2 '41 170w

"This mystery is a well-conducted affair, skillfully written."

+ New Yorker 17:92 O 25 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 120w

CROMBIE, MICHAEL. The frightened girl. (Mystery house publications) 256p $2 Arcadia

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ap 27 '41 110w

"A trifle thin." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Ap 27 '41 150w

CROMWELL, JAMES HENRY ROBERTS. Pax Americana; American democracy and world peace. 94p $1 Kroch

327.73 World war, 1939—Peace. World politics. U.S.—Foreign policy 41-10115

This small book by the former United States minister to Canada, contains lectures delivered at Chicago university, dealing with isolationism and America's role in the new world order.

"This booklet was first presented in the form of lectures at the University of Chicago in May, 1941. The speaker's engaging personality and platform manner no doubt made these addresses most interesting, but his theme, when offered in its present shape, does not carry conviction. It is somewhat difficult to know exactly what is the distinguished author's real objective." Pierre Crabitès

Cath World 153:758 S '41 410w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41

New Yorker 17:79 Je 21 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 800w

CRONIN, ARCHIBALD JOSEPH. The keys of the kingdom. 344p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-12243

Character study of Francis Chisholm, a lovable Scottish Catholic priest. It begins with his boyhood attempts to earn a living after the death of his father and mother, and follows his career thru his years of training for the priesthood at Holywell and in Spain, and his early struggles in getting adjusted to his life work. After working in several difficult parishes, Father Chisholm was sent to a mission in the interior of China, where his brave fight to help humanity thru famine, flood, and pestilence, lasted for over thirty years. When his place was taken by two young priests, Father Chisholm—old, lame, and weary, but still indomitable, came home to spend his remaining years in his native Scotland.

"Two points need criticism, it appears. In his attempts to 'be all things to all men,' Father Francis not infrequently gives the impression that he is tinged with indifferentism, that he would just as soon quote a saying of Confucius as one of Christ. And the attitude of Mother Maria-Veronica, while resolved at last, and while, perhaps, the attitude that a nun might have, is expressed in insolent language that I do not think one nun in a million would use. These points remarked, the book is thrilling and, in places, inspiring reading." H. C. Gardiner

+ — America 65:442 Jl 26 '41 460w

"This is a stirring book, a virile book, and yet a wistful and tender book. It is dramatic in narrative, but soothing in its style and its philosophy. . . . It may seem unusual that a Catholic priest should teach 'Toleration is the highest virtue. Humility comes next'; but at least the two are fit companions. And if anyone thinks that the inculcation of these or any other virtues will detract from his enjoyment in the reading of this powerful and refreshing novel, let him try a chapter or two and see!" H. C. F. Bell

+ Atlantic Ag '41 550w

Booklist 38:12 S '41

Bookmark 2:15 N '41

"As readers of Dr. Cronin's earlier novels will anticipate, his present story has vigor and drama. It also has beauty, gentleness and humor. 'The Keys of the Kingdom' is, I believe, a more appealing and more memorable book than any the author has written heretofore. Hinging as it does on questions which deeply involve the faiths of many people, it seems likely that it will be even more widely discussed than 'The Citadel.' It seems likely also that whether the reader shares the faith of Father Francis or the kindly and honest agnosticism of the Scottish doctor who died fighting the plague at his side, he will find excitement and comfort in this story of the life of a good man." Mary Ross

+ Books p1 Jl 20 '41 1300w

"The book may be described as a thesis on the futility of organized religion—in fact a piece of propaganda far from subtle. . . . To be sure events such as those described in these pages, actually happen; but living people do not really act and speak quite as they commonly act and speak under the author's direction. If Dr. Cronin regards himself as a liberal-minded man he has much to learn about the qualities which make for balanced judgment and fair representation; and if the reader anticipates a well-fashioned story, he is in for a disappointment." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 153:631 Ag '41 400w

"It is not often that I take time off to read a best seller. My custom is to wait until the best seller either has gone into oblivion and I no longer need to read it or has proved itself such a valuable commentary upon life that I can neglect it only at loss to myself. It is not often that a best seller really stands this test of delay and I cannot think at the moment of more than two or three that have qualified. I read The Keys of the Kingdom not because of the advertising, but because a friend who is a hard-boiled newspaper columnist could hardly control himself emotionally in commending it. My friend was not wrong in his estimate. Even if The Keys of the Kingdom goes the way of most best sellers—and I do not think this will happen—it deals with that which has eternal and redemptive values for our tragic world." Frank Fitt

CRONIN, A. J.—Continued

+ Christian Century 58:1081 S 3 '41 1000w

"Here is a book that every clergyman should read, and every churchman who wishes to be quite sure that he does not 'love his party more than his church, and his church more than Christianity, and his Christianity more than truth, and himself more than all.' The reviewer hopes that the savage attack upon the book by a literary critic in the newspaper, P.M., will not prejudice anyone against this great novel. It is the only unfavorable criticism which has come to our attention." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:21 S 1 '41 450w

"In the hands of a more subtle writer than Dr. Cronin, Father Chisholm would have been a profound and interesting character, and, as a symbol, a spearhead pointed at the pedestrianism and fatuousness which occasionally afflict a part of the clergy. But, although one wants to admire Father Chisholm, and although he is a fine, honest man, Dr. Cronin has made him also wordy and even, at times, a prig, with his pointed mouthings of pious banalities. . . . Undoubtedly Dr. Cronin's intention was good. It is painful to have to report that he has dealt with a great theme on too melodramatic a level. The result is indeed a 'good story,' but it is misleading." H. L. Binsse

— + Commonweal 34:354 Ag 1 '41 550w

Discussion by J. C. Cort

Commonweal 34:447 Ag 29 '41 340w

"Excellent character delineation. Highly recommended for all libraries." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 66:614 JI '41 80w

Nation 153:79 JI 26 '41 70w

"For a book based specifically on a spiritual theme, The Keys of the Kingdom is oddly superficial. But as an adventure and travel story, packed with melodramatic action, it is, as Father Francis says of something else, 'as clean and sound as a good apple'—that, and nothing more." Dorothy McCleary

+ — New Repub 105:125 JI 28 '41 430w

Reviewed by Katherine Woods

N Y Times p5 JI 20 '41 1650w

"Except for a few exciting episodes toward the end, his story seems to me an elaborate, carefully written, and deeply moral piece of tedium. I am certain it will be a best-seller and I am glad that, for it can do nothing but good. As a novel, however, it is patently inferior to any of Dr. Cronin's five other books." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:52 JI 26 '41 400w

Pratt p12 D '41

"All this is done with a skill that must command the profound admiration of anyone interested in the craft of fiction. . . . And yet, with all its merits, when one predicts for it a wide success, one cannot ungrudgingly add that it will be wholly deserved. Perhaps the defect will lie less in the book than in too many of its readers, who are certain to take it not as a good if sometimes conventional story whose value is much that of 'If Winter Comes,' but as an important moral treatise, which it is not." Basil Davenport

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 JI 19 '41 750w

Time 38:76 JI 21 '41 2000w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

CRONYN, GEORGE WILLIAM. Caesar Stagg. 444p $2.50 Greystone

J. Caesar Stagg, political boss of the city of Coriopolis, was the king pin in every institution in the city—the press, schools, the university, the art museum, as well as politics. At the height of his power as Senator elect, one of his victims started the ball rolling which ended in J. Caesar's murder. Coriopolis was in a dither while the trial went on, and eventually the killer confessed, but not until Stagg's villainies had been well aired in public.

Reviewed by Milton Hindus

Books p18 N 9 '41 480w

"The writing is breezy, the characters breezier, and the whole thing amusing for its reflex retorts."

New Repub 105:870 D 22 '41 30w

"Mr. Cronyn's intentions in this study of an old-time political boss in a modern setting, with overtones on the theme of It Can't Happen Here, are admirable. But in turning from his own field of historical romance to the grim realities of Caesar Stagg's world, he has laid about him with a trowel. The unskillful contrivance might be forgiven. But both the characters, and the situations and details, suggest a rough (and rough is the word) first draft." F. T. Marsh

— + N Y Times p30 N 30 '41 320w

"For all its 444 pages 'Caesar Stagg' somehow doesn't come to life. George Cronyn obviously doesn't like Huey Long or the sort of government Huey represented. But it takes more than dislike of his methods to paint a living portrait of a man. None of the people in the story seemed to this reviewer to have any more reality than, say, Henry J. Geefers, of 20157 North 3361st boulevard, who yesterday was knocked down by a truck at the corner of Park street and Phillpotts avenue and whose condition at Punkett Memorial hospital was said to be critical." B. I.

— Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 240w

CROSBY, LEE, pseud. See Torrey, W.

CROSSER, PAUL K. Ideologies and American labor. 221p $2.50 Oxford

331.0973 Labor and laboring classes—U.S.

41-21581

"This is a new kind of book about American labor. It traces to their historical and philosophical roots the three main types of employer-employee relationships that have arisen in the United States, and in the light of these findings affords a penetrating examination of our labor problems, past and present. The author shows how and to what extent the ideas of St. Thomas Aquinas and Calvin, Hobbes and J. S. Mill, Marx and Engels, have influenced the history of labor relations in America, and how these conflicting systems still remain at active variance one with the other." (Publisher's note) Bibliographical references. Index.

"Scholarly, stimulating, and original but recommended only for large libraries." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:791 S 15 '41 100w

"On a number of occasions where something novel in the field of interpretation seems about to appear, the reader is disappointed. One is the problem of pre-CIO unionism. . . . Again he gives a very good summary of Marxist theory—up to the crucial concepts of 'surplus value' and the social nature of 'wage-slavery.' If he tried to explain these ideas, which is not at all certain, he has failed. . . . In addition to the deficiencies noted above, which proceed mainly from inadequate acquaintance with historical data, it must be noted that the book is poorly written. Loaded down with the patois of the philosophers and pedagogs, it will not appeal to the lay reader any more than to him who knows his history. For this and for the occasional poor English, the author—a German emigre scholar—is perhaps less responsible than his editorial aids. One hopes that his evident learning will be put to better use next time." S. L. Jackson

— + Springf'd Republican p8 D 16 '41 700w

CROTHERS, GEORGE DUNLAP. The German elections of 1907. 277p $3 Columbia univ. press

329,943 Germany—Politics and government. Elections—Germany. Political parties—Germany 41-5274

"A scholarly and persuasive demonstration of the great importance of Germany's elections in 1907, revealing the marked direction of the country's national sentiment toward imperialism and Weltpolitik. Much detailed information on political parties and on the popular support of a powerful army and navy and of an aggressive and imperialist foreign policy." (New Repub) Bibliography. Index.

"The structure of the book is good. The story, too, is kept alive and clearly presented throughout. Annotation is extensive and illuminating. An adequate index and a twelve-page bibliography enhance the value of the study. The author was not able to use all the materials dealing with the election of 1907, but upon the basis of those which were available he has made a worthy contribution. With good monographs on German history in English all too few, this scholarly volume is a welcome addition to those already on hand." G. W. Prange

+ Am Hist R 47:418 Ja '42 300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 30w
New Repub 104:770 Je 2 '41 40w
Social Studies 32:238 My '41 10w

CROW, CARL. Foreign devils in the Flowery Kingdom; II. by Esther Brock Bird. 340p $3 Harper [12s 6d Hamilton, H]

915.1 Americans in China. China—Foreign population. China—Social conditions (W) 40-35625

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by Arthur Waley
New Statesman & Nation 21:334 Mr 29 '41 280w

"Readers of Four Hundred Million Customers, the first of Mr. Crow's books, will find in this fifth and latest volume some of the qualities which gave them amusement and pleasure—gaiety, humour, insight, sentiment commendably free from sugariness, and odds and ends of attractive and curious information. But, alas, these qualities are this time thinly spread, too thinly to conceal drabness and an astonishing amount of inaccuracy." E. M. Gull

+ — Spec 166:429 My 18 '41 420w

"Many of his chapters will cause chuckles to those who have never been in China; those who have will sharpen their memories on every word. The amusing and perhaps not unexpected result of explaining the foreign devil, the 'old China hand,' however, is that Mr. Crow has once more explained the Chinese and commended them and their qualities to our sympathy. Clouds in China would never have anything so sham as a silver lining behind them, but the land has something better, the Chinese themselves."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p140 Mr 22 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:32 F '41

CROW, CARL. Meet the South Americans; drawings by Oscar Ogg. 350p $3 Harper

918 South America—Description and travel. South America—Economic conditions (W) 41-51918

An account of the author's travels in South America including an informal picture of the manners and customs of the people, descriptions of the beauties of city and countryside, and comments on economic conditions, particularly as they affect international trade. Index.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic D '41 300w

"All in all this is a book which deserves wide reading. Mr. Crow has demonstrated again that he is a shrewd observer, a keen analyst and a good writer. Even those who have no thought of going to South America will pick up this volume to their enlightenment and entertainment. It is not complete, authoritative or guide-bookish, but it is excellent and profitable reading." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p3 S 21 '41 1300w

"Beginning with the confession of his own inadequacy to write a book about South America, Mr. Crow goes on to construct a volume of which hardly any page lacks interest. The story of his travels and the record of his observations told in friendly, playful, journalistic vein ranks him high on the list of current writers about our neighbors to the south. He is so keen-eyed about things and so original, that one is disappointed to find him tarred with the same old brush which makes almost every American writer on South America itch to have a crack at the Catholic Church."

+ — Cath World 154:509 Ja '42 230w

"Easy to read, gossipy and humorous, the book is more than a catalogue of superficial impressions. Evidently the writer has delved deeply into the historic, geographic, economic and ethnic background of each country. He presents a realistic picture of national trends and future possibilities." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 155:18 N 1 '41 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

"The reader feels that Mr. Crow was more eager to get his book through the press than to give a thoughtful or impartial picture of the South American people." G. E. Brown

Library J 66:667 Ag '41 90w

Reviewed by Ernesto Montenegro
N Y Times p9 S 21 '41 1250w

"Rather superficial in regard to the South Americans themselves but up-to-date and readable on the subject of North American business methods (very successful, the author believes) and Axis propaganda (a flop, he thinks)."

+ — New Yorker 17:111 S 20 '41 50w

"The best thing about Mr. Crow's book is its simplicity and lack of pretense. If he errs on the side of excessive optimism in the matter of trade, he also performs a useful service in exploding some of the myths that have been fostered in the United States about the strength of the Nazi trade menace in South America. If Mr. Crow knew South America as thoroughly as he does China, we might expect a model of interpretation from him. I hope he will go back and perhaps later let us have another volume that will combine more thorough knowledge and analysis with the freshness that gives this introductory work its vitality and charm." Katherine Rodell

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 20 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p10 S 17 '41 700w
Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

CROWELL, MRS GRACE (NOLL). Splendor ahead. 52p $1 Harper

811

40-35499

Collection of poems thru all of which runs a deep religious feeling.

"These poems of faith, hope and beauty strike a welcome note in a time when many

CROWELL, GRACE—Continued
can see only confusion around and gloom ahead.
+ Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 50w
Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE. Angelique; il. by Agnes Lehman. 274p $2 Crowell (W) 41-16479

The 1755 transportation of the French inhabitants of Nova Scotia, this time to Maryland, forms the background of a story for older girls. Angelique and her grandmother join the girl's brother in Baltimore, after many hardships. They are helped in their trouble by a young American, Miles Conway, whose interest in Angelique brings to the story a hint of romance.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:381 D '41 90w
Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 10w
Social Studies 32:380 D '41 20w

CROWNINSHIELD, BOWDOIN BRADLEE. Fore-and-afters; with introd. by Charles Francis Adams. 100p 64pl $7.50 Houghton 623.822 Sailing vessels 41-1748

Charles Francis Adams writes in the Introduction: "Strangely enough, most authors have failed to note that our greatest contribution to the art of sail has been the development of the fore-and-aft rig into the fine schooners which became the most efficient way of carrying our coastal trade and conducting our fishing industry till steam and motor ended the days of romance and danger." Mr. Crowninshield tells this chapter in the history of American sailing vessels, illustrated with many fine photographs of noteworthy vessels and famous skippers.

"Not pretending to exhaust his subject, Mr. B. B. Crowninshield's lucid text, his exquisite drawings, and his glorious photographs are all that any boat-minded man or woman could desire. American fishermen, cargo steamers, Great Lakes craft and famous skippers are all pictured, each given full play for individuality. There are excellent reproductions of old prints and water colors (many owned by Boston men), and a general loveliness of binding, printing and arrangement."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 220w

"Mr. Crowninshield's history of 'Fore-and-Afters' is significant not only because it is one of the very few authoritative books about schooners, but because the author has contributed as much as any individual to their scientific development. . . His book is a notable contribution to the hitherto untapped history of the schooner rig in America." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 8 '41 850w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:28 Ap '41

CROWTHER, JAMES GERALD. The social relations of science. 665p $3.50 (16s) Macmillan 509 Science—History. Social problems. Scientific research (W) 41-51567

The first and longer part of this study of science from the social point of view is a survey of the history of science since ancient days and an analysis of the place of science in the development of each distinct civilization. The last part is a discussion of the conditions under which research is done, its encouragement by industry, government, and universities in each nation and the responsibility which rests upon scientists to guide social forces and create an effective social policy.

Am Soc R 6:770 O '41 40w

"Mr. Crowther, who is well known in this country by books and lectures on this subject, is one of the few writers possessing the vision and the detail knowledge necessary to tackle the task of writing a book of this kind. In spite of a certain monotony of presentation, he has succeeded well in his task. The authenticity of the technical information is remarkable, at least in those fields which are familiar to the reviewer." C. R. Soderberg

+ Ann Am Acad 215:236 My '41 500w

Booklist 37:287 Mr 1 '41

"Scientists who read this book will learn to revalue the long painful history of scientific progress and will learn that much more than the monastic inspiration of great men is involved in each forward step. Laymen should read it because it is a clear and concise account of new human powers and instruments that have repeatedly come from the laboratory to upset the course of history. . . Mr. Crowther has written an excellent primer for the education of those who must inevitably take charge of the humane organization of scientific research that the coming peace will demand." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p8 Ja 26 '41 700w

Reviewed by A. G. Dietz
Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 650w

Reviewed by Herman Hausheer
Christian Century 58:831 Je 25 '41 1200w

"The book is unusually readable for the serious manner in which the subject has been approached. . . A worthy addition for any library." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 65:873 O 15 '40 200w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 24 '41 310w

"It is impossible to mention even a small fraction of the scientific achievements that Mr. Crowther has put in a new light. It is enough to say that he has written a remarkable description of the interaction of science and society through the ages." H. H. Darby
+ Nation 152:413 Ap 5 '41 850w

"His book is a thoughtful and thought-provoking sketch of the influence of science upon society and of society upon science. . . His interesting and stimulating book should help to dispose of the remark that 'We learn from history, that we do not learn from history.'" R. A. Gregory

+ Nature 148:4 J1 5 '41 1400w

"This theme is familiar enough by now, but Mr. Crowther's treatment of it—especially in his later chapters—is vigorous and timely." Harold Ward

+ New Repub 104:641 My 5 '41 300w

"This book is a fine example of the kind of work that has to be done. In spite of a good deal of journalistic scrappiness it tells the great story vividly, and comments shrewdly on the social aspect of science to-day. In one respect the book falls short. Any serious treatment of science and its social relations should point out that the modern scientific temper, like the attitudes which it has superseded, must be in important ways prejudiced by the unconscious assumptions of the age. . . Though Mr. Crowther recognises that science will undergo far-reaching developments along familiar lines, he seems to accept the current scientific temper as final. He makes no distinction between those who reject science through prejudice and those who, while recognising that science is the greatest achievement of our age, try to see its limitations, and keep their minds open for signs of the next great revolutionary advance of thought." Olaf Stapledon
+ New Statesman & Nation 21:512 My 17 '41 950w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:11 Ja '41

"Everyone who has the slightest interest in the world as it is and will be, should have a shelf of books covering science and its social relations and impacts. This shelf would contain only the really significant books that have appeared in recent years, so it shouldn't be five feet long yet; only about eighteen inches. He should push the earlier volumes over to make room for Crowther's 'The Social Relations of Science.'" C. C. Furnas

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 Mr 22 '41 650w

"It is not always easy to differentiate between synthesis and popularization. In the case of the present work, for example, it is not entirely clear for what level of reader it is written, nor by what standards it should be judged. At many points it appears to be written more for the general reading public than for a professional audience. This is no fundamental criticism of the book itself, for the author is of course free to write at whatever level he chooses, but the attempt at synthesis also leads to other difficulties." E. P. Hutchinson

Social Studies 32:327 N '41 700w

"The first half of Mr. Crowther's book is a straightforward account of the history of science in antiquity and the middle ages. As such it is brilliantly done. . . The character of the book changes completely when it comes to the threshold of the modern age. It is not only that it becomes a somewhat disconnected and anecdotal, though interesting and instructive, selection of episodes, almost exclusively taken from the development of physics and chemistry and the connected techniques. But European civilisation since the Renaissance stands also for everything which the author hates most; individualism, commerce, abstract thinking and humanistic and literary education. And his judgements become accordingly, to say the least, peculiar." F. A. Hayek

+ — Spec 166:531 My 16 '41 950w

"Mr. Crowther writes with restraint, directness and an easy and readable style. His scholarship in the field of science and in European history is broad and stands him in good stead. Such a work as 'The Social Relations of Science' must necessarily and by nature, place exacting demands on its author. It is unfortunate, however, that so little mention is made of science in America. There is an excellent bibliography at the close of each chapter dealing with the writings of many outstanding British and European scientists and students of the social aspects of science." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 700w

"This book is refreshing because the writer has some confidence in his public. It can be recommended to teachers, scientists, and writers, as well as to lay readers, because it is illuminating just where our formal education and our conventional publicizing of important information leave the greatest gaps." B. C. Gruenberg

+ Survey 77:341 N '41 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Je 7 '41 300w

CROY, HOMER. Mr Meek marches on. 307p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-3326

Comedy of Wilberforce Meek, owner of a prosperous little shoe store in Joplin, Missouri, who made his stand against mounting taxes by refusing to pay his poll tax.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

"This story has those homespun graces which Mr. Croy cherishes, and it is amusing as well as timely." Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 F 9 '41 400w

"The story is blurred by repetitiousness and sentimentality. We wish Mr. Meek had been made a little shrewder. We wish there had been less naïveté and more rough stuff. A little satire would have been welcome in the midst of all the neighborly feeling. The rebuttal to all these minor criticisms is, of course, that Mr. Meek's story is a day dream and one can hardly expect a day dream to be too solid." M. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 160w

Library J 66:34 Ja 1 '41 30w

"The story is amusing, but as burlesque on municipal corruption and waste, it hasn't half the punch of 'The Great McGinty.' In its more serious aspect it side-steps direct questions, such as reducing normal government expenditures, and wins on a happy fluke. Mr. Croy must be credited, at least, with considerable courage for the attempt to mix such oil-and-water subjects as humor and high taxes." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 F 9 '41 500w

"The main plot, Meek's protest against taxes and his actual experience in trying to lower them, might in more honest hands become vital, particularly if the final solution were credible. . . As for the setting: for this life-long resident of Joplin the page-after-page references to her home town became as embarrassing as undressing in public; and she was distinctly annoyed by the multitude of inaccuracies. . . However, the novel might make a delightful movie, burlesqued slightly, or treated as pure fantasy: it is warm, simple and clean." Dorothea Hoover

— + Sat R of Lit 23:11 Mr 8 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:55 Mr '41

CRUICKSHANK, MRS HELEN GERE. Bird islands down East; with phot. by Allan D. Cruickshank. 123p $2.50 Macmillan

598.2 Birds—Maine

41-51657

The experiences of an American ornithologist and his wife while banding, watching, and photographing sea birds on some of the islands off the Maine coast: Hog island; Otter; Monhegan; Little Green; Matinicus; Old Man; and Machias Seal. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"Mrs. Cruickshank's enthusiasm for birds and rugged island life is infectious. Bird lovers, conservationists, and islanders will enjoy the book."

+ Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

"'Bird Islands Down East' is good ornithology. It reports accurately. It is enthusiastic. It is thoughtful. . . The photographic illustrations add much to the book. They are by the irrepressible Allan. Some of them instantly call to mind the illustrations in Fraser Darling's 'Wild Country.' We could offer them no higher compliment than this." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p8 Jl 6 '41 450w

"Not only is the book instructive and useful for the student of bird-life, but it has a certain salty flavor that makes one feel refreshed, as through vacation-by-proxy in the heady east wind of the Maine Coast."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 80w

Christian Century 58:565 Ap 23 '41 10w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"Conservation enthusiasts, professional and amateur, and Maine sojourners should welcome it since there is little material on this locality. No sentimentalizing nor unusual writing. Suitable for a young people's department. Photographs by the author and her husband will doubtless add much to the text." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by Anita Moffett

N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '41 700w

CRUICKSHANK, FRANK XAVIER. Military basic course, simplified instruction; with pref. and editorial supervision by W. H. Oury. 7th ed 450p il $1.75; pa $1 McClurg 355.0973 U.S.—Army—Officers' handbooks 40-33331

"An infantry reserve captain has compiled a volume covering in condensed fashion every aspect of military life—drill, attack, defense, tactics, ceremonial procedure, and so on. Each section is constructed as a series of questions and answers." Boston Transcript

Booklist 37:273 F 15 '41

Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 60w

CRUM, MASON. Gullah: Negro life in the Carolina Sea islands. 351p il $3.50 Duke Univ. [21s Cambridge]

325.26 Negroes—Sea islands, South Carolina 40-34941

"Professor Crum seeks to give 'a faithful picture' of the physical environment of the Carolina low country, the sea islands, and the plantations, and weaves into his story the cultural background of slavery and Reconstruction with their effects upon conditions today. Succeeding sections treat in picturesque manner the Gullah attitude toward nature, religion and the church, the spirituals, religious instruction, the work of the plantation missions, the hardships of slavery, and the Port Royal experiment. Among the significant sections are those treating the dialect, the spirituals, and the cultural transition to freedom." Ann Am Acad

"The account is intimate, sympathetic, mel-low, rich in luscious detail, and at times repetitious and rambling. . . . In the opinion of this reviewer, Professor Crum's most out-standing contribution to the history of the sea island Negro is his discussion of the low country spirituals, particularly his painstaking tabulation of the relation of verse phrases to biblical passages." B. I. Wiley

+ — Am Hist R 46:933 J1 '41 500w

"The book is valuable for its description of the Gullah Negro and his environment; but its sentimental oversimplification of the race problem in the South, its frequent moralizing tone, and its lay effort to draw psychoanalytic im-plications from the culture will perhaps lessen its value for objective social scientists." C. S. Johnson

+ — Am J Soc 47:226 S '41 330w

"The book is attractively printed and bound, and has some appealing illustrations. Its bib-liography lists a number of items that are not ordinarily found, and will thus be of use to the scholar. The attitude it documents, how-ever, is its unwitting contribution, and if it is read with care and insight, the materials will be of immense value to students of race relations who are as concerned with the points of view that accentuate the interracial ten-sions in the United States as they are with the institutionalized manifestations of the prob-lem that constitute the surface forms of these deeper-rooted sanctions." M. J. Herskovits

+ — Am Soc R 6:423 Je '41 650w

"The principal value of the book lies in its vivid and well-written treatment of the Gullah land and folk and the superb portraiture of the community life of an isolated and unsophisticated group of the descendants of Africa. The author's method of extensive quotations has its advantages as well as its disadvantages, which are quite apparent. There are several interesting photographs and illustrations." C. H. Wesley

+ — Ann Am Acad 214:269 Mr '41 1150w

Reviewed by S. G. Stoney

Books p21 F 16 '41 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"Mr. Crum's book is an admirable and sin-cere contribution to the story of the Gullah people." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 6 '41 160w

CRUMP, IRVING. Out of the woods; pictures by Enos B. Comstock. 269p $2 Dodd

41-5508

Eleven stories of animal life for young read-ers. One of the best stories in the book is about a black bear which adopted two orphan sheep-dog puppies, brought them up to take the place of her own lost cub, taught them to hunt and live as she did, and then lost them when the puppies came in contact with a flock of sheep.

"These eleven stories of animal life in the open carry conviction. . . . Camp fires and scout gatherings will accord them enthusiastic re-ception." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:211 My '41 60w

"This is an excellent collection of animal stories, all entertaining and well worth read-ing. . . . Enos Comstock has made some fine line drawings. Recommended." J. E. Strom-dahl

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 90w

"'Out of the Woods' will appeal to a wide range in taste and age, for nearly all boys from 7 to 14 enjoy animal stories, and Mr. Crump writes in a simple, direct style that makes easy reading. Enos Comstock's drawings are both accurate and appealing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '41 300w

CRUMP, IRVING, and MAUL, NORMAN. Our airliners. 249p il map $2 Dodd

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial. Aeronautics

—History. Air lines (W) 40-35368

Traces the development of commercial avia-tion in the United States from early mail lines to the present age of luxurious airliners. In-cludes information on the radio beam, schedules, care of ships, training of pilots, and the future of transoceanic and strato-sphere flying. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 37:243 F 1 '41

"None better." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 N 16 '40 40w

CUDAHY, JOHN. The armies march, a personal report. 304p $2.75 Scribner

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narra-tives, American 41-23344

"[A] book by an American diplomat who was on duty in Europe at the outbreak of the war. A few months after Mr. Cudahy resigned his ambassadorship to Belgium, he returned to Europe on a commission from Life to write an article on Germany at war. The important features of the book are the chapters regarding this mission [including] his interview with Hitler and his interpretation of it, his discus-sion of post-war economic problems, and his analysis of the German character." (Library J) Index.

"[In his] book Mr. Cudahy misspells the names of Edgar Mowrer, Sir Samuel Hoare, Viscount Grey, Von Schleffen, the Spartacus revolt, Von Schuschnigg, Sir Neville Henderson, Raymond Geist; he confused Hess and 'my brave Maurice' in Hitler's early entourage; he attributes the Nazi party program to Hess and dates it in 1928; he writes of the oil of the Ukraine, where there is no oil, as one of Hitler's goals in his Russian campaign; he says he never heard of a case of German boot-legging in rationed foods—the list could go on." Joseph Barnes

— Books p11 D 21 '41 800w

"The book is clear, concise, informative, en-tertaining." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 90w

"Oddly individual, hasty writing and some rather added judgments."

New Yorker 17:108 N 29 '41 70w

CULLEN, MAX O'RELL. How to carve meat, game and poultry. (Whittlesey house publi-cation) 209p il $2 McGraw

642.6 Carving (meat, etc) (W) 41-24456

Lessons on the anatomy and carving of meat, game and poultry, by the meat carving expert for the National live stock board. Partial contents: Nothing left to chance; the tools; Some conventions; The procedure: step by step; Face to face with the bird on the platter; Carving the unfamiliar roast; Meat anatomy; Selecting poultry; What makes meat tender? Includes line drawings. Index.

"Mr. Cullen certainly ought to know what he writes about . . . and his pronouncements are not the theories of an amateur. Carefully done line drawings help to make this volume easily understandable for beginner carvers." Sheila Hibben

+ Books p11 D 28 '41

J Home Econ 33:747 D '41 50w

CULLEY, JOHN HENRY. Cattle, horses and men of the western range; il. by Katherine Field. 337p $3 Ritchie, W.

B or 92 Ranch life. Live stock industry 41-750

Reminiscences of life on the large cattle ranches of the American West, written by an Englishman, educated at Harrow and Oxford, who came to this country sometime late in the last century. In 1893 he became manager of the famous Bell ranch, and stayed there for many years. In 1921 he returned to England when he succeeded to a title, but only remained nine years. He now lives in California. Index.

"Jack Culley contributes little that is new, but his excellent detail and his unquestioned authority made this book a sound addition to the literature of the Southwest. It is well written, as becomes an author who, as a youth in England, studied under Walter Pater. Culley's memoirs are worth reading." Stanley Walker

+ Books p15 Ap 13 '41 240w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 10 '41 750w

"[The] book is chatty, informative and a bit rambling, but absolutely free of the shoddy melodrama that has distorted the real cowhand into either a two-gun desperado or an impossible hero. [The] descriptions of the character and mores of the men of the range are graphic and accurate, and there is no aspect of their life that he does not cover in a chapter or two of individual composite language." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 2 '41 500w

CUMMINGS, EDWARD ESTLIN. Fifty poems. ltd autog ed [110p] subs $5 Duell

811

41-6398

"Mr. Cummings's '50 Poems' is a splendid example of marking time: no advance, no retreat, the same marvelous tricks and ribald twitches and occasional socking of the topmost bell." Sat R of Lit

"It accords a questionable distinction to say that Mr. Cummings's unquestionable gifts have suffered little if any change in his new volume. As one of the founders of what Thomas Wolfe so aptly called the 'I Am Dumb' school of American writing, he seems determined to fight it out on that line if it tries our patience. This is not to say that his new poems are either inept or bad, for they are not; neither are they uninteresting. But if the publishers had taken fifty poems out of the Collected Poems and put these in instead, I doubt if many would notice the difference." Howard Nemerov

Books p24 Mr 2 '41 650w

"Now in his 47th year, Mr. Cummings has not added anything new to his performance or his ideas since he first perfected his repertory of tricks. That doesn't mean the new poems are any less good than the earlier poems; it's just that they're exactly the same." John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 7 '41 160w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Nation 152:591 My 17 '41 130w

"Of Mr. Cummings it has been noted that there are usually two styles: typographic delirium, scrambled orthography and syntax, a kind of linguistic battle-royal, and all to conceal the real sentimentality; and as well, an almost sweetly 'poetic' attack, archaisms and all, which is made to look adventurous by lack of punctuation. Mr. Cummings pulls his own leg too much; he can be a master of the 'smumble,' but indulges in it too often; he is also a master of the pure lyric, and in that he indulges us too seldom." Conrad Aiken

New Repub 104:831 Je 16 '41 120w

"There is a kind of New England integrity and willfulness in Cummings's poetry, whether it is denying, as it often does, or affirming, as it does more often than one would think, the existence of a moral order in the world; and one can believe it is a legacy from the Boston minister. . . I doubt that any poet living is expressing the sense of what it is to be alive as forthrightly as Cummings does in his poems." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 13 '41 400w

"E. E. Cummings' new book is unfortunately irrevocably stuck in the past. It adds nothing to what we know of Cummings; it is tender, as he always has been, and rough and tough, as he has always wished to be. It is also very malicious, not always in an open way." Louise Bogan

— New Yorker 17:57 Mr 1 '41 80w

"I have always read him with a delight that this book does nothing to diminish; and if, as I suspect, my enthusiasm is largely undergraduate, it is nevertheless as inevitably a part of me as my excellently functioning patellar reflex. The reader who is anti-Cummings will not be converted by these poems; the non-partisan will emit 'no sound of joy or sorrow'; the addict, like myself, will reach unblushingly for this hair of the dog that bit him twenty years ago, and hope for many many more of the same." Dudley Pitts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 12 '41 70w

"In his early work, a page of Cummings gave the impression of an impromptu ballet with the most unlikely words doing the splits when least expected. It was rich in simple but surprising feats of expression. In his latest poems, the simplicity and surprise have degenerated into fussiness and clutter. His pawky phonetic satire and the unpunctual stumble of his syllables are still amusing, but the volume as a whole leaves one feeling that there is only a hairsbreadth between economy and redundancy in verse." J. L. Sweeney

— + Yale R n s 30:819 summer '41 110w

CUMMINGS, LEWIS VANCE. I was a head-hunter; with a foreword by Harold McCracken; decorations by David Newell. 338p $3 Houghton

918.6 Colombia—Description and travel. Indians of South America (W) 41-6353

Account of the author's sixteen-months stay among head hunting Indians in the Orinoco watershed district of South America. He took part in the tribal rites and wars, and was married to three of the Indian girls. The book includes a glossary.

"Freshness, exoticism and excitement run through these pages. It is a travel book in a thousand. . . There can never have been a less squeamish writer of travel experiences among primitives than Mr. Cummings. What he saw and did he tells the reader candidly." W. A. Roberts

Books p5 Ap 13 '41 440w

"Neither the untamable Indians of Brazil nor the Stone-Age primitives of New Guinea (certainly not the denizens of the jungle whom Mr. Ludwig Bemelmans found waiting to do their stuff before the explorer's camera in Ecuador) have peopled quite so wild a series of episodes and exploits as those which fill Lewis V. Cummings's memories from the far reaches of the Guaviare River in Colombia. . . In a very friendly introduction Harold McCracken 'recommends this factual story' with 'particular pleasure.' But only to confirmed addicts of this sort of adventure-narrative is it likely to make any appeal."

N Y Times p5 Mr 30 '41 440w

CUMMINGS, L. V.—Continued

"A distinguished travel book, written with an almost classical plainness of style."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 5 '41 50w

"Mr Cummings's book may lack the scientific background of Dr Victor Wolfgang von Hagen's 'Off With Their Heads,' published four years ago, but it gains in vividness through the author's more intimate participation in the head-hunters' daily lives. . . . Although 'I Was a Head-Hunter' verges occasionally on the sensational, especially in the treatment of the marriage customs, the author writes so persuasively that the reader accepts the youthful adventurer's marriage at one time to three girls of the tribe as little out of the ordinary."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 My 26 '41 390w

"Lewis V. Cummings went alone into the South American jungle in Colombia and lived there for two years with the head-hunters. . . . He apparently did not do it for literary material. His dangerous experiences with the tribesmen and his marital adventures with three native wives are certainly the stuff for a good travel book. His book, 'I Was a Head-Hunter,' is a unique, convincing, and surprising narrative." C. H. Leonard

+ Yale R n s 30:835 summer '41 120w

CUMMINGS, RICHARD OSBORN. The American and his food; a history of food habits in the United States. 267p il $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

641 Food. Diet (W) 41-465

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"A reader cannot fail to be impressed with the range and quantity of facts compressed into the book. There is, however, little attempt at economic analysis; and in certain sections the economist is likely to feel strongly moved to rearrange facts and present further evidence in order to prevent the drawing of incorrect inferences." M. G. Reid

+ Am Econ R 31:137 Mr '41 160w

"The book is well written and contains material that should be extremely interesting to a large group of people. The author does not simply furnish a chronicle of events but gives interpretation and penetrating observations as well. In his use of technical material beyond the usual scope of the historian, one gets the satisfying impression that he understands what he is writing about and that its accuracy is insured in a deeper sense than by the reported checking by experts." Hazel Kyrk

+ Am J Soc 47:252 S '41 190w

"Because he is an economist, the reviewer cannot but mention a weakness of the book deriving from the same source as its merits. The historical method refrains so much from objective, quantitative measurements that in spite of the interesting qualitative information we receive, most essential conditions remain obscure. . . . Aside from such weaknesses inherent in a historical and interpretive study . . . it appears that the analysis of the psychological motives underlying the discussion of reformatory educational and scientific campaigns remains fragmentary by omission of a treatment of the less conscious heritage of ideas about food, to which anthropology has contributed a good deal of knowledge. Yet, in spite of all the desires for further investigation nourished by Mr. Cummings' book, we are fortunate in having his thought-provoking and skillfully presented historical sketch." Karl Brandt

+ Ann Am Acad 215:218 My '41 600w
Bookmark 2:5 Mr '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

J Home Econ 34:52 Ja '42 100w

"This book is more than an entertaining chronicle of changes in dietary customs and habits, for the author is conscious, and makes the reader conscious, of the social implications of the changes." Jane Stafford

+ New Repub 104:347 Mr 10 '41 360w

Pratt p14 D '41

Reviewed by Dorothy Giles

Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 9 '41 360w

Spring'd Republican p10 Mr 20 '41 950w

"The historical information has been chosen with a nice sense of its human interest as well as its social significance. In presenting a brief summary of the evolution in our scientific knowledge of nutrition, Professor Cummings has drawn upon Grade A sources. . . . Familiarity with this readable book will provide perspective for the activities relating to nutrition that will be an inevitable part of a civilian defense program." M. M. Heseltine

+ Survey 77:196 Je '41 370w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. The strange death of Manny Square. 252p $2 Dutton

41-17246

Detective story.

"This highly recommended item ought to place A. B. Cunningham right up where he belongs, among the leaders in the mystery world." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 O 19 '41 160w

"Good characterization adds to the enjoyment one experiences in reading this deftly plotted tale." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 O 19 '41 150w

"Fine puzzle and excellent writing in this grim backwoods story."

+ New Yorker 17:100 O 18 '41 50w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 D 20 '41 40w

CUNNINGHAM, EUGENE. Triggernometry; a gallery of gunfighters; foreword by Eugene Manlove Rhodes; il. from the Rose coll, San Antonio. 441p $4 Caxton printers 917.8 Frontier and pioneer life—West.

Crime and criminals—West 41-1849

"An author of popular westerns here tells the true stories of some of the western gun fighters, drawing a distinction between the terms gun fighter and gunman. The latter has criminal associations while the former took in some of the great sheriffs and marshals. He not only tells the stories, but what will be more interesting to some readers, analyses their techniques and estimates their skill." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

CUNNINGHAM, HARRY ALLEN. Material facilities needed in the training of intermediate grade teachers in science. 162p il $2 Teachers college

507 Science—Study and teaching 41-4899

"The purpose of this study is to provide data that will be helpful to those responsible for meeting the needs of instruction in the matter of rooms, service, furnishings, equipment, and supplies for the training of intermediate grade teachers in science. More specifically, the purpose is to determine, on the basis of valid criteria and as objectively as possible with the materials, time, and money available, what constitute desirable material facilities for such training." Page 1

Reviewed by P. E. Kambly

El School J 41:711 My '41 550w

School & Society 53:223 F 15 '41 20w

CUNNINGHAM, LOUIS ARTHUR. Marionette. 303p $2 Penn

41-3418

Born of an old Acadian family, Bionde Lacasse's youth and beauty made her the sure way to recoup the family fortunes thru a conventional marriage. But Bionde fell in love with a young artist and tho some secret kept him from accepting her love, she was given courage to escape from her family. She became famous as a figure skater and movie actress, and then when Guy's secret was discovered happiness came to both.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 F 2 '41 120w

"The action throughout the story seems somewhat stilted, and neither Bionde nor De Varin achieves a semblance of reality. Such reality is rather found in two minor characters, Bionde's aunt and uncle, who typify the French-Canadian in their practical attitude on everyday affairs of life, and their ability to see and grasp an opportunity when offered."

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 60w

CUPPY, WILLIAM JACOB. How to become extinct; il. by William Steig. 181p $2 Farrar

817 Humor 41-24751

Forty more or less addled nature essays, discussing with bewildering detail the activities and habits of such varieties of life as fish, snakes, sloths, stoats (or is it ermine?) and insects. Some of the chapters have appeared in the New Yorker.

Booklist 38:187 F 1 '42

"When a scientist begins to read Will Cuppy's 'How to Become Extinct,' it doesn't seem as funny as he thought it would be because so much of it is scientifically correct. Then something happens and he begins to laugh and then says 'Lissen' to any one within hearing and reads the page all over again aloud. The scientist reader sort of comes to and realizes that Will Cuppy is saying what he always wanted to in class but never dared. I have seen one of each type of reader, a scientist and a non- or layman, both laughing their heads off at one of these chapters, and have been certain that each was impelled to mirth by wholly different thoughts. . . . Keep this book by your bed, and if you feel out of sorts with the world read Cuppy's 'Thoughts on the Ermine' before you go to sleep." William Beebe

+ Books p4 N 16 '41 700w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 154:42 Ja 10 '42 550w

"The pages are full of what appears to be information, followed by non sequiturs so whimsical as to be funny, even when it is apparent that the author intended them as such. With Mr. Steig's characteristically amusing illustrations, the book is, by and large (mostly by, as Mr. Cuppy might say), something to enlist the interest of any one who is in the slightest degree viviparous." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p9 D 14 '41 390w

New Yorker 17:107 N 29 '41 40w

Time 38:98 D 8 '41 500w

CURIE, EVE; BARRES, PHILIPPE, and ROUSSY DE SALES, RAOUL DE, eds. They speak for a nation; with an introd. tr. by Drake and Denise DeKay. 238p $2 Doubleday 940.5344 World war, 1939—France. France—History—German occupation, 1940—

(W) 41-14081

Excerpts from letters written by French men and women in occupied and unoccupied France and in the colonies. The letters were sent to friends in America and England, to broadcasting companies, and some even were addressed just to "England" or "America." The materials have been arranged under such headings as: The spirit of resistance, Life in Paris, The prisoners of war, The Vichy government, The Germans—the feeling about "collaboration," The free French forces.

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"These letters, written in the French idiom, easily become part of our American democratic language of today, and what the French write to each other privately is a public warning to us. 'They Speak For A Nation' is a chorus of voices you should listen to and read." Janet Flanner

+ Books p5 Ag 17 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 154:115 O '41 230w

"A collection of letters mostly written to the BBC in London is bound to reflect more or less one point of view, and the result is very monotonous. Apparently the editors wish to furnish proofs that the French people still feel friendly toward England and long for a British victory. If so, they should provide more convincing evidence than those dull letters which, coming almost entirely through one channel, cannot be said 'to speak for a nation,' whether we wish it or not." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 34:452 Ag 29 '41 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:197 O '41 50w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien
Nation 153:228 S 13 '41 300w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser
New Repub 105:380 S 22 '41 430w

"To those of us for whom the word 'France' glows in heart and mind and spirit even through almost unbearable pain, this is a book to be hailed with thanksgiving, heartbreaking as its recital must be. It tells us of a France truly undying. But by implication it is much more than a book about France. These men and women who 'speak for a nation' speak, as all writing that is truly French must, in affirmation—conscious or not—of man's living spirit. And to every intelligent American their letters should bring inspiration and warning, in brotherhood." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 3 '41 1600w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy
Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 23 '41 450w

CURL, GRACE VORIS. Young Shannon, scout with Lewis and Clark; il. by Paul Lantz. 236p $2 Harper

(W) 41-19635

The youngest member of the Lewis and Clark expedition, George Shannon, is the central character of this story, which emphasizes the sportsmanship of the men on this journey, and their loyalty to their leaders. For readers of twelve to fourteen.

"Not as scholarly, perhaps, as the book by Davis [No Other White Man, Book Review Digest, 1937] but because of its make-up and style, may appeal more to the average child. Good illustrations in black and white by Paul Lantz." Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 80w

"Unoriginal but interesting." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 40w

CURRAN, HENRY HASTINGS. Pillar to post. 387p il $3 Scribner

B or 32 New York (city)—Politics and government 41-6107

Informally written, good humored autobiography of a New York (city) politician who has held among other posts those of Alderman, President of the Borough of Manhattan, Federal Immigration Commissioner, deputy Mayor (under La Guardia) and Chief magistrate.

"This autobiography of a distinguished public servant is written in a delightful manner, with gentle touches of humor. . . . This autobiography is not full enough and frank enough to furnish the basis for a psychological study of an American public servant. However, it contains many very revealing passages, and should be added to the list of books of social scientists who are interested in municipal government, public administration, and human documents." H. F. Gosnell

CURRAN, H. H.—Continued

+ Ann Am Acad 217:219 S '41 270w

"Henry Hastings Curran has written a lovely history of himself and of the New York he has graced as a reporter, lawyer and politician. The chief Magistrate of our city used to be a reporter on the New York Tribune before he went into the law and on to politics and a long line of public offices. Mr. Curran is still a first-class writing man, which is rare enough anywhere, and we are indebted to him for a warm and witty chronicle of local people and events." L. L. Engelking

+ Books p7 Ap 13 '41 850w

Christian Science Monitor p20 My 10 '41 600w

Commonweal 34:356 Ag 1 '41 50w

"Any New Yorker who wants to get the human touch, past and present, in this great city will find both profit and entertainment in this book. For that matter so will many non-New Yorkers." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 6 '41 1250w

"That delight in a full, exciting life so commonly regarded as the exclusive property of the Elizabethans crowds the pages of the autobiography of Henry H. Curran, Chief Magistrate of New York City. It is in the best use of the word a humorous book. The fact that a career spent almost entirely in the circus maximus of Manhattan politics has not dulled Judge Curran's wit and love of his fellow man, but, rather, sharpened these qualities, is something worth remarking all by itself." J. R. Parker

+ Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ap 19 '41 700w

"One of the most readable autobiographies that has appeared for a long time."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 12 '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 Jl '41

CURRENT biography; who's news and why, 1940; ed. by Maxine Block. 916p il price on application 1941 Wilson, H.W.

920

(W) (40-27432)

"This monthly publication gives biographical information about persons whose names are currently appearing before the public. It is intended for use by libraries, schools, news editors, and other users of reference tools, and by individual subscribers. The publishers state that one of the aims of this publication is to help everyone to a better understanding of current events. To this end, each entry is complete in itself, and though references are given to newspapers, magazines, and biographical reference books, they are intended to be supplementary. . . The scope is international. There are radio announcers and performers, such as Milton J. Cross and John Kieran; people prominent in religion and social service, such as Bishop Manning and Roger Baldwin; the bridge expert, Ely Culbertson; and many types of authors, such as Saint-Exupéry, Helen Hull, Mabel Dodge Luhan, and Lin Yu-t'ang. Vera Zorina, the dancer, and Massine, choreographer for the Ballet Russe are entered. Persons prominent in foreign affairs are given extensive treatment, for example: Jawaharlal Nehru, Daladier, Serrano Suñer, Lord Beaverbrook. Motion picture actors are not dealt with extensively but directors Pare Lorentz and Garson Kanin are treated in several columns. . . All entries are in one alphabet, and there are numerous cross-references, in the case of pseudonyms or compound names." Subscription Bks Bul

"Current Biography is recommended for public, college, university and school libraries, or for home use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:19 Ap '41 700w

CURRIER, ISABEL. The young and the immortal. 466p $2.50 Knopf

41-14543

Sensitive, quietly written story of a self-willed and intellectually keen girl, educated in a Canadian convent school, from which she was expelled because of her questioning of the right of the church to control her reading. Outside the convent she made a wrong marriage, from which she was released by her husband's death. In a second marriage she found safe anchorage, and in the loving understanding of her favorite Sister at her old convent she made her spiritual peace as well.

"An understanding and beautiful book." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 S 21 '41 600w

"Isabel Currier writes from her own experience in a Canadian convent school, and in the Worcester State Hospital. What a pity that her book is such a travesty on convent life. It is overlaid with realism—a euphemistic term for sordid sensuality."

— Cath World 154:504 Ja '42 180w

"An exceptionally fine first novel. It has its flaws. It is too long, the style limps at times, there is very occasional sentimentality à la women's magazines. But it is a brave and honest book, free of the fearful mawkishness which has marked Catholic imaginative writing in this country. It is not too much to say that of its kind—the book is the best yet done by an American." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 34:571 O 3 '41 480w

"Miss Currier writes objectively, with a measure of detachment from the problem, yet with a passionate sincerity which one must commend, all the more because she does not forget for an instant that it is, first of all, the function of a novelist to tell a story and to tell it well, in terms of character and development. It is, perhaps, inevitable that the effort should be ballasted with controversial dynamite, which is in the very nature of the theme. . . This novel holds much treasure for those interested in novels of character with a religious turn." John Cour-nos

+ N Y Times p25 S 21 '41 900w

"An unusually mature and interesting philosophical novel. . . Sharply observed, intelligent, learned, not doctrinaire in any narrow sense. A worth-while book."

+ New Yorker 17:77 S 27 '41 60w

"This thoughtful novel strikes new chords of experience for the average person. It is a Catholic book, and for the Catholic reader doubtless recalls a thousand well-known memories; to the non-Catholic it is extremely illuminating. Catholicism at its best, in its most austere purity, its completest intellectual discipline, is personified in the exquisite figure of the nun, Sister Catherine of Siena." Currie Cabot

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 15 '41 270w

"Miss Currier, a Roman Catholic herself and convent bred, writes with convincing authority. Description of the convent life is especially interesting."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 190w

CURTIS, EDMUND DE FOREST. Pottery; its craftsmanship and its appreciation. 100p pl $2 Harper

738 Pottery

(W) 40-32353

An authority on pottery, who has taught the subject for eighteen years at the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial art in Philadelphia, presents a study of the latest techniques in ceramics, with some historical material. Contents: Clays and their preparation; Forming; Drying and firing; Glazes; Design; Laboratory techniques; The contemporary scene in ceramic art; Tables and tests; Bibliography. Index.

School Arts 40:7a Je '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

CURTIS, MARY ISABEL. From robin to junco; il. by Lemuel Palmer and Jerome Donovan [col. phot. by Arthur A. Allen]. 216p map $1.35; school ed 96c Houghton
598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature

(W) 40-12477

Bird book in story form describing the habits and usefulness of such familiar birds as the robin, woodpecker, bluebird, thrush, goldfinch, scarlet tanager, meadowlark, towhee, cedar waxwing, song sparrow, and junco. Index.

"The brief talks convey the sort of information a small child wants about birds; their ways and where they go; what they eat and where they live. There is a good index and an explanation of how to use it. Chances are good that the book may start a new set of children on bird-watching expeditions of their own." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 30 '41 280w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 151:155 N 9 '40 10w

"A timely and useful book. The illustrations are noteworthy; there are twelve delightful color photographs . . . and lively black and white drawings on nearly every page which catch to a remarkable degree the animation and activity of bird life. . . Because of the author's knowledge, first-hand observation and enthusiasm, these true bird stories hold the attention of the 10 to 11 year olds, answer their questions and stimulate further interest." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 F 23 '41 250w

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

CUTLER, ETHEL. One prophet—and another; a sequence of line drawings. 126p $1.50
Womans press

224 Prophets. Bible. Old Testament—Prophetical books 41-23376

"The message of the prophets is traced by skillful delineation of backgrounds, situations and personalities and by the presentation of selected passages in their historical setting. The author is well trained by a theological course and by study in the American Schools of Oriental Research at Jerusalem, and has assisted in cataloguing the manuscripts in the Monastery of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai, where Tischendorf made his remarkable discovery." Christian Century

"A beautiful and quite unusual little book."

+ Christian Century 58:1514 D 3 '41 80w

"Miss Cutler's fidelity to the standards of modern research and interesting presentation make her book valuable for individual and group study. She also provides valuable information concerning modern translations, reference books, and suggestions for further study." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 66:901 O 15 '41 100w

CUTLER, URIEL WALDO. Stories of King Arthur. See Malory, T.

D

DAFOE, JOHN WESLEY, ed. Canada fights; an American democracy at war. 280p $2 Farrar

940.5371 World war, 1939—Canada, Canada—Foreign relations (W) 41-5827

"This book is a study, by a group of Canadians, of Canada at war. It has been written primarily to meet what is known to be a desire on the part of many citizens of the United States for information, comprehensive and up to date, about the participation by Canada, an American democracy, in the war in defence of the democratic way of life; and also about Canada as joint protector with the United States of the integrity and independence of the North American continent against the designs of totalitarian powers. . . The contributors to this volume are Dr. Percy Corbett of McGill University, and five journalists: Grant Dexter, Bruce Hutchison, George V. Ferguson, B. T. Richardson and John W. Dafeo. All of them are under heavy debt to Mrs. Douglas MacLennan who acted as secretary to the group." (Editor's note) Index.

Reviewed by H. G. Skilling

Am Pol Sci R 35:1017 O '41 300w

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

"'Canada Fights' is crisp, informative, journalistic. The authors . . . tell us the things we want to know frankly without apology or undue boasting." Emmet Crozier

+ Books p3 Ap 27 '41 900w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 11 '41 490w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:874 Jl '41 10w

Living Age 360:390 Je '41 100w

"Americans should read 'Canada Fights.' In doing so they will learn considerable about a country of which they know nothing and acquire respect for a neighbor whom they take for granted. Above all, the book focuses our attention northward." E. P. Dean

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 27 '41 950w

Reviewed by I. B. Brebner

Survey G 30:443 Ag '41 420w

Time 37:91 Ap 28 '41 20w

DAGGETT, STUART. Principles of inland transportation. 3d ed 906p il maps $4 Harper

385 Transportation—U.S. Railroads—U.S. Inland navigation—U.S. Communication and traffic—U.S. Railroad law 41-3285

"This revision includes a number of topics which were casually treated in former editions [Book Review Digest, 1929, 1934] or omitted entirely. Among them are pipe lines, air routes, regulation of air carriers, motor vehicle routes, railroad labor problems, finance, co-ordination, and national transportation policies. . . Certain topics—foreign railroads, street railways, World War experience with the operation of railroads, and valuation—emphasized in former editions, come in for different treatment. Some of them receive brief notice in the discussion of American problems and practices; others are almost entirely omitted. . . The work involves a rearrangement of material. Some chapters treated separately in former editions have been consolidated. Those designed to provide a background for the study of technical problems have been moved into the fore-part of the book, while those discussing problems have wisely been moved to their logical positions in the latter portion." (Am Econ R) Index.

"On the whole this is an excellent revision of a standard work on transportation. While one may regret that materials found useful by teachers in former years have been omitted, definite limits to length must be observed. As it is, the book is voluminous, and somewhat cyclopedic in nature. It will prove useful as a reference and as a text." Calvin Crumbaker

+ Am Econ R 31:395 Je '41 300w

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41

DAHLBERG, EDWARD. Do these bones live. 158p $3 Harcourt

814

41-10302

A volume of essays, chiefly on literary subjects, in which the author sets forth his views on religion, the arts and civilization, on present-day conflicts and historic wars and movements.

DAHLBERG, EDWARD—Continued

"Do These Bones Live" is formally an essay in literary criticism and in effect an exercise in mystic—genuinely mystic—prophecy. Written in a half-Biblical, half-Shakespearean archaic literary slang that is often as maddening as it is frequently powerful in the grand style, it will be dismissed by many people as hysterical nonsense and sobbed over by others who want a vicarious religious thrill and will obtain it anywhere, even in anti-intellectualist literary criticism. Yet it is neither nonsense nor great prophecy." Alfred Kazin

Books p10 Ap 13 '41 800w

"A. book whose author values rhetorical coruscation more than intelligibility. He speaks with ex cathedra dogmatism, casts down the mighty from their seats like a self-appointed angel of judgment, and ranges the field of literature—Shakespeare, Poe, Dostoevski, Tolstoy, Whitman and a dozen others—with confident judgments which presuppose the utmost intimacy with their works. Then, in an evil moment, he quotes 'Rosalind, in 'Much Ado About Nothing'!' After that, one is not surprised that he expresses his hatred of Puritanism in terms which indicate that he knows little about it."

— Christian Century 58:628 My 7 '41 370w

"Luckily the author's style will prevent a popular resurrection of his unhealthy ideas. There is controlled beauty in a few passages, and a directness of observation and feeling in phrases like 'a haggard fast of silence'; 'the orchidaceous fumes of . . . gasoline.' But as a rule the style is overloaded with exclamations, italics and capitals, and obscured by ellipsis, the use of odd or invented words, a profusion of metaphors too often slightly inaccurate, and mere want of order. The law of tension applies in literature as in other forms of achievement, and just letting oneself go may result in a kind of mumbled fireworks, but is not a formula for good writing." A. J. Steiss

— + Commonweal 34:89 My 16 '41 450w

Time 37:104 My 19 '41 50w

DAICHES, DAVID. The King James version of the English Bible. 228p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

220.52 Bible. Whole—Versions 41-3977

"Mr. Daiches first traces the history of English Bible translation, then makes a lengthy excursus into the development of Hebrew scholarship in Europe, and finally studies the work of the translators against a background of their times, differentiating between the two forces which produced such scholarship—the 'back to the Bible' movement of the reformers and the disinterested scholarship that was a feature of the Renaissance. Of particular importance are the author's textual investigations of the rendering of Isaiah and his discussions of Greek and Hebrew scholarship in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance." (Publisher's note) Index.

Christian Century 58:192 F 5 '41 80w

"This is a volume for the student more than for the casual reader." G. F. Taylor
Churchman 155:18 Mr 15 '41 90w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews

Crozer Q 18:183 Ap '41 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p242 My 17 '41 130w

DAICHES, DAVID. Poetry and the modern world. 247p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. Poets, English (W) 40-35669

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Bookmark 2:7 Mr '41

Reviewed by James Moffatt

J Religion 21:311 Jl '41 650w

"Mr. Daiches seems to be at his best when treating the renunciators. The chapters in The Novel and the Modern World on Joyce and Huxley are equalled in Poetry and the Modern World only by the chapters on Eliot and Yeats. The first chapter of the book, on the late Victorians, stumbles embarrassingly from one imperfectly formulated thought to another. . . . But by the time Mr. Daiches comes to Gerald Manly Hopkins he is on solid ground. . . . Under Eliot and Yeats he has much that is new and much that is good to say. . . . The two chapters devoted to Yeats are complete and impressive."

Marian Castleman

+ — Library Q 11:234 Ap '41 750w

"It is really too bad for Mr. Daiches that he has constructed his book in such a way that it must come to its climax in a poet who is the very summing-up of mediocrity. . . . But to put it as I have done is not altogether fair to Mr. Daiches, who, if not a profound critic, is a careful one, whose judgment, so long as he is dealing with his own countrymen, is usually discriminating, often of an extreme accuracy, and always admirably set down. His discussion of the poetry of D. H. Lawrence, for instance, is excellent." J. P. Bishop

+ — Poetry 58:210 Jl '41 1450w

"This is a tempting title to the tiny but specific minority to whom the names on the dustcover—Hardy, Housman, Hopkins, the Imagists, the Sitwells, Eliot, Yeats, Auden—are news. It is a book meant to be read, and it is full of just those confusions, false assumptions and disproportions that will most commend it to a public already infected with them. . . . Within narrow limits Mr. Daiches is good." Kathleen Raine

— + Spec 166:482 My 2 '41 500w

"Mr. Daiches, a learned and courageous American critic of our social and artistic situation, whose own writing is epigrammatic, taut and exhilarating enough to make his work attractive, whether his readers agree with his conclusions or not, hazards an answer or two in this exciting book on the poetry of our confusing day. His acknowledgments of individual achievements are both generous and acute, and this is the chief virtue of his work, for when the reader has read to the end—which he does easily, for the narration has a lively power—the fundamental question remains only partly answered. . . . Mr. Daiches, for all his astuteness of analysis and his armour of mental protection, is rather inclined to bless the lot—with varying degrees of praise. And, what in some degree is a weakness, gives also the chief value to his work."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Ap 12 '41 700w

"To interpret history Mr. Daiches elaborates a metaphor dividing the modern poets according to their social theory: those who tried to perpetuate the nineteenth-century world by contracting it (Imagists, Georgians); those who turned back to an older one (Eliot); and those who looking both to past and future attempted the fashioning of a new (Lewis, Auden, Spender). This metaphor is useful to the author so long as he remembers that it is a social construct not an aesthetic one. But sometimes he forgets this, and then he is torn between what his own sound judgment tells him and what his social metaphor implies. His judgment says, Yeats and Eliot are excellent poets. His construct urges, Those who face forward socially must be somehow sounder. The result is that Auden, Spender, and Lewis are accorded unwarranted importance, especially the latter, and that Yeats's writing has to be described as, simultaneously, 'great poetry' and 'private mutterings.' None of this, however, should blind us to the fact that Professor Daiches . . . has kept up that 'level of intelligent discourse about literature' for which he pleads, and which, as he says, is now more than ever needful." Maynard Mack

+ Yale R n s 30:610 spring '41 250w

DAKE, HENRY CARL, and DE MENT, JACK
A. Fluorescent light and its applications; incl. location and properties of fluorescent materials. 256p il $3 Chemical pub. co.

535.3 Fluorescence (W) 41-9037

"A theoretical and practical exposition of fluorescence and similar phenomena." (Sub-title) Contents: Historical aspects of luminescence; Radiation—color—perception; Types of luminescence; Theory of luminescence; Methods of examination and technic; Sources of ultraviolet radiations; The fluorescent minerals; The radioactive minerals; Luminescence of gems; Some notable fluorescent collections; Uses of ultraviolet light. Bibliography. Indexes.

"A serious defect in the book is the inadequacy and incompleteness of both subject and author indexes. . . Although the authors have extensive literature references throughout the text, these are made in such a manner that the reader desiring further information is practically helpless. . . This reviewer was somewhat confused to find a scant two-page discussion of fluorescent lighting, certainly an important development, included in a 5½ page section on Criminology, and a section on theatrical applications almost indistinguishable from the section on pharmaceuticals. In spite of these faults, the book remains of interest to mineralogists and the layman who desires a broad and elemental discussion of the subject." J. R. Callahan

+ — Chem & Met Eng 48:149 Jl '41 320w
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41
N Y New Tech Bks 26:23 Ap '41

DAKES, JOHN A., tr. See Bible. New Testament. Gospels. Christ Jesus

DALE, EDGAR. How to read a newspaper. 178p il $1.40 Scott

070 Newspapers. Press 41-51952

"Developed from an experimental edition (1937) growing out of responses to 5,000 questions from high-school pupils concerning what they wanted to know about newspapers. The main purposes of this book are (1) to help make one aware of the influence of the newspaper on one's information, attitudes and actions; (2) to help one build up standards for judging newspapers; (3) to help one select and read intelligently the newspapers that meet these standards; (4) to help one discover one's individual and social responsibility for improving the press in America." (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

School & Society 54:256 S 27 '41 80w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 20w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Three from Greenways; a story of children from England; with drawings by Gertrude Howe [Introd. by May Lamberton Becker]. 63p $1 Scribner

(W) 41-51658

The story of a little English girl and her two brothers who came to live in America for the duration of the second World war.

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"It could not be simpler—or better. It moves to laughter and to tears, it has the humor, happiness and heartache, all in one, of the most touching gesture in national history—sending great numbers of English children to welcoming homes, beyond the sea but still within the circle of a common cause. The book could easily have been so wrong, and it is so completely right! It has a child's outlook, a child's vocabulary, and the strong story interest that keeps a child reading and makes him remember. I wish every American child could read it before the year is out."

M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 23 '41 400w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:207 My '41 90w

"This is a timely little story from which the horrors of the war have been omitted. Your sympathies are aroused by the cheerfulness and bravery of these small visitors who believe 'There'll Always Be an England.' For boys and girls eight to ten." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:308 Ap 1 '41 80w

"The story is written with sympathy, and though one feels the children are types rather than individuals, the account of their experiences will give to child readers on this side of the Atlantic some realization of how the War has affected the lives of many boys and girls of their own age." A. T. E.

+ — N Y Times p10 Je 8 '41 240w

"A timely and warmhearted story of English refugee children in this country, well written for a fifth-grade audience."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 24 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 300w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Wings around South America; with pictures by Katherine Milhous. 158p $2.50 Scribner

918 South America—Description and travel

—Juvenile literature. Aeronautics—Flights

—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51935

An illustrated travelogue of a South American trip, mainly by airplane, taken by the author and the illustrator. Some of the plane stops were Barranquilla, Panama, Quito, Arequipa, Rio de Janeiro and Para, and some of the countries visited were Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil and Trinidad, 14,000 miles in all. Will be useful as supplementary material in geography. For grades five to seven.

Booklist 38:82 N 1 '41

"Miss Milhous's pictures—watercolor sketches in six colors and pencil drawings—have the convincing quality of being on the spot. The best way to write travel books for children is to create in the child a sense that he is traveling. That is the value of this journey. . . With all the first-hand information, all the brilliant pictures, the book's greatest value is the direction of both toward understanding, toward knowing how to get along with South America. For that reason, though ten-year-olds will grasp the book, they should not keep it away from their elders." M. L. Becker

+ Books p11 N 2 '41 320w

"We rate it tops among juvenile travel books for Miss Alice Dalgliesh is sensitive to atmosphere and beauty and contrives to make her readers companions to her pleasure and her friendliness. Miss Katherine Milhous in her pencil sketches and lovely full page watercolors has caught the same mood. Everyone in the family from nine to ninety is bound to enjoy it." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:376 D '41 130w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 100w

"Lovely water colors and clever line drawings make vivid the highlights of their journey, as told by Miss Dalgliesh with sympathy and appreciation. While they were less than ninety hours actually in the air, the plane dominates the picture. This beautiful book will be valuable in schools and libraries." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:469 N '41 90w

"This is excellent supplementary material to use with the two books by Peck and Rothery, for it is an entertaining account of the historical backgrounds of the various countries and their national heroes; also of present-day customs and affairs. It does create a better understanding of South American people, and therefore is recommended for grades five to seven; for large collections." J. E. Wooster

DALGLIESH, ALICE—Continued
+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 30w

"Lacks personality." Raymond Holden
Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 40w

DALLINGER, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Recollections of an old fashioned New Englander. 277p $2 Round table

B or 92 Massachusetts—Politics and government. U.S.—Politics and government 41-22342

Autobiography of a Massachusetts lawyer and politician. Mr Dallinger was for a number of years a member of the Massachusetts legislature, later he was sent to Congress, and he now holds an appointment as Judge of the United States Customs court.

Christian Century 58:1307 O 22 '41 120w

"Few churchmen write their autobiographies. Here is one who writes his and writes it well. It is the story of a man widely known in the church because of his connection with the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and his political achievements. His story would be an inspiration to our young men could we induce them to read it." J. H. Melish

+ Churchman 156:16 Ja 1 '42 700w

"Once in a while popular skepticism about a politician's integrity gets a lusty punch amidships. The latest blow of this kind is struck by Frederick W. Dallinger. . . Fate decreed that state and national law making rather than university exposition should engage his eager mind. It is a fascinating story he tells of his political climb. Jack and the beanstalk are kindergarten stuff beside the Dallinger career."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 3 '41 550w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Murders in volume 2. 308p $2 Farrar

41-3115

Detective story.

Booklist 37:361 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"Miss Daly, whose admirable work you may have sampled in 'Unexpected Night' and 'Deadly Nightshade,' has turned in a four-star job this time, no fooling." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 9 '41 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 40w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:477 Ap 7 '41 90w

"The plot is indeed complex. But the book is delightfully original and suavely written, with lively characters and a vivid scene. This is Elizabeth Daly's third mystery novel. They are all excellent." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '41 310w

"Very, very good."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Mr 15 '41 70w

"Crackerjack idea, involving poison murder, well-concealed tribal skeletons, some priceless N. Y. aristocrats, titillative erudition, and dexterous detecting. Among the best."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 8 '41 50w

Time 37:104 Ap 7 '41 30w

DALY, ELIZABETH. The street has changed. 302p $2.50 Farrar

41-20046

The street is in New York city, near Central Park; the time is from 1889 to the present. The changes which take place in the street, and in the lives of the people who live there are described, and their effects upon the life of Fay Beacham, whose family occupied one of the old houses. Fay's main interest is the theater, and thru the story of her life on the stage and after she retires, forty years of the New York theater is mirrored.

"Miss Daly manages the varied threads of story with the orderly precision which betokens a novelist disciplined by the exactions of mystery fiction, and brings to life the era of gaslight and horse cab." George Conrad

+ Books p12 O 26 '41 300w

"For all its leaps through time, the story is not jerky. It has a firm unity and continuity, and is told with subtlety, wit and sometimes clever indirection. Yet it is always perfectly clear. Like Sardou's well-made play, to which it refers, it is deftly planned and neatly finished, and people who have read Miss Daly's mystery stories will be pleased to see her again applying her skill to fastening each loose end. In its research into the past, its solid plot, its bright, illuminating dialogue it is a book for adult entertainment." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p34 O 5 '41 650w

"Recommended for inveterate first-nighters."

+ New Yorker 17:101 O 11 '41 70w

"Miss Daly's thesis may very well be true. However, neatly contrived and fitted as her novel is, she remarkably fails to communicate to the reader any of the glow and glamor to which her characters are evidently in thrall. Consequently, it is difficult for the reader, himself so untouched by the reported magic, to accept its announced dominion over the lives of the people in the book. This fact tends to thwart any very lively interest in Miss Daly's novel." Francis Smyth

+ Sat R of Lit 24:33 O 18 '41 350w

DAME, LAWRENCE. Yucatan. 374p il $3 Random house

917.26 Yucatan. Mayas (W) 41-17261

An account of the author's visits to Yucatan and a picture of the ways of life among the modern descendants of the ancient Mayas.

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

"A rare book for the adventurous." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 90w

"Mr. Dame is a Boston journalist. His book has almost all the faults a travel book can have, and yet it not only powerfully asserts itself as one reads but vigorously survives in one's memory." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 153:258 S 20 '41 500w

"Mr. Dame's jovially written book, with its magnificent photographs, will make its readers feel as though they were actually in Yucatan, milling about among its people and gazing at its ancient ruins, both pre-Spanish and post-Spanish. There are humor and charm aplenty in these pages, peppered here and there with pleasantly hay-wire ideas as, for instance, pages 56 to 60, where Mr. Dame expresses his ideas as to the Maya language in a manner which has a certain mad reasonableness that will convince many who are not professional philologists. Mr. Dame has the happy faculty of getting on well with all kinds of people, as a result of which he makes them actually live." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p11 S 28 '41 390w

DANA, HARVEY EUGENE. Ephesian tradition; an oral source of the Fourth gospel. 175p $1 Central seminary press, 31st & Barnett, Kansas City, Kan.

226.5 Bible. New Testament. St John 40-35383

"The author of this modest little volume has approached the question of the Fourth Gospel from a new angle, viz., that of form criticism. After outlining his views of the growth of the three Synoptic gospels and classifying nine different forms of materials, produced in the pregospel days by early Christians, from which these gospels were framed, he turns to John and argues that precisely the same phenomena are to be found there. . . . [Certain] sections, he argues, are all to be seen as made up of pericopae which for the most part are the outgrowth of evangelic tradition, although their organization and often the connective tissue show the handiwork of the author. This material was not evolved by the author. It was for the most part tradition which had grown up in Ephesus. He sees in it a Palestinian substratum brought from Jerusalem via Caesarea (the transfer station for Jerusalem tradition to the gentile world as Antioch was for the Galilean), a Pauline stratum, and an Ephesian stratum reflecting local issues." Crozer Q

"The student will learn much from this book, although, if he is like me, he will feel constant, if not continuous, grounds for vigorous dissent." M. S. Enslin

+ — Crozer Q 18:169 Ap '41 700w

"The book is interesting and provocative and should certainly have had better treatment at the hand of its publisher than it received. It is difficult to imagine a poorer job of proofreading." M. E. Andrews

+ — J Religion 21:100 Ja '41 250w

DANE, GEORGE EZRA, and DANE, MRS BEATRICE J. Ghost town; il. by Fred Ludekens. 311p $3.50 Knopf

979.4 Frontier and pioneer life—California. California—Gold discoveries 41-20686

"Wherein is told much that is wonderful, laughable, and tragic, and some that is hard to believe, about life during the gold rush and later in the town of Columbia on California's mother lode, as remembered by the oldest inhabitants and here for the first time set down." Subtitle

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"It would be difficult to find anywhere a richer collection of folk material. . . . Perhaps the only safe way is to take 'Ghost Town' wholly as fiction. Certainly that is the approach this reviewer would recommend. When the Danes note that their 'Old Timer's' tales are, as they put it, 'genuine,' they merely mean that they are typical of the kind of thing told as of the time concerning which they write. Taken in this way, 'Ghost Town' will provide sufficient amusement. Taken as history, even the smallest parts of it, the book provides far too many pitfalls for the gullible." J. H. Jackson

+ — Books p4 N 30 '41 1200w

"The book is rich with quotable passages. No one should turn to it for a sober, consecutive history of a mining town. But the town itself is there, recaptured and worth visiting." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p55 D 7 '41 1300w

DANGERFIELD, GEORGE. Victoria's heir; the education of a prince. 345p il $3 Harcourt

B or 92 Edward VII, king of Great Britain (W) 41-15118

Biography of Albert Edward, prince of Wales from 1841 to 1901, who became Edward VII, of England in 1901, and reigned until his death in 1910. The book contains also a brief but spirited picture of European politics and history during the years up to 1901. Index.

Booklist 38:34 O 1 '41

"Mr. Dangerfield has revealed scholarship and imagination of a high order. He may have opened a rewarding outlook upon recent history. His lucidity of mind and his sardonic wit entitle him to immediate recognition as Strachey's heir." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p5 S 7 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:1146 S 17 '41 160w

"Mr. Dangerfield shows himself well-informed on the slow movements for reform, as industrialism began to establish an iron grip on Victorian England. The unusual stress he contrives to throw on the social phase, as well as on the political developments that were already pointing to today's great struggle, adds fresh interest to a well-covered theme. Some first-class material is served in a disjointed, kaleidoscopic form—but it is there."

H. J. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p22 S 4 '41 600w

"There are fine sketches of Victoria herself and of Prince Albert. Throughout, the sinister figure of the rapacious Bismarck thunders on the horizon. There are splendid word pictures, too, of Disraeli, Gladstone, Palmerston, and of Alexandra. Mr. Dangerfield gives us no back stairs history of gossip and boudoir tales. Rather he has dramatized the great historical changes that have made us all heirs of Victoria." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:21 S 1 '41 200w

"When Mr. Dangerfield is not writing with the 'Oh's' and 'Ah Yes,' the exclamation and interrogation points of this reminiscent form of narrative, he proves the lucidity of his thought and his English by making the Schleswig-Holstein question comparatively intelligible." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 34:521 S 19 '41 550w

"One of the most satisfying biographies of Prince Bertie, attractively written, with revealing pages on slum conditions. A reminder of the strength of the Strachey tradition. Deserves wide reading."

+ New Repub 105:331 S 22 '41 40w

"Mr. Dangerfield's Edward is a man of flesh and blood, authentic and intimate. But the presentation cannot be defined as portraiture. For a portrait in its frame excludes all save the one personality and his immediate surroundings, whereas here we have the Prince, subordinate in stature because he appears in a vast perspective—a kind of pageant by Paul Veronese, crowded with the courtiers of destiny, ascending and descending the marble staircase of success and failure." P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p3 Ag 31 '41 1600w

"Entertaining, penetrating, and written with a touch of ironic aplomb. Looks like one of the best biographies of the new season."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Ag 30 '41 50w

"Readers of Mr. Dangerfield's 'The Strange Death of Liberal England' [Book Review Digest, 1935] will seize eagerly upon this book. They will not have forgotten the nimbleness with which he courses over the tumbled rocks of history. . . . Above all, they will read him for his style. He has taught them where to recognize finish. 'Victoria's Heir' will not disappoint their expectations; for Mr. Dangerfield has made himself at home in an epoch of western history peculiarly congenial to his talents. . . . Mr. Dangerfield would have set his talents to a more substantial end had he not doffed sober writing for that cinematic treatment which Carlyle bequeathed to movie directors and to so many, many writers of biography and history. The weakness of the book lies not in its scholarship but in its method. . . . We regret that Mr. Dangerfield has chosen not to make of 'Victoria's Heir' a prelude to his earlier and more thoughtful book." L. P. Curtis

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:5 S 13 '41 1200w

"Zestfully, without flippancy, with a solid understanding of the necessary facts and with a real gift for presenting them, the author has written an absorbing book—far more absorbing than might have been supposed possible considering the rather ordinary man it is about."

Donald Derby

+ Springfield Republican p10 Ag 28 '41 950w

DANGERFIELD, GEORGE—Continued

Time 38:84 S 22 '41 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Yale R n s 31:418 winter '42 1000w

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. Whampoa; il. by Kurt Wiese. 273p $2 Crowell

(W) 41-16601

Story of China in the days of the clipper ships. Two young Americans sail for China in order to search for the father of one of them, a sea captain who disappeared from his homeward bound ship. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"An exciting tale which also gives a lively picture of the China that Westerners discovered a century ago."

+ Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 40w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

Wis Lib Bul 37:180 N '41

DANIELL, RAYMOND. Civilians must fight; with a pref. by W. Somerset Maugham. 322p $2.50 Doubleday

940.542 World war, 1939—Great Britain. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 41-26087

Reminiscences of an American correspondent, in charge of the London office of the New York Times. His book he says is an attempt "to portray what civilian life is like in a country fighting for its existence against the most ruthless military power that has been seen in modern times. It is not a diary or a textbook of civilian defense. It is rather an account of ordinary life in London, both before and after the Blitzkrieg on England began." Page 3-4

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"Raymond Daniell has written a remarkably restrained book about his year and a half in the British capital. His story gains, however, from its understatement. His calmness reflects accurately the reaction of the British people to the worst ordeal that has ever been visited upon so many people at one time." Frank Kelley

+ Books p7 N 23 '41 340w

"Of particular interest to Defense Councils and individuals engaged in convincing the American people that the essence of civilian defense against air warfare is preparation and organization." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 130w

"This narrative is brief, swift and simple. It avoids the melodramatic and the spectacular like the plague. It has few literary graces, but possesses the rare virtue of conciseness. Most undecorated prose, for the lack of this virtue, is tedious; it is perhaps enough to say that Mr. Daniell is the reverse of tedious. Nor is he in the least didactic." George Dangerfield

+ N Y Times p9 D 7 '41 800w

DANIELS, HARRIET MCDUAL. Nine-mile swamp; a story of the Loomis gang. 412p $2.50 Penn

41-51844

Story of the Loomis family, horse traders and passers of counterfeit money, living in up state New York before the Civil war. In 1802 the original "Wash" Loomis bought a frontier farm, which included the nine mile swamp, and proceeded to raise a large family. This tale of his descendants takes place in the 1850's and ends with the murder of the then leader of the Loomis gang and the near-lynching of the one straight member of the family.

Booklist 37:546 Jl 15 '41

"The climax is dramatic and marked with scenes of violence in which the gang is vanquished. But even in defeat [the Loomises] are not deprived of the reader's sympathy. They claim the homage one always pays to merry rogues with a true gambling spirit." David Tilden

+ Books p6 Je 22 '41 300w

"This beguiling romance has its exciting moments and several colorful scenes of country fairs and rural jollifications." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p15 Je 29 '41 600w

"As a pleasant example of what used to be known as hammock reading 'Nine-Mile Swamp' will while away a vacation afternoon pleasantly, but as a presentation of past times and of human nature it leaves something to be desired."

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 240w

DANIELS, JONATHAN. Tar heels; a portrait of North Carolina. (Sovereign states ser) 347p $3 Dodd

917.56 North Carolina

(W) 41-51920

The author of A Southerner Discovers the South (Book Review Digest, 1938) who is a native of North Carolina, has written this story of his state—its historical beginnings, its present-day peculiarities, and its place in the scheme of the United States. In order to give a sense of history he describes his own visit to Roanoke Island to see Paul Green's dramatic pageant of the Lost Colony. He conveys in quietly written prose, spiced with plenty of anecdote, the characteristics of various parts of the state, the aspects of state politics, journalism, education, cookery, racial relations, agriculture, industry, etc. Index.

"A descriptive book that, by what seems the pertinent test, must be among the most successful ever written. The test referred to is simply the degree to which it makes the outsider feel that he has long lived in a region he may never have seen, or makes him feel that not having lived in it is his misfortune. Mr. Daniels accomplishes his result chiefly by the neatest possible use of the method of describing through narrative; he converts his album of emotions in time into illuminating anecdote." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic O '41 300w

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"Jonathan Daniels's new book is a notable volume, although it is rumored that the author cherishes some doubt that he will be permitted to reside anywhere between Murphy and Manteo, once the work comes to the attention of his fellow citizens. There is, however, no sufficient reason for indignation on the part of the Tar Heels; for every acid line in the book there is a mellow page. . . His portrait of North Carolina is a handsome one, with no more shadows than are required to accentuate the high lights." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p3 S 28 '41 1200w

"The publishers were fortunate in their selection of the author for the volume on the 'Long State.' Mr. Daniels is a native with strong home ties, and he has traveled widely enough to give him perspective. He has shown his capacity for this type of writing in his previous volumes. He is a first rate reporter, and while a loyal native son who can become lyrical on occasion, he is not blind to the social cancers which fester in its body." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 35:228 D 19 '41 700w

"Recommended." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:791 S 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz

Nation 153:544 N 29 '41 700w

"Mr. Daniels has brought off a difficult job with admirable success and it is to be hoped that his book will be widely read. The general series, of which it is the second volume, appearing under the Dodd, Mead imprint and called

The Sovereign State Series, promises to be the very best of its kind." Hamilton Basso

+ New Repub 105:563 O 27 '41 650w

"It is a happy event that this second volume in the Sovereign States series chances to deal with North Carolina, and that Mr. Daniels paints the portrait. The Tar Heel State is today the most interesting of all in that richly interesting region which was the Confederacy. . . Mr. Daniels has set a high standard and North Carolina should be grateful to him." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p10 O 5 '41 1400w

"A smart piece of work, but the author seems to go a trifle easy on the home folks now and again."

+ — New Yorker 17:103 O 11 '41 80w

"It isn't necessary to be a North Carolinian or even kin to one to be stimulated and entertained by Mr. Daniels's book about his state. Art for art's sake is always cropping out in Jonathan and embarrassing as this may be to so earnest a sociologist, it makes him readable where others are not." J. T. Graves II

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 O 11 '41 550w

"Daniels matter-of-factly sidestepped all the customary extremes of commentary on the Southern scene ranging from the overripe mammy-song grotesqueries to the fetid, social-fungi school of Faulkner. In localizing the Southern scene in his latest book and focusing exclusively on the Manteo-to-Murphy and Virginia to South Carolina area, his prose is graceful, fluid, almost seductive, yet curiously disciplined and restrained. When bitterness creeps in . . . it is not a lashing, vindictive scorn and contempt so much as a mature, half-melancholy reflection on the evil that men do and how, eternally, it lives after them." R. M. Hodges

+ Social Forces 20:273 D '41 750w

"A charming, warm and enlightening book. Both its strength and weakness may be traced to the fact that the editor of the Raleigh News and Observer gets around a good deal, mentally and geographically."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 27 '41 1050w

DANIELS, JOSEPHUS. Editor in politics. 644p il $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government.
North Carolina—Politics and government

(W) 41-1166

The second volume of the reminiscences of Joseph Daniels, Secretary of the Navy under Woodrow Wilson and ambassador to Mexico in Franklin Roosevelt's administration, covers the years from 1893 and 1912. In national politics this period embraced the second Cleveland administration and the rise of William Jennings Bryan to the leadership of the Democratic party. It was also a period of personal journalism, during which Daniels was plunged deeply in state politics, as editor of the crusading paper, The News and Observer, of Raleigh, North Carolina. Index.

Reviewed by F. L. Paxson

Am Hist R 46:995 Jl '41 190w

"This second installment, like the first, is amazingly candid and untrammelled; it teems with anecdotes of both celebrities and nobodies by the score; and without pretending to be systematic politico-social history it floodlights a hundred caves and crannies of both national history and local." W. F.

+ Atlantic F '41 250w

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

"The book is frankly an autobiography; it does not pretend to be a judicial and impartial history. A good many of its estimates of men and events are questionable. But its portrayal of the temper of the times is right, with an accuracy that could not have been achieved except by a man who had lived through those times and played an important part in them. . . North Carolina is fortunate in having this chronicle of a difficult period of her history written by a man so obviously honest and so patently anxious to be fair that the most cynical must at least take what he says into consideration." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p2 Ja 19 '41 1150w

"Mr. Daniels has the superlative gift of the narrator. He is keenly observing, with a retentive memory. He is preserving for his friends of the South, as well as for thousands everywhere, an intimate and almost priceless record of the long years of his public service." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 17 '41 550w

Reviewed by James Orrick

Nation 152:760 Je 28 '41 440w

"The second volume is off the same piece of goods [as the first]—plain homespun, all wool and a yard wide, dyed in butternut with the garment cut on the dining room table, hand-sewed and no shoddy. . . This book, written in the naïveté of a soldier telling his story at the fireside, yet glowing with the remembrances of the days of combat, is a great piece of American writing, great in its entire unpretentiousness, great in its native tang, its unlit-erary flavor, its honest smell of the soil, its simple language of combat." W. A. White

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 26 '41 1700w

Pratt p6 autumn '41

Reviewed by O. G. Villard

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 8 '41 700w

"Delightful and historically valuable."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 750w

DANZ, LOUIS. Personal revolution and Picasso; foreword by Merle Armitage. 165p $2.75 Longmans

759.6 Picasso, Pablo (Pablo Ruys). Esthetics

"This is an attempt to evaluate Picasso's 'Guernica,' which is reproduced as the frontispiece, and to draw from it certain fundamental principles about aesthetics." Nation

"What Mr. Danz has to say is illuminating, but his style, much influenced by Miss Stein, for all its learned allusions and esoteric vocabulary, can only be described as baby talk. If a man has clear ideas, as Mr. Danz seems to have, why should he hesitate to put them clearly? It wouldn't make so long a book, of course, and it might not impress the haute Bohème. But must a philosopher now be always either pedantic or precious, and never a man of sense?"

— + Nation 153:261 S 20 '41 100w

Pratt p20 autumn '41

Theatre Arts 25:472 Je '41 360w

DARBY, ADA CLAIRE. Columbine Susan; with 17 il. in black-and-white by Howard Simon. 274p $1.75 Stokes

40-33278

Susan was the youngest daughter of the governor of Colorado Territory. Fearing trouble with the Indians the governor sent his family to the mountains for the summer, and while there Susan's playmates were Maggie and her St Bernard dog. The story of their summer is for girls from eight to twelve. The time is during the Civil war.

"The historical stories of Ada Claire Darby earn their popularity on several counts. They develop the rich, often romantic background of regions not so well provided with stories as New England. They are based on first-hand material and fired by love of life in St. Joseph, Mo., and points west. Each one centers in a little girl with a distinct personality other little girls like. All three combine in this chronicle of small Susan's experiences." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 31 '41 270w

DARBY, A. C.—Continued

"The friendship between the two little girls is quite the nicest part of the story. You will like Columbine Susan and sympathize with her ability to get into mischief with no apparent effort on her part." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 65:768 S 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 40w
Wis Lib Bul 37:96 My '41

DARBY, HENRY CLIFFORD. The draining of the Fens. 312p il maps $5.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

942.5 Fens, England. Drainage [41-4658]

"[This volume] tells of the transfer of the [reclamation] problem from a parochial to a national basis. The seventeenth century saw the beginnings of a comprehensive scheme, a scheme that has had to contend with manifold difficulties—psychological as well as physical. As the Dutch contractor Bradley saw it, 'the chief obstacle to draining lay in the imagination of men's minds.' Even so, the problem was beyond the science of the day. The chief item in the legacy of difficulty bequeathed by a quarter of a millennium of drainage projects arises from the lowering of the peat surface—as a result of shrinkage and wastage due to bacterial action—something that was not foreseen by the great Vermuyden or the other drainage engineers." Geog R

Reviewed by A. P. Usher
Am Econ R 30:854 D '40 210w

Reviewed by N. Neilson
Am Hist R 46:603 Ap '41 350w

"Dr. Darby's work is an outstanding piece of research, well documented and illustrated."
+ Geog R 31:164 Ja '41 170w

"Mr. Darby is to be congratulated on his remarkable study of the Fens. His every historical statement is supported by reference and selected with a real grasp of essentials. A chapter showing why the reclamation of the Fens became a national rather than a local matter would have helped in the study of his research. We should also like to know more of the Fenland peoples and their change from mainly pastoral to almost purely agricultural life. . . . Can we stimulate Mr Darby to tell us, out of the abundance of his knowledge, a little of the more human side of the Fenlands, leaving for a time the technique of research?" J. S. Gardiner

+ Nature 145:649 Ap 27 '40 950w

"In the modern volume there are questions which remain unanswered. Mr. Darby explains that lack of capital threw the business of reclamation into the hands of the 'undertakers' and 'adventurers' who are characteristic of the seventeenth century, but he does not attack the interesting problem of exactly how these great works were financed. On such questions as this much still remains to be done, but he has blazed a trail and has placed not only historians but all who are interested in the changing face of England in his debt for a fascinating and learned book." Eileen Power

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:538 Ap 20 '40 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p119 Mr 9 '40 400w

DARBY, HENRY CLIFFORD. Medieval fenland. 200p il maps $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

942.5 Fens, England [41-4659]

"[This and Mr Darby's other volume] tell the story of an enterprise unique in Britain, the reclamation of 1300 square miles of fenlands—the Fens. 'A bird's eye view of the Fenland in the Middle Ages would have revealed a country-side ranging in character from open pastures and meadows through reedy swamps to the pools of many meres connected by a confused network of channels. In dry summers, when the edges of the marsh dried up, the extent of pasture was greater; while in winter, water might cover almost the entire face of the country. . . . The prospect today is very different. . . . Dr. Darby's story begins and ends on a note of inquiry: when did reclamation start? what still remains to be done? In the introductory chapter on Pre-Domesday conditions . . . he briefly notes the possibility of artificial drainage in Roman times. . . . The first clear picture of the fenland is given by the Domesday Survey. . . . There were civilizing influences at work, notably from the churches and monasteries, and if there was isolation and individualism it is clear that coöperative enterprise was not lacking. A tax survey of the fourteenth century reveals a remarkable progress made in utilization of the fenland." Geog R

Reviewed by A. P. Usher
Am Econ R 30:854 D '40 210w

Reviewed by N. Neilson
Am Hist R 46:603 Ap '41 350w
Geog R 31:163 Ja '41 400w

Reviewed by J. S. Gardiner
Nature 145:649 Ap 27 '40 950w

"Mr. Darby has told a good story with a wealth of well-chosen illustration and lucid explanation. It is perhaps captious to say that he writes sometimes as a geographer rather than as an historian. His strength lies in his power of description, but he sometimes fails to answer, or indeed to ask, questions with which the economic historian would like him to deal." Eileen Power

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:538 Ap 20 '40 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p119 Mr 9 '40 400w

DARBY, RUTH. If this be murder. 272p $2 Doubleday

41-6172

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p28 My 11 '41 160w

"Grade B would be about the proper rating for this mystery." I. A.
N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 200w

"Sprightly people, snappy dialogue, rich background, and plot that is pretty well doped out. Gets by."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 10 '41 40w

DARGAN, MRS OLIVE (TILFORD) (FIELDING BURKE, pseud). From my highest hill; Carolina mountain folks; with 50 photographs by Bayard Wootten. rev ed 221p $3.50 Lip-pincott

41-17035

"Stories of the Southern mountain people by an author who has lived among them. Revised from an earlier book called Highland Annals [Book Review Digest, 1925] and illustrated with beautiful photographs of people and places. The locality is in the region of the Great Smoky mountains, now known to many tourists." Wis Lib Bul

Books p21 S 14 '41 30w

"The book's attractive format makes the reader at once receptive to the author's portrayal of the intoxicating beauty of the Carolina mountains and the deep sincerity of her relations with her highland neighbors. . . . The photographs substantiate to a remarkable degree the author's interpretation. Here are no dirt eaters, pellagra-ridden, and Jukes families, but men, women and children with strong, intelligent faces and sturdy bodies, against the background of their cabins and cornfields and the wild beauty of the Smoky mountains." L. B. Hill

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 700w
Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

DARK, ELEANOR (O'REILLY) (MRS ERIC DARK). The timeless land. 499p $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-18613

A historical novel which tells the story of the early years of the colony at Sydney, Australia. The story is told from two main points of view, the reactions of the natives to the white men, and the varied feelings of the settlers, convicts and government officials among the whites.

"Much of the story is told through the eyes and thoughts of the aborigines, and this technique is at once an asset and a handicap. It brings into the picture a psychology and a hostility that are essential to any unromantic version of the colony. Yet at the same time it faces the reader with the necessity of using a glossary and of trying to sort out odd-sounding names and idioms. Finally—and this may be a fallacy on my part—it always seems to me that when a white author writes about the aborigines he puts on an act of impersonation that is just a little short of being lifelike. . . It seems to me that Mrs. Dark is clearly at her best when she is writing of the country which she knows like the palm of her hand, and in her magnificent portrait of Governor Phillip. There one can have nothing but praise." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic N '41 170w

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"Much credit is due the author for resisting the besetting sin of historical fiction—chocolate-icing the unhandsome past with gaudy romance, or the corollary sin, chocolate-sprinkling it with heroics and attractive adventuresomeness. There is, moreover, no enameling of British conduct or imperialist iniquities. . . Not that Mrs. Dark is your furious realist; discretion plays its part—the veil, so to speak, is pierced without being torn down completely. But the truth is so patent that the author adds a preface to make clear that she is not advocating 'back to nature' or calling civilization irredeemable. 'The Timeless Land' is a rich reconstruction of one of the stranger segments of the strange past." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p5 O 5 '41 1100w

"This is fiction of epic quality, thrilling as a tale but with body that makes it akin to history."

+ Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 40w

"If anything stands in the way of 'The Timeless Land' taking rank as an Australian classic, it is the preponderance of interest devoted to the natives in an account of a primitive existence that is largely drawn from purely conventionalized impressions of bush life. Nevertheless, Mrs. Dark has found new things to say about Australia. She avoids all the over-reiterated detail of the Australian scene and introduces masses of fresh and interesting material in a mature style that breaks entirely with the old romantic frontier medium of the Adam Lindsay Gordon order that has governed so much of Australian literature hitherto." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 17 '42 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Eleanor Dark, author of several novels of modern Australia, has, in this reconstruction of its earliest history, far surpassed her earlier work in importance if not in style." E. P. Potter

+ Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 70w

"Miss Dark keeps our attention throughout a novel that must run to nearly a quarter of a million words." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '41 250w

"Mrs. Dark has something of the power of Isak Dinesen, a sheer respect for language and the rhythmical progress of sentences that is now too often derided by those with a social message to tell at any cost. This is a rare, bountiful book, rich with authentic history and the best of fiction." Hassoldt Davis

+ Nation 153:316 O 4 '41 650w

New Repub 105:517 O 20 '41 60w

"In this historical novel of the settlement of Australia, the stuff of epic drama is given a living expression that is nobly worthy of its subject. 'The Timeless Land' is a novel of towering stature, beautifully molded, soundly and broadly based, penetrating and challenging in its contribution to knowledge." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 O 5 '41 1550w

"The author has gone to great pains to fashion a complex, full-length narrative whose details are carefully based on the existing records, but I still cling to my old-fashioned notion that the reader (at the risk of a little boredom, of course) can always learn more about any part of the past from one or two good histories—plus, in this case, some reading in primitive anthropology." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:84 O 4 '41 200w

Pratt p12 D '41

"A novel of stern beauty and profound reality which unquestionably ranks among the best books of the year." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 O 4 '41 1000w

"Powerfully and poetically written, reflecting tolerance and insight, 'Timeless Land' should make a large impression on the reading public. A glossary of native terms clarifies some passages."

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 5 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p541 N 1 '41 900w

Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

DARROW, FLOYD LAVERN. Boys' own book of great inventions; rev. by Clarence J. Hylander. 417p il $2 Macmillan

608 Inventions (W) 41-51831

"Completely new chapters on radio, television, and movies have been added to cover the growth of inventions since 1918; other chapters have been reorganized to include new material." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1919.

Booklist 37:551 J1 15 '41

"Naturally the aircraft section is reconstructed and in general the whole book so overhauled that while keeping its good plan it has been brought abreast with new developments." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 22 '41 200w

"Excellent make-up. Recommended for ages eleven to fourteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:619 J1 '41 50w

DAS GUPTA, KEDARNATH. Essence of religions; comp. for the Fifth world parliament of faiths, 1940-1941. 208p $1.50 World fellowship of faiths, 49 W. 44th st, N.Y.

290 Religions 41-4705

"This little volume, compiled for the Fifth World Parliament of Faiths, sketches the main tenets of thirty-two religions, devoting five or six pages to each. While their points of disagreement are not entirely omitted, there is an evident intention to stress the features that are common. The author, a native of India, is widely known as a promoter of interfaith understanding." Christian Century

"The factual content of the book is too slight to permit it to have much value for students, but it serves the purpose of giving a conspectus of the world's religions, including some unfamiliar ones."

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 90w

Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 60w

DAUGHERTY, CHARLES MICHAEL. So sailors say; il. by [the author]. 186p $2 Holt 41-6043

"Davey's home is in Ohio and he comes to spend the Summer with his uncle and aunt, in the shore village of Watch Point, quite unversed in the ways of boats and the sea. He is called a landlubber by the village boys,

DAUGHERTY, C. M.—Continued
who laugh when they learn that his whole name is 'Davey Jones' and in general give him the cold shoulder. When he does have a chance to sail in a race, he disgraces himself by falling overboard. But Chips, the carpenter, is a friend in time of need. He encourages the boy to build his own boat and by the end of the Summer Davey's most persistent critics have become his friends." N Y Times

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson
Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 90w

"This is a first book that promises well. The author's style is pleasant and easy and he combines an interesting, swiftly moving tale with enough practical information about boat building and sailing to encourage any boy who lives near a pond to follow Davey's example and build a boat of his own." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p8 Je 29 '41 350w

DAUGHERTY, JAMES HENRY. Poor Richard; il. with lithographs in two colors by the author. 159p $2.50 Viking

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature (W) 41-52011

Biography of Benjamin Franklin, from boyhood to his death in 1790. Written and illustrated for young readers, but would be valuable in adult education classes.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"'Poor Richard' does not even need its lithographs to insure it a place in our libraries. For once, Mr. Daugherty the author has put the artist in the shade. His narrative is relatively brief and leaves out—as it must—much more than it puts in, but it gives the teens, or even younger readers, a vivid, coherent idea of Franklin as a person and as a force in his time." M. L. Becker
+ Books p9 N 2 '41 260w

"A full-length life of Franklin which gives young readers a vivid picture of the man and his myriad works, by reason of its skillful arrangement and its fine prose. When there are added to this Mr. Daugherty's lithographs blending into the heroic tone of the text, we get a book of enduring value." E. V. Wyatt
+ Cath World 154:379 D '41 60w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:466 N '41 60w

"James Daugherty's fine portrait of Benjamin Franklin, delightfully illustrated by the author, brings that wise and lovable great man right into our midst and gives us an insight into the 'many rooms in that luminous mind.'" E. J. Gray
+ Horn Bk M 17:476 N '41 40w

"An outstanding biography of a great American... This is a book which should be added to every library collection. Recommended for readers fourteen and over." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 50w

"Written with a sweep and verve worthy of its subject, and brilliantly illustrated in Daugherty's favorite tans, greens, and blacks. To give so much of the feel of Franklin's America and so much, too, of this many-sided human being in so few words (159 pages in large type) is an achievement. Also a distinguished job of bookmaking."
+ New Yorker 17:145 D 6 '41 60w

"Excellent. Can be read by young and old." Amy Loveman
+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 40w

DAUGHERTY, JAMES HENRY. il. See Bible. Old Testament. Genesis. In the beginning

DAVENPORT, FRANCIS GARVIN. Cultural life in Nashville on the eve of the Civil war. 232p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

917.68 Nashville, Tennessee 41-11227

A study based on newspaper and other contemporary materials, of the intellectual and social life of a southern town during the years of passage from the status of frontier post to important railroad center. Partial contents: Educational opportunities; Nashville physicians and medical science; Religious leaders in pulpit and press; The Nashville theater; Pens and printers' ink; Nashville street scenes. Bibliography. Index.

"It is with the author's methodology, and not with his narrative data—most of which is based upon materials drawn from Nashville newspapers and magazines and from the records of the various colleges and religious organizations of which he treats—that this reviewer disagrees. Here and there the narrative sparkles and informative bits of Americana creep out. But the study is largely an attempt to prove that Nashville, after casting off most of the blighting influences of the frontier, had developed by 1860 a 'maturing culture.'" G. G. Johnson
+ Ann Am Acad 218:248 N '41 600w

Books p35 N 23 '41 130w

"Dr. Davenport, head of the department of history at Transylvania College, has written with a pleasing faculty for combining the paraphernalia and quality of scholarship with a realization of the quaint and the human values making for readability." E. J. Wrather
+ Christian Century 58:1379 N 5 '41 900w

DAVEY, MILDRED A.; SMITH, ELIZABETH MANLEY, and MYERS, THEODORE RAYMOND. Everyday occupations. 372p il $1.68 Heath

371.425 Profession, Choice of, Occupations 41-8735

Occupational information for high school pupils. Ten typical fields of work have been chosen, selected because, for the most part, they are within the experience of students. Contents: Agriculture; Forestry and fishing; Extraction of minerals; Manufacturing and mechanical industries; Transportation and communication; Trade; Public service; Professional service; Domestic and personal service; Clerical occupations. Index.

"The book should be a welcome addition to many secondary-school libraries. It should be among those considered in the adoption of a textbook for the course in occupations. Although the volume adds some organized information to the field of occupations, there still remains the task of establishing a body of facts and principles in order properly to advise youth about the choice of an occupation." F. W. Hendricks

+ School R 49:712 N '41 850w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 20w

"This study is not all inclusive, but it is a start in the right direction and one that definitely fills a much needed gap." J. J. Flynn
+ Social Studies 33:45 Ja '42 120w

DAVEY, WILLIAM. Dawn breaks the heart. 371p $2.75 Howell, Soskin

41-4131

Character study of a sensitive modern boy, picturing his life from childhood to the violent end of his unfortunate marriage to a charming, but abnormal, girl.

"'Dawn Breaks the Heart' has all the earmarks of catharsis by way of self-exploration. Therein lies the key to its strength and weakness. It seeks above all to capture, down to the last subtlety, the psychological and emotional reactions of two characters who are frustrate, maladjusted, and tangled in the most complex kind of relationship. For the most part it succeeds, affecting the reader like the sight of a man cauterizing his own wounds, or a surgeon baring diseased nerves with savage intensity; at other times it gropes in a quivering mass of viscera, prodding delicate tissue till all is torn and bleeding. It is distantly related to the school of Wolfe, pouring itself out in a turbulent variety, strident with feeling, effective though undisciplined." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p8 Mr 9 '41 700w

"As a whole 'Dawn Breaks the Heart' is a worthwhile piece of writing. There is no doubt about the author's pleasing and fairly integrated style. There is color, sincerity and intensity in the manner in which the fictional Mr. Davey welcomed the impact of life. The Philip of the book brushes aside the disillusion of his tattered world to face the future with his chin out. At this point he begins to be interesting. Mr. Davey's future is as promising." J. C. Skinner

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 280w

"'Dawn Breaks the Heart' is clearly the work of a writer of genuine ability and integrity." W. J. Gold

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 16 '41 700w

"Unfortunately, when Mr. Davey gets around to his hero's love affair and marriage, his people become rather uninterestingly queer and unbalanced. On the whole, though, a much-better-than-average first book."

+ — New Yorker 17:85 Mr 15 '41 90w

"Good as it is, the story lacks that final intensity that would make it really comparable with Wolfe. William Davey seems the victim of an environment in which intensity does not flourish. Sophistication, a sort of post-collegiate good taste, reduce his work."

+ — Time 37:94 Mr 10 '41 250w

DAVID, WADE DEWOOD. European diplomacy in the Near Eastern question, 1906-1909. 124p pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill.

949.6 Turkey—History. Eastern question (Balkan) 40-28765

"The author's general conclusion [is] that the Near Eastern events of 1906-1909 preluded the Balkan wars and the World War. Treated are some of the negotiations for Macedonia, both the judicial reforms and Grey's plan for an autonomous regime, which proved barren of salutary results; Aehrenthal's project of a railroad to Salonika, touched off by the earlier Russian plan for an Adriatic-Black Sea railway; the Young Turk revolt, Bulgarian independence, and the annexation of Bosnia. Hapsburg policy is featured." Ann Am Acad

"The evaluation is based on a veritable mass of material, including works in Turkish and Arabic, quarried exclusively, however, from printed sources. But the clumsy style, not unmarked by childish grammatical errors, and the fumbling organization, which reflects a failure to think the material through, make it difficult to determine exactly what generalizations the author desires to establish." Richard Burks

+ — Am Hist R 46:914 Jl '41 500w

"It is a well-documented and intensive study, with a little more breadth than is usually applied to this period in which the world was presented with the futile and ineffectual finale of the Concert of Europe." W. W. White

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:182 F '41 130w

"Commendable are the author's summary of the alternatives confronting Austria, his distinction between the capitulations and modern treaties, and his point that British influence in Turkey had steadily declined by the time Grey took over. The study lacks integration and nineteenth-century perspective, especially for British policy." V. J. Puryear

+ — Ann Am Acad 214:225 Mr '41 490w

DAVIDSON, HENRY MARTIN PERKINS. Good Christian men. 260p $2 Scribner

922 Church history. Christian biography 40-35708

"In sixteen chapters the chaplain of St. George's School endeavors by means of biographical sketches to trace through historic personalities the main movements of Christian history to form a suitable textbook for secondary schools or church school classes. Beginning with a chapter which describes the connection between the Old Testament prophets and Jesus of Nazareth, the author then goes on to Paul of Tarsus, the Graeco-Roman world as seen in its philosophical and religious thought, the martyrs, and concludes the early period with Athanasius, St. Augustine and Benedict of Nursia. The chapter on Cranmer is well done and does not ignore the facts. The final chapter considers modern figures such as Kagawa, Schweitzer, Bishop Brent, and the ecumenical movement." Churchman

"If biography is the art of tracing the development of an individual life . . . there is little biography here. If church history is an objective and perceptive account of the various forces, within and without, that have molded the Christian community, there is only inadequate history here. Yet the book has a distinct value of its own. . . . The boys were lucky to have so imaginative a chaplain. He has taken a subject often considered a field of dry bones and made it an arena of high adventure."

+ Christian Century 58:226 F 12 '41 190w

"A lot of territory is covered and the purpose of the author is well accomplished. There is a good reading list given." R. C. H.

+ Churchman 155:34 Ja 1 '41 150w

DAVIDSON, LEYBOURNE STANLEY PAT. RICK, and ANDERSON, IAN A. Textbook of dietetics. (Paul B. Hoeber bk) 324p $4.25 Harper

613.2 Diet in disease

"Based on lectures given to medical students at the University of Aberdeen. The book attempts to equip the general practitioner to give sound advice on the relation of diet to the maintenance of health and to undertake with confidence the dietetic treatment of disease. To that end the customary sections on diet in health and disease are preceded by a brief general survey of the nation's diet and a concise 'but for clinical purposes complete account of the physiology of nutrition.' Economic considerations are never lost sight of; for each disease there are given two samples of daily diets, one for the patient with a very limited income." Am J Pub Health

"To treat nutrition and dietetics so broadly in a book of modest size has necessitated careful selection of facts that are both well established and of practical importance." M. M. Heseltine

+ Am J Pub Health 31:1100 O '41 360w

"The eminently practical and up-to-date character of the work renders it a most desirable addition to the library of a medical man."

+ Nature 147:312 Mr 15 '41 300w

DAVIDSON, PHILIP. Propaganda and the American revolution, 1763-1783. 460p il $4 Univ. of N.C. press

973.31 U.S.—History—Revolution—Causes. Propaganda, American 41-3098

History of American propaganda before and during the Revolution. The approved methods of those days were pamphlets, newspapers, almanacs, broadsides, sermons, and word of mouth, all set in motion by a devoted small group of men, among them Franklin, Adams, and Thomas Paine. Bibliography. Index.

DAVIDSON, PHILIP—Continued

Reviewed by R. V. Harlow
Am Hist R 47:343 Ja '42 850w

Reviewed by Merle Curti
Am J Soc 47:512 N '41 300w

"Mr. Davidson's evidence of the propaganda superiority of the promoters of the Revolution over the Tories does not lead to new conclusions, but it does contribute to a better understanding of the nature of that superiority." C. W. Smith, Jr.

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:604 Je '41 220w

"This monograph is a welcome addition to the literature of the American Revolution. The student of politics will find it a good antidote to more conventional studies of the philosophy of the American Revolution." H. C. Peterson

+ Ann Am Acad 215:232 My '41 550w

Reviewed by A. H. Kelly
Canadian Hist R 22:202 Je '41 900w

"Professor Davidson's painstaking, occasionally repetitious survey includes also an account of the counter-efforts of the Tories. It is a useful work for students of the period, and for the general reader it contains a warning that much of what we know about the Revolution we have learned from revolutionary propaganda." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 8 '41 500w

Nation 153:261 S 20 '41 90w

"Even from an inadequate summary the many merits of the book may emerge. Chief among them, certainly, is that it adds a third dimension to the political thought of the Revolution—that it enables us to view the development of that thought in a deeper perspective than is afforded by the conventional accounts. It has, however, what may be called a defect of its qualities. To treat Thomas Paine and Samuel Adams as propagandists before the appearance of the term, is legitimate and enlightening; but to imply, as I think the author does, that such men were only propagandists is unfair and misleading." P. A. Palmer

+ New Eng Q 14:396 Je '41 850w

"The soundness of Professor Davidson's interpretations and the care with which he has checked his facts leave little to criticize. One might have suggested, however, more illustrations in a work such as this. The book emphasizes anew the decisive role of ideas in determining the outcome of armed conflict. Happily, in this instance the successful propagandists were on the side of liberty." S. I. Pomerantz

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 6 '41 1400w

"The arrangement of topics results at times in rather more repetition than is quite necessary. In general, the ordinary reader is likely to be impressed, perhaps unduly, with what may be called the pathology of the subject—with the devious and questionable forms of propaganda as distinguished from more straightforward and sincere statements of the case for opposition to the British king and parliament. It is hardly fair, however, to stress this point in view of the author's substantial contribution to the literature of the American Revolution. The book should also prove useful to the more general student of propaganda technique." E. B. Greene

+ Pol Sci Q 56:612 D '41 850w

Reviewed by Michael Kraus
Social Educ 5:474 O '41 600w

"One need not agree with all Mr. Davidson's analyses or conclusions, and one may regret the scantiness of his treatment of propaganda in the back-country, but his success in tackling such a broad and difficult field, and his services in advancing modern interpretation of the American Revolution as a movement in many fundamentals comparable to other major revolutions, constitute a solid achievement." C. L. Lord

+ Survey 77:229 Jl '41 370w

DAVIES, D. R. The two humanities. 256p $2.50
Harper [7s 6d Clarke, J.]

901 History—Philosophy. War and religion.
World war, 1939—Religious aspects. Kingdom of God 40-33267

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by E. T. Buehrer
Christian Century 58:326 Mr 5 '41 950w

"D. R. Davies, a pastor in an industrial parish in Wales, has written a provocative book. This book is punctuated with extreme and phrenetic language; it contains certain highly fantastic speculations set forth as if they were real solutions of extremely difficult problems. . . It will be unfortunate, however, if these eccentricities discourage the reader from going through the whole of the book. . . Strange as it may seem, after what has just been said, the author has things to say which are of great importance and in the midst of the fog clear patches of sky appear again and again. There can be no doubt that he is dealing with life and death issues as regards Christian faith and that he wrestles with them with courage and realism." Gordon Potrat

+ Crozer Q 18:180 Ap '41 370w

"This is a sober book for everyone who is willing to think deeply and soberly about ultimate problems. It is not for the superficial and the arrogant, although one could wish that it might stab some of the complacent wide awake." J. W. Ingles

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 13 '41 700w

DAVIS, ALLISON; GARDNER, BURLEIGH BRADFORD, and GARDNER, MRS MARY R. Deep South; a social anthropological study of caste and class; directed by W. Lloyd Warner. 558p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press
309.175 South—Social conditions. South—Economic conditions. Negroes—Moral and social conditions 41-23645

Study of the social system and the life of Negroes and whites in a small city in the "deep South." The investigation was carried out and written thru the cooperation of white and Negro authors, all trained sociologists and investigators. Index.

"'Deep South' should prove an effective background for the kind of thinking which leads to social change; it will enlist the responsible ardor of those to whom democratic ideals appeal, and provide them with a most necessary disciplined type of social analysis to replace the loose use of phrases like 'race prejudice' or 'social snobbery' or 'the masses' which have too long hobbled our thinking. A book that the socially literate must read at once." Margaret Mead

+ Books p38 D 7 '41 700w

"Extraordinarily comprehensive and penetrating study."

+ Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 110w

"Dr. John Dollard of the Institute of Human Relations of Yale University will probably have to give account in the hereafter for his crime of 'class distribution.' Mr. Allison Davis and the rest of the staff who split Negroes into a series of patterns as complex as the Theory of Complex Variables will have to give account for all this, too. And the average man of good will who wants to see something done about the South will be as confused after reading this book as he was the day before he picked it up." George Streator

Commonweal 35:321 Ja 16 '42 1100w

"Will doubtless occupy a place in the library of sociologists and students of American culture similar to that long held by Middletown. Its factual data concerning the caste system and class hierarchy of a typical trade center in the cotton counties are unrivalled in their completeness and are presented with the same scientific objectivity as that displayed by well-trained anthropologists who have investigated the natives of far-distant lands. Some of its conclusions and generalizations will most certainly rouse the ire of many an ardent Southerner, but its authors have actually performed a most valuable service to the Southland by courageously adopting the policy of hewing to the line and letting the chips fall where they may."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 O '41 480w

DAVIS, DON, pseud. See Dresser, D.

DAVIS, FORREST. The Atlantic system; the story of Anglo-American control of the seas. 363p $3 Reynal

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. Sea power 41-23738

"Study of the rise of American sea power and of its growing influence in the Atlantic system. Actually, the study is more than a history. It is a historical brief for the document written by Roosevelt and Winston Churchill on the deck of a battleship in the mists of the North Atlantic—a document which is already assuming its place in history under the name of the 'Atlantic Charter.' It accurately places that document and the organization of affairs which it embraces as the open and visible symbol of a group of nations prepared to resist by every possible means the extension of Axis domination. . . . The argument begins with the year 1890 and is based on the thinking of a then obscure Navy captain, professor of history at the Naval War College, who wrote about sea power. That officer's name was Mahan, and results of his thinking are scattered all over the globe." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by A. A. Berle, Jr.
Books p3 N 23 '41 800w

"This former Daily News rewrite man . . . has become a familiar figure in grade-A periodical literature. In his present work he has reached full stature as a writer. His book imposes itself on intelligent persons who would like to know what this war is about." Lawrence Fernsworth

+ New Repub 106:92 Ja 19 '42 1400w

"It is one of the outstanding merits of this volume that it is not written by a specialist for specialists. As Mr. Davis explains, he wanted to understand how it has come about that today, as in 1917, the United States is drawn irresistibly to the side of Britain in a great war. He has found the answer, at least in its essentials, and has presented his conclusions in terms which, it is hoped, will be as convincing in Peoria and Denver as in New York and Washington." E. M. Earle

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 29 '41 800w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 20w

"A convincing and carefully documented account. . . [The author] neither magnifies the good nor glosses over the bad in American or British policy. . . . But the author maintains a consistent emphasis on facts rather than on motives. Throughout, there is a complete awareness of the growth and effect of nationalism as distinguished from isolation. It is patently a must book for anyone who wants to understand the underlying military and strategic issues which confront the United States in the current world war." R. B. Scandrett, Jr.

+ Survey G 30:706 D '41 440w

DAVIS, HARMER ELMER; TROXELL, GEORGE EARL, and WISKOCIL, CLEMENT TEHLE. Testing and inspection of engineering materials; preliminary ed. for engineering defense training courses. 372p il $3.50 McGraw

620.11 Strength of materials. Testing 41-20395

Textbook for engineering students, which provides "a general treatment of the problems of testing with specific reference to the mechanical testing of engineering materials and to establish the principles for the inspection of these materials." (Pref) Bibliography.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

Chem & Met Eng 48:146 D '41 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

Eng N 127:140 O 23 '41 120w

DAVIS, HERBERT; DEVANE, WILLIAM CLYDE, and BALD, ROBERT CECIL, eds. Nineteenth-century studies. 303p $3 Cornell univ. press

820.4 English literature—History and criticism 41-472

Collection of scholarly papers on nineteenth century literature. Contents: Coleridge and The ancient mariner; addenda to The road to Xanadu, by R. C. Bald; Some early nineteenth-century letters, hitherto unpublished, edited by L. N. Broughton; Byron and the East: literary sources of the "Turkish tales", by H. S. L. Wiener; Thomas Carlyle and fiction; 1822-1834, by Carlisle Moore; Browning and the spirit of Greece, by W. C. DeVane; Aesthetics in English social reform: Ruskin and his followers, by F. D. Curtin; William Morris and the poetry of escape, by Oscar Maurer, Jr.; A study of The way of all flesh, by C. T. Bissell.

"The livelier of these detailed and annotated studies do have some reference to our own times. The book, however, will prove valuable to all students of nineteenth century literature. Only special essays in it have a curious reflection of our own times." E. L. Walton

+ Books p13 Ap 20 '41 200w

"All the essays are written with scholarly care and are richly documented. This reviewer found particular interest in 'Coleridge and the Ancient Mariner,' 'Thomas Carlyle and Fiction,' and 'Aesthetics in English Social Reform: Ruskin and his Followers.'" J. J. R.

+ Cath World 152:754 Mr '41 900w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Pony jungle; il. by Gordon Ross. 309p $2 Doubleday

41-12025

The jungle was in a fashionable section of Connecticut, and was patterned after a real hobo jungle. The children who arranged it for a summer playground were the three Terrills, who lived nearby, and an English brother and sister, visiting for "the duration" with their grandmother. There is a good deal about horses, and one pony, as well as a slight mystery.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Ag 10 '41 260w

"Built into this story of childlike adventures is a strong, sound bid for tolerance and friendship among children of different backgrounds. The character drawing is honest. For boys and girls from ten to fourteen." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 160w

"The hospitality offered by America to English children may prove in time to be one of the most important factors in the future relationship of the two nations, but in the meantime it offers a theme to writers on which many variations may be played. There have already been books about it for younger readers and for adults; here is the first one for children of the middle years, 9 to 14, one which contains the theme of inevitable differences between national temperaments and upbringing within the framework of a good story." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 S 14 '41 420w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). We all go to school; il. by Dorothea Warren. 157p $1.75 Scribner

41-17945

Stories about a group of children who first meet at a city playground, and then separate to go to various kinds of schools: boarding school, public school, progressive school, and country school. For ages six to nine.

"The separate stories, for that is what the chapters really are, would make excellent story-time reading for teacher-use in the first and second grades, and would be just right for third and fourth grade children to read to themselves." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 90w

"Should foster interest in school." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 30w

"The variety of experiences by which tiny Americans begin to learn is interestingly conveyed."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 50w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER), and FISCHER, MRS MARJORIE, comps. Grab bag; stories for each and every one; il. by Leonard Weisgard. 312p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-11985

Collection of children's stories by modern authors, selected for children between the ages of nine and twelve. The royalties and publishers' profits will be sent to England to be used for British children. Partial contents: The white horse, by Alice Dalgliesh; Sea captain's daughter, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; The lion-hearted kitten, by Peggy Bacon; Blackie, the pet crow, by L. R. Davis; Liz takes a holiday, by J. D. Bacon; Dolly joins the circus, by Margery Bianco; Alphabetical store, by Marjorie Medary; Thanksgiving day, by D. C. Fisher; We all drank pop, by Phil Stong; Bertram and the dancing bear, by Paul Gilbert; Geography lesson, by L. E. Richards; Tale of Nanni, by M. G. Davis; Roccoco skates, by Marjorie Fischer.

"Though meant for children of all ages and making a fine week-end gift for a family with children, the stories are so well written and—in the case of those with an American scene especially—so completely alive, that a grown-up who opens the book will not soon close it. . . In short, the book is a sound, permanent investment. If you like to invest your book money twice, I may add that every one concerned has turned in royalties and publishers' profits for the relief of British children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 27 '41 260w

"Realistic stories greatly outnumber the imaginative ones in this collection from a varied assortment of books and magazines for children. They are all by present-day writers with well-known names, including Caroline Dale Snedeker, Marjorie Bianco and Alice Dalgliesh. The choice is mainly for the middle age group who enjoy listening to short stories read aloud in clubs and camps. For these, Grab Bag offers amusement and a few surprises. Very modern drawings add a gay note to well-printed pages." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:367 S '41 80w

"This may be a grab bag in a happy sense, but no one could possibly call it a catch-all, this collection of stories by modern authors. . . Taken as a whole there is a goodly number of prizes in this grab bag." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 J1 20 '41 400w

Reviewed by G. G. Bates

Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 30w

DAVIS, MICHAEL MARKS. America organizes medicine [ed. by Margaret Lovell Plumley]. 335p $3 Harper

614.2 Medical economics. Medical service. Medicine—U.S. (W) 41-5011

"This book attempts to present the public health program both from the point of view of the medical profession and the consuming public. Our national problem of medical care is one with considerable ramifications, and one on which the individual must be well supplied with factual background before he can form his own opinions. The author tries to furnish these facts in a comprehensive and yet concise volume that is well indexed and annotated." (Management R) Bibliography. Index.

"Absorbingly written, this book is a most comprehensive and stimulating treatment of the problem of organizing for all health needs. It should be read by every health official and every physician who desires to keep abreast of what is happening in his profession. There are, of course, those shortcomings inherent in any work which attempts to present a broad subject briefly: much important detail cannot be included. The excellent bibliography to a large extent compensates for this." D. A. Clark

+ Am J Pub Health 31:748 J1 '41 290w

"There is only one disappointment in this excellent book: the title does not explain the comprehensive content. Here an outstanding, highly experienced author offers the quintessence of his valuable life work: to reconcile and harmonize the divergent interests of the medical profession to the public and government." Alfred Manes

+ Ann Am Acad 216:215 J1 '41 320w

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

Management R 30:115 Mr '41 80w

Reviewed by D. W. Orr

Nation 153:164 Ag 23 '41 800w

New Repub 105:30 J1 7 '41 90w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p7 Ag 17 '41 2650w

"America Organizes Medicine, while unfortunately not aimed at the general reading public, precisely where it could function as an important instrument for stimulating intelligent thought and action, is a 'must' for students and practitioners in the social sciences, medicine, and public health." Joseph Hirsh

+ Social Forces 20:282 D '41 480w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 17 '41 550w

"America Organizes Medicine" carries the Sigerist analysis on into concrete and specific fields. Books and articles on medical care are as abundant today as the leaves of Val-lombrosa. This book is 'different.' It makes no decisions, arrives at few conclusions. It gives in brief form the basic facts and analyzes the criteria which can be logically applied in estimating the value of projected changes. It provides the student and the statesman with the basis for intelligent thinking in this complex field." C.-E. A. Winslow

+ Survey G 30:302 My '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

DAVIS, RICHARD HARDING. Young Winston Churchill, soldier of fortune, 41p il $1 Scribner

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer (W) 41-12942

Reprint of a chapter out of the author's Real Soldiers of Fortune, published in 1906. It pictures Churchill as a young man, in his twenties and early thirties, getting into and out of difficulties in India, South Africa, and England.

"The format of the thin book is, for some reason, slightly forbidding; it looks a little like a textbook. At the same time, the subject will assure a certain popularity. Its appeal will be mainly for the high school age, though older grade school people will undoubtedly enjoy it." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 130w

"So acute and clear-sighted is this portrait of England's leader as a youth that one has to think twice to realize it was written thirty-five years ago when Winston Churchill was only 32." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 J1 20 '41 300w

DAVIS, ROBERT. Pepperfoot of Thursday market; il. by Cyrus LeRoy Baldrige. 187p $2 Holiday

(W) 41-8537

Story of life among the Berbers of North Africa, told for ages nine to twelve. It opens with the boy, Driss, coming home from market with his grandfather, and finding a baby donkey by the wayside. The boy takes the lost baby home and rears "Pepperfoot" as a pet. The climax of the tale comes when Pepperfoot is stolen, and Driss is able to prove his ownership.

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 My 11 '41 240w

Cath World 153:508 J1 '41 240w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30 '41 200w

"Driss and his companions are friends worth knowing for their courage and resourcefulness, their boyish comradeship, their loyalty to their code of living. The line drawings which show the distinctive habits and customs of the Berbers help to make the story vivid and the book is beautifully made." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK M 17:212 My '41 160w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 140w

"The book is timely, for many of General Weygand's best troops are Berbers, as are the guerilla raiders of Free France. Mr. Davis's style is graphic and easy. It is obvious that he knows this country and understands the brave and simple people who live there." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 18 '41 480w

"The background of tribal life is curious, the events exciting, and even a ten-year-old reader will recognize the dignity and charm of the author's style."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 24 '41 100w

DAVIS, ROBERT HOBART, and ARMITAGE, GEORGE T. Hawaii, U.S.A. 276p il $3 Stokes 919.69 Hawaiian Islands (W) 41-15362

A collection of Bob Davis "stories" about the islands and their people—particularly the people.

"There is no more continuity to the book than in a shuffled deck of cards, and this adds to its charm. It is really a collection of sketches or vignettes about every one in Hawaii, American, Oriental and native, missionary and trader, playboy and cane field worker, bartender and seaman." P. J. Searles

+ Books p14 S 14 '41 550w

Reviewed by Lombard Jones

N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 6 '41 360w

DAVIS, TENNEY LOMBARD. The chemistry of powder and explosives. 2v v 1 216p il $2.75 Wiley

662 Explosives, Fireworks (41-10283)

"The present book is primarily for chemists. It has been written in response to the need for a textbook for the course in powder and explosives which the author has given for about twenty years to fourth-year and graduate students of chemistry and of chemical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. . . The book has been written for the purpose of informing chemists, already well trained, concerning the modes of behavior of explosive substances and concerning the phenomena, both chemical and physical, which they exhibit." (Pref) Volume one includes chapters on: Properties of explosives, Black powder, Pyrotechnics, Aromatic nitro compounds. Indexes.

Reviewed by W. L. Jennings

Am Chem Soc J 63:3546 D '41 350w

Booklist 37:4 S '41

"In spite of overemphasis on the historical treatment of certain products and inadequate treatment of methods of manufacture, testing, and use of military explosives, this work will be a valuable reference book for those taking the short courses in explosives now being given at several universities." J. T. Power

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:798 J1 24 '41 500w

Chem & Met Eng 48:147 J1 '41 400w

Pratt p7 D '41

DAWSON, CONINGSBY WILLIAM, and BROWNE, JOHN BARTON. Tell us of the night. (Jefferson house publication) 350p $2.50 Morrow

41-2703

An eminent American brain surgeon, at the height of his career, is faced with a weighty decision. He follows his instinct and as a result his career is ruined. He goes to Europe, lives riotously in Paris, and finally thru the influence of his beloved adopted daughter he once more becomes interested in saving human life.

"'Tell Us of the Night' is a smooth and entertaining collaboration. If you are not too analytical, you will accept its illusion of reality. It has the narrative pulse of the theatrical."

Books p13 Mr 30 '41 280w

"Even if you're a pushover for medical novels this one is hardly worth your bother."

— New Repub 104:382 Mr 17 '41 20w

DAWSON, PETER, pseud. See Glidden, J. H.

DAY, EDMUND EZRA. The defense of freedom; introd. by Carl L. Becker. 63p $1.25 Cornell univ. press

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Social conditions. Democracy 41-12299

"Four addresses on the present crisis in American democracy." (Subtitle) Contents: What really threatens American democracy? A comprehensive program of national defense; Character implications of the present social situation; The discipline of free men.

"The book is constructive and encouraging throughout." Catheryn Seckler-Hudson

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1216 D '41 220w

"There is nothing in the four addresses that merits comment or the permanency of book covers." C. W. T.

— Cath World 154:118 O '41 160w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p18 Ag 17 '41 30w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud). The corpse in the snowman [Eng title: The case of the abominable snowman]. 305p $2 Harper [7s 6d Collins]

41-21277

Detective story.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 O 19 '41 190w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 106:836 D 15 '41 60w

"Written with great competence, some wit and a faint tone of condescension—a combination we have learnt to expect from the author. The plot has its good moments." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:381 O 25 '41 110w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL—Continued

"The interest of this story does not depend entirely upon the clever detective work of Nigel Strangeways. Far more important is the tragedy of Elizabeth Restorick, a tragedy which had its beginning years before our story opens and which ruined two lives and affected several others. If there is a distinction between the novel and the detective story (which we do not admit), then this book deserves a high place in both categories." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p26 O 19 '41 250w

"Among the best."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 D 20 '41 40w

"The puzzle doesn't amount to much, but speed, wit and convincing descriptive writing make this an unimportant detail. The action lies in a large and draughty country house during the cold weather of early 1940, and the reader will shiver in sympathy with the characters." John Fairfield
+ Spec 167:338 O 3 '41 170w

"Grim and pathological, but a grand job."

+ Time 38:96 N 3 '41 30w

"The problems are skilfully set and unexpectedly solved, but whatever follows the discovery of loveliness blighted was bound to be something of an anticlimax."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p497 O 4 '41 120w

DEAN, ALEXANDER. Fundamentals of play directing. 428p il $4; college ed $3 Farrar 792 Theater. Acting 41-7739

"This book on play directing is an expansion of the first third of Alexander Dean's Syllabus of a Course in Play Directing and includes the material covered in the first-year class in directing as he gave it at the Department of Drama, Yale University. . . [It] is the analysis of eighteen years' experience in schools and theaters, with students and actors, with amateurs and professionals." (Foreword) It contains stage technique for both actor and producer, a section on pantomime, diagrams and photographs, a glossary including terms relating to the stage, the setting, and stage management, and an index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

"Fundamentals of Play Directing will be an invaluable book to many kinds of workers in the theatre, both professional and amateur. The clarity and variety of the examples and exercises indicate that it is especially aimed at teachers in the field who, if they are wise, will absorb its contents greedily. . . There is a great deal in Mr. Dean's book that professional directors could read to substantial advantage. . . There may well be differences of opinion between directors or between teachers of direction as to the elements of technique or their place in the order of production. . . But Mr. Dean's is at least the integrated pattern of a man of varied experience both in teaching and in the professional theatre, and the aspects which he chooses as the five fundamentals of his own work create a definite unity for the work of production." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 25:611 Ag '41 950w

DEAN, LEON W. Stark of the north country; il. by Henry S. Gillette. 277p $2 Farrar

Stark, John—Juvenile literature 41-19200

Fictionized biography of John Stark, born in the New Hampshire Grants, which tells also the story of the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars, in which Stark played an important part. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

"A rousing book it is about exciting times."

E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:380 D '41 180w

"A boy or girl of junior or senior high school age, with an unusual interest in United States history, might find the book interesting reading, but to the average young person it would seem heavy and dull." Claire Nolte

Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 70w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE. Murder in mink. 253p $2 Scribner

41-7796

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 4 '41 120w

"Rapid-fire action and snappy dialogue are the distinguishing features of this story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 My 4 '41 200w

"There is a moral for gentlemen in this swift, humorous tale: Don't buy fur coats for tired blondes unless you're wearing a false mustache and paying cash."

New Yorker 17:96 My 17 '41 50w

"Passable."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 10 '41 40w

"Before the case is over Tony has walked into one murder and has had another literally dumped in his lap. It requires all his ingenuity and daring to find the clever killer, let alone save his own skin from the unrelenting and murderous efforts of a wily and cold-blooded adversary to eliminate him not only from this particular case but from this earth. The story contains crisp dialog and a puzzling plot."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 180w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE (LOFFT). Elin's Amerika [il. by the author]. [96p] $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-21552

Elin came to America in 1643 with the first Swedish people who settled in Delaware. Her attempts to help her mother at home, her adventures with Indians, friendly and otherwise, her share in pioneer activities and in the celebrations dating back to the homeland, are all told for young readers. Illustrated in color.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 2 '41 240w

"Mrs. De Angeli's pictures in lovely glowing colors are very engaging." E. V. Wyatt
+ Cath World 154:381 D '41 90w

"A charming story. And every one will be pleased to know that the ship from Sweden at last brought another girl, longed for so ardently by Elin. The softly colored pictures and many pencil drawings are worthy to be placed with those of Mrs. de Angeli's other books." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:463 N '41 150w

"The format is excellent and the author's illustrations in color and black and white are charming, as always. While this does not equal Thee, Hannah! or The Copper-toed Boots, it compares favorably with her other stories." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:1048 D 1 '41 80w

"Mrs. De Angeli has added another panel to her pictures of early America, giving life to a phase which ordinarily receives such scant attention that we often forget the contributions which the earliest Swedish pioneers made here. The narrative is short on plot, but little girls will not easily forget the details of that life, nor the fortitude and patience with which it was met." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 7 '41 360w

New Yorker 17:142 D 6 '41 60w

DE BLACAM, AODH SANDRACH. Saint Patrick, apostle of Ireland. (Science and culture ser) 176p $2.25 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Patrick, Saint 41-5093

A biography of St Patrick based on historical documents, but written in popular style and with due attention to legend and tradition about the saint. Index.

"There are two compelling reasons why this book should be widely acclaimed: it is a biography of St. Patrick, and it is a good one. . . . It is a popular biography. There was no heavy pressure on the pen that wrote it—yet it is done with scholarly taste." Charles McManus

+ America 65:192 My 24 '41 240w

"There is no reservation in my recommendation of this book. For scholarship it is excellent, for sheer readability it is without peer." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 34:112 My 23 '41 550w

DE BLACAM, HUGH. See De Blácam, A. S.

DEBO, ANGIE. And still the waters run. 417p maps $4 Princeton univ. press

970.5 Indians of North America—Government relations 41-3348

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Dr. Debo has marshaled her evidence in a scholarly way and supported it with meticulous documentation that carries conviction to the mind of the reader. The book contains a bibliography and an excellent index." Grant Foreman

+ Am Hist R 46:936 Jl '41 600w

Reviewed by Fred Eggan

Am J Soc 47:258 S '41 90w

Reviewed by M. D. Irish

Am Pol Sci R 35:174 F '41 120w

"The narrative tone of the book is dry, unsentimental, and objective. It will be of interest to social psychologists, acculturationists, historians, and students of international law, but hardly to ethnologists in its paucity of ethnic information. The volume is a good example of the usual fine bookmaking of the Princeton University Press." Weston La Barre

+ Am Soc R 6:758 O '41 650w

"The book has a readable style. A chapter here and there is filled with interesting but unnecessary details such as Chapter XII, 'The Battle for Spoils.' Chapter XI, 'The Indian's Place in Oklahoma,' is an excellent evaluation. The treatment of contemporary Indian affairs is good and brings the story to the present time. Documentation, bibliography, and index are more than adequate. The book is recommended to all students of Indian history, and should be read by those who make any pretense to know American history." M. L. Wardell

+ Ann Am Acad 214:265 Mr '41 600w

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman

New Repub 104:540 Ap 21 '41 600w

"The book under review is a detailed study of the period from 1900 to the present. It contains an unrivalled wealth of information, presented in a clear, business-like manner. Numerous footnotes bear witness to an extensive and critical use of the records of the Office of Indian Affairs, congressional documents, court decisions, and local newspapers, leaving no possible doubt of Miss Debo's assiduity as a research worker. . . . In conclusion be it said that the author deserves commendation for her manner of presentation. The materials at hand afford an excellent opportunity to be melodramatic. Instead one finds a restrained and coldly dispassionate statement of the facts that gains force and weight as the narrative proceeds. As it stands no more severe indictment of the white man in his relations with the red has come recently under the reviewer's notice." A. W. Hoopes

+ Social Studies 32:136 Mr '41 450w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Springf'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 900w

DE CAMP, LYON SPRAGUE. Lest darkness fall; with decorations by S. M. Adler and H. Lubalin. 379p $2.50 Holt

41-2806

Lightning, striking near where Martin Padway was standing in the Piazza del Pantheon, instead of killing the little archeologist, knocked him into the sixth century A.D. His knowledge of history warned Padway of dark days to come and in desperation he seeks ways of making his twentieth century skills furnish him with protection against sixth century evils.

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

"Martin's successes are not too easy. Mr. de Camp gives enough of the details of the difficulties of applying half-remembered scientific lore to hasty inventions to engage our interest and make us wonder how well we might have done under the same circumstances. The tale is told in a vigorous, colloquial style that is always entertaining. Unlike Mark Twain's Connecticut Yankee, Martinus is not allowed to escape from the century into which he has tumbled. We leave him there, more than a little fatigued and not having as much fun as he is entitled to, still pinch hitting for ancient Italy, trying to keep it from turning into the Italy of today." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p10 F 23 '41 550w

"While the book is not so constantly funny as the Connecticut Yankee, it is pleasant and has sufficient ingenuity and suspense to please every reader." P. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 120w

"This book is no 'Connecticut Yankee,' but it has its own tricks and charms. The author knows a lot about Gothic Italy and almost as much about human nature, and he has a real gift for making the people of those days come alive." C. D.

+ N Y Times p21 F 23 '41 360w

"Good fun."

+ New Yorker 17:58 Mr 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 23:3 Mr 8 '41 3300w

"Readers who enjoy travels in time, as well as those who are fond of historical fiction, should be sure to get hold of this story. It is the best novel of this type that has appeared for many a year."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 11 '41 190w

DE CAMP, LYON SPRAGUE, and PRATT, FLETCHER. The incomplete enchanter. 326p $2.50 Holt

41-16597

A wildly fantastic tale. Harold Shea, a young research psychologist, by means of highly involved mathematical formulas, learns how to transport himself into other worlds. At first, aiming at Ireland in epic times, he miscalculates and lands in a Scandinavian world of giants and trolls and warring gods. He returns from that adventure and then tries again this time entering the world of Spenser's Faerie Queene.

"Of course, 'The Incomplete Enchanter' is utterly preposterous, but the authors imply that they do not expect to be believed, only hope to be enjoyed. This, I think may fairly be predicted." Iris Barry

+ Books p8 O 12 '41 600w

"Perhaps the authors were ill-advised to divide the novel equally between the two adventures; at any rate, the second adventure has not quite the heroic excitement and bumptiousness of the first. But there are many entertaining scenes." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p28 O 26 '41 750w

DE CAMP, L. S.—Continued

"Entertaining and ingenious until the authors, evidently believing that if a joke is good once it ought to go twice, send the young man into still another world, that of Spenser's 'Faerie Queene.' After that the book becomes rather labored."

+ — New Yorker 17:97 O 18 '41 80w

"The book is uneven; the fun sometimes flags, and is sometimes somewhat forced. But the burlesque at its best, as in the treatment of Britomart, the lady athlete, is both genuinely amusing, and even, as burlesque can be, convincing; this is at least a possible Britomart, as this is a possible world. It is a world, and a book, with its own wild logic, with some fighting and a lot of fun; and you never met anything exactly like it in your life." Basil Davenport

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:19 O 4 '41 700w

"One of the most entertaining fantasies of modern times."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 600w

DECK, RAYMOND S. Pageant in the sky; a book of the modern sport of bird-watching; with phot. by the author. 268p $3 Dodd

598.2 Birds 41-21709

A naturalist, whose experience includes work at the Brooklyn museum and American museum of natural history, writes of his adventures in watching birds, of bird banding, of bird migrations, bird habits and identification, and gives suggestions for developing bird hobbies. Index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

Reviewed by G. M. Sutton

+ Books p10 D 21 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 4 '41 850w

DEEPIING, WARWICK. Corn in Egypt. 290p $2.50 Knopf [9s Cassell]

(W) [41-23061]

Story of the reclamation of an English farm, presumably in Surrey. Grant Carey, after he came into a legacy, bought a derelict farm, which he turned into a combination of chicken farm and market garden. The steps in his work of planting and planning are described, as well as the story of his love for Phillida. The time is the present.

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p12 Ja 25 '42 500w

"There is little need to contest Mr. Deeping's own admission that he has written 'Corn in Egypt' for 'the world's sweet simpletons.' He himself has a wholesome horror of sophisticated degenerates; but his novel might have been better if he had kept in mind those of his countrymen who are neither saccharine idiots nor highbrow blackguards." Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 S 26 '41 90w

"Because the farming and war sides of the novel are so interesting, this reviewer has given some thought to the finding of the word or words which would adequately cover what one dislikes—often to nausea—in the book and, particularly, in the principal character. . . It is hard on a first-person narrator if he is to be not merely a hero but a consciously saintly one. If, instead of letting you surmise his saintliness, he tells you of it—and this is just what Carey does when detailing the plans he is making for his paralyzed wife's future—he is undone. . . For the 'dog' episode the word comes easily, a word that will serve for much else found unpalatable here. Men—fine, manly men—have been devoted to dogs ere now. But did they gush?" J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 18 '42 750w

"Critics are miles apart on the quality of Mr. Deeping's familiar style. At times it manages the warmth and disarming candor for which it strives. This writer must admit that at other times he is one of Mr. Deeping's 'hard' and 'superficially sophisticated' commentators—just a town boy—and finds the going a little bit sloppy." Phil Stong

— Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ja 24 '42 320w

"In this book Warwick Deeping makes articulate the innermost hunger for honorable security which motivates the many. While the novel is not escapist fiction, it is the best kind of escape from the hectic rush of the moment; for the reader, if he chooses, can enter into the life and peace which grows in Carey, Phillida and Will while circumstance and war try them and find them not wanting. 'Corn in Egypt' is no melodrama, but it is composed of the very stuff of drama—everyday living. Above all, it is satisfying and courageous."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 400w

"Some readers will regret, perhaps, that what might have been a happy book is rather unnecessarily spoilt by the introduction of two fortuitous horrors. . . But except for these quite superfluous miseries 'Corn in Egypt' is an interesting and entertaining novel."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p481 S 27 '41 330w

DEEPIING, WARWICK. The dark house. 469p $2.50 Knopf [9s Cassell]

(W) 41-8168

A young English physician, balked in his desire to become a surgeon, becomes a general practitioner. He goes downhill rapidly, and is saved only by his gentle, forgiving wife.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p10 Jl 6 '41 270w

"There are some ingenious situations in the novel." Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 18 '41 40w

"As solid a story as Warwick Deeping has told in several seasons. A physician himself, he is thoroughly at home in the details of Richmond's medical practice during 'the Darwin-and-Huxley age.' The plot is fairly intricate, but logical and ably presented. But the net result—this may be taken as praise—is less indomitably hopeful than we have learned to expect. The best Richmond can get out of the snarl, even on Mr. Deeping's terms, is a compromise." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Je 22 '41 700w

"'The Dark House' reveals the pettiness, jealousies and frailties of the medical profession but it glorifies honesty, dignity and ability, coupled with that gentleness and sympathy which can ease human despair and pain." Springf'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 480w

"In the hands of a less sentimental writer the scenes would have been set for tragedy. But Mr. Deeping refuses to harrow us too deeply. He is a great believer in conversion, and Dr. Richmond is not the only person in the story who exhibits a rather startling change of character."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Ap 12 '41 280w

DEEPIING, WARWICK. Joan of the Tower. 399p $2 McBride [3s 6d Cassell]

A tale of medieval England. The protagonist is Pelleas, a monk who renounced his vows and went into the world to seek adventures.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p23 Mr 2 '41 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41 480w

DE GAULLE, CHARLES. See Gaulle, C. A. J. M. de

DE HAVEN, ROBERT, and KAHM, HAROLD S. How to break into radio. 162p $2 Harper 621.384193 Radio, Radio broadcasting (W) 41-6277

A survey of the various types of jobs in the field of radio broadcasting and suggestions as to how to obtain such jobs, qualifications, preparation, applications, etc. Partial contents: Executive and specialized jobs; How to get radio experience; Should you attend a radio school? Writing for radio; Television and your future; How others broke into radio. Index.

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41
Wis Lib Bul 37:135 J1 '41

DE JONG, DAVID CORNEL. Day of the trumpet. 344p $2.50 Harper (W) 41-51891

A story of a Dutch family and the small Dutch city in which they lived, during the months between the summer of 1939 and May, 1940.

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41
Bookmark 2:16 N '41

"Unlike too many of the recent novels inspired by current world history 'Day of the Trumpet' is admirably proportioned, written with no sense of haste. Yet it is alive with human passion and gives a most vivid and moving picture of Holland's tragic submergence in terms of the men, women and children whom it so disastrously affected." Iris Barry

+ Books p2 S 7 '41 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"An interesting, realistic novel. . . Worth the attention of all libraries." I. M. Turner + Library J 66:669 Ag '41 60w

"Let it be said right at the outset, and without reservations, that 'Day of the Trumpet' is an exceptionally mature work. . . It was a dangerous undertaking on which DeJong embarked, for few writers have succeeded in steering clear of the melodramatic when their subject is dramatic. It also required poise and confidence to tackle events so close to the present and stretching so far into an uncertain future. But above all it took a sensitive and seasoned artist to write simply of people in the midst of impending catastrophe and to see them as they really are. . . It is this faculty that makes 'Day of the Trumpet' as strong and simple as the people it describes." Pierre Van Paassen + Nation 153:205 S 6 '41 60w

"This novel of the life and death of Holland should live among this tragic era's human documents." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 S 7 '41 1150w
New Yorker 17:77 S 6 '41 100w
Pratt p12 D '41

"Obviously, the book has not been written for a dramatic effect. Mr. DeJong is not a dramatic writer; the strength of his talent lies in the description which, though often slow and halting, is always rich and beautiful, vivid and impressive. He also has a rare gift of characterization; he knows people and their reactions, and above all he knows the Dutch temperament. The Haming family is symbolic of the spirit of free men everywhere; they inspire confidence in a final triumph of humanity and make this novel one of the most encouraging books to come out of the war." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 S 6 '41 750w

"One of the first of what will doubtless be a deluge of novels about the present hideous suffering of Europe, this one seems to prove that great events are not enough to make a great book."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 360w

DE JONG, MEINDERT. Wheels over the bridge; il by Aldren Watson. 220p $2 Harper 41-5300

The story of the Andersons, father, mother and son, and their struggles to make a living out of a rented farm and pay back a debt of five hundred dollars to the old miser who is their landlord. A troublesome young cow and a little girl, both answering to the name Kelly, are prominent figures in the story.

"The story is offered to boys and girls from ten up; it has the rapid succession of violent events that keeps early teens reading and a determined little girl whose first name is Kelly dashes into the plot (along with her fighting cow also named Kelly) and does a great deal to bring things out right in the end. Not too much, however, for a boys' book: the hero is Carl, Steve's son, at the age when a boy has to fight himself out of being called Hiram by the town schoolboys, and jeered at for 'pushing around the caows.' It is, by the way, a whale of a good fight." M. L. Becker + Books p7 My 4 '41 390w

"This is a realistic picture of farming under heart-breaking conditions which parallels to a certain point the experiences of many a struggling farmer. The fact that it is not entirely convincing is due to the characterization of the landlord. The Andersons themselves, the effects of the father's moods on the boy, and the queer old couple who lend a hand are beautifully done, but the highlights of the story will appeal to adults rather than children." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 150w

"We have had a number of good farm stories lately but there has never been one with quite the original tang of this tale which weaves its curious route through drama, near-tragedy and high comedy in its narrative of a charming tenant farmer and his family who meet misfortune with more bravado than providence. . . This is an exciting story which brings the farmer's battle for existence close to the reader in vivid terms, yet for all its realistic account of poverty and discouragement it is, too, a happy one in its portrayal of a high-spirited, laughing family who fight for what they cherish." E. L. Buell + N Y Times p10 Je 22 '41 300w

DE KOVEN, ANNA (FARWELL) (MRS REGINALD DE KOVEN). Women in cycles of culture; with portraits. 333p $3.50 Putnam

920.7 Woman—Biography 41-21426

Study of woman's place in the world, as exemplified in the lives of some outstanding women from the tenth-century Benedictine nun, Hrotsvitha to Madame de Sévigné. Partial contents: Antecedents of the troubadours; Troubadours: the age of women; Eleanor of Aquitaine; Christine de Pisane; France under Isabeau de Bavière and Joan of Arc; Women in the Italian renaissance; Queen of Navarre; Louise Labé; Early years of Queen Elizabeth and Catherine de Medici; Catherine de Medici in France; Queen Elizabeth and Mary; Queen of Scots; The seventeenth century in France; women in political intrigue; Madame de Sévigné and Madame de Lafayette. Bibliography. Index.

"Mrs. de Koven begins and ends her book with studious emphasis upon platonic love, but her sketches cannot and should not be brought within any classification of theme or argument. Neither is the book historically valuable. The apparent confusion of the two Simon de Montforts would itself prevent recommendation as a goal of reliable reference. And the flowery style and redundancy of superlatives belong to arabesques of decoration, rather than sound informative structure. But bright and lively reading this certainly is." Katherine Woods + N Y Times p30 O 5 '41 900w

DE KOVEN, ANNA—Continued

"Mrs de Koven apparently believes that if she writes with sufficient emotional intensity, her lack of judgment and her deficiencies in organization will be overlooked. The style is florid and involved, and becomes very tiresome."

— Springf'd Republican p12 S 19 '41 700w

DELAFIELD, E. M., pseud. See De La Pasture, E. E. M.

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Collected poems, 327p $3.75 Holt

821

(W) 41-4748

"This collection includes all of the contents of six earlier books: Poems, 1906; The Listeners; Motley; The Veil; The Fleeting; and Memory. It thus makes available again certain of the poems which have recently been out of print, and except for a few occasional pieces, comprises all of Walter De La Mare's poetry for adult readers. The volume also contains an index of titles and first lines, and a hitherto unpublished photograph of the poet." Publisher's note

Booklist 37:442 My 15 '41

Reviewed by B. M. Kelly

Cath World 153:497 J1 '41 900w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 3 '41 390w

"Not all the poems are equally interesting, and this thick volume is not to be read through without some distress at the poet's steady preoccupation with a few themes handled in accustomed ways. But De La Mare is so sensitive a craftsman, however old-fashioned, and is, moreover, so susceptible to the more delicate shades of perception and feeling, that to dip into his pages is to know renewed delight." Babette Deutsch

+ Nation 153:122 Ag 9 '41 850w

"There are about six hundred pieces in the 'Collected Poems,' every one exquisitely shaped, an example of the best words in the best order, and very definitely not the thing heard but the thing overheard." M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p5 D 21 '41 550w

New Yorker 17:71 Mr 29 '41 20w

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart

Poetry 58:146 Je '41 600w

"The omnibus 'Collected Poems' displays, more effectively than any of De la Mare's separate volumes, the poet's creation of his own limbo, a fitful region between the natural and the supernatural world. . . . It is in his hushed and recessive mood that De la Mare triumphs. Whether he is examining the extra-rational, or harking back to irresponsible childhood and irresistible romance, or exploring territories of spectral solitude, his poetry is soaked in a pervasive and musical melancholy." Louis Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 23:7 My 3 '41 750w

"These 'Collected Poems,' which contain some, but not all, of the children's verses for which the author is justly beloved, bring together so generous a selection that it should find a response in many moods. Those who have associated Walter De La Mare with only 'The Travellers' (probably his best-known poem) and therefore think of him as a shadow, an echo or a friendly ghost, have many surprises in store for them. They will do well to turn to his portraits of Shakespearean characters, to 'Keep Innocency' or 'In the Dock.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

DELAND, MRS MARGARET WADE (CAMPBELL). Golden yesterdays, 351p $3 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-22156

Takes up the story of Mrs Deland's life where she left off in If This Be I? (Book Review Digest, 1935). This volume tells of her early youth; school days at Pelham Priory, where she was sent to get over a girlish love affair; the courtship of Lorin Deland; and from that point follows the story of their two lives until the death of her husband in 1917. It pictures a happy life, full of kindly charities, and many friendships.

"The book is not a novel, but it is the work of a novelist, and it has the light and shade, the sensitive humor, the delicate insight into varied and dramatic human values, that mark the author's fiction. She looks at life with eyes loving as well as discerning. Both reticences and revelations witness to intellectual high breeding. It is reassuring in these days to realize that a perfect marriage can not only exist, but be interesting to describe. . . . Many ambitious and clever books have no aroma. This book, like the little relic of former days, the wee flask found by the Delands in an old cupboard, diffuses fragrance." V. D. Scudder

+ Atlantic N '41 550w

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"A rich and varied picture of more than half a century in American life. Actually it is almost more a story of a marriage than of an individual. Though Mrs. Deland tells of her childhood in western Pennsylvania, not far from Pittsburgh, the book really begins with her marriage to Lorin Deland in 1879 and ends with his death in 1917. And in her portrait of her husband she introduces a character as original and as lovable as any who live between the covers of her novels. . . . 'Golden Yesterdays' will have a particular interest for Bostonians and others who know the names and often have known the faces of the friends and acquaintances of whom Mrs. Deland writes." Mary Ross

+ Books p5 N 16 '41 900w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton

Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 110w

"The book is pleasantly and fluently written, though one might wish that the author had not, through overfrequent use, lessened the effect of her metaphor of the two streams that flowed into one. Her love for Lorin, that fine citizen who was far more than the first publicity counsel, needed no such liquid reiteration. But this is a very minor fault in an enjoyable record of happily interlocked adventures of married lovers. A gentle-woman's gentle book." G. S. Hellman

+ N Y Times p7 D 7 '41 950w

"A spirit of zestful youth pervades her latest book. The youth of 1941 would disclaim that spirit as outmoded, yet here one finds not merely a record of facts in the five decades before 1917 but a clear reflection of thoughts, manners, and enthusiasms characteristic of that period. Both amateur and professional students of the time may turn to the book now and hereafter to their notable advantage." M. A. D. Howe

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 N 15 '41 1250w

"Written with beguiling simplicity and modesty, this is a portrait of a warm and lovable personality with whom the reader establishes the most intimate sort of relationship before the book is finished. For this is no story of a writer per se, of literary triumphs and fame. It is the record primarily of a singularly happy marriage which the reader is privileged to share."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 480w

Reviewed by Dorothy Canfield

Survey G 30:710 D '41 500w

DE LA PASTURE, EDMEE ELIZABETH MONICA (MRS A. P. DASHWOOD) (E. M. DELAFIELD, pseud). No one now will know. 306p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Macmillan]

(W) 41-8169

Beginning in 1939 in France, the story goes back thru time to 1872 in South Wales. It tells the story of Callie Lemprière, and the tragic circumstances which broke up an unusually loving family; and why Lucian, Callie's father, died, almost unmentioned, in the south of France, while his brother Fred slowly drank himself to death on the family plantation in Barbados.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

"This new Delafield novel has none of the homespun quality of her familiar work. It is written like a fugue, with simple theme, clear, stripped and contrapuntal; but modern in the sense that the crisp theme is supported by a rich and varied accompaniment. . . 'No One Now Will Know' is unusual in its materials, outstandingly well written—a completely satisfying novel which, though it chooses its period and uses it, is in no sense that rather obnoxious thing, a 'period piece.' That Miss Delafield should have been able to write it just now is one more minor miracle out of miraculous England." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p4 My 25 '41 800w

"We wish that E. M. Delafield would stick to the Provincial Lady genre to which her brittle sophistication and clever characterization lend themselves so well. When, as in the present novel, she writes at length of the basic relationships of tangled lives, the sophistication becomes amorality, the characterization mere cleverness."

— Cath World 153:507 J1 '41 240w

"Miss Delafield manages the Priestley part of the story better than the O'Neill. She is happier, that is, in the actual technical construction of the story, in the hints and the suggestions impinging on the child's mind in the second section, than she is in establishing the brooding and explosive atmosphere which is the essential background of the third. Here her style seems to fail somewhat in impressiveness; echoes of the admirable Provincial Lady jar in this deep and solemn air." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 30 '41 220w

"To one who is thoroughly sick of war books (and there are many others besides this reviewer), Miss Delafield's latest novel comes to provide hours of pleasure. . . The pattern shows love, jealousy, possessiveness, and all these combine to make tragedy, but it is not a morbid tragedy, and therein lies the secret of the book's charm." E. S. H.

+ Churchman 155:35 Je 15 '41 80w

"Child portrayal and nursery scenes are excellent, but the mature characters are less clear. The novel should be bought with moderation, as its appeal will not be extensive."

Esther Johnston

+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 70w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:36 J1 12 '41 40w

"Rather in the nature of a tour de force, but done with plenty of skill."

New Repub 105:30 J1 7 '41 70w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 22:116 Ag 2 '41 20w

"Miss Delafield is to be doubly congratulated on a distinguished presentation of character based on sound psychology and the laws of heredity and on a grippingly dramatic story." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 My 25 '41 750w

"Aby done, with a properly old-fashioned background and real if unusual characters. A pleasant change from current events."

+ New Yorker 17:70 My 31 '41 60w

"It is a long approach, and E. M. Delafield seems to be tying and untying a somewhat unnecessary number of knots. Indeed, one is inclined to ask oneself whether this is a plot or a rather untidy puzzle. Actually, it is a plot, and a good plot; for the passions of 'No One Now Will Know,' though fiery and destructive, are leisurely passions, the world it describes is a leisurely world, and a corresponding plot is in order." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 My 17 '41 380w

"I must protest against Part One. . . I found it conventional and slick, unworthy of the strong story underneath it. If its slight point had to be made, I believe it should have been made more bitterly. For the rest of the story there can only be warm admiration, which grows warmer as we travel back." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 167:44 J1 11 '41 500w

"Miss Delafield is cool, lightly entertaining and of course pleasantly assured. Though a little more serious in intention than usual, however, she has not got much of a story to tell on this occasion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p321 J1 5 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 J1 '41

"It is not in E. M. Delafield's usual vein—more reflective, more serious. There are some lovely and memorable pages in it, of the world seen through a child's eyes." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 30:xiv summer '41 60w

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Wakefield's course. (Atlantic monthly press bk) Whiteoak ed 406p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-17248

The eighth book in the saga of the Whiteoaks of Jalna covers about a year and a half, from the spring of 1939 to the fall of 1940. Renny is prosperous again and wins the Grand National with his horse, Johnny the Bird. Wakefield is a successful actor, and it is his love story, and its bitter ending, which holds the center of the stage. The book closes with Wakefield's winning of the Distinguished Flying Cross for distinguished service in the R.A.F.

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"The same vigor and freshness which delighted readers of the first Jalna story enlivens this eighth novel of the Whiteoak family. . . There is an amplitude in these books like the sweep from the Canadian skies over Jalna to the English and Irish horizons and the European capitals, where Whiteoaks have always been at home. . . Miss de la Roche does not stoop to tricks of suspense designed to keep you on tenterhooks until a sequel can appear. But after this eighth novel, I am as avid for further news of the Whiteoaks as for news of actual friends. Doubtless as one of very many, I hope the Jalna books go on indefinitely and I find it hard to wait for the hoped-for ninth." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 S 28 '41 550w

"The author has recaptured some of the ardor that she put into her first book about them. The best passages are those in which she gets the whole clan together, around the dinner table at Jalna or in the little church which Whiteoaks still dominates."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 18 '41 500w

Churchman 155:34 O 15 '41 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p7 S 28 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:78 S 27 '41 30w

Pratt p12 D '41

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Career for Jennifer; il. by Cateau de Leeuw. 280p $2 Macmillan

(W) 41-21719

Jennifer, whose father was a commercial artist temporarily without employment, tried out many kinds of work until a fortunate chance brought her to the attention of a famous photographer. Then her career was assured. There is a budding romance, which will make the book of interest to older girls.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

"The practical value of the story is in its attention to the details of photographic technique as they confront an intelligent girl willing to work. For that reason some of it will be in language unknown to those who do not take photography seriously. But, as so large a portion of the human race does, as so many young folks do own cameras and wonder what can be done next with them, an audience awaits this lively story." M. L. Becker

DE LEEUW, A. L.—Continued

+ Books p10 N 23 '41 280w

"Although there are times when the incidents seem a bit forced, this is, on the whole, a well-written story of modern young people who meet their problems realistically and buoyantly." Claire Nolte
+ Library. J 66:1050 D 1 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 120w
Wis Lib Bul 37:180 N '41

DELL, ERNEST F., ed. Love letters of famous men and women; with an introd. by André Maurois. 387p $3 Dodd

808.86 Love letters 41-24107

Collection of love letters, written by famous men and women. "Here are the love letters of nearly a hundred men and women from every age and country—poets, soldiers, statesmen, artists, philosophers, queens, actresses, flower-girls and wives. Hazlett is here and Abelard, Wagner and Anne Boleyn, Mirabeau and Dr. Johnson, Queen Victoria and Mark Twain—and a host of others, including famous American men and women. Many of the two hundred letters included are prefaced with a brief biographical note about the writers." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This collection, spanning eight centuries, has three elements of fascination: love, letters and famous people. With such perennial compelling interests, it seems strange that the volume is not more impressive." Lorine Pruette
Books p12 Ja 4 '42 480w

"On the whole, the love letters between married people are, as André Maurois remarks in his foreword, especially good—letters from his wife to Richard Brinsley Sheridan, from the Marquis de Lafayette in America to his Adrienne in France, letters exchanged by Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Hawthorne, letters from Samuel L. Clemens to his wife. . . The book loses a great deal by its paucity of dates, and something by insufficiently specific annotations."

N Y Times p39 N 30 '41 500w

DE MALROY, GENEVA. Hilla of Finland; il. by Frederic Anderson. 287p $2 Nelson

Finland—Juvenile literature 41-4138

"North through the picturesque little country of Finland we travel with Hilla, her father, Anton, and Mr. Harris, an American writer. Although there were many exciting adventures for Hilla on this journey, such as the trip on the ship 'Kyla' and the bear hunt while visiting on her grandparents' farm, she never forgot her great desire—to find Aunt Emma's lost love, Carl Anderson. And on Christmas eve in the home of Antti the Lap in the far cold north Hilla received a wonderful Christmas surprise." Boston Transcript

"An unfamiliar region has seldom been presented to our ten-year-olds by a better blend of information and human interest." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 11 '41 360w

"Finland, without a doubt, is between the covers of this book; its sights, its sounds, its life. Since it is told through the eyes of a very real little girl it should be of interest to the eight to twelve-year-old."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 120w

"A genuine, likable child, [Hilla's] sincere and spontaneous reactions ring true to childhood. The high courage and reliability of the Finnish people are stressed in her acquaintances along the way. The royalties for the book will be shared with the fund for the relief of needy children in Finland." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:211 My '41 100w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 66:619 JI '41 130w

"While the interest centers in the country itself and its customs, rather than in the characters of the story, the book reads easily." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 20 '41 150w

Sat R of Lit 24:15 N 8 '41 40w

DEMAREE, ALBERT LOWTHER. The American agricultural press, 1819-1860. (Studies in the hist. of Am. agric) 430p il $4 Columbia univ. press [26s 6d Oxford]

630.5 Agriculture—Periodicals 41-6492

During the period from 1819 to 1860 more than four hundred periodicals devoted to agriculture and related interests were published in the United States. "The primary purpose of the present work is to give the reader a description of the general content of these journals and to tell in part the story of rural life as seen through them. Furthermore, it attempts to point out the objectives sought by the editors and to describe the methods used to gain these ends. Approximately one hundred agricultural periodicals published in all parts of the United States have been selected for investigation. Sixteen of these have been set aside for intensive research." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Fred Landon

Am Hist R 47:362 Ja '42 650w

Reviewed by C. D. Clark

Am J Soc 47:646 Ja '42 350w

"The spread of population, technological advancement, the growing division of labor, the rise of new cultures, and the interactions of old and new raised a host of problems. . . The student seeking a key to these events would like to have several questions answered. . . No one volume could be fairly expected to answer all these questions—not, at least, in our present state of ignorance of agricultural history! Dr. Demaree has not essayed any such task. But the spirit of the broad approach hovers over most of his four hundred-odd pages, enlightening, entertaining, and stimulating the reader. This happy effect is achieved in the first place because of the tremendous importance of the subject. . . The volume has of course some weaknesses, arising for the most part out of the decision to travel quickly throughout the entire area rather than explore thoroughly any substantial section of it. On many issues, it is more valuable for the questions provoked than for the answers provided." S. L. Jackson

+ New Eng Q 14:393 Je '41 800w

"Professor Demaree, of Dartmouth College, has done his job in a workmanlike and entertaining manner. Based on an extended (and, I suspect, pleasurable) study of these agricultural publications, the author's arrangement is logical." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 23:15 Mr 1 '41 700w

Reviewed by M. W. Hamilton

Social Educ 5:554 N '41 500w

"The author has done an excellent job in a difficult field of historical research. He demonstrates marked skill in handling a mass of details. His selections have been wisely chosen. The first two parts by the author are extremely well written. There are several interesting illustrations. The entire volume is thoroughly documented." S. H. Hobbs, Jr.
+ Social Forces 20:128 O '41 320w

"Mr. Demaree has produced a book of great interest as well as of academic value by treating what might have been a dull if useful study in the drabber side of history as an illustration of American life during forty eventful years. The editors, the contributors, the readers of the agricultural Press come alive. So do the methods of advertisement." + Times [London] Lit Sup p327 JI '41 260w

DE MESQUITA, D. M. BUENO. See Bueno de Mesquita, D. M.

DE MEYER, JOHN (DANA BREED, pseud).
Bright was their destiny. 312p $2.50 Funk, W.
41-8320

"A novel of New England today—not the usual farm-and-weather piece but a serious examination of what is wrong with the first families and why the mills are either idle or have labor trouble. Mr. De Meyer says there is too much family tradition, concentration of wealth, and resistance to new ideas and new blood." New Yorker

"The story moves swiftly and dramatically. De Meyer has an interesting and effective style, his sentences have a direct simplicity and rhythm which carry his ideas and plot with growing intensity to his climax." Rose Feld

+ Books p6 Ap 13 '41 700w

"The author has not given us a fair fight. He has erected puppets, only to knock them down. He should realize that the Willie Os-goods of New England were buried 20 years ago, and that their wives are no such incredible women as Nellie. Even Grandma, rock-ribbed, yet on the side of change, as she is drawn, is almost too quick on the uptake for us to swallow. . . . Young Bill is the best drawn of the characters. Here, we do feel for a young man who, through the torment of sitdown strikes and hard times, finds out he must lose his old habits of life to find life itself." Ruth Blodgett

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 490w
Commonweal 34:93 My 16 '41 140w

"Mr. De Meyer's story, written in the first person, has the unbearable effect of a dicta-phone pouring out, in an even, monotonous voice, a monologue, interminable and hypnotically sleep-producing, and generously punctuated with the kind of clichés we associate with ordinary conversation. Moreover, the story is ballasted with that deadly thing which is sometimes, politely, called a thesis. . . . This reviewer found it tiresome." John Cournos
— N Y Times p26 Ap 13 '41 550w

"A fresh approach, rather awkwardly handled, but interesting."
+ — New Yorker 17:85 Ap 12 '41 50w

"The pages are full of grim foreboding, of uncertainty, of change. This psychological electricity in the atmosphere is truer than any of the people. John DeMeyer is looking upon his times, and he is wondering. But wonder and sensitivity are not enough. A novelist must create deeply felt human beings." Benjamin Appel

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 19 '41 460w

DE MEYER, JOHN (DANA BREED, pseud).
Sentimental Yankee. 308p $2.50 Random house 41-26739

A native New Englander, having become fabulously wealthy, via the stage and Hollywood, returns to find his home town streamlined out of all semblance to his happy memories of it. The story is of his attempts to restore Redwood to its former, simpler and more kindly ways.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

"An amusing narrative, bright, smart, obvious and, as the title warns, sentimental. . . . An amiable and breezy tale into whose plausibility one is not expected to inquire. However, even if one doesn't take seriously its assumptions and generalizations about the unalloyed sweetness and light of old-time New England towns, or the evil of (1) big cities and (2) money, one may point out that they are by this time somewhat shopworn." Milton Rugoff
+ — Books p20 D 7 '41 600w

"This is a lively, amusing story of the struggle between a successful playwright and a modern New England town. . . . If you swallow Mr. de Meyer's hypothesis, you'll find his story fast and entertaining." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 D 23 '41 500w

"An amusing and well-done story."

+ New Yorker 17:134 D 6 '41 80w

"The hero is implausible because his utterances and performances never come up to the advertisements of his admirers. The effect is about the same as though Marc Antony arose in ACT III, Scene 2, and delivered the annual memorial address of the East Haddam Volunteer Fire Department." Phil Stong

— Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 27 '41 500w

"The idea which Mr. De Meyer used up so thoroughly is an excellent one, and in more deft and patient hands might have proved absorbing. It is more in sorrow than in anger that we urge Mr. De Meyer to stick to the pulps, where he has had some success."

— Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 330w

DEMING, DOROTHY. Penny Marsh finds adventure in public health nursing; il. by Dorothea Warren. 236p map $2 Dodd

(W) 40-32555

Vocational story for high school girls interested in public health nursing. The third in a series, this describes the adventures of Penny Marsh as a rural public health nurse, after her husband had been called to Brazil for a year of research. For others in the series see Penny Marsh: Public Health Nurse, and Penny Marsh: Supervisor of Public Health Nurses (Book Review Digest, 1938, 1939).

"The information is sound, the vehicle well chosen for this age group, and the total effect on the young reader such as to intrigue the better and more adventurous. An excellent selection for the high school vocational bookshelf." R. M. Atwater

+ Am J Pub Health 31:394 Ap '41 100w

"There are some valuable sidelights from the vocational angle, but the story does not drag with informational detail. Satisfactory format." Maude Adams

+ Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 150w

DEMING, HORACE GROVE. Fundamental chemistry; an elementary textbook for college classes. 760p il $3.50 Wiley [21s Chapman]

540 Chemistry 40-32828

"This book was made in the classroom. It is the result of an experiment with a class of 240 students, who from the beginning were encouraged to ask questions. The effort was to present chemistry as a manner of thinking, rather than as a collection of facts, however systematized, or as an array of unsupported assumptions, to be taken on faith. Gives less attention to industrial detail and differs in approach from the author's General Chemistry (4th ed. 1935. 769p. Wiley, $3.50. 35-20928). Treats principles more fully and considers historical matters and the cultural possibilities of chemistry less than in his Introductory College Chemistry (1933. 590p. Wiley, $3. 33-1437)." (Booklist) Indexes.

"One of the outstanding features of the book is the ability of the author to write clearly, to simplify explanations, and to use apt analogies. Only an excellent teacher with a thorough knowledge of modern chemistry could write a book so interesting to students and so stimulating to instructors." K. L. Mark

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:636 F '41 650w

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

DE MOND, ROBERT O. The loyalists in North Carolina during the revolution. 286p $3 Duke Univ. [18s Cambridge]

975.6 American loyalists. North Carolina —History 41-1761

"The author attempts in this study to bring together all of the available source material which concerns the Loyalists in North Carolina and to present it in such a way as to give the reader a realization of the part played by this political group. Students of North Carolina history will be able to identify the families and individuals who placed loyalty to king above loyalty to committees. The vast amount of Tory property which was confiscated by the state and sold is revealed. The struggle in North Carolina is shown to have been a civil war in the true sense of the word." Spring'd Republican

DE MOND, R. O.—Continued

"The book is a well-written and careful study based on the original sources; the research seems to be very complete. The subject is so difficult to treat because of the conflicting currents that the reader is sometimes left in doubt as to the actual meaning of events. A little more interpretation would be helpful in places; it is at times difficult to make a judgment from the narrative. All in all, however, the monograph is a fine piece of historical research." H. J. Eckenrode

+ — Am Hist R 47:139 O '41 420w

"This reviewer has no means of knowing how complete the author's source-material on the Loyalists in North Carolina is; presumably it is more complete than that on their exodus, which occurred, for the most part, after the Revolution, and is to that extent outside the scope of the subject. The section on the exodus leaves out important source-material, and abounds in superficial and inaccurate generalizations. The author's presentation throughout is uncritical; his statements are often unrelated either to each other or to the historical background, and they suffer from vagueness. One looks in vain through a fairly long account of the Regulator Revolt for any explanation of the word 'Regulator.' The work is marred by little mistakes both in the text and the index. . . . The value of the book lies in its being a compilation of facts and material not hitherto assembled." Margaret Ellis

— + Canadian Hist R 22:70 Mr '41 320w

Spring'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 200w

DEMUTH, AVERIL. The house in the mountains; pictures by Ninon MacKnight. 240p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hamilton, H]

41-1925

The house in the mountains was near a little village in the Swiss Alps. The children, Max and Lisel, Ruffin the talking dog, and Mr Trog, a benevolent bear, rescue Huguette from the clutches and spells of Baron von Murtigrad and his wicked housekeeper, who live in the house in the mountains, and work their magic spells from there.

"After so many factual books, it is quite refreshing to find one that abounds in imagination, magic, and enchantments. . . . There are enough unbelievable adventures, strange happenings, and magic spells to satisfy any child who looks for make-believe enjoyment." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 140w

"An enchanting fairy story. . . . The children are dears, and the bear, Mr. Trog, their friend and protector, extremely lovable. The wicked characters are very wicked and take a lot of overcoming, but they get their due in the end and the good live happily ever after. I can't imagine a more attractive book for six and seven year olds—chiefly, I think, for little girls." Rosamond Lehmann

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:576 D 7 '40 140w

"Jolly magic." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 30w

"The House in the Mountains comes with a fervent recommendation from Mr. Compton Mackenzie, who is an excellent judge. There is little for me but to confirm his judgement. Miss Demuth very happily blends the two worlds, fairy and real. Sometimes she tips her tale from one to the other like water between two tumblers, sometimes she shades the worlds together so that one can hardly tell which is which. As children have no prejudice in favour of either, and a hot water bottle may turn into a person whenever it wishes, Miss Demuth's impartiality is a real asset. Her Swiss village and her Mr. Trog the bear are both enchanting and enchanted. Very high marks, and a wide range of ages." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 165:658 D 13 '40 100w

DEN HARTOG, JACOB PIETER. Mechanical vibrations. 2d ed 448p il $5 McGraw

620.1123 Vibration 41-915

"An engineering textbook first published in 1934 appears with more problems and a collection of formulas. New material deals with electrical measuring instruments, centrifugal pendulum dampers, aircraft and ship propellers, and automatic balancing machines." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:442 My 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:13 Ja '41

DENNIS, LAWRENCE. The dynamics of war and revolution. 259p $3 priv ptd Weekly foreign letter, 205 E. 42d st, N.Y.

321.092 War. Revolutions. World politics. Socialism. Democracy 40-14827

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by J. R. Commons

Am Econ R 31:122 Mr '41 600w

"Lawrence Dennis is a brilliant writer and a master in the coining of sharply ironical formulas. His work should impress even those who realize to what extent it is indebted to the ideas of Oswald Spengler. Spengler's influence can be observed in Dennis' antithesis between money and blood, his characterization of socialism—he rejects utopian socialism and accepts a national socialism based upon discipline and heroism—and particularly in his belief in the necessary, fatalistic development of history and human society. . . . The dominant trend in Dennis' book is the violent dislike of pseudomoralism and utopianism. But one cannot fail to note that Dennis' opinions are imposed upon him by his enemies. He simply expresses the opposite views, which, of course, cannot replace cool and truly realistic analysis. One can himself be unrealistic, excited, and emotional, even if one accuses his opponent of being unrealistic, excited, and emotional." Waldemar Gurian

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:352 Ap '41 1200w

"The author's style is epigrammatic, clever, and stimulating. Thinking is generally orderly, logical. If the author's convictions and assumptions are accepted as data, most of his conclusions are inescapable. The correctness of many of these assumptions can be demonstrated, however, only with the passage of time. Meanwhile, the author may properly be criticized for the manner in which he dismisses opposing contentions with sarcasm rather than argument or merely charges those whose opinions he dislikes with intellectual dishonesty. For a book that emphasizes a long-term, overall perspective as the essential need of the times, there are serious shortcomings in this volume. Thus real perspective would note the growing consciousness, in the democracies, of the need for intelligent marketing of labor's services. Similarly, it would recognize the possibility that intelligent leadership in a democracy may mobilize personal and physical resources as effectively as a dictatorship." Dale Yoder

+ — Am Soc R 6:120 F '41 500w

Foreign Affairs 19:467 Ja '41 20w

Pacific Affairs 14:120 Mr '41 400w

DENNIS, WESLEY. Flip; pictures by [the author]. [63p] $1.50 Viking

(W) 41-2939

"Flip was a playful colt who lived on a large farm in Kentucky. From the time he was old enough to follow his mother around, he wanted to imitate everything she did. His mother, sometimes wearying of his nuzzling and tail-tweaking, would jump over the sparkling stream to graze in the farther meadow. This was the one thing Flip could not imitate, regardless of his many dogged attempts. One day, however, exhausted from trying to jump the stream, he fell asleep and dreamed he had silver wings. A colt with silver wings could fly over fences, could fly over the weather-vane on the barn, could do anything!" Library J

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"There is a full-page action picture for every few words, those with Flip in the sky being especially charming. The horses have human expressions at times, but at times, as every one knows, horses do have human expressions. The picture book can be confidently recommended to any little child whose parents want him to know what a horse looks like. He will like this ambitious colt." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 9 '41 190w

"This juvenile contains some of the most enchanting sketches of a colt ever put on paper. . . Whether on the ground or in the air, Flip is a delight to the eye." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 80w

Reviewed by Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:143 F 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 20w

"The timid and the unconfident may take heart from the moral which is tucked neatly away without benefit of words, and the bolder ones can just enjoy the fun of one of the nicest horse books that younger children have ever had." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '41 160w

New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 20w

DE OVIES, RAIMUNDO. Church and the children. 213p $2 Morehouse

268.6 Religious education. Children's sermons 42-1021

"This is a half-and-half book—the first half a series of brief discourses about work with children and the latter half a number of 'sermonettes' to boys and girls." Churchman

Christian Century 58:1276 O 15 '41 60w

"After many of the little homilies the author writes some very interesting remarks. The book is untechnical and vivid. Throughout it shows the author's keen interest in young life. He well justifies his use of humor in teaching, even to his inductive lessons from newspaper comic strips—from the known to the unknown." C. H. Brewer

+ Churchman 155:17 N 1 '41 110w

"The author of this book has not only a great gift for the leadership of children but also a great gift for telling others the secret of his success. I knew Dean De Ovies some years ago and have been kept somewhat in touch with his work at the Episcopal Cathedral in Atlanta, but this book gave me a new appreciation of him and a new insight into what the church's ministry to children might be. The volume can be cordially recommended to every pastor. It is the best book of this type I have seen." John Knox

+ J Religion 22:122 Ja '42 60w

DE PONCINS, GONTRAN. See Poncins, G. de M.

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Evening in spring. 308p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 41-15438

Story of young love. The place is the same Sac Prairie of the author's earlier books, and some of the characters have appeared before. Steve Grendon and his Margery are both in high school, and have to meet the opposition of their families, because Steve is Catholic and Margery is not; and of an assorted collection of meddling teachers and townspeople, who view youth with jaundiced eyes.

"'Evening in Spring' is an unpretentious book, direct and full of zest, yet sensitively appreciative of the many kinds of people who lived out their lives in Sac Prairie." Mary Ross

Books p8 S 14 '41 400w

"The idyl of Steve and Margery is full of wistful beauty, enhanced by the author's un-failing consciousness of the poetic qualities of the background. . . The total effect of the book, it must be confessed, is that of patchwork. Here and there it contains bits already published in various magazines, and the final chapter 'Goodbye, Margery,' has previously appeared thrice. Though these repeated portions are all, in their various ways, of high quality, and 'Goodbye, Margery,' is exquisite enough for three times three readings, nevertheless it is impossible not to feel that the book is a compilation more than a growth." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '41 600w

"The boy and the old folks are, by now, stock Derleth and a little shopworn; the girl is led out to be kissed as the story requires." — New Repub 105:882 S 22 '41 40w

"This simple, artless story is almost unimaginably old, and it would be difficult to freshen it into vivid life. Mr. Derleth, frankly, has not done so, and where his young lovers and their transports are concerned his book, though gently lyric, is insipid and monotonous. What distinguishes 'Evening in Spring,' what saves it from plain dullness, is first the author's evocative picture of a Wisconsin country town and second his humorous appreciation of character. Such color as there is in this novel is largely provided by Steve's eccentric relatives. . . Here Mr. Derleth is in his element, and very funny indeed—but for the rest I cannot hand him so much." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 S 14 '41 500w

"A story of first love, told with tenderness and charm. . . Recommended."

+ New Yorker 17:74 S 13 '41 40w

"A book cannot be turned this way and that in the mind unless it has nucleus and body; 'Evening in Spring' is a slack skein, difficult to hold in the memory. There is no shape to it, and it would be easy to put it down at any point and feel no compulsion to read further. There is great beauty in the descriptive passages, and vignettes of certain figures of the Wisconsin village where the scene is laid have the distinction of daguerreotypes. The more immediate characters lack such quaintness, and are not quite blood and bone, and they are voiceless because their words evoke no echo in the reader's inward ear." Currie Cabot

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 O 4 '41 350w

"Mr. Derleth tells the story of Steve's disillusionment with tenderness and poignancy." Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 260w
Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Someone in the dark. (Arkham house fantasy lib) 335p $2 Arkham house, Sauk City, Wis.

41-17319

"Sixteen stories of the weird or supernatural, grouped roughly as 'ghost' stories. Selected from the 200 odd in this class which the author has contributed to various magazines." Wis Lib Bul

DERLETH, A. W.—Continued

"The stories are for the most part well told, and lovers of tales of the occult will find the volume entertaining and congenial, though it has little of either sensitivity or beauty." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p32 O 5 '41 500w
Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Village year; a Sac Prairie journal; wood engr. by Frank Utpatel; endpaper map by Hjalmar Skuldt. 314p $3 Coward-McCann

818 41-5545

Excerpts from a journal about life in Sac Prairie, Wisconsin, which is a combination of anecdotes about the inhabitants of this quiet small town, and observations on nature—fields on a snowy night, migration of the birds, the flowers which come first in spring, etc.

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

"The people, put down faithfully as they act and speak in their daily appearances, come up from the page as primarily comic figures, tenderly seen. Much of the material connected with them is anecdotal." H. T. Moore

+ Books p20 Ap 6 '41 480w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 370w

"Exact and beautiful as any reader of August Derleth's novels and poems would expect is his chronicle of the passing seasons: not one year in the village but actually three—three winters of snow, three springs of new buds and running brooks, three summers fragrant with growing corn, and three cycles of autumn moons." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 17 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"A book of instant sensitive responsiveness, 'Village Year' recreates its scene with acuteness and beauty, and makes an unusual contribution to the Americana of the present day. Its life and its landscape have yielded to change as they must, but their character has kept its persistence." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '41 1450w

"For Sac Prairie's chronicler, it is not merely the simple drama of the place that makes it appealing. He loves also its scenes. He sees color in winter where few eyes perceive it. He enjoys equally the enfolding silence of a winter snowfall and the graciousness of a summer landscape. He writes about all this with affection and understanding. If occasionally he mars the robustness of his style with a calculated phrase or an elaborately melodic cadence to a descriptive sentence, these mannerisms are soon forgotten in still another good story." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 My 17 '41 410w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Wind in the elms. 152p $2 Ritten house

811 41-22162

"The contents here are more varied than in any of the author's previous books of poetry. In the section called Earth Music, we find him in his most familiar mood. In Marginal: Time Past, there is fresh treatment of Wisconsin historical material. In Sac Prairie People there is a little gallery of portraits." Wis Lib Bul

"One may regard with proper awe the 'amazing energy' of this young Wisconsin marathon regionalist; deplore at the same time a talent undisciplined, unmarked—in poetry at least—by a true craftsman's respect for his art. The nature poems show a pleasant though undiscriminating feeling for subject and locale, with something of a tinted postcard's fidelity and prettiness. The few poems that touch on contemporary events, such as 'Requiem for the Children of Europe,' say the conventional things too diffusely to be memorable. The new Sac Prairie portraits are interesting more for the excellence of the material than for the poet's use of it."

+ Books p29 N 23 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 J1 '41

DE SHERBININ, BETTY. Wind on the pampas. 268p il $2.50 Morrow

(W) 41-6691

The story of a Scotchman whose twenty-five years of faithful service as overseer of an Argentina ranch was rewarded by a gift of a small piece of land of his own.

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

"According to one's turn of mind, 'Wind on the Pampas' may be viewed in several lights: as a carefully-written record of the customs of Argentine ranch life; as an emotional conflict between a man and woman of widely divergent standards; or as a revealing picture of one of the world's great sources of bread and meat. It is from this last angle that Miss de Sherbinin's little story assumes importance for me. For, though her characters are merely run-of-the-mine, by reason of their commonplaceness, she has given an intimate close-up of the 'unknown man' in this rich republic we have pledged ourselves to defend." Muriel Chatain

+ Books p8 Mr 16 '41 600w

"Miss de Sherbinin sets an interesting problem and she handles it convincingly, if not with emotional intensity. She describes, with skill and sincerity, but she does not interpret." Margaret Clark

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 320w

"This story Miss De Sherbinin has told in a pleasant straightforward style, accenting her interesting background and the position of her characters in it. It is not without excitement and there are many scenes such as the ostrich hunt which will be a pleasant novelty to her readers. It is to be hoped that Miss De Sherbinin will continue writing. She has a talent, an insight, an economy, and an integrity that should lead her on to better books." Katherine Maule

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 23 '41 550w

"Fresh and interesting description of an unfamiliar scene."

+ New Yorker 17:85 Mr 22 '41 30w

DESMOND, ALICE (CURTIS) (MRS T. C. DESMOND). For cross and king; il. by Kreigh Collins. 297p $2 Dodd

41-5699

Story of the conquest of Peru for older boys and girls. The central character is Diego, son of Diego de Almagro, partner of Pizarro, who was betrayed by the latter. Diego was appointed governor of Peru at nineteen, but his sympathy with the Indians made him unpopular with the Spaniards, and he was shipped back to Spain. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"Whenever the story can be softened, Mrs. Desmond has done so, keeping within the frame of fact; thus the betrayed Inca and Diego de Almagro are both murdered off-stage. But the cross does not come out well in the conquest of Peru, nor the king much better; almost the only chivalrous character among these conquerors is that of the boy-hero Diego the Lad. From surrounding greed and cruelty his figure emerges as that of an honest, kind and fearless boy." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 6 '41 290w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:214 My '41 110w

"The story is well constructed, is based on accurate historic fact, reads easily for anyone of eleven or over, and has the added interest of introducing again the main fictitious characters of the earlier book [Soldier of the Sun, Book Review Digest, 1939]. Large type, black and white drawings. Recommended for libraries where the preceding book has been useful." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 170w

"The author has tried hard to make a human and dramatic story out of her material; the book has, however, the air of having been too hastily put together and of trying to cover too much ground. The incidents of Diego's life are interesting and picturesque, yet Diego, somewhat affectingly referred to throughout the book as The Lad, remains unreal. The illustrations have strength and spirit and suggest the atmosphere of the times." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '41 370w

DE SOLA, RALPH. The bird book [il. with phot. from Birds of the world, comp. by the N.Y. city WPA writers' project]. 59p map 50c Whitman, A.

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature 41-11400

Photographs of twenty-six birds from all parts of the world, with short descriptive text about each. Partial contents: Ostrich; Penguin; Loon; Auk; Pelican; Stork; Flamingo; Swan; Secretary bird; American eagle; Turkey; Mourning dove; Cuckoo; Parrot; Whippoorwill; Hummingbird; Quetzal; Map of the bird world. For young readers.

"[Will] serve to stimulate interest in natural history." M. L. Becker

Books p5 Jl 20 '41 20w

"Recommended only where inexpensive material is needed." Alice Brown

Library J 66:619 Jl '41 50w

"The illustrations have evidently been selected with discrimination but unfortunately, factual errors that appear in various parts of the text make this otherwise attractive little volume unreliable for youthful readers."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 100w

DE SOLA, RALPH. The reptile book [il. with phot. from Reptiles and amphibians, comp. by the N.Y. city WPA writers' project]. 59p 50c Whitman, A.

598.1 Reptiles—Juvenile literature 41-11398

"A pictorial guide to representative reptiles including alligators, rattlesnakes, chameleons, horned 'toad' and box turtle. Each reptile selected for discussion in this brief, pocket-size work for children, is illustrated by a photograph. The descriptions are written in an interesting style and the vocabulary has been planned for beginners." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Jl 20 '41 20w

Reviewed by Alice Brown

Library J 66:619 Jl '41 50w

"While this book is attractively arranged and printed, there are numerous and glaring inaccuracies that should never have been allowed to creep in."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

DE SOLA, RALPH. The zoo book [il. with phot. from Who's who in the zoo, comp. by the N.Y. city WPA writers' project]. 59p 50c Whitman, A.

599 Animals—Juvenile literature 41-11396

Photographs and short descriptive text describing twenty-six animals. Contents: Chimpanzee; Monkey; Manatee; Elephant; Rhinoceros; Zebra; Hippopotamus; Camel; Deer; Giraffe; American bison; Bighorn sheep; Armadillo; Anteater; Three-toed sloth; Porcupine; Lion; Tiger; Hyena; Fox; Polar bear; Panda; Sea lion; Bat; Opossum; Kangaroo; Map of the wild animal world.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Jl 20 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

DETJEN, MRS MARY ELIZABETH (FORD), and DETJEN, ERVIN WINFRED. Home room guidance programs for the junior high school years. 509p $1.90 Houghton 371.3322 Personnel service in education.

Junior high schools 40-13183

"Two problems that have perplexed teachers and principals since the inception of the junior high school are how to utilize effectively the time set apart for the home-room period and what to teach during this period in order that the fundamentals of guidance may be given pupils. [This book] which has contributed to the solution of these problems not only suggests many specific plans and procedures for conducting home-room programs but also contains rather comprehensive treatment of the various aspects of guidance. . . . There are six major parts corresponding to the six semesters of junior high school. Each part, prefaced by several explanatory paragraphs on methods of procedure, covers one phase of guidance. . . . The material in each part is divided into fourteen combination home-room programs and guidance lessons. The final program in each part is designed to summarize the work of the semester. Each program outline consists of a list of one to four objectives and of suggested activities through which these objectives are to be realized. A brief note to the teacher given at the end of each lesson contains instructions for any necessary advance preparation and assignments for the next home-room meeting. A bibliography, containing page and chapter references to supplementary materials to be used by both teacher and pupils, is also given at the end of most of the programs." (School R) Index.

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 53:254 F 22 '41 240w

"The book, written in somewhat detailed outline form, is a masterpiece of organization. . . . This volume should prove to be extremely valuable to home-room teachers, guidance counselors, and principals in junior high schools. Without question it is a meritorious contribution to the literature on home-room guidance." J. W. Welsh

+ School R 49:235 Mr '41 700w

DETZER, KARL WILLIAM. Carl Sandburg. 210p il $2 Harcourt

B or 92 Sandburg, Carl (W) 41-15748

A brief account of Sandburg's life combined with a study of his personality and some analysis of his work, particularly the monumental Abraham Lincoln.

Booklist 38:34 O 1 '41

"Karl Detzer's book adds a great deal to our knowledge and understanding of Sandburg and will be enjoyed by all those who want to know what the author of the Lincoln books is like." Floyd Dell

+ Books p4 S 14 '41 1050w

"It is a fine book, one that will serve well the ever growing audience of those to whom Sandburg is already becoming a saga, and it will please particularly those of us who have known Sandburg personally, who have been guests in his home, who have heard him tell his 'tall stories,' sing the songs of The American Songbag, recite his sturdy verses and strum his famous guitar." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Christian Century 59:18 Ja 7 '42 900w

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 155:22 O 15 '41 200w

DETZER, K. W.—Continued

"Mr. Detzer's piece is honest enough and (except for the jacket promise) doesn't pretend to be more than it is; but when that is said, the reader is still left with something that the average feature writer could have whacked off in a forty-hour week." Max Gissen
New Repub 105:316 S 8 '41 420w

"A careful and readable job, though perhaps not very penetrating."

+ New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 30w

"This brief and compact study of a rich and diversified personality should delight all but the pedantic. One is sure that it has been received with genuine pleasure by Carl Sandburg himself."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 480w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:531 O '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

DEUTSCH, BABETTE (MRS AVRAHM YARMOLINSKY). It's a secret! pictures by Dorothy Bayley. 48p $1 Harper 41-17879

A small lonely American boy is made happy when his parents adopt a little English chap for the duration, and not only that, but provide the much longed for dog for their son. For five- to eight-year-olds.

"The charm of this simple story is in its fidelity to small-boy nature... Easy to read with many colored pictures, it builds a vocabulary while entertaining." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 N 23 '41 140w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"The story has suspense and the illustrations are most attractive. However, the author's attitude is that of an adult writing about children rather than for them." Eleanor Blakestad
Library J 67:43 Ja 1 '42 50w

"The story is simple, but amusingly told. It will interest the preschool group, as will Dorothy Bayley's drawings, though to a grown-up the pictures may smack a little of preprimers and other pedagogical tidbits." S. J. Johnson
Library J 67:43 Ja 1 '42 50w

"This short, unpretentious story of present-day home life is first-rate of its kind for small-boy readers, whose simple excitements the author seems to understand."

+ New Yorker 17:141 D 6 '41 30w

"Diverting." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 40w

DEUTSCH, BABETTE (MRS AVRAHM YARMOLINSKY). Walt Whitman, builder for America; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 278p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Whitman, Walt—Juvenile literature (W) 41-15735

Short biography of Walt Whitman, written for teen age readers. The author "stresses the influences that made Whitman the poet of democracy, his sea-faring antecedents, his friends among workers of many kinds, his struggle for a livelihood, his physical handicaps. Nearly one-half of the book consists of a selection of those poems most likely to be read with pleasure by young people." (Horn Bk M) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"All in all, the book introduces not only Whitman but his poetry and convinces a young reader that the poetry was inseparable from the man." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 S 14 '41 280w

"Miss Deutsch knows how to write and portrays with complete sympathy one of the most enthusiastically American of poets." E. V. Wyatt
+ Cath World 154:383 D '41 180w

"We recommend young people to read this excellent book. It richly records the life of an American who spent his lifetime trying to speak 'the truth that was in him without dodging or evasion.'" F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 6 '41 200w

"A clearly written, direct biography, not so filled with side issues that essential things lose their proper weight. The choice of material for inclusion has been made with great skill." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:362 S '41 100w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:481 N '41 140w

"This is an ageless book for all those who read with imagination." Mabel Williams

+ Horn Bk M 17:490 N '41 210w

"A poet's life of Whitman, blurred as to details and magnificent in outline. Miss Deutsch makes us feel Whitman's passion for America, the grandeur and glory of the land itself, and its striving and straining towards democracy and freedom." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 90w

"Babette Deutsch pays honor to youth in writing this book for the generation which is leaving childhood behind it. It is a thoughtful, deeply felt biography. Not only the young people whom Miss Deutsch had in mind but their elders will read it with pleasure and illumination." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p6 N 2 '41 440w

"Intuitively realized, well put together, and handled with a fluent, simple warmth."

+ New Yorker 17:110 S 20 '41 50w

"A distinguished and exciting biography and portrait, as full of vigor as Walt himself and the lusty America he loved."

+ New Yorker 17:145 D 6 '41 80w

"A classic."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 D 6 '41 40w

DE WEERD, HARVEY ARTHUR. Great soldiers of the two world wars. 378p il maps $3.50 Norton

923.5 Military biography. European war, 1914-1918—Biography. World war, 1939—Biography 41-51987

Twelve portraits of soldiers and leaders, thru whose lives the author traces military history from 1914 to the present. Contents: Schlieffen; Hindenburg; Hoffmann; Kitchener; Lawrence; Pershing; Pétain; Gamelin; Churchill; Wavell; Seeckt; Hitler. Index.

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"Mr. De Weerd's [are] excellent short biographies. [His] evaluations are careful and cautious; they fall pretty consistently into the middle ground of the controversies which have raged around so many of these figures, and therefore present no startlingly new concepts." Walter Millis

+ Books p8 N 23 '41 600w

"A valuable job, well done and only mildly technical."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 15 '41 40w

Social Studies 33:46 Ja '42 20w

DE WITT, JACK. Murder on Shark island. 328p $2 Liveright 42-2241

Detective story.

"Clint and his wife, Letty, appear to be a cut above their surroundings, mostly foreigners and society people. Direct action, all but incredible villainy and love's young dream, also a knock-down surprise at the end. Over nobody's head." Will Cuppy
Books p28 N 16 '41 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 D 7 '41 200w

"Thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 29 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 70w

DE WOLF, KAREN. Take the laughter. 320p $2.50 Bobbs

41-3534

Sherry, an innocent girl from the Middlewest, who determined to become a Hollywood actress, is the central figure. Around her revolve her friends, Mona who left their little home to go off with a wealthy man; Peter, who married Sherry; and the three—Sandro, Kris and Tony—who cared for Sherry during a severe illness. Success came to her as a writer, after Peter's death, and Sherry went about the difficult business of deciding which of the three other men in her life was the right one.

Books p20 Mr 2 '41 220w

"Most of this complicated story is revealed in dialogue, fortunately of the kind commonly described as brittle. Much of it is both naughty and amusing." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 9 '41 360w

DIBBERN, GEORGE JOHN. Quest. 421p $3 Norton

B or 92 Voyages and travels 41-6877

Dissatisfied with the turn of affairs in Germany in 1930, and with his own inability to cope with the major problems of living, the author bought a thirty-two foot yacht, the Te Kapunga, and set out on a five-year cruise to New Zealand. During the voyage he meditated on the meaning of life, and his version of the brotherhood of man, and in this book has written the story of his voyage and the results of his meditations.

"As a chronicle of small-boat sailing in wide waters his book is entirely irresistible to such of us as keep track of the vast literature of this subject. As an account of what he conceives to be his real quest, his primary adventure, it may be found somewhat less generally irresistible." Wilson Follett

+ — Atlantic My '41 200w

"George Dibbern and his little boat with the title that means 'hope' will hardly bring the world together; the thoughts he dug from his hours of meditation will not go down in history beside those of Aquinas and Luther. But he and the Te Rapunga are important to every one who wants to believe in the future of man. He is a common, average man. He broke away from the nationalism of Germany; he sought his God and found Him. To save the world we may all have to follow his example. This is what speaks from the pages of this heroic story so gently and ably told." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p4 Mr 16 '41 1400w

Reviewed by Edward Schrifgiesser
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '41 500w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt
Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 100w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 29 '41 230w
New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 50w

"Written in English apparently, this diary-like narrative shows some rough edges and other evidence of an unskilled hand. One wonders at times that more editing was not done, and then it turns out that the passage that seemed awkward and windy succeeds in catching the event better than any disciplined pen could have. Even the present tense, used throughout, gives the reader a sense of participation." H. A. Stevens

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '41 1400w

"The sentimental egotism which dominates the author's personality may irritate some readers. Others will doubtless find something of interest in his purely marine adventures."

New Yorker 17:87 Mr 22 '41 50w

"If you are looking for a tale of the sea, you will not find it in this book. Dibbern claims to love the sea and its diverse moods, and possibly this is true. But if that love existed, then it was a warped and selfish love, for to Dibbern being a sailor meant no more than holding the tiller while a harassed and over-worked companion did the dirty work of the moment. Dibbern had no time nor inclination for navigation or keeping his craft ship-shape. Sea gulls befouled the decks while he read the New Testament or pondered on the moodiness of his mate. In the end it becomes increasingly apparent that Dibbern's quest is for some nebulous Utopia where responsibilities do not exist." J. H. Smyth

Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 15 '41 320w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 167:290 S 19 '41 220w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Ag 16 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

DICHTER, HARRY, and SHAPIRO, ELLIOTT. Early American sheet music: its lure and its lore, 1763-1889; including a directory of early American music publishers. 287p il $7.50 Bowker

781.971 Music—Bibliography. Music publishers 41-7397

"The book is a series of specimen lists (inclusiveness would require many volumes) of existing music sheets, classified under various of the principal headings sought by different collectors, with a description of the first known edition of each piece; to all of which there are added lists of the early music publishers and music-cover lithographers, with their successive addresses—a useful means of dating early music—and reproductions of some of the charming old pictorial cover plates. The classifications include songs and tunes about, or associated with, the Presidents, the American wars, Washington, Lafayette . . . fires and firemen, Jenny Lind, Uncle Tom's Cabin, Stephen Foster, [etc]. (New Repub) Index.

"Designed primarily as a 'cross-section of the more interesting and important items' it is a welcome reference volume for the increasing number of collectors in this field."

+ Books p11 S 7 '41 80w

"Only a collector or a prospective collector will want this book, but he will need it." Abbe Niles

New Repub 105:165 Ag 4 '41 240w
Pratt p18 D '41

DICK, EVERETT NEWFON. Vanguarders of the frontier. 574p il map $5 Appleton-Century
978 West—History. Frontier and pioneer life—West (W) 41-6157

A companion volume to the author's The Sod-House Frontier (Book Review Digest, 1937), preceding that work in point of time covered. The earlier work dealt with the settlers; this deals with those who traveled the western plains before the settlers came, shadowy figures—fur traders, mountain men, soldiers, Indian agents, missionaries, and traders. "It seeks to discover their manner of living, their dress, food, ways of enjoying themselves, methods of labor, and their mode of life in general. . . The area under consideration . . . includes the whole northern portion of the United States from the Mississippi to, and including, the Rocky Mountains." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Only one Montana newspaper and none from Wyoming are listed in the bibliography, as compared to fourteen Kansas papers and eleven from Nebraska. The early Montana press was excellent, and had the author so desired, he could have found much Canadian material available on the northernmost section of the Great Plains and Rocky Mountains. Aside from this slight discrepancy between title and text, Professor Dick's latest book comes up to expectations as a detailed study of the life and manners of those various intrepid groups of Americans who left their imprint on the trans-Mississippi West before the advent of the agricultural settler. Its wealth of material and fascinating subject matter are presented in a manner that should appeal to the student of the West and the general reader alike." Walcott Watson

DICK, E. N.—Continued

+ Am Hist R 47:369 Ja '42 650w

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

"Taken together with 'The Sod House Frontier,' this second volume constitutes as scholarly and readable a social history of the period from the early 1800s through the 1870s as has been written." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p5 My 18 '41 850w

"As a general survey, in spite of all defects, the volume is really a fine one. It has what appears to be an excellent bibliography, and is well indexed. As a history of a fascinating and 'important' part of American life it remains rather an indication than a fulfillment. It will need an author who is more a historian and less a chronicler, and more a sociologist and less historian, to write the story as it could be written." George Pettee

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 430w

"Barring a few errors in detail . . . the book is thoroughly dependable; its enormous material is admirably organized and it constitutes a veritable encyclopedia on day-by-day living in the vast wilderness. It should prove an invaluable source book for students, and a gold mine for those who aspire to write realistic fiction about the Old West." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 5 '41 600w

"The book reveals excellent scholarship combined with considerable writing skill. It is well illustrated." J. B. Parrish

+ Churchman 155:19 My 1 '41 210w

"The value of Professor Dick's book does not depend upon its interpretations. It is to be found rather in 'the variegated pageant of the forest, plains, streams and mountains,' which he has described with such faithfulness and such enthusiasm." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p3 My 25 '41 1250w

"A superior piece of work, ably digested from original sources and full of good vernacular detail."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Mr 22 '41 50w

Social Studies 32:238 My '41 20w

Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DICTIONARY of American history; James Truslow Adams, ed. in chief; R. V. Coleman, managing editor. 6v Index volume 258p set $60 Scribner [£15 Oxford]

973.03 U.S.—History—Dictionaries

"This is the final volume of the Dictionary of American history, reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1940 [Book Review Digest, 1940]. . . The Index omits the separate articles in the main text which are arranged in alphabetical order. . . The Index aims to make available additional facts or interpretations in related articles. If a separate article on a desired subject is not found in the main text, the Index may list one or more articles dealing with subjects related to it. Although the main text contains no biographical articles, all those giving significant information about a particular individual are listed under his name in the Index." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

N Y Times p4 D 7 '41 1800w (Review of set)

"Unquestionably, the Index adds to the usefulness of the Dictionary of American history. The recommendation of the Dictionary of American History is quoted from the original review: 'Because of its broad scope, its value as a "quick reference" tool, its timeliness and the authentic, simple and clear manner in which its material is presented, this dictionary is recommended for high school, public and college libraries.'

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:38 Jl '41 370w

DIEBOLD, WILLIAM. New directions in our trade policy. 174p $2 Council on foreign relations

337.0973 U.S.—Commercial policy. U.S.—Commerce. World war, 1939—Economic aspects—U.S. 41-6887

"While [this] is primarily a study of war's impact on our previous peace-time trading policies, Mr. Diebold does not neglect future problems: continued aid to Britain; checking Japanese aggression; economic defense of Latin America; and what may be expected in the event Germany wins, if there is a stalemate, or if Britain is victorious. In conclusion, he considers without too much wishful thinking the future of liberal commercial policies." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography, Index.

"Although Mr. Diebold's discussion is intentionally by no means exhaustive, it is penetrating." Carl Kreider

+ Am Econ R 31:634 S '41 500w

"One of the most stimulating studies of United States trade policies yet to appear. . . Without sacrificing standards of scholarship, the author makes his subject as refreshing and as timely as a morning newspaper." J. D. Larkin

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:792 Ag '41 750w

"This book is recommended to students as well as general readers. Though far from exhaustive, the treatment is by no means superficial, despite the sweeping panorama of post-war exigencies pictured in the concluding chapter." L. R. Robinson

+ Ann Am Acad 218:225 N '41 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:877 Jl '41 60w

Reviewed by O. B. Ryder

J Pol Econ 49:944 D '41 1300w

"'New Directions in Our Trade Policy' is unquestionably a competent book, but it is not comparable with a similar study proposing a similar trade program made about the same time by Mordecai Ezekiel for International Reconciliation. Its fundamental deficiency is that it does not reach down to the economic roots of our foreign-trade policy. Its proposals, therefore, sensible though they often are, seem to be picked at random like butterflies out of the air." Rubin Gotesky

+ — New Repub 105:442 O 6 '41 600w

DIEHL, HAROLD SHEELY. Healthful living; with a foreword by Morris Fishbein. (Whittlesey house health ser) new ed rev 499p il map $2.75 McGraw

613 Hygiene

41-2950

"A revision of a well-known book by the dean of medical sciences at the University of Minnesota. . . Besides bringing the statements up to date and enlarging certain sections, such as the one on the cost of medical care, the author has shifted part of the material, added a chapter on 'Modern Parenthood,' which deals mainly with maternal and infant care, and introduced pictorial graphs." (J Home Econ) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935, Index.

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41

"Intended originally for college students, the book is equally useful to any intelligent layman who wishes to understand personal hygiene."

+ J Home Econ 33:264 Ap '41 70w

DIETRICH, ETHEL BARBARA. Far Eastern trade of the United States. 116p $1 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council [5s Allen, G] 382 U.S.—Commerce—East (Far East).
East (Far East)—Commerce—U.S.—
Commercial policy 41-51506

"Dr. Dietrich [is] professor of economics, Mount Holyoke College. . . [Her] first chapter gives a general review of American Far Eastern trade, stressing its growing significance and the changes, especially of recent years. The trade with Japan, China, the Philippines, Malaya, and the Netherlands Indies is taken up individually. In the final chapter the author examines the instruments of American commercial policy as they confront complex barriers to trade. There are a statistical appendix and an index." Geog R

"Dr. Dietrich manages to present the highlights of American commercial relations with the Orient in a manner which should be helpful both to the average student and to those already well informed. Many points commonly overlooked in more generalized textual treatments of American commerce are covered, such as cartel controls of tin and rubber and specific phases of reciprocal trade policy. For the specialist on the Far East, however, the book leaves some things to be desired. Certain problems are insufficiently covered. Somewhat more could have been made of the possible bases of trade relations with China or of the necessary considerations for Japanese commerce if Japan loses in her bid for power. The tendency to canvass the likely results of a Japanese ascendancy, though desirable, should not blind us to the situation which may be faced in a victorious China, or to the conditions which a durable peace in the Far East may require with reference to Japan. The consideration of the future of the Open Door might have been carried somewhat further." A. G. Coons
+ — Am Econ R 31:399 Je '41 650w

"There are a few minor typographical errors. Miss Dietrich deserves much credit for having digested a great deal of material in order to put it in a form valuable to the busy reader." A. E. Nuquist

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:394 Ap '41 120w

Reviewed by W. P. Maddox
Ann Am Acad 215:182 My '41 220w
Booklist 37:236 F 1 '41

Reviewed by Shannon McCune
Geog R 31:341 Ap '41 250w

DIGGES, JEREMIAH, pseud. See Berger, J.

DILTS, MARION MAY (MRS PAUL KOPP). Telephone in a changing world. 219p il $2.50 Longmans

621.385 Telephone (W) 41-51774

Anecdotal history of the invention, development, and growth of the telephone to its present universal importance. Contains chapters on the place of the telephone in American life, and on telephone by-products. The author is a former member of the Bell Laboratories technical staff. Index.

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by Norman Stabler
Books p42 D 7 '41 230w

"Elementary, non-technical, but interesting treatment from the point of view that 'the Bell System is, in many ways, the finest example of capitalism at its best.'" H. A. von Urrf

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 130w

"The book is crisply written and well illustrated."

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 27 '41 500w

"Should be widely read." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 90w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 10w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

DINGLE, HERBERT. The special theory of relativity. 94p $1.50 Chemical pub. co. [3s 6d Methuen]

530.1 Relativity (physics) 41-10702

"The author, who is Professor of Natural Philosophy at the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London, advances the idea that this book may serve as an introduction to Professor McCrea's Relativity Physics [London, 1935]. He explains that the two books differ in that his book 'examines in detail the effect of the relativity theory on the fundamental concepts of physics, without attempting to estimate the influence of the resulting modification of physical concepts on the whole structure of physical theory,' while McCrea's book 'is concerned mainly with the scope of the theory.' This book is based on a short course of lectures given in recent years to Honours Physics students at the Imperial College." N Y New Tech Bks

"Short as it is, this little book manages to contain good, bad, and indifferent material. Its general comments on the significance of the theory, contained in the first and last chapter and scattered in some other parts, are its best feature. The anti-metaphysical emphasis and the warnings against hypostatization of mathematical concepts should receive general approbation, though doubtless only occasional complete agreement—the tone is still a bit too subjective for the reviewer's taste, for example. The algebraic developments which fill most of the three chapters before the last are standard material, more or less indifferently well done. As for the bad part of the book, a glance at Chapters III and IV will reveal it to any physicist, and probably make him shudder to think of its ever being used as a text for 'Honours Physics Students' or for anyone else. . . Professor Dingle's ability to talk well about theories is considerable, and most of us can get pleasure and a certain amount of profit from listening. When he tries to expound a theory itself in its essentials, the result is very different." W. H. Furry

+ — Am Chem Soc J 64:189 Ja '42 350w

"All students concerned with the fundamental concepts of physical science will find much of interest and of value in this booklet." F. H. MacDougall

+ J Phys Chem 45:1141 O '41 90w

Reviewed by W. H. McCrea
Nature 147:100 Ja 25 '41 1050w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:28 Ap '41

DINGWELL, WILBUR, ed. See Handbook annual of the theatre

DISRAELI, ROBERT. Uncle Sam's treasury. 121p il $1.25 Little

353.2 U.S. Treasury department. Money (W) 41-7536

The author of Here Comes the Mail (Book Review Digest, 1939) describes in text and photograph the story of how our money is minted, dispensed, and used by the Treasury department to supply our needs and requirements. For elementary grades thru high school.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"Photographs save pages of description; the text makes plain, straight statements and pictures bring these to life. It is the way they are blended that makes the book so useful." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 18 '41 200w

"Both school and public library will find a wide range of use for this material." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 90w

DIVINE, ARTHUR DURHAM (DAVID RAME, pseud). The sun shall greet them. 290p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 41-16059

One Englishman's reaction to the evacuation of Dunkirk, and his part in it. He was an intellectual and an idealist, and his first feeling was that his country was not worth saving. Aroused from his lethargy by a girl air warden, he took part in that perilous adventure of bringing back stranded soldiers to England from the inferno at Dunkirk. After three nights of exhausting, courageous work, he himself is brought back gravely wounded to the England and the girl he now loves above everything else.

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

"This novel is distinguished by what we have come to recognize are the best qualities of the English people, quiet dignity and heroic understatement. . . We are all familiar with the outline of this story. What Mr. Rame has done, however, is to cover the skeleton of facts known to us with the flesh and blood of personal experience. His words carry the conviction of one who has been eyewitness to a miracle." Milton Hindus

+ Books p4 S 7 '41 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Gives us as good a first-hand account as we are likely to get of one aspect of the evacuation, but the fictional part appears a little dull by comparison." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 O 10 '41 70w

"The love story in this setting goes to near farce; the fear of cowardice at the end of sturdy heroism is not only poorly built up for any realism but is anticlimax; and there is a little too much talk about the wine of glory for its own sake or for personal redemption. David Rame had a magnificent story, just in the detail of those days, the unspoken belief and passion of a country rising to its feet and beyond itself. But he tried to make it more magnificent, with writing. The writing is not bad, but there is more than enough of it to smother Dunkirk." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:412 S 29 '41 420w

"The whole story needs for its inclusive and perfect telling a survivor who, because he was a man of action as well as of imagination, has been bruised in soul as in body by the inhuman brutality of modern warfare. Because it is the book of a thinker it has very much more than appears on the surface, though that is far from little. . . So, very simply, very honestly, we are shown the heart and mind of a man who loves England and believes it is well worth fighting for." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 S 14 '41 700w

"Mr. Rame piloted a small boat in and out of the port of Dunkerque during the evacuation of British troops last year. Accordingly, when in this novel about the evacuation he says that a number of participants, in spite of wounds and exhaustion, quoted Shakespeare, we probably should believe him. The whole novel is on a pretty noble plane."

New Yorker 17:75 S 13 '41 50w

Pratt p12 D '41

Spring'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 1000w

"With a little judgment the story need not have been quite so shy-making. Though the author is concerned with what Brandon feels rather than with what he does or observes, there are little sketches of the business of evacuation that quicken imagination in the reader. The heroics, the poeticizing, the doses of Shakespeare and Keats, the amorous passages, however, are of the kind that one would wish to be spared. Mr. Rame is fluent enough, but this is scarcely the way to write about the evacuation from Dunkirk."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p473 S 20 '41 300w

DIX, BEULAH MARIE (MRS G. H. FLEBBE). Wedding eve murder. 248p $2 McBride

41-5146

Mystery story.

"A good book, but awfully upsetting." Marian Wiggan

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 80w

"This is an exceedingly well-built story, as each apparently unimportant incident deepens the bewildering shadow that hangs over the Jordan household after the seemingly quite unconnected murder of the disreputable Tony Broderick in a low-class hotel. And as Sue begins to understand something of what has actually happened she finds herself ensnared in a dreadful peril. The story has not ended with the disclosure of the murderer's identity, and the author's skill piles up the interest to the last page." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '41 270w

"For the mystery fan who likes to be kept dangling in suspense and hurtled along to a satisfactory conclusion, this story will serve adequately."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 120w

DIXON, RUSSELL A., and EBERHART, ENNIS KINGMAN. Economic institutions and cultural change. 529p $3 McGraw

330 Economics. Culture 41-14871

"This introductory text is a companion volume to Dixon and Eberhart's Economics and Cultural Change. In the present work the author analyzes six basic institutions: property, the price system, free enterprise, technology, the corporation, and consumption. A social rather than individual point of view is maintained in the evaluation of these institutions. In each case the author traces in broad outline the origins of the institution, its development, structure, and functions so that the process of institutional growth and modification can be more fully appreciated." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"The omission of production, land, agriculture, labor, and the market, in the sense that none of these factors is given well-rounded treatment, is a genuine defect. Of these, the market receives most attention, in the section on the price system. For those unacquainted with institutional economic writing, the volume is a readable introduction to some of the major subjects discussed by institutionalists." Harvey Pinney

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1215 D '41 340w

"The book is intended as an introductory text, presumably for students in economics. To many economists it will seem too limited in scope for such a purpose, and perhaps too broadly philosophical. It is the opinion of the reviewer, however, that it will serve better to develop an understanding of our present economic situation than most of the texts in common use." John Ise

+ Ann Am Acad 218:229 N '41 330w

Pratt p9 D '41

DIXON, WILLIAM MACNEILE. Thoughts for the times. 51p 75c Longmans [1s 6d Jackson, son & co]

940.53 World war, 1939—Great Britain. National characteristics, German

The Ker Memorial lecture for 1940, delivered at the University of Glasgow. "It is written in terms of the Satanic theory of history" (Books) and contrasts the characteristics of the Germans and the English, and their aims in the present war.

"A first-class specimen of war literature. . . This is a book of passionate patriotism—of patriotism in war time, stricken, sore and angry. Its sincerity is unquestionable. What one misses is that sense of cosmic tragedy and profound pity for mankind which characterize great minds in dark hours of universal woe."

J. H. Holmes

Books p20 O 19 '41 260w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 1 '41 320w

"Buy a copy of this book for yourself and place it alongside the best thoughts struck off by John Milton when once before Englishmen were struggling for freedom. Buy a copy for a friend whose faith is wavering. Best of all, work tirelessly and patiently that the glorious end for which the volume speaks may come to pass." W. H. Dunn

+ N Y Times p25 O 26 '41 650w

School & Society 54:480 N 22 '41 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p243 My 17 '41 100w

DOANE, ROBERT RUTHERFORD. The anatomy of American wealth. 345p $2.50 Harper 330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. Wealth 40-35371

"The story of our physical assets (sometimes called wealth) and their allocation as to form and use among the people." (Subtitle) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"The author's style is commendable. For the most part each table is well documented and the author's methods of estimating are clearly explained. This volume gives form and content and meaning to statements often heard and read that ours is an economy of abundance, not of scarcity. In this sense, it is a landmark in wealth studies." F. G. Dickinson

+ Am Econ R 31:352 Je '41 1250w

Management R 29:420 N '40 40w

"Robert Doane's Measurement of American Wealth," published in 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1934] was an outstanding accomplishment. This new study is far from being merely an elaboration of or addendum to his earlier work. . . . The new book deserves praise for two positive contributions. It insists that a full and detailed decennial survey of American wealth should be a prescribed part of the duties of the Bureau of the Census. Using such data as are available, it presents component analyses of American wealth for the years 1930 and 1938. For the sake of these contributions, we may overlook shortcomings that mar an otherwise valuable study—a considerable amount of padding inserted to expand the study to book size, and the slapdash manner in which this padded material has been written." W. J. Shultz

+ — Survey G 30:354 Je '41 300w

DOBBINS, GAINES STANLEY. Can a religious democracy survive? by introd. by John R. Sampey. 212p $1.50 Revell

263.86 Sunday schools. Baptists. Church and state. Religious liberty 41-5082

A historical survey of the Baptist churches and the Baptist Sunday school movement. The author views the churches as examples of religious democracies and the Sunday schools as training grounds. The book was written especially for the fiftieth anniversary of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board. The author is connected with the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board and is Professor of Religious Education in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Bibliography.

Christian Century 58:363 Mr 12 '41 50w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:195 O '41 10w

DOBIE, JAMES FRANK. The longhorns; ll. by Tom Lea. 388p $3.50 Little

636.2 Cattle. Cowboys. Ranch life. Southwest (W) 41-51625

The longhorns of the American southwest are descendants of the cattle which the early Spanish explorers brought to this continent. Their history, tall tales about them, folklore, verse, and the men who herded the cattle, are rounded up in this volume. Index.

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

"The style is honest, being refreshingly free from theatricalism and hocus-pocus. Much of the material, as was inevitable, has been well known for years, and some of the incidents are trivial (some persons will say that a whole book about a lot of long-horned cattle is bound to be trivial), but it all adds up to a full-bodied volume which belongs on the shelves of any man with the remotest interest in Southwestern history." Stanley Walker

+ Books p5 Mr 9 '41 1300w

Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 240w

Reviewed by J. G. F. Speiden

Current Hist & Forum 53:4 Je '41 440w

"The story is finished. Mr. Dobie, digressing, anecdotal, makes it live again so that no one who loves the old West will want to miss his book. And though the men in the story are almost incidental, the America of 1941 is probably the more 'proud and free' because of them." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 16 '41 1400w

"Based on prime American source material, both written and oral, and done perfectly in the cow country's own language. . . . Appropriate illustrations, one in color, by Tom Lea, plus a gallery of remarkable photographs of longhorns."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Mr 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Sabin

Sat R of Lit 24:12 Jl 5 '41 410w

Time 37:94 Mr 17 '41 850w

DOBSON, JAMES ORAM. Worship. 190p $1.25 Macmillan [5s Student]

264 Worship

"'Man must needs worship' is the author's opening sentence and the theme of his first chapter. That is to say, he begins with deep human need and a basic human urge. Man is the worshipping animal. The volume reveals a contemporary worship movement in England—as well as in our own country—which is causing much thought among the leaders of both established and free churches. Chapter headings are very familiar to American readers: 'The Necessity of Worship,' 'The Nature of Worship,' 'Christian Worship,' 'The Manner of Worship,' 'Art in Worship,' 'The Future of Worship,' 'The Sermon in Worship,' and 'The Fulfillment of Worship.' . . . In Chapter IV the author deals with the manner of worship advocated by the various Reformers. This constitutes one of the most instructive sections of his book; he begins with Luther and ends with the Wesleys and the Quakers." Crozer Q

"To meet the layman's needs and to hold his interest, it is simple, concrete and easily intelligible. And just because it is adapted to the layman's need and follows the movement of his mind, it will be useful to those who lead in worship."

+ Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 60w

Churchman 156:31 Ja 15 '42 70w

"The reviewer estimates this a concise, thorough, and wise presentation of the essentials of Christian worship. The author writes directly, and has a happy faculty of illuminating his thought by apt quotation, particularly from the poets." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 18:344 O '41 400w

DODD, WILLIAM EDWARD. Ambassador Dodd's diary, 1933-1938; ed. by William E. Dodd, Jr. and Martha Dodd; with an introd. by Charles A. Beard. 464p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs. U.S.—Foreign relations—Germany. Germany—Foreign relations—U.S. Germany—Nazi movement (W) 41-51521

Diary of the Chicago professor who served as American ambassador to Berlin during the critical years, 1933 to 1938. Index.

DODD, W. E.—Continued

Reviewed by T. A. Bailey

Am Hist R 47:390 Ja '42 850w

"The diary is an interesting and significant story of the plunge of the aggressors toward world power, and is an essential book for students of diplomacy and of recent history." D. F. Fleming

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:799 Ag '41 360w

"Ambassador Dodd's Diary is certainly an important and indispensable mine of information on world events and people dominating the scene of the thirties of our century." Hans Kohn

+ Ann Am Acad 215:203 My '41 750w

Atlantic Ap '41 220w

Booklist 37:269 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:11 My '41

"Ambassador Dodd was not a graceful diarist, and there is a good deal that is unimportant or irrelevant in the book; but by winnowing through the mass one may glean not a few tart and juicy comments on prominent persons, some interesting further details on the diplomatic history of the first years of the Hitler empire, and the total impression of an elderly gentleman who, for all his old-fashioned angularity, knew, better than many, what things were all about." Walter Millis

+ — Books p3 Mr 2 '41 1450w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 700w

"A vastly entertaining and also an illuminating book." J. McS.

+ Cath World 153:115 Ap '41 750w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '41 650w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley

Churchman 155:18 Mr '41 250w

"The diary is a rarely honest and impersonal work. With the careful objectivity of the scholar, Mr. Dodd manages to focus attention wholly on external events. Even the personal details, although they add to the solidity of the narrative, give no sense of the man himself. The reader cannot help but admire such an impartial recording of the facts after the emotional discussions that have come out of Europe since the outbreak of the war. But this is not unmixed with a sense of disappointment, a feeling that here is but the raw material which should be animated by some sort of form." Margaret Stern

+ — Commonweal 33:547 Mr 21 '41 900w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:879 J1 '41 80w

"One of the few books on contemporary Germany that will last." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 90w

Living Age 360:293 My '41 450w

"No future study of the causes of World War II will be complete without full cognizance of Dodd's diary, for as his children have written, he 'kept the democratic faith in an age of betrayal.'" E. A. Mowrer

+ Nation 152:272 Mr 8 '41 1250w

"Ambassador Dodd returned to this country literally to die, but before his death he threw his remaining strength into last efforts by writing and speaking to set before his countrymen the fate which threatened them in a world given over to violence. His diary is prophecy as well as history." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 104:315 Mr 3 '41 1500w

"A diary has the virtue of mirroring the secret soul of the author, but ordinarily it is of questionable propriety to publish that of a public man for years after he and his contemporaries have passed from the scene. Unless consciously written for the public, it inevitably contains observations on men, written often in moments of irritation and without justification, which the writer, on reflection, would wish to moderate or strike out. The diary of Ambassador Dodd, however, should be published now because it deals with conditions of vital concern to us right now, and contains a warning for the future." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 2 '41 2550w

"An important and engrossing work on an important subject."

+ New Yorker 17:58 Mr 1 '41 180w

Pratt p4 spring '41

"Ambassador Dodd is now silent. But his book, filled with shocking revelations speaks louder than he would possibly have dared. He was a sincere, noble soul, not a cunning diplomat or a fighting prophet. It is still not too late to listen to the truth as it shines out from a revealing document, a moving crusade against international intrigues, and a proud confession of democratic spirit written in simple and fearless style." H. E. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Mr 8 '41 700w

Social Studies 32:240 My '41 30w

"There are reported conversations and interpretations of actions which might come in for criticism. It is also questionable whether certain references to the expression of opinion, especially by Germans, should not have been excluded, if only because of the danger those named might run in Nazi Germany today. But the Diary will certainly serve as a valuable contribution to our knowledge of how the Diplomatic Corps in Berlin was thinking in those days, especially as it is written by a man who had access to so much and dared to write it." Robert Powell

+ Spec 166:347 Mr 28 '41 1050w

"Mr Dodd's brilliant earlier books are valuable contributions to American history, but are somewhat emotional in deduction. Throughout this diary Mr Dodd's emotionalism of judgment is apparent, though it colors the historical passages far less than the personal comment. In spite of his praise of liberal culture and the methods of scholarship, Mr Dodd seems seldom to have disciplined his personal or political opinions, especially where American affairs were concerned. In particular, he grew distrustful of the state department and of those in its service at home and abroad. He seems rarely to have doubted that anything he proposed, or approved, was right."

Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 1400w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 8 '41 1250w

"Of the rise of this new world of force Ambassador Dodd has many interesting details to tell in his diary, which he kept during the time he was American Ambassador to Berlin. Unfortunately the diary is not well edited. Neither is the index sufficient, nor is it made clear whether there are any omissions and whether a selection was made." Hans Kohn

+ — Survey G 30:300 My '41 460w

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 29 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

Reviewed by Hajo Holborn

Yale R n s 30:626 spring '41 1350w

DODDS, JOHN WENDELL. Thackeray: a critical portrait. 257p $3 Oxford

823 Thackeray, William Makepeace 41-22842

Critical study of Thackeray's writings, arranged chronologically, which attempts "to trace the growth of a mind and at the same time to identify the quality of an art in fiction." (Pref) The first half of the book is devoted to Thackeray's apprentice years. The remainder contains discussions of Vanity Fair, Pendennis, Henry Esmond, and The Newcomes. Index.

"Thackeray's habit of digression, the ambiguity of attitude that sometimes blurs his characterizations, his apparent shallowness and mediocrity as a moralist, his apparent subservience to Victorian conventions—these and other stock complaints Professor Dodds comments on painstakingly and, on the whole, discriminatingly. Sometimes he is unfortunate in his phrasing. . . . On the whole Professor Dodds shows sound judgment in his handling of these matters. In his effort to identify the quality of Thackeray's work as an artist he has not been so successful." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

+ — Books p26 D 7 '41 460w

"Not quite critical, but the best available in that Thackeray has been neglected as a modern subject."

New Repub 106:93 Ja 19 '42 60w

"What Mr. Dodds has written is, on the whole, the best book we have about Thackeray." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p14 D 21 '41 600w

"This book is well worth buying for its own sake, and no student of Thackeray's life, no one who treasures fresh information about a life heroic in its uncomplaining shouldering of tragedy, can afford to miss the extracts from letters which are here printed for the first time. I wish Dr. Dodds could persuade the Thackeray trustees to allow him to edit a complete collection of all extant correspondence. No man ever did his name such disservice as did Thackeray when he professed to object to any authorized biography." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 D 27 '41 600w

"Taine quarreled with Thackeray because he did not write like Balzac, although his themes were basically similar, but Mr Dodds seems wholly to ignore the analogy between Thackeray and the great Frenchman. However, it is unfair to raise even this slight objection to the book since the author has been so generous in his own analysis of Thackeray's style and mannerisms. He quotes frequently, but at temperate lengths, giving passages which illustrate the critical and appreciative points more ably than pages of critical commentary. In addition there are excellent and completely illuminating footnotes, and a few quotations from letters hitherto unpublished." L. S. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 1 '41 650w

DODGE, DAVID. Death and taxes. 277p $2 Macmillan

41-10679

Detective story.

"The story picks up remarkably after a heavy dose of financial details and winds up at lightning pace. Mr. Dodge works overtime to pump alcoholic and fleshly thrills into a tale that needed no such desperate measures. Fast and easy to read." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p9 Jl 20 '41 150w

Christian Century 58:99 Jl 30 '41 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 Jl 6 '41 240w

"Fine, meaty story."

+ New Yorker 17:72 Jl 12 '41 50w

"Hard-hitting and well-knit—the 'find' of the month."

+ Time 38:76 Ag 4 '41 50w

DOHERTY, EDWARD JOSEPH. Gall and honey; the story of a newspaperman. 300p $2.50 Sheed

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 42-1455

The autobiography of a newspaper man, son of a Chicago police lieutenant. At thirteen he decided to be a monk, and entered a Servite monastery; by the time he was fifteen he had changed his mind, and returned to his home to begin his newspaper life. He records his experiences on various Chicago papers: the Examiner, Record-Herald, and Tribune, and on Liberty; describes his work as a scenario writer in Hollywood; and tells the story of his two marriages, all in a form as interesting as fiction.

"This is the autobiography of a newspaper man—only that and nothing more, thank goodness. Edward Doherty doesn't waste time telling shabby little incidents of his moments with the great and near great. . . He doesn't even pretend to be pals with the famous men of his profession. He just tells his own story, without fuss and with skill and economy of words. It's a grand yarn." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p10 D 28 '41 950w

"Ed Doherty has the ability to speak of his own intimately personal affairs in the same offhand style that he would employ to describe a murder trial. Perhaps these pages will not only deeply affect many a reader but even turn more than one back to the pursuit of forgotten ideals and to the practice of religion."

+ Cath World 154:508 Ja '42 170w

DOLE, MALCOLM. Glass electrode; methods, applications, and theory. 332p $4.50 Wiley

541.37 Electrodes 41-16574

"The author, who has already contributed much to the theoretical understanding as well as to the application of the glass electrode, now presents a well-balanced presentation of the theory of and the performance of measurements with the glass electrode. . . The book consists of seventeen chapters and an appendix. The chapters deal with the significance of hydrogen-ion concentrations, classical methods for the determination of pH, E.M.F.-measuring circuits, types of glass electrodes, reference electrodes, cell assemblies and liquid-junction potentials, limitations of the glass electrode in strongly alkaline, acid, and non-aqueous solutions, temperature effects, application of the glass electrode in pure and applied chemistry and in industry (the sugar industry is not mentioned), automatic pH control, micro methods, potentiometric titrations with the glass electrode, the theory of the glass electrode, and the standardization of pH scale. The appendix contains useful tables and graphs." (J Phys Chem) Indexes.

"Dr. Dole has performed a valuable service in writing this book. It contains an excellent history of the glass electrode, an extensive exposition of its construction and uses and a voluminous bibliography. Indeed it is hard to think of a paper on the subject which is not mentioned, and the more important articles are fully and critically reviewed." Donald Belcher

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:3543 D '41 550w

"Those of us who use the glass electrode for the routine measurement and control of pH are under obligation to Professor Dole for the comprehensive manner in which he has assembled the facts relating to this important tool. Not only has he critically summarized published work which, as the author states, is almost entirely a product of the last decade, but he has also quoted from extensive correspondence with users of the instrument. This, together with the first-hand knowledge of the glass electrode acquired by the author in his own researches on the subject, has led to a monograph of practical value to the laboratory worker." L. G. Longworth

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:1120 O 10 '41 550w

"Since, in recent years, the glass electrode has become the most important electrode for the potentiometric determination of pH, the publication of this up-to-date book will be welcomed by the many workers in the field. . . The treatment of the material is admirably objective and exact. The discussion of the limitations of the glass electrode and its sources of error should be read by anyone who applies the glass electrode in his work. The literature is reviewed in a critical and objective way. In addition, the author has obtained from many industrial sources much unpublished material dealing with industrial applications and the technique of the measurements." I. M. Kolthoff

+ J Phys Chem 45:1416 D '41 290w

DOLLOND, JOHN. A gentleman hangs. 306p $2 Macmillan [8s Longmans]

41-3420

Detective story.

"This gentle reader, is a mystery written to your taste. For your money you get three whole hangings and all about it described in a manner at once fresh, unpretentious, amusing in spots and so generally agreeable that John Dollond may be mentioned in the same breath with Ngaio Marsh—Grade A fans please note." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 F 9 '41 160w

"Some fun." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 80w

Christian Century 58:192 F 5 '41 20w

"The plot is clever and cleverly worked out, and the detective interest is sure to hold the reader's attention and likely to baffle his efforts to find the solution for himself." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 13 '40 140w

"My only complaints against this exceptionally well-constructed book are the padding and the hero's name. The padding is voluminous recapitulation of evidence chapter after chapter by the hero and his friends. Fortunately it can be skipped as it is inserted in solid chunks. The hero's name is Smiling; and it is impossible for him to smile at the beginning of a sentence without confusion." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:590 D 7 '40 200w

"This story is a real baffler and good entertainment as well." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 F 9 '41 240w

"The tale is neatly told."

+ New Yorker 16:56 F 1 '41 50w

"A first novel of remarkable brilliance, quite as promising as the early Ngaio Marsh, which it resembles in both style and approach. . . Both the police officers and the amateur investigator are agreeably human, while the suspects are clearly and diversely characterised. Mr. Dollond's opening chapters are exceptionally intelligent, his humour is pleasant throughout." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 165:558 N 22 '40 120w

"As a period piece it is so expertly done that nobody should complain simply because that period belongs to the past. Perhaps it becomes more ingenious than convincing before the end, but Mr. Dollond could well retort that it is not meant to be convincing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p557 N 2 '40 110w

DONAHUE, ARTHUR GERALD. Tally-ho! Yankee in a Spitfire. 190p il $2.50 Macmillan 940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American, Great Britain, Royal air force (W) 41-20106

Personal narrative of a young Middlewestern American who joined the RAF in the summer of 1940. As he was an experienced pilot before he enlisted, his period of training was short and he was a fighting pilot by fall. He was shot down once, fairly badly wounded, but recovered and is again serving on the front line.

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

"It is a thrilling and inspiring story that Donahue tells and he tells it simply, without affectation and without the frills lavished by writers who have never been up in a Spitfire fighting for their lives against countless enemy machines." Frank Kelley

+ Books p5 O 12 '41 440w

Christian Century 58:1242 O 8 '41 40w

"Every young man who has dreamed of war piloting should read this book and get a calm perspective of what a fighter pilot really does. It should help to keep his feet on the ground until he is sure that career is what he really wants." V. D. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 27 '41 460w

"This book will appeal to lovers of adventure and to younger readers who are 'fight conscious.'" M. E. Clark

Library J 66:729 S 1 '41 70w

"Plenty of excitement and plenty of information about how RAF pilots live and die."

New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 30w

"The author gives a realistic description of what happens from the time the squadron leaves the ground until it returns. He is explicit as to his own sensations and does not hesitate to admit fear. He says that he scares as easily as the reader does or perhaps more so, but this statement becomes more and more debatable as one goes further into the book."

E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p5 O 5 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:88 O 4 '41 50w

Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 25 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 30 '41 700w

DONALD, MRS JEAN MIDDLETON. Quebec patchwork; with il. by the author. 368p $3.25 Macmillan

917.14 Quebec (province) [41-4393]

"The author and her husband traveled about Quebec Province in their trailer, accompanied by an inquisitive Sealyham terrier and well supplied themselves with a smiling and friendly interest in their fellow-men. . . They visited Quebec city, and Montreal. . . They went to the Saguenay. They saw the International Canoe Races which are becoming a notable feature of the life of Trois Rivières. They visited monasteries." N Y Times

Booklist 37:406 My 1 '41

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 200w

"The general level of style and contents is that of letters home by a good correspondent."

+ Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 60w

"A book of really unusual taste, humor and charm. . . Some of Mrs. Donald's descriptions are touched with beauty, and her re-creations of history are both lively and quaint. Her drawings are gay and unpretentious, like her writing."

+ N Y Times p20 F 23 '41 500w

DONATELLO. Donatello [phot. of his sculptures; with a pref. by Ludwig Goldscheider]. (Phaidon press art bk) $3.50 Oxford [12s 6d Allen, G]

734 Sculpture, Italian

Short biographical and critical sketch of Donatello, "Italy's most eminent sculptor before Michelangelo," followed by 150 full-page plates in photogravure and 200 additional smaller illustrations of his works. Index of museums, collections, and places.

Booklist 38:15 S '41

"Dr. Goldscheider has unmistakably come to grips with his theme. His tabulation of the sculptor's 'four epochs,' I may add, is also helpful. Nevertheless the plates remain the thing, plates from photographs which, being taken at close range, superbly disclose Donatello's truth, his energy and his puissant style. . . The whole glorious succession of masterpieces is instinct with power and beauty. To turn the pages of the book is to be electrified." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p10 O 5 '41 360w

Reviewed by David Burnham

Commonweal 34:353 Ag 1 '41 480w

"The plates are admirable and cover the whole of the sculptor's extant work in detail. The scholarly introduction discusses at length not only the authentic statues and reliefs but also the mass of disputed work done under Donatello's influence and the sculpture that came from his workshops or was produced by him in collaboration with other artists."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 29 '41 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 153:144 Ag 16 '41 50w

Reviewed by Kenneth Clark
+ New Statesman & Nation 22:332 O 4
'41 1450w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p355 J1 26
'41 500w

DONAVAN, JOHN. Case of the talking dust.
264p $2 Arcadia
Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 D 28 '41 100w

"This is a good example of the straight detective story without any of the bizarre trimmings that are now so much in vogue." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 D 28 '41 160w

"Identification of corpse and trailing of killer soundly and scientifically handled—but pace is rather lethargic. Pedestrian."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ja 17 '42 30w

DONER, MARY FRANCES (MRS C. L. PAYZANT). Not by bread alone. 322p $2.50
Doubleday

(W) 41-11805

A story of three generations of the women of one family, the principal characters being Maggie Killeen, her daughter Kate, and her granddaughter, Nancy. Maggie Killeen loves her weak, dependent husband and works as cook on a lake freighter to support him and her two little girls. Kate sees clearly her mother's sacrifices and loyal devotion, but repeats the pattern in her own life, and as the book closes, Nancy, modern but also strong and loyal, embarks on a similar career.

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

"Miss Doner spent much of her girlhood on lake freighters commanded by her father, and she has a feeling for that life which is genuine in its spirit and poetic in its expression. The comradeships and the hardships of sailing the Great Lakes are eloquently conveyed. Miss Doner has also manifested much skill in altering the flavor of her characters' speech with the passage of time—from Maggle's lyric Irish accents to Nancy's resolutely clipped and knowing phrases. Generations apart, they still speak the same language." George Conrad

+ Books p6 J1 13 '41 470w

"The characters are well differentiated and the conversation usually interesting. But the most lasting impression left by the book is of those lakes and rivers of the north, and their demand upon the people who live by them." L. H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 2
'41 400w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p5 J1 13 '41 600w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 J1 19 '41 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e J1 13 '41
330w

DONNE, JOHN. Complete poetry and selected prose of John Donne; and, The complete poetry of William Blake; with an introd. by Robert Silliman Hillyer. 1045p $3.50 Random house

821

41-15726

The complete text of two volumes formerly issued separately. "The poetry and prose of Donne are from the text of the Nonesuch Edition, edited by John Hayward. The poetry of Blake is from the Nonesuch Edition, edited by Geoffrey Keynes."

Booklist 38:55 O 15 '41

"This edition is typographically excellent. The proofreader permitted a necessary word to drop out in the first line of the eighth stanza of the 'Epithalamion,' on page 92. The book falls short of perfection by only this, which is well within the permissible margin of error." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:1544 D 10 '41 850w

DORSEY, FLORENCE L. Master of the Mississippi; Henry Shreve and the conquest of the Mississippi. 301p $3.75 Houghton

B or 92 Shreve, Henry Miller. Mississippi river 41-18973

Biography of Henry Shreve, a Quaker who was born in New Jersey in 1785 and died near St Louis in 1851. He was the pioneer Mississippi keelboatman, who "broke Pittsburgh's monopoly of the fur trade; broke Canada's monopoly of the Western lead trade; broke the Livingston-Fulton monopoly of steamboating on the Mississippi with his shallow-draught, double-deck river steamboat; made navigation safe by inventing a snag-pulling boat with which he cleared some 1,500 miles of river; opened up the Red River to civilization." (Time) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

Reviewed by G. L. Eskew
Books p20 N 9 '41 1000w

"Anyone who is at least semi-civilized, i.e., anyone who appreciates the importance of history, will like this book. It contains much revealing information about the development of steamboat traffic on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. It also deals more clearly and exhaustively with the removal of the hindrances to navigation in various rivers than does any other book. . . Thorough documentation and a complete index attest to the soundness of the research which produced the book." Paul Kinlery

+ Commonweal 35:73 N 7 '41 300w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 20w

"A magnificent biography that can be unreservedly nominated for a Pulitzer prize. . . Miss Dorsey has written a vivid and enthralling story of Henry Shreve and of the rivers he fought and loved. She has compressed a great mass of material into a smoothly running account of one of the Midwest's great river gods, and seemingly has slighted nothing that had any bearing on his services to the nation."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 700w

"A remarkable biography. Author Dorsey has an almost biologic feeling for the violence of growth—the uptilting of mountains, the plunge of rivers, the tidal surge of young and healthy nations. And she is equally at home in the Pleistocene age and the administrations of Jefferson and Madison."

+ Time 38:102 O 27 '41 2100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

DOS PASSOS, JOHN. The ground we stand on; some examples from the history of a political creed. 420p $3.50 Harcourt

973 U.S.—History—Revolution. Liberty. Williams, Roger. Barlow, Joel (W) 41-16286

"A collection of [loosely grouped] biographical studies. . . Mr. Dos Passos is trying to show that behind the Bill of Rights and other charters of our liberties stand actual lives, men who lived out these ideas first, experimentally, adventurously, before they became preserved in legal forms. The longest and best essay is devoted to Roger Williams. The others reveal new insights into the lives of Benjamin Franklin, Daniel Defoe, Samuel Adams, Thomas Jefferson, Joel Barlow and Hugh Henry Brackenridge." (New Yorker) Index.

"In a book as rich as this, the wealth must include coins of varying denominations, but there is no professional need to cavil at details. The book is absorbing, a fabric of swift prose, of sudden appearances and departures, of dramatic lights and shadows. It is intelligent in each interpretation of event. And—especially in these days—it is important as a record of our hopes for the future." R. S. Hillyer

DOS PASSOS, JOHN—Continued

+ Atlantic N '41 400w

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"A fascinating and extremely readable book." S. V. Benét

+ Books p3 Ag 31 '41 1000w

"No praise can be too high for John Dos Passos's presentation here of such American and English historical characters as interest him most. . . His manner of writing is admirable; graphic and pictorial without ever once aiming at 'fine writing' or descending into conscious verbal display. The result is the most interesting historical work I have read in many a day." C. W. Thompson

+ Cath World 154:244 N '41 280w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 58:1610 D 24 '41 850w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 13 '41 700w

"This is a most refreshing volume and a very present comfort for dismayed liberals in these troublous days. Mr. Dos Passos displays the scholar's scrupulous regard for facts and sources and yet he never neglects the novelist's sense for the color and feel of life." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:19 S 15 '41 200w

"An excellent record of the self-governing tradition of America." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 100w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Nation 153:227 S 13 '41 1100w

"This is not one of Dos Passos' best books; it does not rank with 'U.S.A.' or 'Manhattan Transfer' or even 'In All Countries.' The author's training is that of a novelist, a reporter and a poet, rather than that of a historian. He chooses the interesting character, the fresh and significant detail, instead of trying to paint a historian's complete picture. His scholarship is intensive rather than extensive, so that he does a better job with Joel Barlow, the third-rate poet who was Madison's ambassador to Napoleon, than he does with the English Civil War. But in spite of these faults, the book succeeds in its aim of casting a new light on the present. And it gives one the feeling that Dos Passos, after some sort of moral crisis, is perhaps beginning a new career." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 105:282 S 1 '41 1000w

"Dos Passos has discovered, and with enthusiasm, the importance of personality in history and the attraction historical individuals hold for writers and readers. He has translated his enthusiasm into 'The Ground We Stand On,' and in so doing has paid high tribute to historical writing. The essays in themselves are splendid; as citations for a thesis they do not add up." Francis Brown

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '41 1050w

"The great value of Mr. Dos Passos' rather loosely written book is that it shows us how firmly rooted is the notion of democratic living, that it is far more deeply planted in us than we realize, that it is not a destroyable 'system' like Nazism but a manner of acting and feeling, a manner that goes back to our colonial forebears and to the England from which they came." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:54 Ag 30 '41 230w

Pratt p13 D '41

"The general object of the work is admirable; the execution has grave flaws, but in general it answers to Mr. Dos Passos's purpose. The book, in short, is a valuable contribution to true Americanism." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 S 13 '41 900w

"John Dos Passos has served his countrymen well in proving afresh how all our yesterdays can steady and illumine our course amid new revolutions."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ag 30 '41 1150w

"These are brilliant sketches of great spirits, drama made vivid by the author's gifts as a novelist. We have history, not popularized, but told in terms of men. The clarity, swing, color of telling make the pages immensely readable." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:531 O '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

DOUGALL, BERNARD. I don't scare easy.
225p $2 Dodd

41-17320

Detective story.

"When murder behind the microphone is being investigated by the men from the homicide squad and the D. A.'s office a Centre Street stenographer looks around at the Radio City scene and says it is fascinating. It was an apt remark. The broadcasting background is the interesting feature, here, of an otherwise confused and commonplace tale." K. I.

+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '41 240w

"Realistic background, snappy patter, and colorful people, but expert eye-brows may lift at some details of plot. Average."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 27 '41 40w

DOUGLAS, FREDERIC HUNTINGTON, and HARNONCOURT, RENE D. Indian art of the United States. 219p 11 maps $3.50 Museum of modern art

970.67 Indians of North America—Art

(W) 41-3349

This book is based on an exhibition of Indian art at the Museum of Modern Art, New York. "Proceeding from mysterious objects of dateless antiquity to contemporary work as modern in spirit as Klee or Picasso, the book consists of three main divisions: Prehistoric Art, Living Traditions, Indian Art for Modern Living. . . The artifacts include sculpture, pottery, weaving, embroidery, jewelry, pipes and toys, weapons, pictographs, murals and sand paintings." (Publisher's note) The book contains many illustrations in black and white, and sixteen plates in color. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

"This is the most complete book on Indian art published so far. . . There can be no doubt that the effort to keep Indian handicrafts alive today is important, but the question of their adaption to modern life is debatable. The section on this subject approaches the whole subject in a superficial manner. Indian appliqué on evening dresses or ski suits may have a commercial use for one fashion season, but it has nothing to do with the creation of a genuine American tradition in art." Charmion von Wiegand

+ Living Age 360:196 Ap '41 230w

"This wise and admirable account is very likely what the publishers claim for it, the most complete work yet published on the art of the United States Indian. I am certainly no authority in the field, but the thorough range of this collection and research is evident, and there is a highly commendable absence of ocean canoings, soft legends, human wrongs, Hiawathas and a certain kind of Teutonic theory-riding." S. Y.

+ New Repub 104:379 Mr 17 '41 450w

Pratt p5 autumn '41

"No work of this kind can be perfect. 'Indian Art of the United States' suffers from the catalogue tradition. It is too narrowly tied to the material actually shown, and to some extent overloaded by the requirement of discussing individual specimens where more general broad discussion illuminated by the silent illustration would have been preferable. Also, humanly and understandably, the authors' predilection for certain periods and styles gives the book an occasional, mild unbalance. These are minor faults. The book will stand as the definitive popular work on the subject."

Oliver La Farge

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 29 '41 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p207 Ap 26 '41 180w

DOUGLAS, MRS MARY TERESA (PEACOCK). Teacher-librarian's handbook. 136p $1.90 A.L.A.

027.8 School libraries. Library science (W) 41-51885

"A manual for the teacher who, with little or no library training, must organize or administer a school library. Information about the book collection, cataloging, equipment, and publicity is specific and up to date. There are chapters on non-book materials and on library instruction, and many addresses and check lists. Bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 38:1 S '41

"Taking the book as a whole, it is attractive and follows closely in content The North Carolina School Library Handbook which has proved helpful in meeting actual needs. Mrs. Douglas offers to the teacher-librarians of other states advice already found to be useful in inspiring a similar group in her own vicinity." A. M. Currin

+ Library J 66:1028 D 1 '41 750w

Pratt p6 D '41

"Designed to give the untrained person concrete help in organizing a small school library, so that when training is secured none of the work need be redone, although it might need to be amplified. The book is designed to help the trained teacher-librarian by providing in one book an outline of suggestions and techniques for developing a school-library program in a simplified way."

School & Society 54:128 Ag 23 '41 70w

"To the nonprofessional person, there must, at first, seem to be little difference in the comparative importance of the contributions of the various processes described toward the objective of making the library a vital experience to the children. How is the untrained teacher-librarian to pick and choose the indispensable practices when lack of time manifestly forbids accomplishing them all? If somewhere in the book there could have been a summary of the minimum essentials, without which the simplest library project could not function at all, a first foothold would have been given for a right start in the most seriously under-served situations. Nevertheless the volume may well become a vade mecum for the trained school librarian in places remote from professional supervision, as well as for the untrained teacher-librarian groping for a practical guide."

J. K. Dillon

+ — School R 50:72 Ja '42 900w

DOUGLAS, RONALD MACDONALD. The closed door. 313p $2.50 Modern age 41-3116

The story of a young Scottish servant girl, who supposedly writes in her own words of her experiences during a poverty-stricken childhood, her ill-treatment in the home of her grandfather, loss of memory resulting in a period in an insane asylum, and her escape and subsequent life.

"The first thing to be said of this account of the extraordinary hardships of the Scottish servant girl Roisin between her sixteenth and twentieth years is that it is continuously exciting and at times horrifying. The second thing to be said is that it achieves these qualities without benefit of tricky devices or any apparent straining for effect. And the third thing is that although Roisin's experiences are certainly of an uncommon, even grotesque, kind, they are presented so credibly and circumstantially that any one still sensitive to man's inhumanity to man will writhe as he reads." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p8 F 9 '41 500w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham

Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 80w

"Told in the first person by the native, not-too-bright girl, it is a highbrow horror story convincing enough to turn your blood to buttermilk. In fact, it sounds like any one of a dozen recent stories about Nazi concentration camps, simply transferred to a new setting."

Nation 152:221 F 22 '41 90w

"The author does not attempt to reproduce the difficult Scottish dialect but has the girl tell her own story in simple, moving English. This somehow manages to combine the absorbing quality of good fiction with the sincerity, truth and sustained interest of a good autobiography." Muriel Burns

+ New Repub 104:381 Mr 17 '41 190w

"A tale of inhumanity and stupidity and courageous pertinacity, simply and affectingly told."

New Yorker 16:65 F 8 '41 40w

DOUGLAS-IRVINE, HELEN. Angelic romance. 288p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

Three long short stories with South American settings. Contents: Angelic romance; The higher bid; Mamilius.

"Miss Irvine emerges as a writer of individual talents, but in a manner that is somehow completely feminine, however honestly and courageously she handles her explosive material. While the finger of time lies heavy on her work, her stories nevertheless succeed notably in making the conventions and traditions of a period and a place come alive. She is a romantic who leavens her romance with shrewd observation and perception." Rose Feld

+ — Books p5 D 21 '41 600w

"All the stories are placed in or connected with Chile, and their charm is, above all, in atmosphere. The second story, 'The Higher Bid,' which concerns the fate of a little Irish girl sold as a slave (all the stories are remote in time), strikes one as the best of the three." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 13 '41 70w

"All three [stories] are distinguished by the same natural, dramatic dialogue, the same intricate probing into the hinterlands of personality and by the writer's gift for vivid scenic and panoramic portraiture." J. S. Southern

+ — N Y Times p26 D 7 '41 900w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 166:664 Je 20 '41 200w

"Miss Irvine, as she showed in earlier books, has a decorative touch, and her writing is always smooth and graceful. As a story-teller, however, she lacks substance and is inclined to make up for the deficiency by elaborating the irrelevant. . . There are a few pretty passages, but the fiction is thin and formless. 'Mamilius' is an ambitious psychological study, which is also gracefully decorated here and there but which seems entirely artificial at the start and never looks like coming off. . . Miss Irvine would probably do better with modester character studies."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 31 '41 430w

DOW, EDWARD FRENCH, and HORMELL, ORREN CHALMER. City manager government in Portland, Maine. 119p pa 50c Univ. of Me.

352.07419 Portland, Maine—Politics and government. Municipal government—City manager plan 40-28857

"This study, made at the request of the Social Science Research Council, surveys the government of Portland since 1923, when the city manager plan was instituted. There is a brief introductory chapter on this form of municipal government, followed by a compact description of Portland and its economic problems, with a third chapter on the fight for

DOW, E. F.—Continued

The adoption of a city manager charter. The city charter is analyzed, and there is a short history of the composition and activities of the city council under the plan. A chapter on the city administration, with emphasis on budgetary procedure, debt control, purchasing methods, taxation, personnel management, and public relations, is the meat of the monograph. A final chapter of conclusions finds that Portland's chief advantages under manager government are financial stability and increased public services." New Eng Q

"The authors' familiarity with the political setting of the council-manager plan in Portland has contributed enormously to the excellence of this monograph. The discussion of administration is perhaps not as thorough as that pertaining to the political background, the charter, and the council. The conclusions are admirably frank and incisive." A. W. Bromage

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:375 Ap '41 400w
New Eng Q 14:415 Je '41 130w

DOWDEY, CLIFFORD. Sing for a penny. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 366p $2.50 Little 41-2808

Richmond in the '80s and '90s is the scene of this story of Kirby Harron who sets out to win a fortune and succeeds. Kirby's early ambition was to take his family out of the environment in which they lived and establish them in security but his methods of winning his way finally turn the last of them against him.

Booklist 37:515 Jl 1 '41

"The story steers a shrewd course through the sociology of the post-war South, but there is more sociology in it than first-rate fiction." Bernard De Voto

+ — Books p4 My 11 '41 700w

"The book convincingly shows how a worthy instinct for independence and self-reliance can grow into an inhuman zest for domination. It makes lively reading."

+ Commonweal 34:93 My 16 '41 90w

New Repub 105:517 O 20 '41 150w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

N Y Times p6 My 11 '41 800w

"Mr. Dowdey isn't flashy, and he is sometimes pedestrian. But his grip on his subject increases and his honesty is unflagging. He should become one of the real figures of his time." S. V. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:5 My 17 '41 1000w

DOWNER, MARION. Be an artist; il. by the author [phot. by Carroll Snell]. 119p $2 Lothrop

741 Art, Commercial (W) 41-51742

"This book is not intended to teach you how to draw and paint and carve." It is for those of fourteen and up who are learning to draw and are interested in the different fields of commercial art and the opportunities offered by each. It discusses folios, job hunting, techniques, studios, and twelve types of commercial art—fashions, children's fashions, furniture and interiors, spots, hand-lettering, magazine illustration, magazine covers, book illustration, book jackets and end papers, posters, layout—visualizing, art director.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

"The information is based on experience and the style is lively without being flippant; this is a serious subject to any boy or girl who starts out lugging a portfolio, but Miss Downer will lighten their spirits as well as enlighten them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 23 '41 200w

"A sound, practical vocational book, written authoritatively, but with a touch of humor." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 10 '41 90w

Reviewed by D. L. Wood

+ Library J 66:310 Ap 1 '41 160w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 Je 15 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 60w

DOWNES, MRS ANNE (MILLER). Angels fell. 344p $2.50 Stokes

41-20047

Irene was an ambitious Iowa farm girl when she first met Stephen, the junior partner in a well-established Greenwich Village bookshop. Steve married Irene; loved her devotedly; and played for successively higher stakes as Irene demanded more and more money. Finally Steve's eyes were opened to Irene's kind of "ambition," and he stepped aside to let her marry a wealthy man.

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"Like Anne Miller Downes's earlier novels, 'Angels Fell' is eagerly told, with warmth and vigor. Through Stephen, the author would seem to be pleading for adherence to the city equivalents of the ways and moods which reflect the integrity and individuality of Vermonsters. It can be done, she shows, telling the story also of Jed, who had riches but learned from Steve's plight and so chose a girl who thought him poor and married him for himself alone. . . . Though the outcome is clear from the beginning, this chronicle of ambition's ruthless and empty course is eminently readable." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 S 28 '41 700w

"It is evident that Mrs. Downes is making decided progress in the control of her technique and in the firmness and pliability of her writing. Not only do the two principal characters seem worth reading about, but the interplay of minor characters is convincing. There would have been still greater gain if Irene's inner conflicts—which surely existed, otherwise she were but a two-dimensional being—could have been revealed. As it is, she is presented wholly in the objective manner." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 25 '41 500w

"A novel treating of spiritual conflict demands superlative writing skill. The best that can be said of this novel is that one becomes mildly interested in seeing if the end is as anticipated. The wisdom and inhumanity which should be in a novel dealing with such problems are not present. The dialogue is not bright, and the style is without distinction." George Froede

+ — N Y Times p30 S 28 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

DOWNES, RANDOLPH CHANDLER. Council fires on the upper Ohio; a narrative of Indian affairs in the upper Ohio valley until 1795; with headpiece il. by Alex Ross. 367p map $3 Univ. of Pittsburgh

977 Ohio valley—History. Pennsylvania—History. Indians of North America—Ohio valley. Indians of North America—Wars 40-34394

"A book on Indian and white relations in the upper Ohio country. Heretofore, from the time the Shawnee and Delaware commenced their removal from the Susquehanna to the Allegheny in the early 1720s to the final defeat of their confederates at the Battle of Fallen Timbers, 1794, we have lacked a clear picture of the location of Indian towns, their removal from period to period, the relation of these removals to the trade, the merits of the Indian wars against white aggressors and the appalling failure of the Colonies to pursue a definite Indian policy because the materials for developing the picture were in scattered various reports and manuscript sources. Mr. Downes attempts to focus on the struggle from the Indian point of view." Books

Reviewed by E. W. Voegelin

Am Anthropol 43:444 J1 '41 650w

"Despite limitations of the sources Downes writes a plausible account of Indian behavior. His is an invaluable contribution for the sources alone which are assembled within its covers." W. N. Fenton

+ Books p15 Ja 12 '41 700w

"To the reviewer, Dr. Downes seems noticeably more at home in the English and eastern background than he is in the French background and the more westerly area; also, the reviewer remains completely unconvinced that the primitive red man ever lived in the state of Arcadian simplicity and concord which certain of the author's earlier pages seem to imply." M. M. Quaife

Canadian Hist R 22:75 Mr '41 280w

"Dr. Downes is a capable and conscientious historian. His sympathies are entirely with the Indians, and he writes with their views always in mind. He has, for the first time, collected and collated the great mass of data about this century of struggle, and his book is invaluable in the study of Ohio Valley history." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 5 '41 500w

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Indian-fighting army; il. from drawings by Frederic Remington, Charles Schreyvogel and R. F. Zogbaum. 329p $3.50 Scribner

973.8 Indians of North America—Wars. U.S.—Army—History. West—History 41-23731

History of the Indian wars waged in the western United States from 1865 to 1915, which stresses the part played by the officers and men who composed the "Indian-fighting army"—history as seen thru the eyes of the men who made it. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:129 D 15 '41

"As entertainment, 'Indian-Fighting Army' is grand. As a quick account of the wars of the West, it is valuable. And as a portrait, done with plenty of sympathetic feeling, of a period which meant very much to this nation's history, it is superb." P. L. Wellman

+ Books p22 N 9 '41 600w

"Mr. Downey has probably not settled any of the moot points in the history of the Indian wars, but he has broken a lance in a deserving cause, has retold some of the most stirring tales the frontier ever brought forth, and has drawn a fairly complete picture of as gallant a little army as ever gripped saddle or swung saber." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 10 '42 550w

Reviewed by T. D. Lyons

Commonweal 35:227 D 19 '41 1050w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 70w

"Though Mr. Downey is fair and even sympathetic with the Indians, he tells the tale as the army has always told it. So told, it makes all the better reading—an epic story of hard-riding, hard-fighting soldiers." Stanley Vestal

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 D 13 '41 410w

"'Indian-Fighting Army' is doubly welcome as top-notch entertainment and as a valuable source of information on a well-known but little understood episode in American history."

+ Springfield Republican p7e N 23 '41 480w

DOWNIE, ROBERT ANGUS. James George Frazer, the portrait of a scholar. 141p $1.50 Macmillan [6s Watts]

B or 92 Frazer, Sir James George [41-6993]

"'The Golden Bough' was first published in 1890, and it has been a part of the literature of knowledge (and also, in its lucid and noble prose, of the knowledge of literature), thus, for half a century. But we have known little of its author: 'the facts of Frazer's life consist essentially of a list of his works,' his biographer remarks now. And this little monograph, by an author who was for some years Sir James Frazer's assistant, is to be warmly welcomed; it is a remarkably concise and capacious little book." N Y Times

"Mr. Downie has given us an interim book well worth reading as a swift summary. One may regret that he did not paint a more intimate portrait of Sir James, giving us anecdotes and conversations in which Mr. Downie must have shared. We remember Frazer discussing with Solomon Reinach the high value of the Classical Library founded by a New Yorker, James Loeb. The great Scottish scholar and the great French scholar—septuagenarians both—were alive with enthusiasm. The blue eyes of Sir James sparkled. A man of quiet charm as well as of deep learning." G. S. Hellman

+ Books p14 Ja 4 '42 550w

Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 120w

"A memorable picture of the veteran anthropologist and an illuminating survey of his career and his achievements." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:19 Mr 15 '41 60w

"If the scholar's life is epitomized in the record of his works, the scholar's portrait makes a much broader demand. . . He has been admired as a man as warmly as he has been venerated as a scholar. And the author of this book finds place for much expression of appreciation from other qualified minds and for interesting notes on his influence. This 'portrait of a scholar' will be fitted in beside 'The Golden Bough,' certainly, on this reader's shelves."

+ N Y Times p2 F 16 '41 650w

DOWNING, J. HYATT. Anthony Trant. 446p $2.50 Putnam

41-20723

A story of life in Sioux City from 1893 to the 1920's—from one financial debacle to another. The story follows the career of Anthony Trant who first appeared in the author's earlier novel, Sioux City (Book Review Digest, 1940).

"In spite of faults as a novel, 'Anthony Trant' is a clear-cut exposure of the fantastic financial orbit which is not peculiar to his Sioux City, but is part of our vaunted 'American Way.' As such, it can be read with profit by many, and with relish by those who have ever been sold a share of worthless stock or had a personal brush with a banker." Muriel Chatain

+ Books p16 N 9 '41 550w

"Mr. Downing is engaged here upon a saga of business in the corn country. Unlike a good many contemporary novelists—to whom the world of commerce seems a fascinating but obviously somewhat mysterious terrain—he knows what he is talking about in precise detail. These two novels—with the possibility of a third still to come—form a work of the simplest and most convincing realism. It is a work impressive for size and honesty, rather than for the quality of its dramatic imagination. Mr. Downing has resisted all temptations to romanticize his theme." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 N 16 '41 850w

DOWNING, TODD. The Lazy Lawrence murders. 279p $2 Doubleday

41-7647

Detective story.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

"Sheriff Peter Gustave Toutant Beauregard Bounty proves himself a genial and knowing sleuth in Mr. Downing's new story, complete with Mexican mesquite, cactus, buzzards and two murders among a group of mystery people practically bursting with love and more sinister emotions. . . Easy to read." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 18 '41 170w

DOWNING, TODD—Continued

"The account of [the] investigation is much too confused to make easy or agreeable reading, unless one enjoys being deliberately led astray time after time just to make a mystery writer's holiday. The customer doesn't mind being fooled, but he likes to get a fair run for his money, which is more than Todd Downing gives him in this book." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p18 My 18 '41 130w

"Plenty of action, good below-border background, surprising but logical pay-off—but plot goes too many directions at once. Confusing."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 24 '41 40w

Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 40w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseud.). Boss of the plains. 282p $2 Morrow

40-32613

"This is a historical novel of the opening up of the Western plains between the Mississippi and California by means of wagon freighting and the Pony Express. Its period is, roughly, the years between the war with Mexico and the Civil War. The Mormon Brigham Young, General Frémont, Major Rufus Ingalls and other celebrities appear in its pages; however, the story concerns chiefly the career of Ben Holladay who began as a wagon-train driver, but soon wearied of fighting the perils of the plains for the wagon owners." N Y Times

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

"Vigorous Western on the serious side." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 29 '40 120w

Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 30w

"By far the most ambitious piece of writing that Will Ermine has yet produced, and also the best—in grasp and method and appropriate style. While the plot is simple enough, a broad canvas is peopled with skillful characterizations, the scene and life of the Great Plains of the Eighteen Fifties are vividly set forth, and the reader's interest is held in a sure grip." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p24 F 9 '41 280w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseud.). Watchdog of Thunder river. 252p $2 Morrow

41-21400

Western story.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"This entertaining Western starts with a wedding and concludes with the promise of two more. In between there is plenty of villainy." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 21 '41 100w

"A good yarn of its kind, swift-paced and salty, not without its moments of suspense—one of the best written among the nine or ten Will Ermine has done, but by no means equal to its immediate predecessor, the historical novel, 'Boss of the Plains.'" G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 D 7 '41 240w

DRAPER, MRS. DOROTHY (TUCKERMAN). Entertaining is fun! how to be a popular hostess. 249p il $2.79 Doubleday

642.41 Entertaining (W) 41-950

The author defines "entertaining" as "having a good time with your friends in your own home and giving them a good time, too." In a series of informally written chapters, enlivened with many "personal histories" she sets forth suggestions and menus that will accomplish such a purpose in a large variety of ways. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:287 Mr 1 '41

Reviewed by H. T. Hilles

Books p13 Ja 19 '41 160w

DREISER, THEODORE. America is worth saving. 292p $2.50 Modern age

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations. Great Britain—Politics and government. Democracy (W) 41-3300

The author criticizes not only American business and labor conditions, but even more severely what he regards as England's imperialism, colonial tyranny, and undercover fascism. He gives reasons why America's democracy can still be saved by building anew on the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. In the present war he thinks there is little to choose between sides and he pleads with America not to be drawn into the conflict.

"Mr. Dreiser has written this book in the same way he has written his novels. He has written from the passion of his own heart and with no regard for those who do not share that passion. Like his novels, the book is loosely organized, crudely written, ill-proportioned. Mr. Dreiser labors some weak points and does not make the most of all his strong ones. . . Mr. Dreiser's novels have the qualities of their defects; his political and social ideas, on the other hand, gain little from the style in which he has presented them. However, one feels that this book has been written with courage and sincerity." Quincy Howe

+ — Books p12 F 2 '41 400w

Christian Century 58:290 F 26 '41 300w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley

Churchman 155:18 Ap 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:877 Jl '41 20w

Reviewed by Max Gissen

New Repub 104:736 My 26 '41 360w

"Readers who remember 'Sister Carrie' and who know of its author's stubborn insistence on writing his own kind of novel, in his own way, with his own personal pity and imagination, will want to be patient with Theodore Dreiser. If they are not Communists, or fellow-travelers, or secretly inclined to like Mr. Hitler, or so constituted that the word England or Britain puts them in a rage, they will have to be patient with the present volume. This is not so much a book to be read as a long soap-box speech to be listened to." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p22 F 9 '41 1350w

"A bitterly sincere but loose-minded Leftist analysis, written in the author's now-familiar substitute for the English language."

+ — New Yorker 16:66 F 8 '41 100w

"'America Is Worth Saving' breaks a ten years' silence, and if it adds nothing to Dreiser's stature, if there is nothing in it to suggest that it is the work of a man who has written novels of importance, it gives us some insight into the curiously involved workings of Dreiser's mind. With much of the book many persons will agree." Granville Hicks

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:13 F 22 '41 800w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 10w

"A spiteful, wretchedly written tract, by great, aging Theodore Dreiser. . . [His] tract is largely an attack on this felonious isle, this seat of tyrants, this England. He is also so fearfully wrought up over the present state of the U. S. that America is Worth Saving reads like the definitive burlesque of Upton Sinclair."

— Time 37:74 F 3 '41 270w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Bodies are where you find them. 262p $2 Holt

41-19307

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 O 19 '41 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 O 12 '41 140w

"Rough-and-tumble combination of dirty politics, murder, and thuggery. Plot basically sound but plentiful action carries the day. Good tough un."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 11 '41 40w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Death on treasure trail. 281p $2 Morrow [7s 6d Hutchinson] 41-1827

Western story.

"Lively and likable." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 9 '41 50w

"A wild, fast and furious and breath-taking thriller, cleverly handled." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '41 130w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Gun smoke on the mesa. (Carlton house publications) 291p $2 Random house 41-5106

Western story.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

Reviewed by G. W. Harris

N Y Times p34 Mr 23 '41 150w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Lynch-rope law. 244p $2 Morrow 41-14544

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 31 '41 40w

"As amazing, preposterous and impossible a series of dare-devil exploits as ever were crowded into one Western thriller. This sort of pseudo-detective yarn is a decided let-down from the author who could turn out such an excellent Western story as 'Gun Smoke on the Mesa,' published last Winter." W. H.

N Y Times p24 O 5 '41 150w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Tickets for death; a Michael Shayne story. 273p $2 Holt 41-4261

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p20 Ap 20 '41 120w

"Any story about Mike Shayne is sure to abound in violence and sudden death, and this one is no exception. He gets results but his methods are, to say the least, questionable." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Ap 27 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 140w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Two-gun Rio Kid. 248p $2 Morrow 41-17247

Western story.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"This Davis hero has a way with him, and the latest hunk of his exploits is first-rate. In fact, recommended." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 S 28 '41 100w

DRISCOLL, CHARLES BENEDICT. Pirates ahoy; il. by Thomas Fogarty, Jr. 340p $3.50 Farrar

910.4 Pirates. Treasure trove. Seafaring life (W) 41-20781

This book on pirates is in three sections, the first relates the stories of several men who were called pirates but were not, the second deals with real pirates, and the third with pirates' loot or treasure. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"This volume is obviously a labor of love, carefully done, and it has an excellent pirate bibliography and a good index." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p32 N 2 '41 700w

DRURY, JOHN. Old Chicago houses. 518p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press

977.31 Chicago—History. Chicago—Historic houses, etc. 41-16674

"Chicago today contains many old houses well known either for their architecture or for the fame of their owners or as landmarks of the city's early days. These are located in all parts of town and range from pioneer farm-houses to magnificent mansions." (Foreword) These brief histories of about ninety of the houses appeared originally as articles in the Chicago Daily News. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41 200w

DUBOIS, THEODORA. Death is late to lunch. 217p $2 Houghton (W) 41-9493

Detective story.

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"This recommended item is done to a turn in a civilized, literate manner. Positively no pulp." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Je 22 '41 160w

"Although this is not one of Theodora DuBois's most carefully written stories, the investigation of the murder 'weapon' grips the reader's interest with originality and force." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 15 '41 230w

"Elucidation of second killing especially interesting. Solution comes bit sudden-like, but suspense keeps up 'til final startling disclosure. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 21 '41 40w

DUBOIS, THEODORA. The McNeills chase a ghost. 290p $2 Houghton 41-19302

Detective story.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"Cryptic scribble: 'Ugh 35, 86 lh, v2—Pub 1861.' The solution is all right and the story itself worth reading but why does Miss DuBois make her professors talk like that? Any prof. who did that would be fired or sent to some institution that treats those things." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 O 12 '41 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 O 19 '41 210w

"Best McNeill story to date. Faculty, student, and bookish backgrounds, excellently done; there's action, humor and good sleuthing too. Full marks."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM. The case of the haunted brides. 299p $2 Little 40-29873

Detective story.

"Mr. Du Bois shows you the inside of a mansion of wealth with flossy accessories and a highly polished surface over all. Puzzle interest increases on the home stretch." Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ja 12 '41 100w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM—Continued

"Good fast action." Marian Wiggins
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 200w

"Twenty Year Plan of patient killer ruined by newshawk meanie after three, possibly four, maybe six, slayings. Too bad. Too bad."
+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM PENE. The flying locomotive; story and pictures by [the author]. 48p $1 Viking

(W) 41-10977

Picture-story book about a Swiss engine, whose twin guided one of the famous Swiss Flyers, while poor Toto No. 2 was assigned to the cheese factory at Gruyères. Toto's ambition was further brought low by having to share quarters with a cow, albeit Madame Suzie was the number one cow of all Switzerland. The tale is of one famous night when Toto actually became a flyer for a few hours.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Book: p7 Ag 24 '41 240w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41 160w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:356 S '41 60w

"Sixteen drawings in color and twelve in black and white with a text which will delight boys of any age and adults whose reading was stimulated by Jules Verne combine to make a picture book of real distinction. Mr. Du Bois draws upon a rich childhood inheritance of art as a natural expression of life at home or abroad." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 17:381 S '41 80w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell
Horn Bk M 17:448 N '41 40w

"The good gift of laughter is not invoked by repetition and I am wary of the 'funny book' per se. One of a kind seems enough and pure nonsense is too rare a flower to be reckoned as a hardy perennial. The Flying Locomotive has a background of Switzerland for pictures which will enchant those who love to travel behind the locomotive of any country." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 17:457 N '41 90w

"A nonsensically humorous tale for eight- to ten-year-olds. For a limited audience, as much of the humor is beyond the age-level for which the story is intended." Marian Herr
Library J 66:848 O 1 '41 80w

"This is not a picture book for the youngest children but a choice bit of fun to be enjoyed at any age from 7 on. Along with the fun and nonsense the artist-author contrives to convey the color and charm of Switzerland." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p39 N 2 '41 200w
New Yorker 17:141 D 6 '41 90w

"Amusing and ingenious." Amy Loveman
+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 50w

DUDLEY, OWEN FRANCIS. Tremaynes and the masterful monk; a most hateful and lovable tale. (Problems of human happiness) 333p $2 (6s; pa 4s 6d) Longmans

40-32860

"This is the sixth volume in the series of dramatic stories in which Father Anselm Thornton, the Masterful Monk, plays a leading role. In each has been presented a particular problem of religious living. The present story illustrates the basic capacity for regeneration that lies hidden in a seemingly depraved man." (Cath World) Earlier volumes in Book Review Digest, 1927, 1930, 1932, 1936.

"The book is written with a boyishness and verve that make it easy to read, and the Masterful Monk is sure to find a welcome from old and new friends."

+ Cath World 152:507 Ja '41 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p33 Ja 18 '41 70w

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER. That was Alderbury; a novel. 327p $2.50 Macmillan 41-12727

"In simple language and style attuned to his background and his characters, R. L. Duffus tells the story of a year in the lives of four thirteen-year-old Vermont boys. And in telling their story and the tales of their adventures and their groping entrance into the world of grown-ups, he tells the story of a town. He calls it Alderbury but it might be any New England town, so familiar are the landmarks, the concerns, the talk of the people." Books

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 N '41

"A year in the life of a town, a year in the life of four boys—this is the stuff out of which Mr. Duffus fashions his home-spun tale. With its smell of maple sugar, its lamplit interiors, its single-room schools, its small-town conflicts, it carries a special charm and tenderness for the world of today." Rose Feld
+ Books p6 Jl 27 '41 600w

Christian Century 58:935 Jl 23 '41 80w

"Not all of the characters and incidents are convincing; least so, perhaps, the too-beautiful young school teacher and the course of her love for the minister. The demand for literalness in interpretation of the Bible is well handled, and the portrayal of a boy's mind is thoroughly enjoyable." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 66:614 Jl '41 70w

New Repub 105:318 S 8 '41 40w

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace
N Y Times p7 Jl 27 '41 800w

"A pleasantly old-fashioned story."
+ New Yorker 17:53 Jl 26 '41 60w

"Mr. Duffus has managed to mine tenderness, gaiety, and drama, as well as reassurance, out of his memories of Alderbury." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Jl 26 '41 350w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 27 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER, and HOLT, LUTHER EMMETT, 1895-. L. Emmett Holt, pioneer of a children's century; foreword by Edwards A. Park. 295p il $3 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Holt, Luther Emmett (W) 40-29697

Biography of the outstanding pioneer in American pediatrics, the science which has become child psychiatry. When Dr Holt took his degree in medicine in 1880, one fourth of all the babies born in New York city died before the age of one. At the time of his death in 1924 the rate had been reduced to less than a third of the early figure. The book is filled with anecdotes of Dr Holt's pioneer work, and with letters to his family and friends. Index.

"A picture of the development of pediatrics in America was inevitable when Holt's life was written, but that one of the authors of this volume is an important pediatrician as well as Dr. Holt's son has been unusually fortunate for the reader, and the resulting picture of pediatric practice from 1878 to 1923 will benefit those who are less interested in the intensely human story which is told. Pediatricians will also be interested in the excellent foreword from the pen of Dr. E. A. Park, Professor of Pediatrics at the Johns Hopkins University." Leona Baumgartner

+ Am J Pub Health 31:274 Mr '41 750w
Booklist 37:291 Mr 1 '41

"A pleasant biography of a famous pediatrician and delightful personality."

+ J Home Econ 33:410 Je '41 50w

"His biography is studded with matters of permanent importance in the history of American medicine and the safeguarding of children's health. Excerpts from many letters give a charming personal flavor to the entire biography."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 5 '41 360w
Pratt p4 spring '41

"The book, while correct in essential details, is not a contribution to literature, and gives a cold and arid picture of the life of one of America's distinguished physicians." Haven Emerson, M. D.

+ Survey 77:134 Ap '41 240w

DU GARD, ROGER MARTIN. See Martin du Gard, R.

DUGUID, JULIAN. I am persuaded [autobiography] introd. by John Haynes Holmes. 362p $2.50 Appleton-Century [10s 6d Cape, J] B or 92 Experience (religion) [41-15050]

This spiritual autobiography by the author of Green Hell (Book Review Digest, 1931) carries him from the orthodox faith of childhood, thru agnosticism, to a renewed faith in a kind of mystic Christianity.

Booklist 38:129 D 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p15 Ja 18 '42 470w

"Occult or semi-occult phenomena and spiritual healing of bodily ills have a large place in the argument. This is a wholly unconventional book of Christian apologetics and one that well deserves a reading."

+ Christian Century 58:1474 N 26 '41 140w

"An honest and thrilling document. It would be a revelation to the average layman, who has been as mistaught as Mr. Duguid was. And it would reveal to many a clergyman just how stupid and altogether misleading is the so-called Christian teaching he regularly hands out. It's a great book for a day of all days when those in the churches ought to do some adequate assessing of the damage they so frequently do both to their religion and to the individuals in whom they are supposed to inspire understanding of the religion of Christ." James van Zant

+ Churchman 156:16 Ja 1 '42 200w

"Only rare geniuses of mysticism can by the written word take their inexperienced readers some few halting steps behind them along the high, lonely, fiery path they have trodden. Mr. Duguid is unable to lose himself in an 'O altitudo!' and when he seeks to translate his profound experiences not into the old symbols of religion or poetry but into the jargon of modern science, medicine, and psychology it does not aid but hinders a message which from the start was difficult to communicate." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 10 '41 300w

"To serious religious natures withdrawn in the dignity of tradition, to those whose religion stands untouched by questions of truth and error, and is the indispensable fable of the human tragedy, Mr. Duguid's bustling, anecdotal quest will seem vulgar and eclectic. But if the manner is tiresome, the matter is a representative compendium of the elements which the heterodox religions of to-day seem to have in common." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:608 Je 14 '41 500w

"Here is a book as absorbing as a dime-novel, as full of penetrating comment as a satire, yet withal as intensely personal and manifestly sincere a spiritual autobiography as has appeared in a long time. Writing with fine humility, Julian Duguid . . . gives us what he calls 'a primer of the hidden life of the spirit.'" Edwin Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 D 6 '41 550w

"The faith which Mr. Duguid has found is not the same as that which he left in youth, nor is Mr. Duguid's book as other men's books. It is the reverse of a formal treatise, catching the attention less by force of argument than by vivid images and startling assertions; but it does catch the attention, and, what is more, it holds it until the last page, so that we would willingly hear more of Mr. Duguid and whither his pilgrimage will ultimately take him."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p284 Je 14 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:198 D '41

DUKE UNIVERSITY. Americana club. American studies in honor of William Kenneth Boyd; ed. by David Kelly Jackson. 377p $4 Duke Univ. [24s Cambridge]

975.004 Boyd, William Kenneth. South 40-32285

"This distinguished volume contains a group of eight monographs, here published to honor the memory of the late William Kenneth Boyd, historian, who was for many years a faculty member and later Director of Libraries at Trinity College and Duke University. Since the assembled papers all grew out of meetings of the Americana Club, a faculty group in which Professor Boyd was the leading spirit, they have an underlying unity, or at least a common focus of interest, not always found in commemorative volumes. The papers all deal with the Southern past or with topics closely related to it." New Eng Q

Reviewed by Ella Lonn

+ Am Hist R 46:932 Jl '41 500w

"All the papers are valuable, and at least three of them are of more than usual interest, since they touch upon issues of fundamental importance, long eagerly debated and now more than ever inviting debate." Donald Davidson

+ New Eng Q 14:401 Je '41 1900w

Reviewed by Wood Gray

Social Studies 32:139 Mr '41 450w

DULEY, MARGARET. Highway to valor. 324p $2.50 Macmillan 41-17873

"The story of Mageila Michelet, endowed with healing power in her hands, a girlish medieval mystic in a world of moderns. The young girl lives on the barren Newfoundland shore. . . Orphaned and shocked by earthquake and tidal wave which sweep the town of Feather the Nest to annihilation, the broken girl is taken into the home of her grandfather Dilke and his daughters. Her rehabilitation under the tolerant protection of her grandfather begins on a voyage to Labrador, where Mageila meets an attractive, sophisticated unhappily married Englishman and an attraction at first strongly impersonalized develops into overwhelming love. Against the story of the girl's tragic life and love is set the sordid, materialistic existence of the family into whose home she goes as a governess companion, and to whom Mageila brings some measure of healing." Spring'd Republican

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"Miss Duley writes with imagination and the Labrador scenery in particular, with its icebergs and northern lights, affords her some splendid opportunities for description. All her Newfoundland types are strongly drawn: Captain Dilke, with his beaked nose and faded blue eyes, still going to sea at eighty-two and thinking nothing of it; the captain of the Assou, revealing his Eskimo blood in his waddling gait; Mageila's mother, pumping righteously to God on the organ at Methodist meeting." Joan Dan-gelzer

+ Books p10 S 28 '41 400w

DULEY, MARGARET—Continued

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Good character portrayal but somewhat wordy and sentimental. Several grim episodes and the element of mysticism will limit its appeal." Isabel Douglas

Library J 66:669 Ag '41 60w

"It is difficult to apportion praise between the characterization which includes a whole retinue of Dilkes with others playing more or less major roles, and the story of the earthquake and tidal wave that devastated the little settlement of Feather-the-Nest and fifty miles of coast. Perhaps there is no urgent need since, where main characters are concerned, both are inextricably interwoven. For the girl's parents, Sheila and Pierre Michelet, are outstandingly important from end to end of the book. They three and the salty old grandfather, with the earthquake and tidal wave in the background to give them greater stature, are dominant figures in a modern island saga of exceptional human and artistic value." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p26 S 28 '41 750w

"Miss Duley's novel of Newfoundland is rich in primal poetic perception. It is bright and fresh in color, sound, sensation, like a child's worldly newly experienced, free of stale impressions. As sheer writing the book is exciting. . . Miss Duley is not as effective with the other characters as with Magella. Magella carries much of the body and spirit of her creator. Her eyes and thoughts are the eyes and thoughts of Miss Duley. The others are externally known. Their words are measured and sometimes prosy, their movements sometimes wooden. Magella is too live against them." R. L. Nathan

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:13 O 11 '41 450w

"Each incident in the novel is built with meticulous attention to detail and to background. The reader is conscious of constant restraint, a retarding of action for the sake of impression. The author's style is not fluid but possesses a warming dignity. Her descriptions of the bleakness of the Newfoundland coast, of Labrador, of the overwhelming sea itself, are compelling and memorable." L. S. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 600w
Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41DU MAURIER, ANGELA. The little less. 314p $2 Doubleday [8s Joseph, M]

41-13932

Story of a woman whose life was dominated by two loves: the first for another woman; the second for her own son.

"The Little Less" is beautifully, ably written—subtly modulated, gentle, sympathetic—superficially without offense; fundamentally quite the contrary. For it seems to lack the detachment that would make one feel that here is an author engaged in making an honest study of something which is human and interesting if disturbing. 'Here they are: as human as you are, differing only in the routes they have taken in the hunt for the happiness we all desire.' No, there is a faint but definitely discernable note of propaganda in 'The Little Less.'" F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p6 Ag 17 '41 330w

"This is forcible-feeble, innocently naughty, and utterly negligible." Harold Brighouse

— Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 4 '41 30w

"The Little Less is not a nice book." Myfanwy Piper

— New Statesman & Nation 21:334 Mr 29 '41 80w

"It is recognized that only tragedy—and great tragedy at that—can deal adequately with the classic theme of incest in any of its manifestations. It is surely time to concede that the subject of Lesbianism, if used otherwise than in the scientific investigation of human abnormality, should fall into a special category of its own, possibly as a minor subsidiary of tragedy. Miss du Maurier has developed her central idea along lines that rarely lift above melodrama." J. S. Southron

N Y Times p15 Ag 17 '41 750w

"The book, with its long stress on the emotional life of one rather uninteresting person is obvious, slightly sensational, rather cheap, but the cheapness is a failure of literary quality, and not of moral intention." Clarissa Charles

— Sat R of Lit 24:15 Ag 30 '41 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Ap 19 '41 270w

DU MAURIER, DAPHNE (MRS F. A. M. BROWNING). Come wind, come weather. 78p pa 25c Doubleday [6d Heinemann]

248 Oxford group, World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-4435

"In this slender volume the author of Rebecca has chosen a religious and psychological theme. By a series of short stories she illustrates the means that families and individuals in various walks of life have used to vanquish the 'enemy within,'—fear, selfishness, jealousy, greed, and the like—thus becoming sources of strength and comfort to others in time of peril. A mother facing the loss of her son in sea warfare, the adjustment of evacuated families to new conditions, a charwoman's courage in an air raid shelter, grocers' problems with ration books, a Finnish woman's contribution to the unification of warring factions are a few of the situations presented." Library J

Books p19 Mr 30 '41 160w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p11 F 24 '41 700w

Reviewed by W. J. Grace

Commonweal 34:17 Ap 25 '41 550w

"Some readers will see in these stories and the epilogue an unrealistic amount of 'sweetness and light'; many will find them inspiring and exemplary of the gallant spirit that England is showing under severe trial. The book will be in demand in most public libraries." Isabel Douglas

+ — Library J 66:79 Ja 15 '41 310w

"These are, of course, sermons in story form. They are set down in simplicity and human warmth, with the grace of sincerity."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '41 500w

"Well written, but the Oxford-movement tone may be too much for you."

+ — New Yorker 17:60 Mr 1 '41 60w

Spec 165:300 S 20 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 750w

"This little collection of real life sketches is surprising as coming from Miss du Maurier's pen and with her publisher's imprint. They are obviously written with high seriousness in an avowed attempt to help on the work of moral rearmament which Miss du Maurier considers so important to-day, but, although they deal with people of all types in this country at the moment, there is a note of rather conscious back-slapping heartiness that reminds one of Mrs. Wiggs or of American religious broadcasts."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p607 N 30 '40 80w

DUNCAN, DOROTHY (MRS HUGH MACLENNAN). Here's to Canada! 334p il maps $3 Harper

917.1 Canada—Description and travel. National characteristics, Canadian (W) 41-9093

Beginning with Nova Scotia and working westward, the author takes up in turn Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, and the Arctic territories. Each section contains an outline map and briefly worded Information for tourists as supplementary to the text which combines personal travel experiences, description and history. Index.

Booklist 37:544 J1 15 '41

Bookmark 2:12 N '41

"Dorothy Duncan is a traveled native of the United States who is married to a Canadian and now lives in Canada. She has brought both affection and perspective to her study of her adopted country, has gathered her material painstakingly, arranged it arrestingly, and presented it with vividness and unaffected charm. Photographs, maps, a bibliography by chapters, directions toward more detailed information, add to the book's usefulness." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p8 Je 1 '41 390w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 2 '41 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

"Comprehensive, interesting, helpfully informative and unfailingly alive, this is a book we've been looking for. For travelers to Canada it should be indispensable. And stay-at-homes may well read it with an equal zest: certainly with equal profit." K. W.

+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '41 800w

"This comprehensive travel book ought to offer a special stimulus to Americans planning their summer vacation and looking for a chance to get $1.10 change for every American $1.00 bill. So far as this reviewer knows, it is the most complete and up-to-date guidebook to Canada now available. . . . The text, which contains an unusual amount of historical material and general comments on Canadian life, is supplemented by thirty-two pages of splendid photographs. Only two major defects are immediately apparent; the distinctly inadequate maps, and the absence of any list of hotels and inns." J. F. G.

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 14 '41 330w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 J1 '41

DUNCAN, JOHN ALLISON. The strangest cases on record. 272p il $3 Reilly & Lee

340.9 Law—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 40-33996

"Some of Mr Duncan's strangest findings were among wills. . . . The author devotes a chapter to celebrated cases of history, surrounding such names as Christopher Columbus, Joan of Arc, Socrates, Galileo and Capt Kidd. He has a chapter also on animal trials. While many of these are ancient, he cites a number of comparatively recent trials in American courts where animals, especially dogs, were the defendants. Ancient methods of trial, unusual characters in the law and a recitation of some peculiar penalties provide numerous other pages." Springfield Republican

"It's a motley gallery of eccentricity here exhibited, and reading it is good fun."

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '41 240w

"The volume is arranged for popular reading and meets the purpose of the author, which is only to entertain."

+ Springfield Republican p8 Ja 21 '41 270w

"His book is a random docket of legal madness."

Time 36:62 D 23 '40 250w

DUNCAN, WILLIAM CARY. Dog training made easy for you and your dog; il. by Ernest H. Hart. 251p $2 Little

636.7 Dogs—Training (W) 40-33845

Manual on the selection and training of dogs, written by the editor of Outdoor Life. Partial contents: The breed to choose; The house-breaking bugaboo; Coming to heel and staying there; Good motor manners, inside and outside the car; Barkers—good, bad and indifferent; Assault with intent to kill; Training for obedience tests; Man-shyness and timidity in general; Vicious and cowardly dogs. Index.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

"The full title says that by these methods training is 'made easy for you and your dog,' and as many boys are starting now with a new pup it would be a good thing if this sensible manual went along with the animal. The style is conversational, and wherever a little picture is needed to make a point perfectly plain there it is in the text." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ap 27 '41 220w

"A splendid book on the training of a dog from puppyhood to canine maturity. . . . The straight-forward style enlivened by occasional light touches makes good reading for the actual or prospective dog owner." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 50w

DUNCOMBE, FRANCES. High hurdles; il. by Eleanor Iselin Mason. 249p $2 Holt

41-2932

"Debby at fourteen faced a complete upheaval. . . . There was a sale, Debby's horse Twinkle went with the rest, Aunt Sue had to go to keep house for a shiftless cousin, Ben [her father] got a job taking care of horses on a stylish farm to the northward, and brave little Debby, choking down an ever-present grief, went along to help with horses their owner loved very little." Books

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"Here is a Gold Star American horse story for girls." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ap 27 '41 360w

"A lively, interesting, and natural story. The father-daughter relationship is especially well done." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 140w

"This is one of the books which makes us realize with new gratitude the excellence of girls' stories at their best today. As fresh and crisp as an October morning, it is a rarity among books for older girls from 10 to 15, a really good story of horses and riding with an American setting, but it is also such a sensitively drawn portrait of a young girl that it will appeal to those who don't know a surcingle from a martingale." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 27 '41 440w

"Books on horses and riding seem always to involve some sentimentality and some preaching on the importance of being a good sport, and this one is no exception. But it is a good story and the author is knowing about both horses and fourteen-year-old girls. Horse-loving readers of approximately that age will like it enormously. First-rate pencil illustrations."

+ New Yorker 17:90 My 24 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

DUNHAM, MRS MIRIAM PHILLIPS. What's in the sky; il. by Dorothy Waugh. [48p] $1 Oxford

520 Astronomy—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51694

Astronomy for beginners. Pictures and text describe the sun and the other heavenly bodies, eclipses, meteor showers, nebulae, comets, etc.

Booklist 37:411 My 1 '41

"The text is brief but not too condensed for comfort; there is enough of it for each picture to make that picture plain and create further interest in what the next will be. There is no mythology and no dressing up the facts—but how fine the facts are, if you are seven or eight and have just been given by this little book, the key to the sky!" M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 23 '41 160w

DUNHAM, M. P.—Continued

"Families living where they can easily view the skies may here draw valuable information to answer many questions." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:210 My '41 60w

"Librarians will welcome this book as a 'must.' Dorothy Waugh, formerly children's editor for Knopf, has done a remarkable job of photographic illustration. Her diagram showing how long it takes the planets to go around the sun is easily understood, with the orbits of the planets drawn correctly to scale. This little book should find its way into every public library." Alice Brown
+ Library J 66:308 Ap 1 '41 110w

"The most successful part of the book is to be found in the admirable and unusual pictures by Dorothy Waugh. . . The brief text suffers somewhat from the chronic difficulty which besets writers on scientific topics for children; it is too difficult for the 7, 8 and 9 year olds, too brief to satisfy those who will read it easily. Nevertheless, with its unique and clarifying pictures, 'What's in the Sky' will be a useful supplement to other books on astronomy for children." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

DUNKEL, WILBUR DWIGHT. Sir Arthur Pinero; a critical biography with letters. 142p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Pinero, Sir Arthur Wing 41-15731

Biography and critical estimate of the work of the English dramatist, whose farces and domestic dramas were the means of showing the English theater goer that it was no longer necessary to adapt French and German plays. The author is professor of English at the University of Rochester. Index.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p24 O 19 '41 160w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 27 '41 190w

"I have seldom been so enthusiastic over a 'critical biography,' for Mr. Dunkel's quality of writing is delightful. He has done real service to scholarship as well as to possible popular re-recognition of a man who once walked with the gods and now mistakenly is cast below stairs. Recommended for colleges, universities, and the larger public libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 66:667 Ag '41 60w

"Professor Dunkel's little book is a sensible and useful summary of the career of a man whose fantastic reputation as a playwright comparable to Ibsen has almost completely collapsed." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 153:346 O 11 '41 240w

"To get a sense of immediacy into his biography Mr. Dunkel has included a number of letters to people of importance concerning various plays, performances and more personal relationships. They do their job. They help to explain Sir Arthur and his success. They do not help to make him a more attractive personality. But, attractive or not, Pinero is one of the most important theatre figures in our own immediate theatre background. His plays made fortunes for our producers, made the names of many of our most famous players. We must know him and his plays, his method of work and the kind of theatre he wrote for. Mr. Dunkel's book is an excellent introduction to all of this." Frederick Morton
+ Theatre Arts 26:139 F '42 550w

DUNLAP, MRS KATHARINE. Once there was a village. 248p $2 Morrow

40-35460

A story of life in a small French village during the last two or three months before war is declared. The point of view is that of two young Americans, brother and sister, who have lived in the village for three years. Loving it and its people, they have remained detached from its inner spirit until the events of the last summer bring them to a realization of what France means to them.

Booklist 37:216 Ja 15 '41

Bookmark 2:13 Mr '41

"[The author] makes us feel Linda's affection and admiration for these French villagers, quiet, realistic, unsentimental, no undue lamentation, no word of complaint. This was not the first time they had gone to war. And one feels that when this war has taken its place in history they will be there under their tawny, rain-stained roofs, undefeated and indestructible." Page Cooper
+ Books p9 Ja 5 '41 360w

"Mrs. Dunlap's story, despite its theme, is built on a small scale and told from a limited point of view, which is perhaps the explanation for its resolute, cheerful tone. 'Once There Was a Village' is a sincerely felt and pleasantly told little novel for post-holiday reading." Katherine Salterthwaite

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 150w

"It is the crux of Katharine Dunlap's exquisite novel of the French countryside that her American hero and heroine live at la Fontenelle, and meet the declaration of war there without any sense of being apart or alien. And it is because Mrs. Dunlap's own knowledge has this simple intimacy that her story is to be hailed as outstanding among good books about France." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 5 '41 900w

"The book has a placid and reassuring prettiness."

New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 40w

"Mrs. Dunlap's novel is conventional, sentimental, tenuous, and trivial. Yet the terrible dignity of the events she touches on lends some nobility to the book, and her wholly unaffected tenderness and respect for the village, and its counterpart throughout France, are, beyond all question, honorable." F. S.
— + Sat R of Lit 23:24 F 8 '41 290w

Wis Lib Bul 37:55 Mr '41

DUNNE, PETER MASTEN. Pioneer Black robes on the west coast [ed. by Herbert E. Bolton]. 286p il maps $3 Univ. of Calif.

377.35 Jesuits in North America. Jesuits—Education. Education—Mexico 40-28755

"This is the second volume of a series which aims to tell the story of the Jesuits in Spanish North America between their arrival in 1572 and their expulsion nearly two hundred years later. In the first volume of the series, entitled Educational Foundations of the Jesuits in Sixteenth-Century New Spain [Book Review Digest, 1938], Dr. Jacobsen set forth the coming of the Jesuits to Mexico, the establishment of their educational system, and its geographical spread and institutional development to the end of the century. . . Here Dr. Dunne takes up the story of the beginning of Jesuit missionary work entre indios, among the more primitive natives of the West Coast. His volume is devoted to the opening of missions on the Sinaloa River in 1591 by the protomartyr Gonzalo de Tapia, and their advance northward until the Sonora River was reached some four decades later." (Editor's pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. A. Mackin

America 64:724 Ap 5 '41 240w

"Full notes, a good bibliography, and an excellent index complete the volume and make it a lastingly important contribution to the history of Christian missions among native American peoples. It is a pleasure to recommend it very highly both to students and general readers." P. A. Means
+ Am Hist R 46:956 Jl '41 420w

Cath World 153:635 Ag '41 240w

DU PONT, ALEXIS FELIX. Under sea with helmet and camera; experiences of an amateur; with il. from phot. taken by the author. 87p $2.50 Dodd

778 Photography, Submarine. Diving, Submarine (W) 40-35179

An amateur underwater photographer writes an account of his introduction to diving in a helmet, in the Bahamas. In the second part of his book is a detailed account of the usual diving equipment, and water-tight camera cases, and an account of underwater dangers. Illustrated with underwater photographs.

Books p10 D 15 '40 110w

"This book is written by an ardent amateur who has succeeded not only in working out for himself a technique of undersea natural history, but also has embodied it in an interesting narrative designed to encourage others to follow his example." H. S. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:25 F 8 '41 60w

DUPRE, HUNTLEY. Lazare Carnot, republican patriot. 343p $4.50 Mississippi Valley press, Oxford, Ohio

B or 92 Carnot, Lazare Nicolas Marguerite, comte, France—History—Revolution, France—History—Consulate and empire, 1799-1815 41-795

This work is an attempt "to depict the life and significance of an important figure fortunate enough to live through the Revolutionary and Napoleonic eras and even into the Restoration, though then in exile from his beloved native land. Lazare Carnot is universally known as the 'Organizer of Victory,' but beyond that most persons know little of him. He has a great deal to offer to the person interested in the period, not because he was an extraordinary Revolutionary figure, which he was not, but because he was a real son of his times, and a truly great Frenchman. [The author has] revealed Carnot as a man, as thinker, as public servant, and as patriot." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"There is a curiously amorphous quality about this volume that must arise, the reviewer is convinced, from a basic structural weakness, viz., the author's failure to make up his mind for what audience he was writing. . . This indecision is all the more regrettable in that it keeps the author from etching his subject more sharply and from bringing to a focal point the characteristics of Carnot's thinking and actions. This serious criticism apart, the book will take its place as a necessary work of reference for every advanced student." Leo Gershoy

+ Am Hist R 47:116 O '41 500w

"The author somehow fails to give one an insight into the personality of his subject. Carnot does not seem to live again in these pages. Unless the reader already knew the reputation of Carnot, he might close the book without a vivid realization that Carnot gained immortality as the organizer of victory. He would get little conception of the qualities of Carnot as an administrator. It is highly probable, however, that these faults of an otherwise honest and sound piece of work are due, not to the author, but to the nature of his sources." C. P. Higby

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:399 Ap '41 160w

DURANTY, WALTER. The Kremlin and the people. 222p $2 Reynal

947.084 Russia—Politics and government (W) 41-23696

The greater part of this book is devoted to the author's account of the Moscow trials and the Red army "purge" and what lay behind them. Later chapters deal with the Russian attitude toward Munich, the period of 'neutrality,' and the coming of the German attack on Russia. Index.

"This little book is in the style to which Walter Duranty's readers have long been accustomed—sophisticated, cynical, gossipy, and a trifle rambling, a combination of rather consciously hardboiled reporting with overtones of an Oxford education. . . Neither Mr. Duranty nor anyone else can give us much 'inside' information about this most mysterious of great wars; but the reader will find some fascinating detective problems in the stories of the trials, and for good measure the author gives us his personal interpretation of the flight of Rudolf Hess." W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Ja '42 230w

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

"Some of Mr. Duranty's generalizations about prewar Russia seem too sweeping and his story of how Lenin became a revolutionary is historically muddled, even if he cites Lenin's widow, Krupskaya, as his authority. He is at his best in conjuring up the drama and the mystery of the political trials, and there is an occasional shrewd bit of observation of Russian psychology, as when he recalls that a Russian who had been sentenced to a slow and painful form of execution by Ivan the Terrible continued to cheer for the Tsar throughout the process." W. H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 27 '41 800w

"That Duranty is pro-Russian in his sympathies is unmistakable. But were he not, he would not have that intimate understanding of the country which makes a report such as is furnished by this book one of the greatest value not only in estimating the part played by the Soviet Union in the world politics of recent years, but in explaining many things inside Russia that appear strange and even fantastic to the outside world. The picture of Yagoda, the OGPU chief who was himself finally liquidated, is only one of the things for which this book is worth reading. One's only regret is that, knowing so much, Duranty might have told us a great deal more, especially as in a book he is free to write as he pleases without the interference of censors or having to consider the demands of news editors." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 1:469 Ja '42 500w

Reviewed by R. H. McDonough
Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by Joachim Joesten
Nation 154:99 Ja 24 '42 240w

"Faintly 'Arabian Nights' in tone, and the psychologizing gets fairly thick at times, but it is an interesting analysis."

New Yorker 17:106 N 29 '41 60w

"The book is just a bit too flippant for the tragic subject it attempts to deal with. . . If it weren't so sad it would be funny: Says Duranty: 'Platakov's execution and the execution of Muralof are to me the strongest proof that they were guilty.' What a principle of jurisprudence! He writes that Marshal Tukhachevsky and the other leading Red Army generals whom Stalin had shot in 1937 'began to dicker with outsiders for foreign aid.' Any proof given? No." Louis Fischer

Sat R of Lit 24:14 D 6 '41 800w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 29 '41 950w

DU VAL, MILES PERCY. Cadiz to Cathay; the story of the long struggle for a waterway across the American isthmus. 554p il maps $5 Stanford univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]
386.444 Panama canal, Nicaragua canal, U.S.—Foreign relations 40-9424

"This is, basically, a study in American diplomacy, designed to explain in authoritative detail how the government of the United States came to choose the Panama route and secure control of it." (Books) Index.

"This study is valuable and timely. Although it contains little that is new or revolutionary, it does present a very complicated story in an extremely readable form." E. T. Parks

+ Am Hist R 47:156 O '41 650w

DU VAL, M. P.—Continued

Reviewed by C. L. Jones

Am Pol Sci R 35:157 F '41 500w

"An excellent monograph in diplomatic history. . . Commander DuVal has made a substantial contribution to the concept that history, in great measure, can be understood only as a product of the influence of sea communications, or lack of such communications, on the commercial and strategic needs of business interests and governments. . . [He] uses, for the first time, the papers of Tomás Herrán, Colombian Chargé d'Affaires in Washington, and presents an engaging portrait of an honorable diplomat who struggled against forces too strong to be controlled. This is the best part of the book." C. F. Strong

+ Ann Am Acad 215:213 My '41 450w

"The work is valuable and timely. . . It is difficult to praise too highly the clarity, vigor and objectivity with which Comdr. DuVal has integrated the thousand facets of this significant episode. His monograph is enriched with numerous reproductions of contemporary photographs, cartoons and documents, and merits the attention of all thoughtful students of American foreign relations." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Books p31 O 6 '40 440w

DUVOISIN, ROGER A. The three sneezes, and other Swiss tales; il. by [the author]. 245p $2 Knopf

Tales, Swiss (W) 41-16603

Collection of Swiss folk tales, many of them short legends explaining the origin of an unusual mountain, lake, or stream. For children from ten to twelve.

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:375 D '41 160w

"This collection, which includes representative tales from the different provinces, [is] retold with charm and retains the genuine flavor of the folktales." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41 80w

"The tellings are uneven. Some are dramatic, with direct, amusing conversations, while others fall rather flat. The majority of the illustrations, which are by the author, are done with pen and ink. For large libraries which need additions to already large collections of folk tales." Evelyn Turpin

Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 90w

"The stories are divided into 'Swiss French Tales' and 'Tales from German Switzerland,' all have a hearty peasant flavor. Simple, dramatic and full of humor, they will be welcomed by children and by the story teller. Mr. Duvoisin, who was brought up in Switzerland and heard these tales as a child, has caught their lively humor in his drawings." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 S 28 '41 300w

"Well done."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 N 8 '41 40w

DYER, JOHN PERCY. Fightin' Joe Wheeler. (Southern biography ser) 417p il maps $3 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Wheeler, Joseph 41-19280

Biography of an energetic American soldier, who was "the only corps commander to wear both the grey and the blue." Wheeler, who was five feet five inches tall and weighed only a hundred and twenty pounds, was commissioned a major general in the Confederate forces at the age of twenty-six. At sixty-two he fought again in Cuba, and later went to the Philippines to help capture Aguinaldo. He died in 1906. Index.

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Books p20 O 19 '41 700w

"This is the first attempt, and notably successful, to present a full-length portrait of one of the most colorful of all America's military men. . . Mr. Dyer has done a commendably thorough and scholarly biography, using a lively and readable style, and from it emerges a well-done study of a man who was an honor to both the armies whose uniforms he wore." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p5 S 28 '41 1200w

"This biography should be as vivid and dramatic as the blurb declares it is. But it isn't. The author carefully narrates every campaign tactic and maneuver in Wheeler's Civil War service, but he can't write a battle for sour apples. . . Too often the account of Wheeler's terms in Congress reads like excerpts from the Congressional Record. However, his exploits in our grossly-mismanaged war with Spain take on more life. Finally, many of Mr. Dyer's footnotes seem unnecessary." Fairfax Downey

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 S 20 '41 410w

E

EARLE, EDWARD MEAD. Against this torrent. 73p $1 Princeton univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. World war, 1939—U.S. 41-51775

"The torrent against which the author sets himself is not the flood of news and persuasion designed to draw the United States into the war, but is rather the torrent of tyranny and of 'trade controls, revolutionary propaganda, subsidized treason and concealed military intervention' by which the totalitarian powers wage covert war against those parts of the world on which they do not wage open war. His argument is for American opposition to this by diplomatic, economic, military and naval action. Professor Earle, who is just old enough to have been a lieutenant in the First World War, is distinguished among the younger historians and is now connected with the Princeton Institute for Advanced Studies in economics and politics." Christian Century

"Clear, temperate, and forceful, this slender volume is a welcome addition to the literature of the present controversy over foreign policy." G. L. Kirk

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:816 Ag '41 280w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic JI '41 150w

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

"In the mounting pamphlet literature upon the crisis of our times, this is one of the sanest and most straightforward voices yet to be raised. Professor Earle demolishes the isolationist position with the precision of a scientific student of foreign and military policy, fortified by a clear historical perspective." Walter Millis

+ Books p3 My 18 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:691 My 21 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:193 O '41 10w

"There is little in Mr. Earle's book with which any man of good will or good sense can quarrel. The trouble is that it does not go nearly far enough—even in its own terms. The Axis threatens the United States; granted. The kind of world the Axis is creating is not the kind of world in which Americans want to live; granted. But to stop the Axis powers we must discover in our own system the weak spots which they understand better than we do, and to build the world we want we must discover and adapt the strong points in their system. Mr. Earle's book brings the reader to the threshold I have just indicated." Quincy Howe

New Repub 104:897 Je 30 '41 480w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone
Pol Sci Q 56:464 S '41 320w

Reviewed by Samuel Grafton
Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 2 '41 280w
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 25 '41 280w
Time 37:94 Je 9 '41 300w

EARLY, ELEANOR. An island patchwork; il.
by Virginia Grilley. 290p $2.50 Houghton 917.449 Nantucket, Massachusetts

(W) 41-8389

Anecdotal study of Nantucket, with its Quakers, whalers, architecture, gardens, recipes, folklore, etc. The ancestors of R. H. Macy and the early history of Macy's store are discussed at length; the Coffins and the Folgers receive their due, and all in a genial, light-hearted manner.

Booklist 37:513 J1 1 '41

"Miss Early seems too much aware that Nantucket is a quaint place. She is a little too hearty when she tells of Nantucket's old sea captains. Her sailing stories are a little too consciously salty and breezy, her descriptions of the island too consciously laden with poetry. Nantucket's history is fascinating in its own right. It can stand on its own feet without being bolstered up by exclamation points, labored similes, cute words and bad jokes." Barbara Woolcott

Books p9 Je 29 '41 390w

"Nantucket is the subject of Eleanor Early's latest scrapbook of jaunty gossip and guidance; and if this 'patchwork' is not the best book which has appeared for the information and delight of island-bound tourists, it is certainly one of the gayest. . . Miss Early has gathered a bright assortment of interest for her patchwork."

+ N Y Times p15 My 25 '41 600w

"Quaint, if you like, but delightful and wittily done. Some new material."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 7 '41 60w

"It is spicy, anecdotal and charming, and good vacation reading." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 31 '41 90w

"'An Island Patchwork' is a good whetstone to sharpen appetites for the annual summer pilgrimage to 'the shore.'" M. A. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 J1 '41

EARLY, ELEANOR. She knew what he wanted; with drawings by Jane Miller. 190p $1.75 Waverly house

177 Conduct of life. Young women. Etiquet 41-52012

Recipes of various kinds for the girl who wants to get- and keep- a husband. "How to dress . . . how to decorate. How to have a party on a shoe string . . . and raise an orchid in the kitchen. And how to fix a room (any old room), so as to make everybody who steps into it happy—including yourself."

Booklist 38:125 D 15 '41

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 140w

EASTMAN, MAX. Marxism, is it science? 394p $3 Norton [8s 6d Allen, G]

335 Marx, Karl. Communism 40-34929

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by Selig Perlman

Am Pol Sci R 35:971 O '41 850w

"Eastman's statements of what he considers to be the 'scientific' content of Marx's theory are not entirely false. But as a result of his isolating out certain individual elements of Marx's theory he falls far short of conveying that picture of society which Marx meant to present." Herbert Marcuse

Ann Am Acad 214:254 Mr '41 410w

"Max Eastman may now take proudly a place to which he has long been more than half entitled, a high place among the great American liberals, living and dead." T. V. Smith

+ Ethics 51:356 Ap '41 420w

Foreign Affairs 19:677 Ap '41 10w

Reviewed by J. D. Bernal

Nature 148:237 Ag 30 '41 1900w

"'Stalin's Russia and the Crisis in Socialism' and 'Marxism: Is It Science?' have presented what is, so far as I know, the most intelligent and searching as well as the best informed discussion of the implications of the Marxist movement and the development of the Revolution in Russia that has yet appeared in English." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 104:173 F 10 '41 4350w

"Mr. Eastman's vigorous book will only disturb those to whom Marxism has become a body of immutable dogmas to be guarded as though it were the Bible in Tennessee or the Koran in Mecca. To others, who remember that it is fifty years and more since Marx died, and that the study of the social sciences has not stayed still in the interval, it is a healthy and refreshing challenge to examine anew basic principles in a time when events have called all dogmas into question. . . The importance of the book is unquestionable. It is indeed, rather a programme of points to be considered, than a systematic examination of their implications. But it is always arresting and always intelligent; and its scholarship is on a high level." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:442 Ap 26 '41 700w

Reviewed by Joseph Carwell

Pol Sci Q 56:291 Je '41 750w

"Among all the critical examinations in recent years of the philosophical foundations of Marxism Mr. Max Eastman's is as bold and as acute as any. A serious and exceptionally well-informed student of the literature of Marxism, whose original disinclination to go the whole hog in support of Marx has been transformed, not least by bitter and progressive disenchantment with the evolution of Soviet Communism, into the flat rejection of the Marxian dialectic, Mr. Eastman in this new volume handsomely repays the hard thought he asks for."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Ap 26 '41 1300w

EASTWOOD, ROBERT PARKER. Sales control by quantitative methods. 311p $3.50 Columbia univ press

658.154 Budget, Business. Marketing. Sampling (statistics) 41-3787

"The book deals with the analytical tools that have been and may be used for the better control of sales. It seeks to integrate methods and techniques that have heretofore tended to be segregated. . . The following chapter headings indicate the scope of the volume: The Place of the Sales Budget in the Budgetary System; Ratio Analysis of Sales and Costs; Measurement and Prediction of Long-Term Forces Affecting Sales and Costs; Measurement and Prediction of Medium- and Short-Term Forces Affecting Sales and Costs; Methods of Collecting Market Information; The Theory of Sampling as Applied to Market Data; Statistical Methods of Testing the Significance of Market Factors; Types of Market Indexes and Methods of Construction; Combination and Application of Analyses." (Management R) Classified list of references. Index.

"Sales Control by Quantitative Methods is a distinct contribution, particularly in its first seven chapters which deal with several fundamental concepts in a manner in which experienced practitioners and teachers should consider them. The work is obviously not for the mine-run student or ordinary research worker. To the advanced accountant, business analyst, market researcher, or sales executive who is familiar with modern research methods, the book should prove exceedingly stimulating."

EASTWOOD, R. P.—Continued
L. O. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 214:259 Mr '41 550w

"In approaching the problem of sales control, one finds the field roughly divisible into two parts. The first is represented by methods and techniques appropriate for making the budget estimates. The second is concerned with means and methods for making the estimates effective. Of the two spheres of activity, forecasting has been the more neglected. Dr. Eastwood's thorough study effectively remedies this neglect."

+ Management R 30:33 Ja '41 320w

EATON, CLEMENT. Freedom of thought in the old South. 343p il $3 Duke Univ. [18s Cambridge]

975 South—Intellectual life. Liberalism. Slavery in the U.S. 40-5232

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Mr. Eaton's thesis is not new, for the economic historian especially has pointed out time after time the intellectual repressions of a cotton economy rooted in slavery. This study, however, makes several noteworthy contributions to southern history: first, a searching analysis of the effect of the intellectualism of cotton capitalism upon freedom of thought and, second, a body of new material upon southern intellectual life garnered from a surprising variety of sources. . . . For the student of social affairs Mr. Eaton's case study has a broad significance." John Pomfret

+ Am J Soc 46:747 Mr '41 400w

"Eaton has a truly sociological conception of the period, viewing it as a conflict between frontier liberalism and a growing conservatism arising in defense of an outmoded economic and political institution—slavery. Through Eaton's eyes we get the best picture yet made of the eighteenth century liberals of the South, who were closer than the northern leaders to French and English liberalism. With a masterly control of a surprisingly rich body of data drawn from all manner of sources he traces the gradual transformation of opinion in the South until it becomes almost exclusively a defense of the 'peculiar institution' and of the supporting 'right' of secession." L. L. Bernard

+ Am Soc R 6:301 Ap '41 250w

"This interesting volume, utilizing fresh manuscript sources at vital points, and assimilating the most significant secondary studies, deals with its major thesis of cultural decadence in a combination of narrative and analysis. Isolated facts regarding the schools, churches, newspapers, leaders, Negroes, and other elements in the antebellum South, however well known to the professional historian, assume here a synthesis which is challenging in its meaning for our own day." Harvey Wish

+ Ethics 51:241 Ja '41 420w

"At a time when men are speaking of democracy and freedom as somehow one and the same, Dr. Eaton's book is not merely historically informative and stimulating but disturbing also. . . . The most tragic part of his book lies in the consequences in the South he did not even need to describe. The truth is that excellent as this book is as history, it is more valuable as a description of the details of a universal and recurring disease of the human mind. It is not necessary to agree with all his judgments to be grateful for the array of facts, of incidents, of personalities which make a period of repression clear to all who wish to see it in the past or understand it in this still susceptible present in which we live." Jonathan Daniels

+ Pol Sci Q 56:146 Mr '41 950w

"Had the discussion been related throughout more closely to the economic realities of the period and a careful analysis of the content of thinking been made, it is possible that the author might have established a sounder framework around which to organize his data. Despite these criticisms the book is stimulating and represents a prodigious amount of labor." G. G. Johnson

+ Social Forces 19:572 My '41 850w

EATON, EVELYN SYBIL MARY. Restless are the sails. 348p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-10770

Historical romance based on the siege of Louisburg, in what is now Cape Breton Island. A French prisoner of war, originally from Louisburg, escapes from servitude in the English colonies and travels the five hundred miles by land and sea to warn the town of the coming attack by New Englanders. His warning is unheeded and Louisburg falls. The time is 1744 to 1746.

Booklist 37:546 Jl 15 '41

"A book that is disappointingly below the level of her first success. Except for some fairly well done scenes incidental to the British ousting of the French from Acadia, the novel is not only weak in its fictional ingredient but watery in its historical substance as well." A. B. Tourtellot

+ Books p9 Je 29 '41 400w

"The hero's development is unusually convincing. Absorbing light reading."

+ Commonweal 34:308 Jl 18 '41 90w

"An exciting trip in a stolen ketch makes this book an interesting one for readers who like both historical and sea stories. This book will have wide promotion; because of that, and the popularity of the author's former book, Quietly My Captain Waits, it is recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:520 Je 1 '41 70w

"What a book! Plunging you straight into a past whose rough crudities contrast significantly with the raw barbarity and inventive diabolism of our own time, showing you the same lovely, waiting earth, the same doggedly tenacious humanity. A sea-staged, sea-swept, tonic book. And of ideal length." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p15 Je 29 '41 850w

New Yorker 17:63 Je 28 '41 70w

"The book is full of high adventure, breathless undertakings, tragedies, and color. Much of what Miss Eaton writes is authenticated by history. . . . The story is written with much power and tension, and keeps one breathless to the end—although the conclusion is almost 'too good to be true.'" M. D.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Je 29 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

EATON, JEANETTE. Narcissa Whitman, pioneer of Oregon; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 318p $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Whitman, Mrs Narcissa (Prentiss) —Juvenile literature (W) 41-51892

Narcissa Whitman was one of the first two white women to cross the Rocky Mountains. In 1836 she and her husband, Dr Marcus Whitman, went to Oregon to establish a mission among the Indians. This fictionalized biography of a brave pioneer is intended for grades seven to nine.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 N 2 '41 380w

"No history of Oregon can be complete that does not honor the work of this beautiful woman. This story biography of a vivid personality, thrilling and tragic, will bring to older girls the inspiration of an intense and sacrificial belief in something outside and higher than themselves. Woodi Ishmael's drawings have a crude vigor suited to the dramatic text." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:362 S '41 170w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:477 N '41 100w

"To be listed with our better love stories, with appeal for girls fourteen to twenty."

Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 150w

New Yorker 17:145 D 6 '41 110w

"Spirited and authentic." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 160w

EATON, WALTER PRICHARD. The man who found Christmas. 62p pa 60c Wilde

41-22956

"A modern Christmas Carol to the extent that it tells how certain bright young men with anti-Christmas sentiments learned what it was all about." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1306 O 22 '41 30w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p25 D 14 '41 40w

"A gay little booklet. Just the thing to top off a Christmassy package. . . The story is old-fashioned but it is real in its values."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 70w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Speak no evil. 281p $2 Random house

(W) 41-51581

Detective story.

Booklist 37:293 Mr 1 '41

"So you thought Mignon G. Eberhart could hardly improve upon any of her fifteen books, all of them first-rate and some of them mystery milestones? She appears to have done it in 'Speak No Evil,' a tome that gives her a leg or two on any loving cup offered for distinguished service to fandom in 1941." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 F 23 '41 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 22:380 O 25 '41 60w

"The latest Mignon Eberhart story is a big step ahead of its recent predecessors—which should be good news for the Eberhart fans and even better news for the readers who have feared that this highly competent writer's inventive talent might be permanently bogged in quicksands of sentimentality." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '41 320w

"The characters are all very well, but the timing is bad and the story is padded. Distinguished by the lack of horror which usually prevails in Eberhart books."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Mr 1 '41 70w

"With triple murder, vanishing jewels, marital infelicities past and present, and constant emotional tempests, there's scarcely a dull moment. Palpitating."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 22 '41 40w

Time 37:88 Mr 3 '41 60w

"Faulty characterization hinders belief in this story with its queer setting which deserved some psychological care and insight."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Ag 2 '41 150w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). With this ring. 274p $2 Random house 41-51988

Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"Lieutenant Picot's sleuthing is all right. 'With This Ring' is more than that. It's a major Eberhart item, as exciting and generally satisfactory as any in her long list of successes, though not so carefully composed in spots as some of them—tossed off at white heat, maybe." Will Cuppy

+ Books p24 N 9 '41 200w

"A theme from Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth streamlined for modern instruments. Good plush-trimmed romance, in Mignon's day as well as in Emma's." Mort. Post

New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 100w

"The dénouement is intensely dramatic and completely satisfactory. One hesitates to say that this is the best of Mrs. Eberhart's books, for she has a long list of good mystery stories to her credit, but it is certainly not far from the best." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 N 23 '41 280w

"The New Orleans bayou country makes a sinister background for this frightening, skillfully written mystery novel."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 15 '41 60w

"Up to standard."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 8 '41 40w

"This is a good novel as well as a first-rate murder mystery."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 120w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Famous inventors for boys and girls. 130p il $2 Barnes, A.S.

926 Inventors—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-19803

Brief sketches of the lives and works of fourteen inventors. Those included are: Johannes Gutenberg; James Watt; Edmund Cartwright; Robert Fulton; Eli Whitney; George Stephenson; Samuel F. B. Morse; Cyrus Hall McCormick; Henry Bessemer; Gottlieb Daimler; Alexander Graham Bell; Thomas Alva Edison; Wilbur and Orville Wright; Guglielmo Marconi. Index.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 28 '41 100w

"The contemporary pictures of the inventors and their inventions have evidently been selected with care and are authentic."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 90w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Phoebe-Belle; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 63p $1.25 Greystone

(W) 41-19722

Phoebe-Belle was a hen who had "a good mind, not so good as a person's mind, but very good for a chicken." She was the Brent's pet hen, but she would get into the garden, and the Brents would chase her. In a fit of pique after one of those sessions, Phoebe-Belle went off and lived in a house in the woods. She found it very lonely, however, and when a young man out of work came to the little house, she led him to the Brent house, and things were satisfactory all around.

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

"This hen story is so lively and likable it will be treasured not only by children but by any one who ever was friends with a hen." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 2 '41 300w

"A well-made book with very nice pictures which the younger children will like and older people will appreciate." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:461 N '41 60w

"A charming tale."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 40w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Spin, weave and wear; the story of cloth; il. by Kathleen Voute. 135p $1.75 McBride

677 Textile industry—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-24714

Simply written history of the manufacture of textiles—wool, cotton, linen, silk, and rayon. For ages nine to twelve.

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE—Continued

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

"This is good material presented in a simple readable style." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:1048 D 1 '41 50w

"Instructive." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 10w

EBERSON, FREDERICK. Microbe's challenge. 354p il $3.50 Jaques Cattell press, N. Queen st. & McGovern av, Lancaster, Pa.

616.01 Micro-organisms, Pathogenic

41-23685

"For the scientist and physician this book aims to present a permanent record of the progress made during recent years in preventive medicine; for the student, it illustrates how, by perseverance, accurate procedure and meticulous observation, the great discoveries of science are made; for the general reader it provides cultural information that touches nearly every phase of daily living." School & Society

School & Society 54:395 N 1 '41 60w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 D '41 600w

ECKARD, EDWIN WOODROW. Economics of W. S. Jevons. 113p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

330.1 Jevons, William Stanley. Economics

41-77226

"Mr. Eckard broaches his study of Jevons by a brief but interesting sketch of Jevons' life. Jevons' contributions to value and distribution theory, especially capital and interest, his study of the coal question, his works on money and business cycles and his views on the social questions of the day are carefully expounded, occasionally interspersed by critical and explanatory comments." Am Econ R

"The study is not penetrating, but Mr. Eckard's thoroughness in bringing Jevons' ideas together makes the book worth reading." Earl Rolph

+ — Am Econ R 31:371 Je '41 160w

Social Studies 32:239 My '41 20w

ECKENRODE, HAMILTON JAMES, and CONRAD, BRYAN. George B. McClellan, the man who saved the Union. 296p maps $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 McClellan, George Brinton. U.S.—History—Civil war

42-808

Two Southern historians, bent on presenting McClellan in a better light than his earlier biographers have done, come to the conclusions: that it was he who saved the North in 1861 and 1862; that there seems to be no military reasons for the hostile feelings toward him; and that the reasons were probably political, arising from his conflict with Stanton. Stanton's animosity is said to be based on McClellan's popularity among his soldiers, and his candidacy against Lincoln in 1864. Index.

"McClellan deserves better treatment than he has been generally accorded, and many readers will find in this all-out defense a welcome corrective for books which have been equally partisan on the other side." Paul Hutchinson

+ — Christian Century 59:48 Ja 14 '42 130w

"One excellent idea of this new life of McClellan is that military war has less enduring ferocity than the warfare of political animosity. . . . With polite and intelligent firmness, the persuasive assurance of gentlemen, two Virginia historians, one a colonel in the United States Army, have written this vigorous apologia. . . . Biographical studies of McClellan in recent years have been toiling upward, step by step, toward a level of fairness where the achievement of a remarkable character may be viewed in the light of truth. . . . And here Eckenrode and Conrad add new light to a spreading brilliance of superb evaluation." D. S. Rankin

+ Commonweal 35:272 Ja 2 '42 480w

"Recommended for larger libraries." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 100w

EDDISON, ERIC RUCKER. A fish dinner in Memison; with an introd. by James Stephens. 1td ed 350p $3.50 Dutton

41-9033

A fantasy which takes place on two separate time levels: modern England, and a strange kingdom, called Zimiamvia, in a much earlier age. Three love affairs occupy the two stages: one modern; the other two in that Arthurian kingdom where kings, duchesses, dukes and chancellors wander in a dreamy world of their own.

"E. R. Eddison is not a writer for everybody." W. J. Gold

Books p8 My 18 '41 700w

"This is romance in classic form—idyllic, sensuous, sublime. Even the villains are heroic; settings are lavish and lush, conversations lofty and wise. The modern prose is suitably unpretentious. For Memison the English is Elizabethan, so well recreated and felicitous that it seems normal in that enchanted other-world. Because of its philosophic and literary attitude, the book can't be read casually, and it is sometimes indigestibly rich. But it is a masterpiece of imaginative, aristocratic, poetic romance—so rare now as to be almost extinct." Dorothy Chamberlain

+ New Repub 104:894 Je 30 '41 420w

"For his prose alone, Mr. Eddison should be read. It is a noble prose, rich with rhythm and nuance and, if read aloud—the test of prose—is music to the ear. Here is a novelist who has the gift for conveying the slightest inflection in the voice, the faintest flutter of an eyelid. . . . Caviar his novel certainly is, and not to the general alone. And Mr. Eddison's own long introduction, full of philosophical implications and allusions, does not help us much, unless we are already adepts in philosophy. Nevertheless, we should be thankful; for there is his magnificent prose and a superb story, whose Greek quotations and literary allusions, at intervals, mock at our cultural deficiencies." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 My 25 '41 750w

"Recommended to Cabell-lovers."

+ New Yorker 17:94 My 17 '41 30w

"In these days it were churlish to grudge any praise to this magnificent romance which states so defiantly, so superbly, the value of valor, of the single eye and the stout heart. 'A Fish Dinner in Memison' is indeed a book for the times: a book from which the reader can see unmistakably that a life without dreams, action without thought, fashion and prejudice without faith is but a kind of self-indulgent, luxurious relapse into the dominion of death." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Je 7 '41 750w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. The kingdom of God and the American dream; the religious and secular ideals of American history. 319p $2.90 Harper

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Church history. U.S.—Religion

41-7286

"The purpose of this book is to trace three elements throughout [American] history, the religious ideal, the secular dream of democracy, and the negative and sordid element of evil which has worked, consciously or unconsciously, for the perversion or destruction of these high ideals. This involves writing, within a brief framework of American history, without which it would not be intelligible, the part played by religion in American life and by the secular ideal of democracy which has always involved the aim of 'liberty and justice for all.'" (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by Conrad Bergendoff

Ann Am Acad 217:176 S '41 450w

"This is a heartening as well as an informing book. It is an incentive to patriotism because it shows the abiding strength and sanity of the nation in spite of its mistakes. It encourages a chastened and earnest optimism. It enhances the prestige of religion by showing how potent a force it has been in the development of our culture. The hope of building the Kingdom of God has been an essential element of the American dream and of American achievement. Here are the facts that prove it." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:910 J1 16 '41 800w

Reviewed by S. L. Riddle

Churchman 155:17 Je 1 '41 170w

"Perhaps the chief value of this book is in its bringing together under one cover testimony to the indubitable importance of the Christian religion for the health of the state. Ministers who are largely responsible for insisting upon this fact will find it a very useful mine of material." Gordon Poterat

+ Crozer Q 18:351 O '41 290w

Reviewed by W. S. Sweet

J Religion 22:122 Ja '42 170w

"It should be emphasized that in spite of its historical subject-matter, the present volume is aimed more at the future of America than at her past. The author's concern for that future is profound and commendable, but to anyone acquainted with American historiography of the last thirty years, his book will prove of secondary interest and doubtful merit." E. S. Morgan

+ New Eng Q 14:589 S '41 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Lathrop

Survey 77:373 D '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:133 J1 '41

EDDY, WALTER HOLLIS. What are the vitamins? 247p il $2.50 Reinhold

612.0151 Vitamins 41-1331

"What are Vitamins? What do they do? Which ones do I need? How much of each do I need? Where and how can I get them?" So asks the author in his preface and then gives 'personal expression of what seems to him pertinent and reliable information. . . After the general introductory chapters, individual chapters deal respectively with each of the vitamins known: A, B₁, Riboflavin (B₂ or G), Nicotinic Acid (P-P), B₆, other members of the B complex, C, P, D, E, and K. . . Carefully prepared bibliographies and subject and author indexes add much to the usefulness of the book." Chem & Met Eng

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

"No sensational, highly colored, over-optimistic promises of miracles, or dogmatic ready-made conclusions prompted by wishful thinking, are here. . . Instead, the author picks a temperate, careful, pattern in close-packing the critically chosen conclusions of a tremendous number of workers."

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:145 Ap '41 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

J Home Econ 33:409 Je '41 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:48 J1 '41

Pratt p17 D '41

EDEY, MAITLAND ARMSTRONG. American water birds, also hawks, owls and game birds; with color pl. by Louis Agassiz Fuertes. 72p $1 Random house

593.2 Birds—North America. Water birds (W) 41-20355

Brief descriptions of water birds, owls, game birds, and hawks, found east of the Rockies.

The illustrations are full-page color plates, reproduced from those in the State museum at Albany. The book is identical in format with the author's American Songbirds, Book Review Digest, 1940. Index.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"[Does] not give enough information to satisfy the average person, but for the price they are a credit to the author. . . Recommended." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 70w

"Adequate." Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

EDGERTON, MRS LUCILE SELK. Pillars of gold. 403p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 41-12244

A story of the Arizona gold rush in the 1860s. "The main events set forth in this novel have been taken from original and contemporary records and documents, and so far as consistent with the fictitious characters in the book, are historically accurate. Many of the accounts by eyewitnesses of the events were followed with but slight changes in order to preserve as much as possible the flavor of the times." (Author's foreword)

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"'Pillars of Gold' may be badly balanced as a piece of fiction; and it certainly suffers from over-drawn characters, excessively melodramatic dialogue and rather haphazard motivation. But one feels about it very much as Bill Conover felt about his gold. As it was worth all his troubles, so is old Captain Jepherson's stout little river boat with its incomparable voyage worth all the less meaty goings-on that here lead to the tale of its achievement on the Colorado." A. B. Tourtellot

+ Books p4 Ag 3 '41 800w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 6 '41 550w

"A most engrossing novel. . . A novel that most men will enjoy as will also the ladies. One very good way to get one's mind off the present international crisis." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 66:615 J1 '41 60w

"It is a book of opposites. Clean, stripped realism, as in the desert crossing. Colorado coloring like the boldest of impressionist paintings. Vast scenic effects obtained by pregnant words used with sparse economy. It has the whole of the Southwest in it. A spacious, grand story of unique country and an incomparable era. With a gem of a map." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 J1 27 '41 1000w

Reviewed by A. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 24:15 J1 26 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 160w

EDMAN, IRWIN, and SCHNEIDER, HERBERT WALLACE. Fountainheads of freedom; the growth of the democratic idea. 576p $3.75 Reynal

321.8 Liberty. Democracy (W) 41-24359

This work is in two parts. The first consists of an essay of some two hundred pages on the origins and the implications of the democratic idea. Part two contains illustrative material, excerpts from the writings of statesmen and philosophers from the prophets of Israel and the Greeks down to Masaryk and John Dewey in our own days. Index.

Booklist 38:125 D 15 '41

"Messrs. Edman and Schneider have assembled a selection of great names; their writings are more than statements, they are manifestoes to spur us on in the present fight." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p5 D 7 '41 1450w

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 27 '41 600w

EDMAN, IRWIN--Continued

"Professor Edman, with the assistance of his colleague, Professor Schneider, has performed an invaluable service in arranging this anthology of democratic literature. . . . The author, or authors, provide the anthology with an excellent introduction in which the development of democratic theory in its relation to living history is illumined. . . . In discussing these problems in detail the authors preserve a very good balance. It is the more surprising, therefore, that the basic logic of democracy is defined in one-sided terms." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 153:572 D 6 '41 700w

"Professor Edman ignores the Rochdale weavers, who fathered the cooperative movement upon which Scandinavian democracy flourished in the days before Hitler. Certainly if the Communist Manifesto is worth reprinting here, there ought to be something from the literature of Consumer Cooperation. I would not, however, end a review of 'Fountainheads of Freedom' on a belittling note. Any defense of freedom is a good deed in a naughty world these days, and Professors Edman and Schneider have crammed a thousand such deeds into their vibrant, generous, hopeful volume." John Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p6 D 21 '41 1700w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:102 N 29 '41 100w

"Edman's careful scholarship is productive of an agreeable feeling that one is on solid ground historically. His book is far from being a rehash of old ideas or a breezy voyage into the half-known and half-imagined. It will give you the essence of what many investigators have found. After having said so much, I am perhaps entitled to wish that in a revision the proof-reading will be attended to anew." George Schuster

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 D 6 '41 850w

"Readers of this book will find recorded here the immortal words spoken in behalf of freedom-loving men of every age and clime. Brought together in this way they form a buttress for our faith in the justice and reasonableness of the democratic way of life. In this day when we are fighting an all-out war to preserve our liberties we have been rendered a very worthwhile service." F. T. Steele

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 21 '41 800w

EDMAN, IRWIN, and SCHNEIDER, HERBERT WALLACE, eds. Landmarks in philosophy [ed. with the assistance of Edwin H. Garland and others]. 1008p $4; text ed with title: Landmarks for beginners in philosophy $3 Reynal

108.2 Philosophy (W) [41-15069]

Extracts from the works of leading philosophers from Plato and Aristotle, to James and Bergson. Editorial comment characterises each philosopher. Wilson cards are for the text edition. Index.

Booklist 38:1 S '41

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Books p13 O 12 '41 800w

"An excellent anthology. . . . The selections are sufficiently long and so carefully made that they neither destroy the continuity, flavor and freshness of the thought nor the central ideas of their authors." Rubin Gotesky

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 S 27 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:173 N '41

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. The matchlock gun; il. by Paul Lantz, 50p $2 Dodd (W) 41-17547

Ten-year-old Edward Van Alstyne lived near Albany in 1756. When his father had to leave home to search for Indians, Edward was left in charge of his mother and small sister. Together the boy and his mother took down the great Spanish matchlock gun from the wall, and aimed it out the window, in case of an Indian attack. While his mother watched Edward stood by the gun. The attack came and the boy played his part to perfection.

Booklist 38:33 N 1 '41

"As literature, this story for ten-year-olds ranks with anything Mr. Edmonds has written for adults. The words are within their vocabulary—save for a few Dutch phrases they will find interesting—and though the tale is one of suspense, mounting terror and a climax of heroism what happens is no more than many a ten-year-old in our early history went through." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 14 '41 320w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:374 D '41 80w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 210w

"Excellent." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 10w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:448 N '41 50w

"This book is a clear call to reread Washington Irving's Knickerbocker and The Bold Dragoon." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:458 N '41 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:465 N '41 50w

"Mr. Edmonds' first book for children is artistic in format and rich in historical background. Paul Lantz has illustrated it with interesting lithographic drawings, some in black and white, others in vivid colors. Should appeal to both boys and girls, ten to eleven." R. M. Davis

+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 150w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 20w

"This is history as it was lived by the early Americans, and the facts are bloody. An unusual sense of reality in the simple and dramatic narrative justifies the skill of this experienced novelist. Picture book sized, with stirring drawings, many of which are colored and quite properly lurid, this is no tame product. Boys and girls around 10 will enjoy the story and pictures equally." I. S.

N Y Times p31 N 2 '41 260w

"Highly recommended, but for readers no younger than ten."

+ New Yorker 17:143 D 6 '41 120w

EDMONSON, JAMES BARTLETT; ROEMER, JOSEPH, and BACON, FRANCIS LEONARD. The administration of the modern secondary school. 659p il maps $3 Macmillan

371.2 High schools 41-7981

"A revision of Secondary School Administration, published in 1931 [Book Review Digest, 1932] resulting in a new book, entirely rewritten and reset. It is intended to serve as a guide and reference for school administrators and as a text-book in colleges and universities." (School & Society) Index.

J Home Econ 33:487 S '41 60w

School & Society 53:615 My 10 '41 30w

Reviewed by E. R. Jobe

School R 49:709 N '41 1000w

EDWARDS, DOROTHY LEE. All about elephants; il. with photographs. 87p $1.50 Dutton

591.61 Elephants—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-11964

With plenty of photographs and brief simple text, this book tells all about elephants, what they eat in their native lands and in captivity, the use of tusks and trunks, how men have hunted them and employed them as workers, as hunters, in circuses, and for show purposes. The author is editor of the Junior Natural History Magazine.

"The editor of Junior Natural History Magazine writes her story of elephants with skill and authority." A. E. Brown
+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 110w

"Misconceptions about the elephant are many and a personal knowledge is unhappily allowed to only a few, but this book will answer about all the questions which a fascinated child can fire at weary and ignorant parents. . . . It is illustrated with photographs which are not always so very distinct, but which give an effective impression of massive proportions." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 J1 27 '41 260w

Springf'd Republican p10 J1 11 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

EDWARDS, NEWTON, ed. Education in a democracy. 160p $1.25 Univ. of Chicago press 370.973 Education—U.S. 41-23886

"Lectures given by members of the department of education of the University of Chicago under the auspices of the Charles R. Walgreen Foundation for the Study of American Institutions. They attempt to identify the essential functions and responsibilities of education as a force in American life and to point the direction education must take in discharging these functions and in meeting the responsibilities." (School & Society) Index.

"These lectures constitute a worthy exposition of the place of education in a democracy. The eloquent statements of functions, ideals, and objectives, the plea for attention to the problems of social adjustment, and the argument for the democratization of teaching and administration are worthy of commendation. Such differences as do appear still leave all the lectures clearly within the framework of genuine democracy. In these times of crises it is heartening to have the testimony of eight educational leaders in one of our great universities to their reasoned but unstinted faith in American democracy." E. B. Wesley
+ Ann Am Acad 219:203 Ja '42 850w

Christian Century 58:1307 O 22 '41 110w

N Y Times p37 O 26 '41 480w

School & Society 54:340 O 18 '41 70w

Social Studies 33:46 Ja '42 20w

EFRON, ANDREW. Sacred tree script; the esoteric foundation of Plato's wisdom. 372p il $3.75 Tuttle, Morehouse & Taylor

184.1 Plato. Inscriptions, Runic 41-12870

"In this volume the author tries to show that 'such distant problems as that of the esoteric basis of Plato's science of numbers, that of the origin of the Runic script, that of the origin of some legends of the Old Testament, that of the historical implications of Plato's metaphors are intimately related to each other.'" Ethics

"Beyond a few quotations from recognized authorities, this book contains nothing but uniformly complete baldness. The author speaks occasionally of its 'attackability.' Surely he does not need to worry; no one will take the trouble to attack him." S. H. Gould
— Canadian Forum 21:89 Je '41 600w

"Excepting incidental and isolated remarks that are often interesting and suggestive, the main argument of the book is a tissue of tenuous and ad hoc hypotheses proving only that the author is not without imagination." M. B. Singer
Ethics 51:377 Ap '41 80w

EINSELEN, ANNE FRANCES (ANNE PATERSON, pseud). Sleepless candle. 316p $2.50 Macrae Smith co. 41-4924

Character study of a musical genius in the throes of a psychological breakdown. Anton

Jung, 'cellist in a symphony orchestra, suddenly realizes that he is growing deaf. Instead of taking his wife and his physician into his confidence he goes thru months of torment, inflicting agonies upon his patient wife, his little son, and his best friends. The end is tragedy.

"No cheerful outcome could emerge from the material Anne Paterson has handled so dramatically in 'Sleepless Candle,' and the obligation to be honest is not evaded. It is a novel of depth and integrity." Lisle Bell
+ Books p13 Mr 30 '41 280w

"Since last year, When Anne Paterson's first novel, 'Take These Hands,' attracted favorable attention, she has made considerable strides. She particularly excels in creating and sustaining atmosphere. The reader is immediately plunged into this atmosphere and never for a moment permitted to emerge. The fact of its grip denotes its rightness for the story." M. L. Rossbach
+ N Y Times p27 Mr 23 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

EINZIG, PAUL. Hitler's new order in Europe. 147p $1.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan

330.943 Germany—Economic policy. Europe —Economic conditions. World war, 1939—Economic aspects [A41-2535]

In the introduction the author says the book's purpose is "to deliver a frontal attack against the Nazi New Order scheme." He "describes very graphically the development of German propaganda from the slogan 'injustices of Versailles,' to the slogans 'living space,' 'New Order,' which will be followed by the slogan 'The New World Order,' if England falls. . . . Einzig refutes the theory circulated in America by Goebbels's propaganda that a unified European Continent under Germany would mean certain advantages for American business. Einzig shows convincingly that present German plans can succeed only at the price of Nazi domination of the whole world. If that happened, victorious Germans would be converted into a 'race of warriors, administrators and superior workmen, whose task is to police and rule the conquered countries, and who would occupy the key position in the system of production all over the world.'" (N Y Times)

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 9 '41 180w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 10w

"Though Paul Einzig's book deals with the same subject it is a very good complement of the Reveille book. . . . This book is above all an economic one, but in satirical tone, aggressiveness and temperament is more political than the book by Reveille." Milos Safranek

N Y Times p14 S 7 '41 270w

"If Dr. Einzig uses vivid colours and a lively imagination, the picture which he presents of the probable shape of the New Order is, I believe, as correct as one can make it at the moment, and exactly what is needed to disillusion the naive and gullible who allow themselves to be beguiled by German promises." F. A. Hayek
+ Spec 166:375 Ap 4 '41 350w

"The argument throughout is powerful and effective; and Dr. Einzig has done valuable work in his statement of the economic case against Germany. His financial analysis, too, is admirable. Other sides of the subject, however, are less completely dealt with; and certain of his comments suggest a somewhat limited acquaintance with economic theory. Moreover, while opportunities for objective study of the New Order may be limited, Dr. Einzig may not have made sufficient use of such opportunities as he had. But here his vigorous treatment should lead others to investigate new aspects of the problem."

EINZIG, PAUL.—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 29 '41
700W

EISENBERG, FRANCES. There's one in every family; il. by Peggy Bacon. (Story press bk) 304p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 41-51800

Sketches of family life as viewed thru the eyes of nine-year-old Helen. The family's chief worry is six-year-old Joe who combines extreme shyness with extreme stubbornness.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:16 N '41

"It is to be hoped that the title of this infuriatingly funny set of stories is not literally true. The presence in every family of a small boy who is shy until pushed, and then so stubborn nobody can budge him, would hold things up in so many places at once as to set up a social log jam. But every family will recognize Joe—yes, and sympathize with him, up to a point. . . Peggy Bacon's acrid and bracing drawings make the proper accompaniment." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Je 8 '41 440W

"The book is delightfully illustrated by Peggy Bacon and should be read by all parents if only that they may count their blessings." Muriel Burns

+ New Repub 105:28 Jl 7 '41 300W

"There is an air reminiscent of 'My Sister Eileen' about this book of amusing incidents of family life. The humor is not so sharp nor the viewpoint so sophisticated, since the story purports to be told by 9-year-old Helen Marsden. The telling is simple and straight—with no unedited childish errors, thank Heaven—and the humor, sometimes slanted from the child's angle, is more often inferential as it seems to an adult bystander." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p14 Je 1 '41 600W

"Miss Bacon's illustrations alone are worth the price of admission, but don't miss Joey either."

+ New Yorker 17:77 Je 7 '41 70W

"'There's One in Every Family' has a youthful freshness about it, a true light-hearted quality. It is fine, in this sad period, to find a book that makes one laugh out loud." Rosemary Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 My 31 '41 550W

ELDRIDGE, PAUL. If after every tempest; decorations by Gerald Charm. 191p $2 Harbinger house

41-10771

"Light comedy novel of domestic life. . . The characters and setting are French. . . Fernand Gringoire, an actor-manager . . . is the hero of this tale; he is also the author's protagonist. Aware that the poet and playwright Maurice de Lavalery is infatuated with his wife and that she is flattered by Maurice's attentions, Fernand continues unshakably confident of her love and loyalty. On the very afternoon of the reappearance in town after an absence of eighteen years of his boyhood chum Basil, he learns of Nicolette's flight to Paris with Maurice. . . Mastering his desperation, Fernand rejects Basil's solution. Nicolette will return; he will forgive her and forget." N Y Times

"Wit and humor, pathos, flashing dialogue and sharp etched characterizations, suspense—what more could one ask of a fiction narrative that compresses in less than 200 pages a story as human and universal in its implications, as gay and as poignant as this episode in a happy marriage?" Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p6 My 25 '41 750W

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 60W

ELDRIDGE, SEBA. New social horizons; design for a personality-centered culture. 444p $3.50 Appleton-Century

309.173 U.S.—Social conditions 41-10522

Textbook in sociology, by the professor of sociology at the University of Kansas. "This work offers an interpretation of contemporary culture in the United States as a complex whole. It has two objectives: (1) a critical evaluation of existing institutions, group interests, and schemes of life; (2) formulation of 'constructive' proposals looking to the development of a civilization better suited to the needs of the human spirit. The positions taken on some issues depart widely from current views. The existing system of specialization is criticized as unsound, and changes are proposed entailing more active cooperation of consumers and laymen generally in meeting their needs." (Pref) Contains problems and projects, and indexes.

Reviewed by Howard White

Am Pol Sci R 35:1022 O '41 280W

Reviewed by W. E. Gettys

Am Soc R 6:909 D '41 400W

"This is a very unconventional and forward-facing treatise on sociology."

+ Christian Century 58:757 Je 4 '41 130W

Reviewed by L. M. Bristol

Social Forces 20:276 D '41 1350W

"The book is well adapted to college students and adult education groups. Each chapter is followed by problems designed to test understanding of the text, and suggest further study. The material is well authenticated and the author does not hesitate to quote opposing points of view on his general thesis."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 29 '41
550W

"This book represents real vision. Its great shortcoming is that it is unlikely to be read by those who might profit most therefrom. The style is a bit heavy for college students and laymen alike. There is a lack of sparkle and thrust which might challenge potential readers. Nevertheless, it is to be hoped that many Americans will derive from this volume a new outlook on the future and a determination to share in its shaping." S. A. Queen

+ — Survey 77:309 O '41 250W

ELLENWOOD, JAMES LEE. Look at the Y! 155p $1.50 Assn. press

267.3 Young men's Christian associations 41-2745

Series of sketches on the Y.M.C.A., its beginnings, and the work it is doing at present. Includes many case studies.

"Here is a great deal of information that can be taken in painlessly, even pleasurably."

+ Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 20W

"It is neither a eulogy nor an evaluation. 'This picture is an etching, not an X-ray.' It is essentially non-technical, non-institutional, and non-professional. It has lift because it has lilt and laughter in it. Possibly the secret of its success lies in the author's forthright confession, 'In hopes of interesting you I have dealt chiefly with things that interest me.'" C. E. Hendry

+ Survey 77:134 Ap '41 90W

ELLIOTT, GERTRUDE, il. 'Round the mulberry bush. 32p $1.50 Harper

41-21726

The old nursery favorite reprinted, with pictures in color and black and white, and a simple notation of the tune included.

"Useful as a picture book, and later for older children who are beginning to play organized games." Helen Perkinson

+ Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 90W

"Attractive, but slender gift book," K. U. Wise

Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 30w

ELLIS, CARLETON, and WELLS, ALFRED
A. Chemical action of ultraviolet rays;
rev. and enl. ed. by Francis F. Heyroth. 961p il $12 Reinhold

541.35 Ultra-violet rays. Photochemistry
41-4487

"Some idea of the progress made since 1925 in the study of ultraviolet radiation may be obtained by comparing the bulk of this volume with that of its previous edition [Book Review Digest, 1926]; the revision contains 29 more chapters and 600 more pages. Dr. Heyroth has divided the material into four parts: sources of ultraviolet radiation; photochemical processes; applications of photochemistry to industrial products; applications of ultraviolet rays in Biology." Chem & Met Eng

"Obviously the effort has been made to avoid extensive duplication of material which has been thoroughly organized by recent standard texts. The book excels in fields not hitherto covered in great detail. Therein lies its strength, and the need for it in every well-balanced chemical library." G. S. Forbes

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:1773 Je '41 320w

Chem & Met Eng 48:132 Mr '41 130w
Pratt p8 autumn '41

ELLIS, ELMER. Mr Dooley's America; a life of Finley Peter Dunne. 317p il $3 Knopf
B or 92 Dunne, Finley Peter (Martin Dooley, pseud) 41-21089

The author of this biography of the famous originator of Mr Dooley, says his interest was first roused in his subject during a study of the politics and history of early twentieth century America. The first result of this interest was an anthology: Mr Dooley at His Best (Book Review Digest, 1938). In this biography he attempts not only to tell the man's life story, but also to evaluate his influence upon his times. Index.

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"It is a first rate reporter who has written 'Mr. Dooley's America.' Mr. Elmer Ellis is no hero worshiper, nor does he make a case for Dunne's immortality. His quotations are always apposite, and none more than the excerpt to show that Dunne knew human nature because he was honest about himself." F. P. Adams

+ Books p2 N 9 '41 1750w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:201 D 12 '41 180w

"Numerous quotations from the Dooley essays and Dunne's other writings and letters are skillfully woven into the story to recreate a picture of a colorful personality and a past era which will be equally enjoyed by old-timers who remember 'Mr. Dooley' or those just being introduced to him. Recommended for reading or reference use." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 120w

"Mr. Ellis labors manfully to rescue Mr. Dooley from the antique shop. The attempt is only partially successful, although in its journeyman aspects this is a good biography of Finley Peter Dunne. One trouble with the book as a study of 'Mr. Dooley's America' derives from the fact that the Dooley essays, from which Mr. Ellis quotes liberally, are usually a wise and charming commentary on events that are no longer a part of general public knowledge." John Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '41 1600w

"A lively and thorough biography."

+ New Yorker 17:91 N 1 '41 40w

"Here is a meticulous job of research which presents much that is fine and gay in the writings of Peter Finley Dunn, but does not bring back 'the tender grace of a day that is dead!'" W. A. White

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 27 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 3 '41 420w

ELLIS, HOWARD SYLVESTER. Exchange control in central Europe. 413p $4 Harvard univ. press

332.4 Foreign exchange. Currency question
A 41-532

"[In this book] the foreign-exchange policies of Austria, Hungary, and Germany are painstakingly investigated. These three case histories are prefaced by a chapter on the nature of exchange control and followed by one on exchange control theory, retrospect, and prospect." J Pol Econ

"The chief criticism that could be made of Professor Ellis' study is one of form rather than of substance. Too often the reader finds himself overwhelmed by a mass of factual detail whose relevance would have been brought into clearer relief had the author more frequently announced the broad trend of his theoretical reasoning. Concerning the substance, some will be reluctant to go the full length with Professor Ellis in condemning exchange control and exchange clearing. . . . The author's more than ordinary familiarity with the domestic conditions of, and the specific psychological determinants operative in, the countries chosen for analysis enabled him to impart a welcome realism to his findings. His scholarly analysis of concurrent international developments saved him from the temptation of attributing all relevant changes in prices and production to the operation of exchange control." H. K. Heuser
+ — Am Econ R 31:176 Mr '41 700w

"Professor Ellis has not limited himself to a historical and descriptive treatment. He has also attempted to assess the value of exchange control to those economies which have employed it in the past, and thereby to afford insight into its uses for the future. In this further attempt he is less successful than in the historical and descriptive part of his work. The analytical part of the study suffers from not always asking the correct questions." Oscar Gass

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:197 Jl '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:879 Jl '41 10w

"A splendid book. . . . The reviewer finds very little to temper his enthusiasm for this study. Having in mind the Latin-American experience with German exchange control, he would have liked more information on the determination of exchange rates in clearing agreements." F. A. Southard, Jr.

+ J Pol Econ 49:499 Je '41 900w

"Professor Ellis' book is a model of economic analysis; it combines a great mastery of difficult factual materials with a superlatively skillful handling of the theoretical tools. There might be scope, in a longer discussion, for certain questions and minor comments, but there are no criticisms to be made of either the presentation or the conclusions." M. A. Heilperin

+ Pol Sci Q 56:428 S '41 550w

ELLIS, KENNETH M. Guns forever echo [il. by Richard Caldwell Brewer]. 529p $2.75
Messner

41-17036

Historical novel of England during the first half of the fourteenth century. The story centers in Yarmouth and in the family of the descendants of John Elys who settled there in the late thirteenth century. The principal character is Geoffrey Elys and the story deals with his adventures in love and in war. Historical index.

"It is fortunate for the book that the Hundred Years War is well enough known to the general reader—if only in names, dates and places he recalls from high school history—to start him on so long and so cumbrous a chronicle. The worst encumbrance is the language with which the romancer has chosen to fetter himself. . . . The people are better than their talk, even if they talk too much, and the world in which they move better than they: more clear, convincing, alive." M. L. Becker

ELLIS, K. M.—Continued
— + Books p14 O 19 '41 550w

"One of the most harrowing scenes in this colorful romance reveals the Black Death in its Yarmouth visitation in 1349, and here we see Geoffrey in the midst of domestic and civic vicissitudes finding the true love he had so long and disappointingly sought." Drake de Kay
N Y Times p32 N 9 '41 600w

ELLIS, WILLIAM THOMAS. Pilgrim fare from Bible lands, 191p $1.50 Assn. press
-242 Church year—Meditations 41-6312
For each day of the year the author writes a paragraph or two based upon some personal experience in the lands of the Bible. Added to this is a brief prayer and a Bible reference for reading.

Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 30w
Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 50w

ELLISON, EARL JEROME. The dam, 176p $2
Random house 41-51776

Story of a middle-aged contractor who was by way of being prosperous when the depression set in. While things were looking darkest for him he got a WPA job building a dam, and was able to restore his own self-respect and that of his family.

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

"The first part of the book is powerful and thoroughly convincing. The second, however, comes off almost apologetically, as if the author could not quite bear the whole burden of his story. It isn't the happy ending we object to. We regret the slight and somewhat too sweet and easy-going manner in which it is presented." Marian Hauser
+ Books p10 Ap 27 '41 500w

Nation 152:705 Je 14 '41 90w

"Cheerful, swift, easy reading, of the sentimental-in-a-strictly-hard-boiled-manner school."

+ New Repub 104:738 My 26 '41 30w

"A fast-paced, huskily sentimental, masculinely emotional short novel that rivets the attention and glues the eye to the page, as unlaydownable (in F. P. A.'s word) a tale as you are likely to come across for the season. Mr. Ellison can tell a story." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p7 My 4 '41 600w

"A welcome change from the usual grim tale of the unemployed."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Ap 26 '41 30w

"This is a novel that anyone with the wish to have a full understanding of this country should read. Mr. Ellison's sympathetic approach tends to break down those dangerous barriers that rise up separating one group of citizens from another, creating disunity. A book on a serious theme, it reads with the ease of a light novel, a novel that can be read at one sitting without lapse of interest." Dorsha Hayes
+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 My 3 '41 550w

ELLISON, JOSEPH ROY. The answer to unemployment, 187p $2; pa $1 Studio pub. co, Studio bldg, Portland, Ore.

330.973 Unemployment. U.S.—Economic policy 41-5278

"This book offers a suggested form of taxation which could be applied to machinery in the degree that it replaces manpower. Not only does the author have high hopes for the beneficial results of increased employment and new prosperity which he believes will result from this form of taxation, but he believes that it will produce enough income to abandon all other forms of taxes." Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 60w

"'The Answer to Unemployment' belongs to the lunatic fringe of economic speculation, and is of interest here largely because of the light it throws upon the size of the task which confronts those who believe it is possible to do something about the economic illiteracy of the general public. . . . [The author] can hardly expect to be taken seriously when he argues that the burden of the proposed tax would fall entirely on our machines, and not at all upon the buyers and sellers of the articles taxed." Willmoore Kendall

— New Repub 105:227 Ag 18 '41 160w

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. Captain Paul, 607p $2.75 Dodd

Jones, John Paul—Fiction (W) 41-7943

A novel telling the story of John Paul Jones, America's first naval hero. The tale is told as by one Tom Folger, a native of Nantucket, and a true friend to Jones.

"I am less than satisfied with the conversations which Commander Ellsberg attributes to his Captain Paul. There is a flowery rhetoric in his dialogue which I simply do not believe in. . . . My criticism of the Captain's sentiments can be applied with equal force to the love story which Commander Ellsberg weaves through his pages of action. . . . What really recommend this book are the pages of action—the brutal awesome struggle with the bull whale, every detail of which stands out as clearly as if one had lived through it; the canny and courageous battle in which the little Ranger, with a complement of ninety-odd men, overcomes her larger British adversary, the Drake, and the bulldogish hang-on-to-it-iveness with which Jones refuses to surrender the Bonhomme Richard—here are superb sea-scapes painted by a sailor who knows." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic Je '41 800w

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

"Stout Merchant Folger's purpose in writing his memoirs is first to rouse his countrymen and second to celebrate the name and fame of their first naval hero. But, being a methodical man, he must start at the beginning and, being a thorough man, he must establish himself and his approaches, and, being an honest, literal man, he must do so in considerable detail. The result is that we know not how to praise him the more, whether as biographer or autobiographer." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p1 My 25 '41 1400w

"Dramatic at times, yet on the whole, especially in the first part, a bit long drawn out, the book provides pleasant entertainment and a good enough outline of the chief historical episodes. It has a timely lesson, too, for it reminds us that the tendency to overlook real merit and to promote incompetence is no new element in our political life."

+ Cath World 153:634 Ag '41 280w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 5 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Although John Paul Jones has been the hero of several historical novels, Commander Ellsberg has special qualifications and the proper sea background to rewrite the story of our first and greatest sea raider and the beginnings of the American Navy. The actual exploits of John Paul seem almost incredible, are legendary for skill, resourcefulness, and courage, and a rich ore of American history. Enjoyed, recommended; a sprinkle of salt and dash of courage for troubled times." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 80w

Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 40w

"As with any first-rate historical novel, this book is more than a recital of historic events deftly combined with a fictional romance; it is a dynamic parable for our times written by a distinguished naval officer who realizes the nation's present peril." Drake De Kay
+ N Y Times p6 Je 1 '41 1300w

New Yorker 17:77 Je 7 '41 60w

ELLWOOD, CHARLES ABRAM. The world's need of Christ; with a foreword by Samuel McCrea Cavert. 237p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury
261 Sociology, Christian 40-27866
For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Certainly the teachings of the Nazarene can only be adapted to the problems of our day through exegesis and reinterpretation so heroic as to tax even Ellwood's enthusiasm and ingenuity. Much of the book is obviously only Ellwood talking through the mask of Christ. At the most, we can only concede that the teachings of Jesus are valuable in our day if implemented by social science. But certainly the teachings of Christ are superior to those of most contemporary leaders. Therefore, we may wish Ellwood well in his crusade to revive and apply them." H. E. Barnes
Am Soc R 6:295 Ap '41 500w
Bookmark 2:3 My '41

"This capable professor of sociology in Duke University sees the Christian way as furnishing the only practical solution of the serious problems of the day. The Christian doctrine which individuals believe, accept, and hold to in private life must be carried into every department of the social order. This thesis is set forth ably and conclusively by one who faces the situation squarely and hesitates not to point the necessity." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 12 '41 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

"A mere statement of the book's theme will seem to suggest that here is nothing essentially new. That is true, how could there be on such a subject? Yet readers of Charles Ellwood's previous books know that he has an impressive way of presenting unexpected implications of a theme, as well as challenging statements about its way of being put into practice." R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 18:175 Ap '41 600w

"Dr. Ellwood always writes clearly and with a dexterity too rarely found among American scientists. Never has he been more forceful, more intensely earnest, more penetrating than in The World's Need of Christ. The sad fact is that those who most need to read this book are likely because of its title to pass it by." E. R. Groves
+ Social Forces 19:563 My '41 800w

ELMS, FRANCIS RAYMOND. Rivers of the world; stories of the great rivers of each continent [il. by the author]. 80p maps $2 Whitman, A.

551.43 Rivers—Juvenile literature 40-33579

Simply told stories of fifteen of the world's largest rivers. Each narrative has a colored map and colored pictures. Contents: Amazon river; Colorado river; Columbia river; Danube river; Ganges river; Hudson river; Mississippi river; Murray and Darling rivers; Nile river; Rio Grande river; St Lawrence river; Seine river; Thames river; Volga river; Yangtze Kiang river. For intermediate grades. Index.

"Makes the way of the young reader easy and entertaining. . . The author is also illustrator, handling each task with equal ability. The book will appeal especially to children of elementary school age."
+ Spring'd Republican p6 D 16 '40 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:21 Ja '41

ELWIN, MALCOLM. Savage Landor. 498p $4 Macmillan

B or 92 Landor, Walter Savage 41-16355

"Absorbing biography of the author of 'Imaginary Conversations,' a liberal, full-blooded, highly intelligent man and an excellent writer, who moved in the thick of English literary politics from the seventeen-nineties to the eighteen-sixties." New Yorker

"The book is better as straightforward biography than as criticism; and though something is said of the importance of Landor's thought to the modern world there is nowhere any explicit and ample statement of what that thought was. Had some of the anecdotes about Landor's friends, acquaintances and enemies been omitted, the space saved might well have been devoted to criticism of, or at least reference to, Landor's works." S. C. Chew
+ — Books p16 O 5 '41 750w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 22 '41 700w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 35:24 O 24 '41 500w

"An outstanding biography of a great poet and master of English prose." E. M. Olcott
+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel
Nation 153:576 D 6 '41 1200w

"Sidney Colvin's spirited series in the English Men of Letters series is based on Forster's big book and though Forster did a better job than Mr. Elwin indicates—he is never gracious to his predecessors—Forster was probably not quite the man to do the best possible life. But unfortunately Mr. Elwin is even less fitted for the work. He is, to be sure, painstaking and thorough and for many new facts we are in his debt. . . But apart from fact, Mr. Elwin's book is most unsatisfactory and it is a sad irony that one of the great masters of English prose should be subject to such prosiness as his latest biographer commands." Lionel Trilling
+ New Repub 105:562 O 27 '41 900w

"Mr. Elwin has gone to great trouble in writing his book, for it is evident that he has explored sources that were untapped by the last important biographer of Landor, John Forster. . . One does not have to be curious about Landor, to enjoy this book, for it is the picture of a long, long period as well as the portrait of an extraordinary man." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p9 O 19 '41 1300w

"A fine, readable job. Much new material."
+ New Yorker 17:78 S 27 '41 40w

"The silly title of the book seems an invitation to readers who could never be much interested in any one so special and so fine as Landor; but persons who wish to know things that Forster couldn't or wouldn't tell, will find this book an interesting way of getting up to date. Mr. Elwin has produced a biography which for general purposes is most satisfactory." Alexander Cowle
+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 O 11 '41 450w

"The years that Malcolm Elwin spent in doing research for and in writing 'Savage Landor' were well spent, for here is a definitive work, at once scholarly and readable, its quality of aliveness never weighted by the documentation, its integrity never sacrificed to sensationalism. Mr. Elwin has avoided both tar brush and white wash, and his book owes its vitality to its subject and its organization rather than to being dipped in the days of a colorful imagination." E. H. C.
+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 750w

ELWOOD, MURIEL. So much as beauty does. 474p $2.50 Liveright

Brown, Amy—Fiction. Berry, Charles Ferdinand de Bourbon, duc de—Fiction 41-7797

A historical novel laid in England and France during the Napoleonic era and the early years of the Bourbon restoration. The heroine is the young daughter of an English clergyman; the hero is the Duc de Berry, who falls in love with

ELWOOD, MURIEL—Continued

Amy, and marries her. However, when his family returns to power, the Duc is forced to give up his wife and children and marry another of his own rank.

"Muriel Elwood is more successful with her background than with the love story, which is a trifle too stilted to hold the interest. There are many colorful and dramatic scenes—the burning of Covent Garden Theater and the riots that marked the opening of its replacement, the opera in Paris, the pageantry of Versailles—and glimpses of history in the making."

Lisle Bell

+ — Books p29 My 11 '41 130w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p20 My 25 '41 230w

"'So Much as Beauty Does' is Amy Brown's story and no attempt is made to describe the historical background except when great events have a direct and immediate effect on her life. Charles and Amy are a sympathetic couple and the novel is a pleasant and interesting account of a little-known love affair."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 11 '41 300w

EMERY, RICHARD WILDER. Heresy and inquisition in Narbonne. 184p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

272.3 Inquisition—France. Heresy. Narbonne, France 41-13566

"Narbonne is a city (of about 30,000 in the thirteenth century, smaller now) in the corner of France where the Pyrenees meet the Mediterranean. It was in the heresy belt when the Albigensians flourished and the crusade was launched against them, yet the inquisition never flourished there. Why? It has been a puzzling question, answered only by conjectures. Mr. Emery has gone into the old records for the facts, political, religious and economic. The resultant explanation is that the French royal power, which backed the inquisition, did not extend to Narbonne until the end of the thirteenth century." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"Out of a thorough study of materials in French archives and elsewhere Mr. Emery has produced an able contribution both to the field of scholarship and to the long history of the struggle of man for justice." A. M. Campbell
+ Am Hist R 47:407 Ja '42 210w

"Mr. Emery's work is a fine piece of research in local history with a more than local significance."

+ Christian Century 58:1113 S 10 '41 330w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness

Crozer Q 18:346 O '41 300w

New Repub 105:286 S 1 '41 60w

"The entire study shows the delicate balance between political, economic, and religious motives and factors, and is to be highly recommended both as a contribution to the history of the Albigensian crusade and as a lively and interesting picture of the organization and history of a southern French town." J. L. La Monte

+ Social Studies 33:42 Ja '42 200w

EMERY, RUSSELL GUY. Wings over West Point; il. by Harry Deitch. 297p $2 Macrae Smith co.

40-32982

A self-important West Point cadet gets off to a wrong start with his classmates, but is reinstated on the football team and wins the gratitude of all when he uncovers espionage activities.

Booklist 37:243 F 1 '41

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 151:456 N 9 '40 10w

"Trite but well done." Raymond Holden

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 30w

EMMETT, ELIZABETH. Secret in a snuffbox; il. by Lydia Parmelee. 268p $2 Macmillan

(W) 41-15010

Story of buried treasure and a family quarrel, all of which is worked out to a satisfactory conclusion in Newport, Rhode Island, in the early seventeen hundreds. The central characters are fourteen-year-old Mart and his younger sister, Nancy, who came to Rhode Island from Barbados, and learned to know their stern but kindly grandfather, the Quaker Jacob Rush. For ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

"Quaker influence, so strong in Rhode Island, is emphasized in the character of the children's grandfather of austere exterior, but kindly heart. A well-sustained but not improbable plot will attract the mystery lovers."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:367 S '41 130w

"This story is lighter in theme than Miss Emmett's 'Land That He Loved' [Book Review Digest, 1940] lacking something of that earlier book's richness of character and background, although Grandfather Rush and Nancy are drawn with humor and distinctness. As a narrative, however, it is brisker and more closely woven, giving a lively sketch of the eighteenth-century seaport, and should, as a whole, be of equal appeal to 10 to 14 year old readers, though perhaps not of such lasting interest."

E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 S 21 '41 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 300w

EMURIAN, ERNEST K. Dramatized stories of hymns and hymn writers. 304p $2 Wilde

812 Hymns—Drama 41-19814

Dramatizations of some of the incidents connected with the writing of words and music of sixteen well-known hymns. The plays are suitable for church or little theater groups. No royalties.

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 10w

ENCYCLOPEDIA Americana; ed. by A. H. McDannald. 1941 rev ed 30v il maps $150 Americana corp.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"This issue like others since the 1918-20 edition is a 'plate revision.' However, the aggregate of changes in the period 1940-41 appears to be more extensive than in preceding biennia. Considerable revision was found in subjects of current interest. In the field of military science there are new articles under the headings: Ballistics; Military engineering; Military transportation; Militia; National Guard; Tactics; Tank. . . Under the heading War of 1939, European, v.28, p.782-97, the present war in Europe is discussed. . . The social changes of the past decade are reflected in new articles under: Health insurance; Insurance, Crop; Parks, Public; Prisons. . . Revisions in scientific and industrial subjects have an important place in this issue of the Americana, as in the issues of preceding years. . . Changes in the American cultural scene are recorded in new articles by well-qualified authors; e.g., American art; American literature; American sculpture. Revision is still very much needed to bring up-to-date the material on arts and letters of other countries; e.g., the article French literature, 19th century and contemporary period, is completely inadequate after 1910." Subscription Bks Bul

"The 1941 edition is not an essential purchase for libraries owning the 1937 or later printings. Encyclopedia Americana, 1941 edition, is recommended for libraries and individuals wishing to make a first purchase and to replace worn sets of earlier issues."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:41 Jl '41 1350w

ENCYCLOPAEDIA Britannica; a new survey of universal knowledge. 14th ed 24v red duro buckram $197.50 (20 per cent discount to schools and libraries); Britannotex $154.40 c1929-1941 Encyclopaedia britannica

032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 41-6731

"The last review of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in Subscription Books Bulletin appeared in the October 1939 number and was based on the printing issued January 10, 1939. [Book Review Digest, 1939]. The 1941 imprint is the N printing and includes events up to July 1940.

Revisions of the 1941 printing are in the military, naval and aeronautical sections. The subjects Mountain warfare; Motor transport, Military; Gunnery, Naval; and Air co-operation show revision covering developments up to July 1940. These articles are signed by such authorities as Lieutenant Colonel Mark V. Brunson, Colonel Robert Arthur and Captain S. T. H. Wilton, R.N." Subscription Bks Bul

"The revision is not thorough or extensive enough to create a need for the 1941, N, printing in libraries having earlier issues of the 14th edition in good condition, particularly those of 1936 and later. Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1941 is recommended to libraries and individuals as a first purchase or to replace worn copies."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:39 Jl '41 1200w

ENCYCLOPAEDIA of world history; ancient, medieval and modern, chronologically arranged; a rev. and modernized version of Ploetz's Epitome; comp. and ed. by William L. Langer [and others]. 1249p maps $5.50 Houghton

902 Chronology, Historical (W) 40-32043

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Bookmark 2:3 My '41

Foreign Affairs 19:462 Ja '41 30w

"In format this new work is superior to the earlier books on which it is based. Sturdily bound in red buckram and lettered in gold. An encyclopaedia of world history will stand up under steady use. The small and capital boldface type and the occasional use of italics make it easy to locate specific subjects and items. A double-column page is used. All libraries, including those who already have Ploetz's epitome or later revisions of it, will find this volume useful. An encyclopaedia of world history is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:8 Ja '41 490w

Times [London] Lit Sup p351 Jl 19 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:17 Ja '41

ENGELHARDT, NICKOLAUS LOUIS, and ENGELHARDT, NICKOLAUS LOUIS, 1907-. Planning the community school; with an editorial foreword by Lyman Bryson and an intro. by Morse A. Cartwright. 188p il $2.50 Am. bk.

374.28 Community centers. Education of adults. Schoolhouses 40-34142

Considers the community school as the setting for adult activities. Plans, equipment, surroundings, administration are taken up in relation to their use. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:318 Mr 15 '41

"The book is well written and is copiously illustrated by architectural drawings, charts, and illustrations of schools and activities. Perhaps its greatest value lies in its possibility of use as a handbook by the administrator who seeks to plan facilities and program for an adult-education program. As one of the series of recent volumes pointing the way to a new stimulation of community consciousness and the creation of new community solidarity, the book has value." W. A. Yeager

+ El School J 41:628 Ap '41 700w

J Home Econ 33:114 F '41 30w

Pratt p4 autumn '41

"The educational movement outlined in the Engelhardt book will not be completed until its application to urban centers has been more carefully studied, for the present specifications will probably find a heartier welcome in small than in large communities. Nevertheless, the book should be required reading for trustees or board members about to engage in a building program, and it should be on the desk of every school architect." D. L. MacKaye

+ School & Society 53:318 Mr 8 '41 1150w

ENGELS, FRIEDRICH. Dialectics of nature; tr. and ed. by Clemens Dutt; with a pref. and notes by J. B. S. Haldane. 383p $3 Int. pubs. [15s Lawrence]

501 Science--Philosophy

40-31610

"Seventy years ago the author planned to write a great book having the above title which would discuss all science of that day from the viewpoint of Marxism. The work was never completed. 'If this book had been written, it would have been of immense importance for the development of science.' The above translation reflects what the author had finished during the period between 1872 and 1882 before his energies were diverted to other tasks. The completed chapters as presented consider motion, work, heat, electricity, tidal friction, the part played by labor in the transition from ape to man, and natural science and the spirit world. Numerous notes for additional discussions, source references, and a bibliography are included." N Y New Tech Bks

"If anyone chooses to look at the 'Dialectics of Nature' as a final statement of a philosophy of science, and expect from it any immediate addition to positive scientific knowledge, he probably will put it down as obsolete rubbish. But if he does this, he will miss its chief value and the object for which it was written—not to tell people about the world, but to point out how they can look at it and how they can change it." J. D. Bernal

+ Nature 147:187 F 15 '41 1500w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:11 Ja '41

ENGLAND speaks; a symposium, by A. P. Herbert [and others]. 222p $1.75 Macmillan 940.53 World war, 1939- W41-1

Eight English writers attempt to answer the question, "Why are we fighting the war?" They are: A. P. Herbert, A. A. Milne, E. M. Forster, A. S. Duncan-Jones, Ronald Knox, J. R. Clynes, C. E. M. Joad, Harold Laski.

Am Hist R 46:365 Jl '41 10w

Reviewed by M. Q. Sibley

Am Pol Sci R 35:591 Je '41 220w

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

"'England Speaks' is no blueprint for the future. Nor is it a sentimental appeal for help to those of English descent in the New World. But it is a worth-while expression of what England stands for." Frank Kelley

+ Books p18 Mr 23 '41 900w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '41 80w

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 28 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:874 Jl '41 10w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 80w

"Each chapter is the work of a distinguished author. Written from different points of view, they are all noteworthy not for passion or eloquence, but for breadth and clarity of thought. Together, they offer a study as exhaustive as it is logical and vigorous. And nowhere is there complacency or shrinking from self-criticism."

+ N Y Times p8 F 23 '41 700w

Spring'd Republican p10 F 26 '41 440w

Reviewed by Herbert Davis

Yale R n s 30:826 summer '41 140w

ENGLE, PAUL. Always the land. 326p $2.50
Random house

(W) 41-3535

Story of Iowa farmers—of men interested chiefly in horse breeding and horse trading.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

"'Always the Land' sprawls diffusely over too many talk-filled, slow moving, loosely directed episodes. . . . The style is intimate, easy, natural; the speech itself idiomatic, colloquial. The needed words are here, all the materials are here. The horse is here; and the bridle, the bit and the saddle. But the rider himself is not yet sure of his seat on that horse, going somewhere without a controlling hand on the rein." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p10 F 2 '41 700w

"'Always the Land' is full of honest-to-goodness barn smells mixed with the sweetness of the clover fields. The language of Jay, Henry, Joe, and Novak is strong as fresh horse manure—and as wholesome. There's the poetry of Iowa's beautiful alfalfa fields mixed with the unfancy business of existence. The book is the voice of a poet speaking words of simple and fundamental American wisdom." Elizabeth Merrill

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 500w

"The publication of Paul Engle's first novel is a triumph for him, because it is so relevant to what his progress as a poet would lead one to expect and, indeed, want. The material for this book comes from Mr. Engle's home state of Iowa, and is horsey from first to last. He knows this subject thoroughly, and writes about it with love and abandon."

+ Canadian Forum 21:93 Je '41 180w

"There is little plot although the story works up to a fitting climax. The characters are few and well drawn. The author is a keen observer of all the homely details of farm life and makes them vivid to his readers. Adults who like stories of horses, horse racing, and farm life will enjoy this novel." A. T. Davidson

+ Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 100w

"A fragrant but not very significant potpourri. To those who languish in the soot-laden air and gasoline fumes of city streets, the book offers a pleasant three-hour escape among the odors of alfalfa hay and buckwheat cakes, to say nothing of more robust whiffs from barn and manure pile."

Nation 152:164 F 8 '41 90w

"A poet's first novel and a nice one. Mr. Engle's characters are off an Iowa farm—sturdy folk who love horses and know how to handle them. Nothing much happens but there's lots of talk, most of it horsey and all of it good. Even if you've never set foot in a stirrup you'll listen and like it."

+ New Repub 104:158 F 3 '41 40w

"Paul Engle is a poet and his first novel, 'Always the Land,' is eloquent proof of this. He has descriptions of corn growing in fertile Iowa soil, of horses and of humans which only a poet could fashion. But emotion and poetry that go into creating a background of beauty are not enough to make a story. It is as though Engle had sought to catch a moment in the life of a few interesting people and concentrated on making that moment real. In this he has succeeded, but he leaves the reader strangely empty, satisfied with what has been written as an introduction but waiting for more to follow." Rose Feld

+ N. Y Times p7 F 2 '41 700w

"Capably done."

+ New Yorker 16:66 F 8 '41 60w

"The characters are earthy and alive, and their speech is pungent and credible. The book is charged with animosities and minor clashes, which with the gusto and robustness of the talk compensate for the slight plot interest." A. C. Richards

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 F 22 '41 330w

Wis Lib Bul 37:55 Mr '41

ENGLE, PAUL. West of midnight [and other poems]. 96p $2 Random house

811

(W)

"In this latest volume of poems one can see Engle shifting back completely into his early affirmation of America, but an America in relation to the world's destiny. It is no more the voice of the expatriate praising an old love as in his last book, 'Corn,' but the singing of a poet with an integral tie to his people and land. There is no longer the need to search for symbols among antiques in Europe. The emergence of an American poet is complete, arriving at his full maturity." N Y Times

"This collection marks a great advance on the author's earlier volumes. His development can be seen in the concentration and control of his medium, his stricter sense of form and clean, clear line. The lyrics waste no words and say something, there is a strengthening of 'emotion's muscle,' and his prayer to his Muse, 'Let my talk be act,' has been answered." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic Ja '42 200w

"Paul Engle's fifth volume of poems keeps faith with its predecessors, 'American Song' and 'Corn,' by the inclusion of several pieces in the flowing Whitmanesque manner that he has made distinctively his own. His success in finding fresh rhythms and images homely to the hand and the heart is notable in such poems as 'West of Midnight,' 'America, 1941,' 'That Continent' and 'American Harvest.' . . . His progress in the direction of compression and form is a marked feature of his recent writing." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p26 D 7 '41 600w

"More than ever [Engle] has become the true progeny of the Whitman cult, which may be an indication that this tradition will outflank the Yeats and Delmore Schwartz school. He is best with the small poem where he cannot loom expansive with uneven parts, and he is learning to crush thought in smaller space, following the best manner of MacLeish. A sure sign of growth. The poems on Emerson, Thoreau and Emily Dickinson are weak." Maurice Swan

+ N Y Times p5 D 7 '41 600w

ENGLEMAN, LOIS ELEANOR, and EELLS, WALTER CROSBY. The literature of junior college terminal education. (Terminal education monograph) 322p $2.50 Am. assn. of junior colleges, 730 Jackson pl, Washington, D.C.

016.378 Junior colleges—Bibliography 41-8717

"This volume is the first of a projected series of monographs produced under the auspices of the Commission on Junior College Terminal Education of the American Association of Junior Colleges. Librarian Engleman, on special leave of absence from Frances Shimer Junior College for this project, and Director Eells of the Association have assembled and classified in this volume more than 1,500 annotated reference titles published since 1900, the great majority having appeared, however, during the past decade. In eleven chapters the materials are organized under headings suitable for use by junior-college teachers, administrators and trustee boards in planning institutional programs. Nearly one third of the references deal with specific semi-professional curricula, while others bear upon questions as to the terminal function itself, organization and administration, guidance and personnel services, library, plant and equipment, faculty and terminal cultural curricula." School & Society

Reviewed by Karl Brown

Library J 66:607 Jl '41 150w

"Librarians generally, and particularly college librarians, will find this a useful reference book for people who are studying in the fields of secondary and higher education." R. J. Havighurst

+ Library Q 12:145 Ja '42 360w

"While the authors sought to make a comprehensive bibliography, they did do some selecting in order finally to publish only what they regarded as significant and directly pertinent to the junior college rather than material on secondary education or higher education in general. The annotations are sufficiently full not ordinarily to necessitate the reader's turning to the original documents. While one would perhaps not expect to go to an annotated bibliography except for help on a specific problem, this book will be useful in another respect. The reader will undoubtedly gain, as he works with the book through the successive chapters, a significant impression, cumulating in clarity, as to what the leaders of the junior-college movement have been trying to create in American life and education." D. P. Cottrell

+ School & Society 53:611 My 10 '41 550w

ENGLISH, RICHARD. Strictly Ding-Dong, and other swing stories. 278p $2 Doubleday

41-18107

A collection of short stories about swing music, its makers and its fans.

"'Strictly Ding-Dong' is strictly slapstick—a blend of farce, movie romance, Fifty-second Street jargon and the curiosities of hot jazz. The swing lingo is rich and funny and the many passages describing hot jazz men going into their ecstatic improvisatory states—'licking it high, wide and happy'—are, if you will pardon me, in the groove. Only swing cats and jam lovers wanted. No long-haired gentry need apply." Milton Rugoff

Books p11 O 12 '41 320w

"For the first few pages of genuine swing talk the lay reader may feel baffled. The elect, of course, know and love the language, and if one may judge by the comments of some of the famous swing musicians, Mr. English is 'right on the beam' and is an authentic interpreter of the musician and his 'screw' problems. For the uninitiated, this collection of stories combines laughter with education." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p28 O 19 '41 200w

"The stories, though repetitious, are cleverly turned and occasionally funny."

New Yorker 17:102 O 11 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 100w

ENGSTRAND, MRS SOPHIA (BELZER). Wilma Rogers. 352p $2.50 Dial press

41-13933

A young trained librarian in an Illinois town is the chief character. She finds the library in dreary shape after twenty-five years in the hands of a gentle, inefficient woman. Wilma fights a continual battle for a professionally run library, and succeeds in interesting enough influential people to put her ideas across. A well-built new library takes the place of the old library. With her personal life she is not quite so successful.

"Many readers intent on finding how Wilma solved her individual problems will be surprised, in retrospect, to find how much they have learned of what public libraries are about. And, whether you like small towns or wish evidence to condemn them, you will find ammunition, as there is in the actuality in this straightforward and unpretentious story." Mary Ross

+ Books p6 J1 27 '41 480w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p7 J1 27 '41 700w

"Unfortunately, it all sounds wooden and forced. Librarians probably have a tough time of it, and some of them are doubtless passionately attached to their fine profession, but they don't necessarily make good subjects for novels."

New Yorker 17:58 Ag 9 '41 60w

"In its portrayal of a librarian's efforts to bring to life a neglected institution, to realize its possibilities as a cultural influence, and to prove its importance to all citizens, this novel presents many typical problems of the library world. It is, at the same time, a love story and a tale of conflicting personalities in a small town."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 290w

ENGSTRAND, STUART DAVID. Spring 1940. 357p $2.50 Doubleday

41-51777

"Ralph Johanssen, son of a German father and a Norwegian mother, has spent ten years in Germany. He returns to the small town of Lessing, ostensibly for his health, really as a Nazi spy and Fifth Columnist. He turns against his stepfather, his mother, his sweetheart; he betrays his half-brothers; he weakens into humanity for only an instant, and dies, shot by his own mother, with 'Heil Hitler!' on his lips." New Yorker

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

"The material of this story is inherently exciting, but the author is interested primarily not in the externals of the action . . . but in the struggle that takes place in and between human souls. Almost every aspect of the greater tragedy in which one part of a nation conspired against and betrayed another part is reproduced in the microcosm of the family life of the Johanssens. . . . Material of such sweep and depth deserves better treatment than it has received at the hands of Mr. Engstrand." Milton Hindus

+ Books p8 My 4 '41 320w

"The writing is awkward but the background is sound and the lesson is unmistakable."

New Repub 104:770 Je 2 '41 70w

"This is a moving, highly readable book. As a novel it is not altogether satisfying. It seems hastily written, the events keeping too close to the author's heels, driving him on at moments when he should rest for a while and deepen his thoughts. But as a political and human document 'Spring 1940' is strong and compelling." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 My 4 '41 750w

"Actually such a character [as Ralph] however true to life—if you wish to call it life—he may be, is unbearably dull as literary material. He is dull because he has abandoned his will and is therefore so predictable that his thoughts and actions can no longer involve our emotions. He is outside adult human interest, as Superman is, or a robot. The value of Mr. Engstrand's book is not great, except as a warning." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:85 My 3 '41 370w

"The sentimental effect of tragedy is always relative to the range of human experience and imagination. Here tragedy has been carried almost beyond conception or belief. This does not necessarily imply that a similar story might not actually have happened, but merely that Mr. Engstrand has failed to bring it within human reaches. His story, for all its early psychological build-up, is raw and unmodelled, and a structure without casing." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 My 24 '41 450w

"This moving fratricidal tale makes more vivid than 1940 headlines the tragedy of unwarlike peoples in a world on fire."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 70w

ENRIGHT, ELIZABETH (MRS ROBERT GILLHAM). The Saturdays; il. by [the author]. 175p $1.75 Farrar

(W) 41-17880

The Melendy family consisted of the father, four children between the ages of six and thirteen, Cuffy, the maid who ran the house and looked out for the young Melendys, and a dog. The Saturdays was the name of the club the children established to take care of rainy Saturdays, or fine ones for that matter. They decided to pool their resources so that each Saturday one of their number could see something he or she really liked and could not afford on one allowance. So this is the story of some of the Saturdays—at the opera, the theater, an art gallery, or the circus.

ENRIGHT, ELIZABETH—Continued

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

"Here is something for ten-year-olds that keeps a grown-up reading as happily as a child—if he has youth enough left to enjoy complete happiness in the young." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 2 '41 200w

"The Melendys enjoy their Saturdays, make interesting friends and due to Elizabeth Enright's cheerful style and illustrations become good companions for their readers." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:377 D '41 100w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 8 '42 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 100w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 30w

"The whole series of adventures makes a highly diverting tale of the interests and the dear desires of childhood." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p31 N 2 '41 210w

"Pleasant reading for children who like stories of family life and don't wince at the thought of going to an art exhibit or the opera."

+ New Yorker 17:144 D 6 '41 60w

ERGANG, ROBERT REINHOLD. The Potsdam führer, Frederick William I, father of Prussian militarism. 290p $3 Columbia univ. press
B or 92 Frederick William I, king of Prussia 41-19534

The first biography in English of Frederick William I, the originator of Prussian militarism. The man who loved nothing in the world "except a strong army;" who decreed everything in the Prussian state from the activities of the saleswomen in the market to the details of his own funeral; and from whose army of giants no man over six feet tall was safe; is pictured as the forerunner of the present Nazi system. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is timely and substantial. Particular attention might be called to the introduction, which contains numerous quotations from German statesmen and writers, historical and contemporary, revealing the penchant of the Prussians for things military." Vernon Van Dyke

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1204 D '41 450w

Canadian Forum 21:286 D '41 240w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 19:78 Ja '42 900w

"The book does not have the sparkle or human interest to make it widely read, but it should be available to those wishing to understand modern Germany." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Nation 153:517 N 22 '41 360w

"Robert Ergang offers a straightforward, clear, amply documented story of the 'Potsdam Fuehrer.' The old, long forgotten records he has unearthed are like stones which, painstakingly rubbed, time and again give a bright sparkle, illuminating the fundamentals of Prussian militarism. What Ergang lacks in brilliance, he more than makes up in honesty. There has been too much brilliance in the flood of biographical literature—brilliance that attempts to gild over sketchy, inaccurate research; it is high time for these swift polishers to do a bit more digging." Will Schaber

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 25 '41 500w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 30w

ERICKSON, CURTIS L. Army in review. 210p il $2 Dutton

(W) 41-6056

Two young high school boys detailed to write a paper on Army life, receive an invitation from the commander of an Army post nearby, to spend a week at the Fort. This book tells of their experiences during the week and pictures army life.

"The lively style is not overdone; the young visitors respect the army to begin with, and this respect strengthens the more they know about it. Their report will certainly be worth hearing when they get back to their Minneapolis high school. The personal experience on which it is based is such as any bright boy would be glad to have, and by putting it into book form Mr. Erickson has done something immediately useful and likely to stay so for some time." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 My 11 '41 280w

"Material, although informally presented, is accurate, the author having secured his data at first hand through visits to Washington and Fort Snelling. Very readable and extremely informative for the boy or girl of sixth grade and above." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 70w

Spring'd Republican p12 Je 5 '41 130w

ERICKSON, CURTIS L. Navy in review. 212p il $2 Dutton

(W) 41-16796

The two young boys who were the protagonists in the author's story of army life, here receive a similar inside view of life in the navy—including a short cruise, target practice, a tour of an airplane carrier and a hospital ship.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 4 '42 100w

"A very readable and informative book." Dorothy Lawson

+ Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 160w

ERMINE, WILL, pseud. See Drago, H. S.

ERNEST, EDWARD. Hector, the old clothes collector; pictures by Theresa Kalab. [30p] $1.50 Longmans

41-18712

Hector, who collected old clothes, wanted to be a singer. As he rode along in his old wagon, with his monkey, Angelo, or when he had an audience of admiring children, Hector would sing lustily. But when he tried to sing over the radio he couldn't bring out a sound, until the manager thought up a plan of encouragement.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 110w

"Successful." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Casanova's women. 312p $2.50 Stokes

Casanova de Seingalt, Giacomo Girolamo—Fiction 41-4406

Recounts the stories of eleven of Casanova's episodes with women in Venice, Mantua, Florence, Paris, Padua, Lausanne, Milan, and Rome. In most of the encounters he comes off second best, for these women were no fools, and Casanova seems to have been more loving than beloved.

"Mr. Erskine's story is presented with skill in narrative and it has all Mr. Erskine's usual deftness of dialogue. But, of necessity, the journey runs 'in a narrow track.'" George Conrad

Books p12 Mr 9 '41 500w

"The eleven stories are of uneven merit, but their entertainment value is considerable." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '41 650w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 2 '41 450w

"The book teems with the author's sardonic humor and irony. Mr. Erskine is plainly 'having fun' with Casanova and all he stands for, 'debunking' the 'great lover' a bit. It is a book to be read lightly and laughed over, though not perhaps to be long remembered."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 600w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Mrs Doratt. 227p $2 Stokes (W) 41-51971

The author himself appears in this novel. He describes his first impressions of a woman seen at one of his lectures, and adds to that the accounts of her he receives from some of her friends. Later, on a second lecture tour, he is a guest at Mrs Doratt's house and she tells him another chapter in her life. From chance acquaintances he collects more data, much of it conflicting. In the end the story of this mysterious woman is unresolved.

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"Mrs. Doratt is only a figment here. The reviewer, who enjoyed the reading of this very brief story for its bits of wit and wisdom along the way, does not get her. He doubts if Mr. Erskine ever attempted to. She intrigued and puzzled him, and with considerable grace and élan he has attempted to express that bewilderment. Mr. Erskine comes out very well. It is a story without a hero unless, indeed, Mr. Erskine himself, who appears in person, may be considered such." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p6 O 26 '41 650w

"In judging 'Mrs. Doratt,' it would not be fair to blame Mr. Erskine for faults which very clearly are deliberate and which are part of the experiment which he is conducting. Personally, I think it is an ingenious experiment, his book a clever and amusing one, with something of the quality of a detective story which is never wholly solved. It serves also as a reminder—to reviewers in particular—that rules were made to be broken by those who know how." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 O 26 '41 750w

"Clever and pleasantly literate."

+ New Yorker 17:97 O 18 '41 50w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Song without words; the story of Felix Mendelssohn. 205p il $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Felix (W) 41-21341

"An unfictionized biography of Felix Mendelssohn, in unreminiscent, direct, readable style. Intended to rescue the composer from the condescension of modern 'intellectuals' and to appreciate his larger contributions as teacher, performer, and patron of music, as well as champion of Bach." (Library J) List of Mendelssohn's works, list of recordings, bibliography, and index.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 11 '42 450w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:42 Ja '42 80w

"Not written down; for teens and adults. Attractive format and chapter headings." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 70w

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. Sophia. 351p $2.50 Macmillan

41-19303

Sophia, the daughter and wife of English clergymen, dies on the first page of the book. For some time she hovers about her home, cut off from communication with her husband and daughter, but able to listen to the grief of her family, and to witness her own funeral. With Sophia are other disembodied spirits and from them she learns about things she never experienced in life. With her new perceptiveness Sophia is able to see her husband as the selfish, insincere, and shiftless person he is, and when he seems bent on making life miserable for her beloved daughter Ann, Sophia makes a supreme effort to help the girl and succeeds.

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"In spite of the fact that the setting of 'Sophia' is in the world of spirits, the subjects which occupy the author's attention are mostly mundane. There is much discussion of marriage, progress, tolerance and human nature in this novel, sounder and more interesting discussion, it should be added, than can be found in many a novel which is less fanciful in treatment." Milton Hindus

+ Books p10 O 19 '41 550w

Christian Century 58:1514 D 3 '41 180w

"'Sophia' and her associates are excellent characterizations who are lost by Mr. Ervine's theological free-wheeling into a region he must call, in dead seriousness, intellectual."

+ — Commonweal 35:325 Ja 16 '42 130w

"There is a bit too much theological discussion, but the story as a whole is entertaining." Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '41 170w

"It is difficult to convey either the substance or the manner of this book, which is not only a readable realistic fantasy but contains what I should judge to be Mr. Ervine's own mature philosophy of life, now expressed through this character and now through that. Such stories as this run the danger of being tedious, but it can be truthfully said of this book that it is never that." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 O 19 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:97 O 18 '41 50w

"The book is a joy. It takes an out-world situation and makes it simple, human, wise, and appealing." Rebecca Lowrie

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 N 15 '41 290w

"The merit of the book is that it is neither facetious nor ambitious and that its author is mainly, in human matters, on the right side; though his way of being so is too often rough and crotchety and somewhat exaggeratedly male and rule-of-thumb. But Sophia is agreeable and touching, and many will find the book consolatory." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 167:388 O 17 '41 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p493 O 4 '41 400w

ESCOFFIER, AUGUSTE. Cook book; a guide to the fine art of cookery. 923p $2.50 Crown 641.5 Cookery 41-21297

"[This] is the American edition of the great French Master Chef's world famous Guide Culinare. It is more than a direct translation, however, for everything is stated in American terms and according to American usage. . . . Escoffier's recipes for certain foreign foods that are not usually obtainable in the U. S. have been retained for the benefit of those who may desire them. In such cases the American equivalents of the foreign foods are stated. . . . The book is arranged in two major sections: I. The Fundamental Elements of Cooking and II. The Recipes." (Publishers' note) Index.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

Reviewed by Sheila Hibben

Books p41 N 2 '41 650w

J Home Econ 33:747 D '41 70w

ESTABROOKS, GEORGE HOBEN. Man, the mechanical misfit. 251p $2.50 Macmillan

573.1 Man. Evolution. Civilization 41-5478

In the first part of this book the author reviews the story of evolution which ended in the emergence of Nature's brain-child, Man. In the later chapters he presents his thesis—that Man is doomed to eventual extinction, the victim of his disregard of Nature's fundamental laws. Index.

"This book is often colloquial and sometimes clever. The author intends deliberately to give the world a work of popularization; and in carrying out this intention he is not only colloquial and superficial, but he introduces and maintains a personification of nature and a teleological mode of expression that in the end wears pretty thin." H. M. Parsley

+ — Books p13 Mr 23 '41 650w

Christian Century 58:984 Ag 6 '41 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

Reviewed by J. B. Fogg
Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 210w

"A lugubrious book, wide open to critical attack."

New Repub 104:737 My 26 '41 70w
Pratt p23 autumn '41

"Here is another voice crying in the wilderness, almost an echo of that of Professor Hooton. Dr. Estabrooks will be judged an extremist by many and a false prophet by others. Thoughtful readers, however, will agree with many of his statements if not with his major conclusion."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Mr '41 550w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 26 '41 850w

ESTES, ELEANOR. The Moffats; il. by Louis Slobodkin. 291p $2 Harcourt

(W) 41-51893

The four young Moffats and their mother lived in a yellow house on New Dollar street, and their lives were only slightly clouded by the For Sale sign. This story for grades four to six describes their joys and sorrows, up to the time when the house was sold and they moved to Elm street.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"There is nothing spectacular about anything the Moffats do, but all they do has the difference that belongs to real life. Besides, they are all as sound and crisp as the apples we used to bring up from the cellar after supper for family refreshment." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 O 12 '41 280w

"The Moffats' . . . lively doings make enchanting reading for there's real living, fun, lots of affection, and interesting bits of adventure in this book that makes us think of 'The Five Little Peppers and How They Grew.' Louis Slobodkin has made jolly, happy-go-lucky sort of pictures, just like the Moffats themselves, for this altogether heart-warming book." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 200w

"The four children have plenty of character and initiative and their environment is as convincing as their zest for carrying on the business of daily living. Again a book awaited the right artist. Louis Slobodkin may be a sculptor but his pen drawings, fitting so admirably the type page of this delightful book, reveal an artist set free by a text he has thoroughly enjoyed." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:457 N '41 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:461 N '41 110w

"The style is deceptively simple; somehow the author has succeeded in conveying the large significance of small events in children's lives and has reported them as children experience them. Recommended for all libraries for ages eight to twelve Excellent for reading aloud." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 D 7 '41 300w

"Has everything." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 180w

ESTES, HARLOW (WILSON) (MRS STANLEY GODDARD ESTES). Long week end. 310p $2.50 Dodd

(W) 41-19717

"A young man invites his fiancée to spend a few days at the home of his invalid mother. Besides her, there are his brother's divorced wife, his sister (married to an old beau of the fiancée's), a couple of badly behaved small nieces, and a crotchety cook. The fiancée is given plenty of opportunity to see what the future will be like." New Yorker

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"A witty and cleverly told story. It is not, however, one of those brittle, sophisticated novels about a week-end party, nor a stock-in-law farce. It goes deeper than that, and there is freshness in the telling. The many characters are unusually well drawn, painted in with humor and understanding." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p14 O 19 '41 440w

"Because it depends so much on subtle lights and shades of character and motive, 'Long Week End' is a hard book to describe adequately. Its charm, I think, springs largely from its complete ease and naturalness. . . . Frankly, a light novel . . . 'Long Week End' nevertheless strikes me as an extraordinarily civilized and an extraordinarily agreeable tale. This is the kind of thing that the English do well. Less often is as suave and skillful a domestic comedy published here." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 O 19 '41 750w

"Bright, shrewd, easy to read."

+ New Yorker 17:101 O 11 '41 50w

"The publishers say that the book is 'full of the amusing quirks and crotchets of human nature.' Jesse James was a cute little cut-up, too. It is full of the meanness and viciousness of low-grade human nature." Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:30 O 18 '41 400w

"Mrs. Estes has written high-pitched and energetic prose in which the characters subordinate the story, but between tragedy and laughter, she has managed to contrive a happy ending."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 150w

ESTEY, JAMES ARTHUR. Business cycles; their nature, cause, and control. 544p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

380.124 Business cycles. Economics. U.S.—
Economic conditions 41-5238

"The purpose of this book is to supply a brief, simple, but reasonably comprehensive introduction to the subject of business cycles, including therein some description of cyclical behavior, a survey of business cycle theories, and an analysis of proposed methods of control." (Pref) Index.

"Since Professor Estey's Business Cycles does not claim to be the product of original research, it must be judged entirely in the light of its efficiency as a textbook. As such, it stands out by comparison with its established rivals and it possesses also positive merits of its own. . . . There are, however, a number of criticisms to be made." Erich Roll

+ — Am Econ R 31:362 Je '41 1350w

"This is a good book. It is very clearly written and well organized. There is much in it that is unsatisfactory from a critical scientific point of view, but a complete integration of the latest ideas with a usable textbook is perhaps too much to be expected." A. F. Lerner

+ Ann Am Acad 216:198 J1 '41 700w

Reviewed by E. C. Bratt
Management R 30:152 Ap '41 550w

Reviewed by E. E. Lewis
Pol Sci Q 56:622 D '41 100w

ESTORICK, ERIC. Stafford Cripps: prophetic rebel. 285p pl $2.50 Day

B or 92 Cripps, Sir Stafford. Great Britain —Politics and government. Labor party (Great Britain) 41-22004

Largely a sociologist's picture of England's labor leader who became minister to Moscow in 1940 and from that vantage point predicted the coming of Germany's attack on Russia in 1941. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"Mr. Estorick has written his sketch of Cripps's personal life against a background of British political history over the last ten years. Neither is full, nor clearly stated. His attitude toward his subject is one of frank adulation." Joseph Barnes

Books p18 N 23 '41 900w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Nation 153:542 N 29 '41 950w

"This volume by a young American sociologist is an attempt to introduce Cripps to the American public. The reader will find much of interest and value in Mr. Estorick's pages. The essential biographical data are briefly set forth; so too is the story of Cripps's early activities in the peace movement and his political debut as Solicitor-General in the second Labor government. Most of the book, however, is given over to Cripps the rebel, to an account of his differences with the Labor Party in the past half-dozen years. . . Mr. Estorick has done a good job in presenting the facts of those differences. But he has been somewhat less successful as a biographer." D. W. Petegorsky
+ New Repub 105:739 D 1 '41 800w

ETHRIDGE, WILLIE (SNOW) (MRS M. F. ETHRIDGE). I'll sing one song. 156p $1.75 Macmillan

818 41-8697

"Willie Snow Ethridge is the wife of a distinguished Southern newspaper man, the mother of four children at various ages of lively appeal, the chataleine of twenty-six acres and an old house just outside Louisville, and a writer. . . Her 'room-mate,' her off-spring, her house and garden and the family's personal and social relationships in their habitat are the things she writes about. . . In her first book of gay domestic commentary she was living in her home State of Georgia. Since then Mark Foster Ethridge's journalistic career has taken him to The Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, so it is of a new Kentucky home that this book sings." N Y Times

Bookmark 2:9 N '41

Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books p6 Je 8 '41 400w

Christian Century 58:833 Je 25 '41 50w

"Anyone who has ever been a hostess, or tried to be; who has ever sought to skate on ice, taken up the movie camera, made a wild flower garden, had a baby, hired a plumber, tried to keep peace in the family, owned a dog, or ridden a horse will have a fellow-feeling with the author. There are so many wholesome laughs that one can overlook the quoted language now and then." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 21 '41 500w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter
Library J 66:357 Ap 15 '41 30w

"A clever and thoroughly entertaining little book."

+ N Y Times p15 My 25 '41 550w

"It is a perfect book for reading aloud and the author has done what she set out to do, sharpen her sense of daily living against a backdrop which may be changed but which cannot, for her, and for people like her, who wish to remember, be utterly destroyed." R. L.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 14 '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

EVANS, MRS EVA KNOX. The lost handkerchiefs; il. by Flavia Gág. 64p $1.50 Putnam 41-14048

Mystery story for eight and nine year olds. It is about a little old lady who lived with a small dog Petro, and who kept her handkerchiefs in her top drawer. They were different colors, blue for Monday, pink for Tuesday, and so on. When the cherished handkerchiefs began to disappear the little old lady set out to solve the mystery.

"Easy to read, it is lively to read aloud, and the pictures are always droll." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 S 21 '41 150w

"This is a gay, entertaining story, ably told, for children eight and nine. It is easy to read and easy to hold. Not least important are the illustrations by Flavia Gág, which fit the story perfectly. There is only one drawback to the book: it is expensive." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 110w

"A mystery story for five-year-olds with a charming repetitive pattern." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 30w

EVANS, MRS EVA KNOX. Mr Jones and Mr Finnigan [pictures by Erick Berry]. $1 Oxford

The troubles of a fat man and a thin man who started a new regime when the fat man got stuck in the doorway of an enticing bakery. Told for six and seven year olds. Copiously illustrated.

"Read about what happened to [Mr Jones and Mr Finnigan] and we think you will be delighted." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41 100w

"The story is slight, but food in books is not without its charm for young readers, who will enjoy the methodical lists of just what Mr. Finnigan, who liked a hearty breakfast, found set before him every morning. . . The conclusion works out as a surprise, and there are fun and genuine humor in the drawings." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 11 '42 150w

EVATT, MRS HARRIET. Suzette's family; [il. by the author]. 133p $1.50 Bobbs 41-16066

Suzette lived on the island of Orleans in the St Lawrence river near Quebec. She had four brothers and they kept her fairly busy, but she did long for a sister. A little Scotch girl, blinded from shock, came to live nearby, and Suzette took her under her wing, with pleasant results all around.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:381 D '41 110w

"Much of it is authentic, though she mixes old and new in a strange manner, and has her French Canadians conversing with English-speaking people without any language difficulties—which is quite a feat." H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 40w

"It is difficult to believe that so trite a plot could provide such a fresh, unpretentious, and natural picture of pleasant home life as it does."

EVATT, HARRIET—Continued

Written without apparent intent to inform, it succeeds better in doing so than many stories with unfamiliar backgrounds. Excellent large type for readers eight to ten; generously but indifferently illustrated with black and white drawings by the author." J. L. Sauer
+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 70w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. Crybaby calf [il. by the authors]. [57p] 50c Rand McNally

41-2940

Picture-story book for the very young. It shows the progress of a melancholy little calf from the crybaby stage to the days when he was always cheerful—except when he sat down.

"The immediate adoption of 'Copy-Kitten' by every baby who saw the book brought other picture-stories from the same light-hearted collaborators; each one had the appeal of gayety, but not till this one has the charm that marked the first been recaptured." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 23 '41 200w

Reviewed by E. S. Mullin

Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 140w

EWEN, DAVID, ed. Living musicians. 390p il $4.50 Wilson, H.W.

927.8 Musicians—Dictionaries. Musicians, American (W) 41-51568

"Five hundred biographical sketches give professional and personal data of contemporary concert and radio artists, with opinions of musical critics. Well-known Americans, or those who have been heard here, predominate, but some European artists, some of an earlier day, and some young musicians of promise are also included. Portraits." Booklist

Booklist 37:291 Mr 1 '41

Library Q 11:250 Ap '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

EWERT, EARL CRANSTON. The United States army; with a foreword by Hanson W. Baldwin; il. by Everett Shinn and James Hulme. 72p $1.25 Little

355.0973 U.S.—Army (W) 41-15831

"A simple, nontechnical explanation of how the Army is organized and trained. Well illustrated." Cleveland Open Shelf

"The large size of these pages, their many illustrations in full color, and one may add, the moderate price of this book might give a passer-by the idea that it was for younger children. One glance inside, however, and the value of this information to older readers is apparent. . . The timeliness need not be emphasized; enough to say that the facts are here and that the pictures make them come alive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 17 '41 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

EXPLORERS CLUB, NEW YORK. Through hell and high water [introd. by Seward S. Cramer, editor]. 385p $3 McBride

910 Adventure and adventurers. Explorers (W) 41-9912

At the Explorers Club in New York, members gather at tea time around the Long Table and exchange stories of their adventures in foreign lands. Nearly forty of these stories are here collected for the entertainment of those who cannot belong to the Club. Among the contributors are: Roy Chapman Andrews;

Julien Bryan; Kenneth Collings; Hassoldt Davis; J. Allan Dunn; Richard Finnie; Clyde Fisher; Father Hubbard; Donald B. MacMillan; Gregory Mason; Lowell Thomas.

Booklist 37:544 Jl 15 '41

"'Through Hell and High Water' is uneven in literary quality and occasionally disappointing. Some of the episodes are trivial, others fail to develop the background and atmosphere necessary for full-bodied tales of far places. Yet the collection, as a whole, is varied and interesting, and many of the adventures reveal the characters and personalities of the narrators as well as the genuine flavor of their experience. For the reader who likes his exploit tales in short takes and vivid glimpses, the Long Table experiment is a worth-while investment." Emmet Crozier

+ Books p13 Je 1 '41 480w

"Fascinating reading. Will be of widespread interest." J. A. Sohn

+ Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 50w

New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 30w

"The stories are stamped with good sportsmanship, high spirits and enthusiasm, and the diversity of their interest is one of the book's outstanding features."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 8 '41 400w

"The book is a good sparetime volume, it is a good book for dad to have around the house for son to grow up with. It is notable, not for literary style, but for the matter-of-fact manner in which men who do 'the things one dreams of' have related their more memorable experiences."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 11 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

EYRE, KATHERINE WIGMORE. Lottie's valentine; il. by Suzanne Suba. 64p $1.50 Oxford

41-3989

"Eight-year-old Lottie had been left a waif on the doorstep of the Convent of the Good Shepherd in New Orleans. There, with other little girls, she led a disciplined, regimented life under the stern but understanding eye of Sister Ursula. Unlike the others, Lottie had no friends to visit her or take her on holiday outings—that is, until she found a wounded carrier pigeon in the courtyard, cared for it lovingly, and when it was well, set it free with her valentine tied to it. Then, suddenly, the world changed for Lottie." Library J

Booklist 37:363 Ap 1 '41

"The story is not only lovable but lasting. The atmosphere of old New Orleans is persuasively real, and the convent children, the most lifelike I have found since those in the delicious 'Murder in a Nunnery.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 9 '41 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn BK M 17:98 Mr '41 450w

"Against a background of convent life in New Orleans, this story of an appealing little girl is told with charm and skill. It will be enjoyed by children nine to twelve who like orphan stories. The book is attractively made up, with appropriate black and white illustrations by Suzanne Suba." Jean Stewart

+ Library J 66:222 Mr 1 '41 120w

"The story has the simple, happy justice of a fairy tale, but its background is solid and convincing. It is a little overwritten for the younger brackets of the 6-to-10-year-old group for whom it is intended, but its wistfulness and bravery go straight to the heart." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 16 '41 290w

"A charming book for little girls, with the virtue of a new background."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 24 '41 60w

F

FADIMAN, CLIFTON, ed. Reading I've Liked. 906p $3 Simon & Schuster

808.8 Literature—Collections (W) 41-51921

"A personal selection drawn from two decades of reading and reviewing, presented with an informal prologue and various commentaries," by the literary critic of The New Yorker. Among the authors included are: Eve Curie, Thomas Mann, W. Somerset Maugham, Virginia Woolf, Ring Lardner, Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck, Jules Romains, A. E. Coppard, Max Beerbohm, Katherine Anne Porter, Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"We tip our hat and genuflect to Mr. Fadiman in all sincerity and admiration. He is a grand guy, and this book, an anthology with comments, proves it." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic D '41 350w

Booklist 38:48 O 15 '41

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Books p2 S 28 '41 750w

Reviewed by Ruth Byrns
Commonweal 35:301 Ja 9 '42 200w

"It is, on the whole, a very engaging collection. Mr. Fadiman has written a lively introduction of 60,000 words which covers a lot of ground, autobiographical and other, and which is a curious study in conscious self-immolation, and unconscious defiance. The most successful of professional reviewers has some pretty cynical things to say of professional reviewers and bears down hard on the difference between reviewers—who are only 'experts'—and genuine critics. . . . Often it reads like the success story of a man who couldn't help, and can't stop being successful but almost wishes he hadn't been. Very interesting." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 153:343 O 11 '41 230w

New Yorker 17:88 O 4 '41 20w

Pratt p16 D '41

"'Reading I've Liked' is going to be about the best dollar-for-dollar book buying you can do this Christmas." N. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 O 11 '41 1150w

"'Reading I've Liked' is pure Fadiman, admittedly and unashamedly. It is witty, discriminating, sophisticated reading; exactly what one would expect of our hero. Mr. Fadiman's liberation of book reviewers, hitherto an army of mouse-colored bibliophiles who apparently liked being unknown and underpaid (if at all), is a matter of concern, perhaps, only to them. But his gift to the potential readers of America is considerable. He has achieved on a tremendous scale what famous teachers like 'Copey' of Harvard and Phelps of Yale have done—he has made reading fun."

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 5 '41 420w

"The anthology is a precious form for our sad times. It is a shelter from mad alarms, peaceful with age-old truth and hoarded beauty. Here is literature of escape in a noble sense: we retire to the past not to forget, but to find wisdom and courage to go on with. . . . The commentary is brilliant, gay, wise on reading-for-a-living (the book-reviewer versus critic) and reading-for-love." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:700 D '41 600w

FAHERTY, ROBERT. Big old sun. 290p $2.50 Putnam

41-4371

"'Tobacco Road' doings on the Florida keys. An exciting crocodile hunt, swarms of realistic mosquitoes, primitive struggles involving love, money, and murder." New Yorker

"Unfortunately Mr. Faherty allowed himself to become so interested in the local color of the keys, in the sun-blanching shacks and patios of the natives that the atmosphere hides the slender story of his novel and almost obscures 'Big Old Sun' itself. The peculiar colloquial flavor of the speech of the Florida keys can't be captured and put between covers by simply writing: 'Please, captain, sir,' or through constant references to frying mullet and 'shine. 'Big Old Sun' isn't a good book." Robert Wilder

— Books p14 Mr 9 '41 450w

"Written in reportorial style, rich in the vernacular and smile of the South. Sex interest is strong. Not for the young. Libraries limiting fiction need not consider." Catherine Van Dyne

Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 60w

"Handled as a comedy of characters in a rare setting, as in fact it has been in its best sections, it might have succeeded as both an amusing and engaging story, as in fact it is at its best, and a rewarding novel in its transcript from life. For the language is kind to the reader, moving easily in simple rhythm, suggestive of the speech of the people without resort to heavy dialect. . . . In its parts and at its best Mr. Faherty's second novel is a marked advance over his better integrated, as I remember it, first one, 'Better Than Dying' [Book Review Digest, 1935]. Most of it makes beguiling reading." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 23 '41 800w

"Mr. Faherty's attitude toward his slightly subnormal characters is pleasantly detached." New Yorker 17:87 Mr 15 '41 50w

"When a reviewer's personal prejudices are involved, it is difficult to estimate the appeal of a book for others. This reviewer is so enamored of the Florida Keys that it is impossible to know whether the impact of 'Big Old Sun' stems from a personal delight or from the author's artistry. I believe it is a safe guess that any reader who can be charmed by color, by a restrained style, by the eddying of stark human nature against the elements, will find here a definite enchantment." M. K. Rawlings

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 29 '41 330w

FAHS, CHARLES BURTON. Government in Japan; recent trends in its scope and operation. 114p $1 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council [5s Allen, G.]

342.52 Japan—Politics and government. Japan—Economic policy 40-34591

"[The book examines] recent trends in the scope and operation of the Japanese government. . . . After tracing the expansion of governmental regulation and activities over the past decade or two in the promotion and regulation of foreign trade, economic recovery and security, integration of overseas development and domestic control, national defense, social reform and finance, he briefly describes the 'reforms and proposed reforms in the political and administrative machinery of the country in proper relation to the new and complex functions of government which have impelled them.' He concludes that the trends are due to factors which are international and not local in character, and that the 'strictly internal political trends' are not caused by 'militarism' or 'totalitarianism.'" Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by A. Vandenbosch
Am Pol Sci R 35:387 Ap '41 230w

Reviewed by W. P. Maddox
Ann Am Acad 215:182 My '41 270w

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

"Dr. Fahs divides his book into two parts in the first of which he considers six fields of administration in which new problems are being met with new legislation and handled by new agencies. . . . The contribution made in this section is invaluable and unique. In the second part of the work the author describes changes of a broader nature in the executive and legislative branches of the government. Here he deals more briefly with subjects more fully explored by Dr. Borton." H. S. Quigley

+ Pacific Affairs 14:361 S '41 300w

FAINSOD, MERLE, and GORDON, LINCOLN. Government and the American economy. 863p maps $5; text ed $3.90 Norton

330.973 Industry and state. U.S.—Economic policy 41-9904

"Part I of this volume presents the economic, organizational, legal, and constitutional setting in which American enterprise has developed. The three succeeding parts deal with the relation between government and economic life during the last half-century. Consideration is given the impact of World War II on our economy." (Am Pol Sci R) Selected readings. Table of cases. Index.

"Discrimination characterizes the selection of illustrative material, and the authors have organized compactly the material selected. A critical sense of proportion and balance is maintained throughout the book. . . . Because of its positive qualities, this book easily places first in its field. It should make a wide appeal to all students of current federal politics." J. J. George

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:984 O '41 340w

"What this volume does cover, it covers well. Usually this sort of material is presented to students, and especially economic students, as part of a course in economic history. But in such courses the subject matter is usually organized on a chronological basis, so that passage of the Sherman Act is likely to be separated by many pages from discussion of regulation in the postwar period. In this volume, on the other hand, the entire history of the regulation of industrial monopolies, for example, is presented as a unit, not as history but as an explanation of present practice. And the presentation is made even clearer because the situation in other sectors of the economy, where regulation has been applied in a different way, is kept separate." H. H. Villard

+ Ann Am Acad 219:191 Ja '42 550w

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"The ever increasing participation of government in the life of the nation makes this book particularly pertinent. It is an extremely well organized history of government control, regulation and promotion." J. B. Parrish

+ Churchman 155:19 N 1 '41 250w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:330 Ja '42 30w

FAIR, A. A. Double or quits. 279p $2 Morrow 41-25663

Detective story

"What are we kicking about when so many readers love Bertha and Don and everything they do? The plot this time, however, is not so gripping. And the people are frightening in more ways than one." Will Cuppy

Books p36 D 7 '41 200w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p11 D 21 '41 150w

"Class A."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 D 13 '41 40w

Time 39:72 Ja 5 '42 50w

FAIR, A. A. Spill the jackpot! 258p $2 Morrow 41-5296

Detective story.

"Fast and funny." Will Cuppy

Books p22 Mr 23 '41 160w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '41 240w

"Extra good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 40w

Time 37:104 Ap 7 '41 40w

FAITH for today, by Stanley High, Frank Kingdon, Gerald Groveland Walsh, Louis Finkelstein, Swami Nikhilananda; with an introduction and postscript by George V. Denny, jr. 266p $2 Doubleday; Town hall press, 347 5th av, N.Y.

277.3 U.S.—Religion

41-18045

Religious symposium in which "five faiths look at the world." Contents: Religion: the issue and the answer, by Stanley High; Faith as experience, by Frank Kingdon; Faith for today: a Catholic statement, by G. G. Walsh; Faith for today: a Jewish viewpoint, by Louis Finkelstein; Faith for today: the Hindu viewpoint, by Swami Nikhilananda; Postscript, by G. V. Denny, Jr.

Booklist 38:73 N 1 '41

"Religious symposia are common enough, and frequently as commonplace as they are common. But this symposium is an exception. The character of the times in which we live, the nature of the occasion when the essays were originally delivered as lectures, the suggestion and guidance of that incomparable impresario, George Denny—something or somebody kindled the flame, and the result is the light and heat of exalted utterance." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p29 O 26 '41 600w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray

Churchman 155:17 N 1 '41 350w

"The Catholic, Jewish, and Hindu presentations are enlightening and serve as introductory orientations for the general reader. The two sections by Protestant authors are, within rather narrow limits, tracts for the times and are not adequate statements of the significance of the Protestant faiths for our day." A. H. Campbell

Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 130w

"Mr. Denny does pretty well by way of a summary. He is to be congratulated. This is far and away the best book which has grown out of intergroup discussion of religions in this country." G. N. Shuster

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 1 '41 450w

Reviewed by Henry Neumann

Survey 77:374 D '41 550w

FALLS, CYRIL BENTHAM. The nature of modern warfare; with an introd. by George Fielding Eliot. 101p $1.25 Oxford [4s Methuen] 355.04 Military art and science. Tactics. Strategy 41-24418

This book contains four lectures delivered at Oxford in the winter of 1941 and a fifth article of equal length. The author is military correspondent of the London Times and one of the official historians of the last war. Contents: The doctrine of total war; The mechanized attack; Tactics of defence; Notes on mountain war; Immutability realities.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:374 Ja '42 30w

"Captain Falls's brilliant analysis of the deeper military aspects of the present conflict is a reviewer's dream. It is not merely by far the most penetrating study produced by this war; it is also a work of art, perfect in balance and execution, and crammed full of keen observations and profound insights." Herbert Rosinski

+ Nation 153:676 D 27 '41 800w

"There is a singular lack of power in the book. An instance of this lack of strenuousness is to be found in Captain Falls's allusions to the propaganda weapon. Germany uses it, Russia uses it, Britain also must use it. That is about all he says. The most interesting and useful section, to this reviewer, is the brief but excellent chapter on a neglected aspect of combat, mountain warfare." Ralph Bates

+ New Repub 105:741 D 1 '41 180w

Social Studies 33:41 Ja '42 200w

"I do not wish to give the impression that this book is not very valuable. It is intensely interesting and important; there are many most useful suggestions about the conduct of the war. It is on this question of the defensive, in view of the most recent form of attack, that it fails to convince; and it seems certain that when the correct reply is discovered we shall probably be near the end of the German outbreak."

+ — Spec 166:504 My 9 '41 750w

"A 100-page book, 'The Nature of Modern Warfare,' is not as 'dry' as its title would indicate. The strategy and tactics of this war, as portrayed in the light of history's great conflicts, can prove fascinating if the reader is prepared to shut off the radio and concentrate."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 5 '41 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p211 My 3 '41 750w

FALSTAFF, JAKE, pseud. See Fetzer, H.

FARAGO, LADISLAS, and GITTNER, LEWIS FREDERICK, eds. German psychological warfare; survey and bibliography [prepared] with the cooperation of Gordon W. Allport [and others] interpretative summary by Kimball Young. 155p pa $2.50 Com. for national morale, 51 E. 42d st, N.Y.

355.43 Morale. Propaganda, German. Propaganda, German—Bibliography. Psychology, Applied 41-12931

"This publication . . . contains a list of more than 500 German books and articles dealing with the psychological problems of modern war, which is total war, and with psychology as a weapon, as well as a comprehensive summary of German views on psychological warfare." Nation

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by S. T. Possony
Nation 153:645 D 20 '41 600w

"This book is more than a guide for research scholars. It includes also an excellent survey of the material for the general reader." H. M. Davis

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 10 '41 440w

FARBER, MARVIN, ed. Philosophical essays in memory of Edmund Husserl. 332p $4 Harvard univ. press

104 Husserl, Edmund. Phenomenology 40-35634

"This volume has been projected not only to honor the memory of Edmund Husserl, but also to facilitate the understanding of his philosophy. It contains sixteen essays by American as well as foreign scholars now resident in this country, together with a portrait of Husserl and a hitherto unpublished study by him on the phenomenological origin of space. Most of the essays are concerned with expounding or underscoring the importance of Husserl's central doctrines, in some cases the expositions being no more than pious paraphrases of the master's teachings; two papers discuss critically certain aspects of phenomenology, while three deal with independent issues having only a tenuous connection with the ideas of Husserl." J Philos

"The present book will serve well for some time to come as an authentic and forceful statement of the broad outlines of phenomenology and phenomenological method." W. H. Werkmeister

+ Ethics 51:366 Ap '41 700w

"Space is lacking for comment on all of the essays individually. Almost without exception the contributors handle their subjects with expert knowledge, and the book is a fine testimonial to the influence of Husserl's teachings as well as to the loyalty of his students. Nevertheless, I doubt whether most of the papers will be either intelligible or persuasive to any one not previously instructed in Husserl's ideas or convinced of their importance." Ernest Nagel

+ — J Philos 38:301 My 22 '41 2300w

FARJEON, ELEANOR. Miss Granby's secret; or, The bastard of Pinsk. 369p $2.50 Simon & Schuster [8s 6d Joseph, M]

(W) 41-5874

In 1912 Miss Adelaide Granby, author of forty-nine novels, died leaving her niece, Pamela, a miscellaneous collection of old letters, unpublished manuscripts, and diaries. Pamela, already interested in the problem of how much did Aunt Addie "know," seeks an answer in these documents, in a visit to Aunt Addie's old governess, and in other researches. In the course of this story of her probings she takes occasion to reproduce Aunt Addie's first novel: The Bastard of Pinsk, written at the age of sixteen.

"Here is the best thing in its line since 'The Young Visitors'—a work which it resembles at one point only. Daisy Ashford, a real child, writing a romance about adults, could and did mention the facts of life with a directness possible only to one who knows nothing whatever about them. Miss Granby, a pure creation of Miss Farjeon's, kept this happy quality through her long career as popular novelist, by continuing not to know what she was talking about. Or did she?" M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 Ap 27 '41 650w

"A delightful burlesque. . . It is all very good fun, for the improprieties of innocence are far more amusing than those of sophistication." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 6 '40 120w

"Naughtiness of a definitely mauve tint marks Miss Farjeon's sentimental pseudo-shocker. She has written a broad but dainty satire on the Victorian lady-novelists and evidently had a high old time lampooning the ladies, in spite of the fact that she did her writing in a bomb shelter. But the subject is rather thin and the book is rather fat, which means that its humor is stretched to a fragile tenuity. . . For leisurely and fine-spun spoofing Miss Granby and the Bastard may be recommended. But don't expect to find them half as shocking as they sound." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 27 '41 700w

"The framework in which it is set is too elaborate for the thin joke."

New Yorker 17:85 Ap 12 '41 40w

"Would a young lady in 1849 really have composed such an effusion [as] 'The Bastard of Pinsk.' Probably not; there are some unexpectedly modern passages. But it is not what she would have written, or might have written, but what she ought to have written that matters. Clearly this is such a romance as a very young lady, in the dawn of the nineteenth century, ought to have written. Herein lie the charm and the success of 'Miss Granby's Secret.'" George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 My 3 '41 490w

"Bit by bit the whole thing is deft, neatly flavored, entertaining. In bulk it is more of one good thing than the average digestion can take."

+ — Time 37:104 My 19 '41 60w

"This is a nicely informed and entertaining invention."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 N 23 '40 390w

FARLEY, WALTER. The black stallion; II. by Keith Ward. 275p $2 Random house

41-21882

A seventeen-year-old boy and a wild black stallion, the only survivors from a shipwreck, live for a time on an uninhabited island and somehow manage to exist until they are rescued. Back in the United States the boy and a retired jockey tame the horse and race him to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

FARLEY, WALTER—Continued

"The secret and careful training which the Black received, the breath-taking excitement of the nocturnal tryouts at the track, the final dramatic victory in the race, all add up to a virile action thriller. For teen-age boys." Mar-guerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 20w

FARMER, FANNIE MERRITT. Boston cooking-school cook book; completely rev. by Wilma Lord Perkins. 7th ed 830p il $2.50 Little

641.5 Cookery (W) 41-19995

"Revised and partly rearranged, with some new recipes and some regional and foreign dishes. Fifty basic recipes for beginners are specially noted." Booklist

Booklist 38:98 N 15 '41

Books p21 O 12 '41 80w

J Home Econ 34:53 Ja '42 80w

FARNHAM, DWIGHT THOMPSON. Embattled male in the garden; or, Why women are queer in the country. 249p il $2.50 Scribner 635.9 Gardening. Humor 41-22902

Half-humorous, partly fictional, and very occasionally serious, account of how the author and his wife developed various and sundry gardens on a ten-acre "farm" in Connecticut.

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"Mr. Farnham, who hitherto has written pleasantly of country living and how he came to adopt it, now attains the apex of rural wisdom by discovering that the making and maintenance of a garden is largely bisexual. And he is belligerent about it. Tongue in cheek or tongue wagging, he is certain that there ought to be more pants in the garden and those pants worn by men. . . Eventually Mr. Farnham, like his garden, attains maturity. He has to confess that women are a help in gardens and that without one the enjoyment of them is wan and sterile." Richardson Wright

+ Books p22 N 16 '41 310w

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Adam Penfeather, buccaneer. 327p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Low] 41-4407

"Tells of [the] hero's adventures in the Spanish Main, of the lovely Antonia who sailed the high seas with him disguised as a boy, of ex-galley slaves and cutthroats, of storm and shipwreck, love and hatred, danger and death." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 Mr 30 '41 90w

Canadian Forum 20:325 Ja '41 240w

"The book is easily read and holds one's interest. Recommended." J. A. Sohon

+ Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 60w

"Here is a tale of derring-do told with all the expertness of craftsmanship one expects from the author of 'The Broad Highway.'" Drake DeKay

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 30 '41 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 40w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. Ellen Rogers. 429p $2.75 Vanguard 41-17612

"Ellen Rogers belonged to Chicago's Catholic bourgeoisie. It was 1925, and Ellen was bored. She was too lazy to keep up her horseback riding or her piano lessons. . . But she did get some fun out of tormenting mediocre boys. She was clearly a setup for a ruthless and clever man whose egoism would outweigh hers. Ed ('Hellfire') Lanson's mountainous egoism crushed hers like a mouse. A good-looking, powerful, self-educated fellow—Swinburne was his favorite poet; Nietzsche was his god—Ed's flood of talk was mostly a lurid rehash of his reading. Ellen was too ignorant even to understand much of it, but it fascinated her. . . Before long Ellen was reduced to a soft, whining, pleading, quivering mass of lust and fear—fear of losing Ed. Naturally he tired of this and left her, with studied brutality. Ellen made frantic, shameless, almost somnambulist efforts to get him back, finally saw no escape from her agony but the night-black waters of Lake Michigan." Time

"Ellen is ordinary without the heightened cumulative, overwhelming ordinariness of some of the Lonigans and the O'Neills; in short she is not memorably ordinary. The figure of Ed Lanson, however, standing consciously, even scornfully apart from these, suggests that Farrell is capable of adding another kind of wing to his already remarkable gallery of contemporary American portraits." Milton Rugoff

Books p2 S 28 '41 900w

Cath World 154:251 N '41 180w

"I would say to my friends about this story take it or leave it, but I recommend that you leave it unless you are a student of philosophy in which event you may enjoy seeing what ideas look like under the stairway." J. N. Vaughan

— Commonweal 35:146 N 28 '41 300w

"Both Ellen and Ed fall so far short of qualifying for their roles that the denouement becomes burlesque; and there is discernible in the writing neither compassion nor irony. It is merely a boring and futile account, play by play, of two amoral ciphers." Margaret Marshall

— Nation 153:342 O 11 '41 450w

"The inevitable question, why has Farrell come to this, is hard to answer. He used to be known as something of a social novelist, a boy who could argue Literature and Dialectical Materialism with the best of them, and now he has emerged as a sort of inverted Tarkington, the chronicler of the Penrods who go in for gang shags and beating up 'dinges' in Jackson Park." S. E. Hyman

— New Repub 105:441 O 6 '41 950w

Reviewed by Robert van Gelder

N Y Times p7 O 19 '41 600w

"Mr. Farrell's social milieu is here jacked up a few notches above that of his Studs Lonigan novels, but his narrative methods remain unchanged. Leave nothing out is the first rule of the Chicago school. It would be pleasant to be able to record progress on the Farrell front, but it is a saddening fact that 'Ellen Rogers' will probably rank among the feeblest of the author's books. . . The trouble lies mainly in the circumstance that there really isn't enough material here for a full-length novel. Mr. Farrell's Menckonian young man is an accurate and merciless portrait. So is his selfish, silly Ellen." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 17:75 S 27 '41 340w

"'Ellen Rogers' is as good as any single volume Farrell has written, and it is in fact a return to the force and effectiveness of the Lonigan trilogy. . . Here we have a full, probing portrait of the jackal, perfectly done, with everything Farrell has learned about this kind of literary portraiture turned on full power. It should be clear from the above that 'Ellen Rogers' is a misnomer for the book. From the moment she meets Ed Lanson the book is his. . . The ways in which he preys upon those about him, the lying, deceiving, cheating, debauchery, need not be recounted here. Farrell does so with a remorseless thoroughness that is considerably more than 'photographic realism,' a mistaken term which has too often been applied to him. This is not just representative art, but at once selective, interpretive, even in a sense transcendent, since the very primal essence of Ed Lanson, which neither he nor any surface estimate however perfect can know, is somehow gotten before us. He stands here as an emergent man of ill will, a portent not good but necessary to contemplate." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 S 27 '41 550w

"James T. Farrell has not enhanced his reputation by publication of 'Ellen Rogers.' He has succeeded in getting 'out of the gutter' in which he left Studs Lonigan after a lengthy trilogy, but he has written a book which seems trite except for its language, and that leaves little to recommend it."

— Spring'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 280w

"Like Dreiser, James T. Farrell writes with his thumbs. His words are blunt tools that he must wield with force and repetition. Some of his dialogues, about nothing in particular, seem interminable. The significance of Ellen Rogers is not in its writing but in the fact that here for the first time Farrell has contracted his view from social to individual conflicts, against the backdrop of a higher social milieu. He has succeeded after a fashion, like a strong but clumsy pugilist who beats down his opponent with 15 rounds of body blows."

Time 38:92 S 29 '41 300w

FARREN, HARRY DESMOND. Sabotage: how to guard against it. 56p 50c Nat. foremen 355.2 Sabotage 41-1175

"A manual for employees designed to make them aware of the ever growing danger of sabotage. It recounts activities of saboteurs in the first World War and discusses the mysterious industrial catastrophes that have occurred in recent months. It describes some of the methods of saboteurs in contacting employees, and suggests ways whereby employees and plants can protect themselves." Management R

Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick
Chem & Met Eng 48:172 F '41 180w
Management R 29:456 D '40 50w

FARSON, NEGLEY. Behind God's back. 555p map $3.50 Harcourt [10s 6d Gollancz] 916 Africa. Africa—Description and travel (W) 41-61569

Account of a seven-months trip thru Africa just before the outbreak of the present war. "I began in South-West Africa, the first German colony, then went down through South Africa, then made a coast-to-coast drive across Africa through Tanganyika, Kenya, Uganda, Ruanda-Urundi, the Belgian Congo, French Equatorial Africa, the French Cameroons." This cross-country journey includes almost everything—autobiography, travel, history, political reporting, hunting, pictures of African natives and of the men who are making modern Africa.

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:9 Mr '41

"Farson's book rambles over more than 500 pages, and contains a great deal of pertinent information. By the author's own confession it is not particularly well planned or well written, but this is due to the haste with which it had to be put together and the large scope of view. There is more actual life on the continent in this volume than in a hundred of the usual African travel books, and no person who is interested in the war, or wishes to understand the tactical strategy of the armies and navies, can afford to miss it." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p3 F 16 '41 1500w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles
Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 430w

"[The author] has an enthusiasm for Tanganyika, but, through an inhibiting fear of fine writing and a preoccupation with economics and British-German frictions, he fails to convey it to the reader, losing the Serengeti in a mass of driving details; whereas, when he frees his hand for the beauty of Africa in Uganda and the Congo, he brings the scene excellently to life. The hunting details are dull. But, for sheer excitement, his gunless expedition in the Parcs Nationaux with the fearless Commandant Hubert is a delight." J. W. H.

+ Cath World 153:376 Je '41 700w

"Mr. Farson spent a year in Africa just before the outbreak of the present war. Few observers have ever seen as much of that continent in twelve months. He has the skilled reporter's technique of inquiry, the born adventurer's lust for strange experiences, and a style in which to tell what he sees whether looking outward on the superficial scene or into personalities, political movements and social changes. This is no mere traveler's tale."

+ Christian Century 58:427 Mr 26 '41 260w

"The book is just one big chain of feature stories rushed journalistically to meet the deadline of civilized man's onrushing war. They make good reading for recreation and for information." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:18 Mr '41 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

"A magnificent book, this, splotted, inchoate, eviscerated, full of human interest and repetitive errors of diction—but magnificent just the same. For Negley Farson knows how to mix his episodes, insert the popularly esteemed descriptive passages, dramatize a narrative and ride down politico-social truths without going stale." L. W. Eshleman

+ Commonweal 33:428 F 14 '41 460w

"In spite of its episodic and personal character [this book] manages to tell a great deal about the political and economic problems of sub-Saharan Africa." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:882 JI '41 80w

"It is generally conceded that this is an exceedingly timely book, particularly in view of the emergence of Africa as the new theater for the current war between the European powers. . . . In appreciation of its amazing timeliness, however, one is apt to lose sight of the more permanent value of the book. Of more importance even than the political studies are the background sketches of African life." J. H. Smyth

+ Living Age 360:194 Ap '41 500w

"The book undoubtedly earns and, one hopes, will find a large circle of readers; yet few would care to argue that it is a good book. It is, however, a goodish film in verbal guise. . . . Mr. Farson is not a literary artist but a verbal snaphooter. His technique is the jerky, episodic technique of the camera, and he knows how to get the queer diverting slants, tilts, foreshortenings, distortions, and out-of-focus effects that the camera can give. Mr. Farson mixes well with all sorts of people and situations. This involvement is the secret of his limited success; he has yet to combine it with the art of detachment." L. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 13 '40 360w

"A piece of reporting which can be recommended as both entertaining and informative." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 152:218 F 22 '41 1000w

"Mr. Farson has covered the continent widely, superbly. He has done something which I think has not been done before; he has presented Africa as a whole, presented it barbecued as an ox is, and not served up in portions embellished with racial sauces or political geography. Having no axe to grind, and being a writer, Mr. Farson has written of Africa—neither more nor less than that. Parts of the book are beautiful, parts terrifying, and all is good." Stuart Cloete

+ New Repub 104:285 F 24 '41 800w

"Any aspect of Behind God's Back, taken by itself, might be labelled superficial; and yet it is a brilliant, chaotic, contradictory, vivid, immensely readable book. The general reader—a more elusive quarry than buck or elephant—is stalked down from page one. Yes, Mr. Farson has a way with him." G. W. Stonier

FARSON, NEGLEY—Continued

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:240 S 7 '40 1400w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p1 F 16 '41 1400w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 17:80 F 15 '41 270w

Pratt p22 spring '41

Reviewed by Linton Wells
Sat R of Lit 23:6 F 22 '41 900w

"Mr. Farson writes in a fluid easy style that covers even the bare bones of statistics with grace and humor. His wide travels and cosmopolitan experiences have given him an international point of view, though, from his long residence in England, he seems, even when criticizing the English, sometimes more English than American. This book shows greater maturity of outlook and mellowness than his previous works."

+ Springfield Republican p7e F 16 '41 1000w

"Mr. Farson is a great getter of 'stories'; and he is as good at telling a story as at getting it. . . . He is no less convincing and readable when he is bringing the same virtuosity of method to the discussion of racial characteristics and systems of administration. In the 'stories' his readers benefit both by his professional skill in obtaining information and his gift for stating clearly what it involves; moreover he satisfies them that with him the story to be a good story must be to the best of his knowledge the true story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p42e Ag 31 '40 900w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

FARSON, NEGLEY. Bomber's moon; with 48 ill. by Tom Purvis. 160p $2 Harcourt [8s 6d Gallancz]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. Air raids (W) 41-13054

In text and illustration author and artist portray the life of the common people of London during blitzkrieg days, paying tribute to their courage and good temper, but not omitting mention of the just criticisms they make on the government's failures.

Booklist 38:7 S '41

"'Bomber's Moon' is not a long book. Any one could read it in an evening. And when the reading is over, one realizes that one cannot 'know' about London, one cannot imagine life there by just reading or hearing about it. One must have been there really to feel or understand anything. . . . Mr. Farson has found the right way, though, to move our hearts with pictures of England in the first months of the Blitzkrieg." Sonia Tomara

+ Books p5 Jl 6 '41 600w

Cath World 154:255 N '41 120w

Christian Century 58:959 Jl 30 '41 90w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 29 '41 350w

Reviewed by J. C. Cort
Commonweal 34:404 Ag 15 '41 390w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 66:613 Jl '41 120w

"Mr. Farson does not always praise. To Whitehall he gives no praise at all for its share in London's resistance. He is a vehement man with ardent sympathies, and he has been sickened by some of the things that happened in shelters and enraged by official failure to use the energy and goodwill of the people on the spot. . . . In this he is something less than just to Whitehall, as elsewhere he is something more than generous to the ordinary citizen. But by and large his is a faithful account of London's battle, in which he has been at pains to go about and see for himself and to talk to the people in the front line. Mr. Purvis's drawings, particularly his portraits, are perfectly in tune with a pleasant, and, to Londoners, a heart-warming book." E. A. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 4 '41 270w
N Y Times p3 Jl 13 '41 550w

"Mr. Farson is a first-rate journalist; we can recognise his picture, which is unexcited and critical (his description of conditions in the Aldwych tube is appallingly vivid), and he doesn't need the halting assistance of Mr. Tom Purvis's dull pencilings to bear him out. His is the London we have all known since last August. . . . Mr. Farson's book, in fact, is not propaganda in the bad sense of the term, and we cannot help liking the things he says about us—though he is sometimes a little sentimental, and his dialogue just misses the London accent (just as the most knowledgeable English writer misses the American)." Graham Greene

+ Spec 166:178 F 14 '41 420w

"A volume that is devoted to portraying the reaction of Londoners to destruction, death and injury from the sky. Surprising in its revelation of the manner in which the much-bombed city manages to 'carry on,' the book contains many examples of the latent British humor that has made the carrying on possible. In describing tragic scenes, which are never overplayed for the sake of arousing morbid sympathy or curiosity, Mr. Farson pays special tribute to the work of the civilian defense workers and their grim untiring struggle to save lives, property and the very institution that is England."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 360w

"The wishful thinking of Whitehall and the defeatism of our midge intellectuals apart, Mr. Farson shows us to ourselves (in a quotation from 'Life') as 'the amazing British—who will not accept even the idea of defeat.' He is highly complimentary, and yet one can never suspect flattery because his own character wins too much respect for that."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 25 '41 700w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Haym Salomon, son of liberty; ill. by Eric M. Simon. 243p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Salomon, Haym (W) 41-6262

The life story of the Polish Jew broker and financier who did so much to help the American cause during the Revolution. It is told in semi-fiction form for the older teens and adults.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

"The financial details are not too technical for a young general reader, and constant uncertainty on where the next money was coming from, and how, creates an atmosphere of suspense like that attending the outcome of battles." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 My 11 '41 360w

"The book is written in a spirited style and the pictures show sympathy and understanding." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:209 My '41 100w

"This is history warm and alive, as one wishes more of the complexities of civil government might be presented. . . . Eloquent of the part played by Jews in the cause of freedom, in smooth, flowing style." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:359 Ap 15 '41 170w

"[Haym Salomon's] story, interpreted here in semi-fictional form with the sympathetic understanding and restraint of an artist, makes drama of the less romantic side of the Revolution, that one of trade and currency, and it stirs other emotions besides patriotism." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 27 '41 480w

"It is a moving and too little-known story, which is admirably told for young people mature enough to grasp the intricacies of Revolutionary economics. The author makes them very clear, and dramatic too."

+ New Yorker 17:91 My 24 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:160 O '41

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. The last frontier. 307p $2.50 Duell

(W) 41-13229

In 1878 a group of some three hundred Cheyenne Indians, worn out with unfair conditions at the reservation in Oklahoma, departed after due warning, and started for their old home in the Powder river country. This is the story of that pitiful hegira, and of the attempts of the United States army to capture them. A hundred and fifty of them were killed, but about that number also reached their destination.

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"Mr. Fast's novel is, in sheer workmanship alone, something for the critical reader to admire. . . . In the end, however, his novel will stand or fall upon its value as a dramatic, finely presented story. It is all of that: a model, which may easily become a classic example, of what to put in and what to leave out in the writing of a historical novel." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p3 J1 27 '41 1000w

"This all but incredible story is in substance unquestionably true; and it is unfortunate that the author does not distinguish more clearly between facts supported by evidence and details supplied by his imagination. In general, his lack of clarity may be indicated as his characteristic defect; it is discernible also in the topographical map which he provides, presentable enough in appearance, but not properly coordinated with the text. Compared with most of our popular fiction, however, this book well deserves a reading." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:246 N '41 360w

"Highly recommended." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 66:615 J1 '41 90w

"Fast's writing, austere polished and austere poetic, is admirably suited to this epic tale of a desperate effort for dignified survival. . . . Struthers Burt in 'Powder River' wrote, 'In all American history there is nothing finer than the loping march of the Cheyennes up from the Indian Territory and their subsequent incredible frozen flight.' Fast has gotten to the core of this incident and made it into a rich American novel." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 J1 27 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:53 J1 26 '41 90w

Pratt p12 D '41

"By its unusual angle of presentation as well as the unusual quality of Mr. Fast's writing, [the story] becomes something new, a book to be hailed with joy and read for pure pleasure and excitement. . . . The faults are slight, nor need one stress the democratic moral of this book in urging that it be read. The point is that it is a finely written, moving, exciting story, and something quite new in the literature of our frontier." Oliver La Farge

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 J1 26 '41 1100w

"Mr. Fast has produced a really good novel, deserving the thoughtful consideration of every student of the history of the American Indian." A. W. Hoopes

+ Social Studies 32:328 N '41 550w

"A remarkably fine piece of work. In this brilliant, fast-moving historical novel, the desperate last stand of the original American is poignantly recreated." E. G. Eastman

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 600w

"It is a great story, even if the book is something short of great. Mr. Fast is not sentimental, and the agonized sympathy with which one puts the novel down is the result of what happens in its pages, not of any tears Mr. Fast sheds himself or asks us to shed. Here is a solid and memorable addition to the vast literature about the American Indian." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x autumn '41 440w

FAUBEL, ARTHUR LOUIS. Cork and the American cork industry. rev ed 151p il $1.50
Cork inst. of Am, 25 W. 43d st, N.Y.

679 Cork

41-51801

"The Secretary of the Cork Institute of America, formerly Associate Professor of Economics, New York University, presents a general exposition of cork and the cork industry. The book is based on teaching experience and association with the industry since 1933. It is not exhaustive, nor intended for the scientist, engineer, or technician, but prepared for the student and the general reader." (N Y New Tech Bks) First published in 1938, in a small edition, the book is now revised and enlarged. Index.

Booklist 38:98 N 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:39 J1 '41

FAULKNER, EDWIN JEROME. Accident-and-health insurance. 366p $4 McGraw

368.41 Insurance, Accident. Insurance, Health 41-296

"An exhaustive treatment of the purpose, functions and methods of this highly important form of insurance protection. Telling what disability insurance is, what it does, how it operates, and why, the book covers comprehensively the various ways of indemnifying financial loss due to disability, and describes the principles and practices of all phases of accident-and-health insurance underwriting." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by Alfred Manes

Am Econ R 31:192 Mr '41 320w

Booklist 37:264 F 15 '41

Management R 30:36 Ja '41 70w

"Accident and Health Insurance is primarily a functional book dealing with the principles, practices, and trends in accident and health insurance. It is both informative and critical. . . . There are many points of fact and interpretation with which this reviewer would argue, but on the whole the book should be invaluable for those concerned with the business and economic aspects of this field." Joseph Hirsh

+ Social Forces 20:284 D '41 140w

FAULKNER, HAROLD UNDERWOOD; KEPNER, TYLER, and BARTLETT, HALL. The American way of life; a history; maps by Emil Herlin. 738p il $3.50; text ed $2.20 Harper

973 U.S.—History. Democracy (W) 41-51595

High school textbook presenting social conditions, current problems and policies, and their historical backgrounds, which combine to make up the American way of living. Contains suggestions for further reading, including historical novels on the subjects. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 37:318 Mr 15 '41

"The book will be welcomed by every American high-school student as he approaches this subject in his ascent of the educational ladder. The organization of material in meaningful fashion and the wide range of illustrations will very materially aid classroom instruction." D. A. Weaver

+ School & Society 54:223 S 20 '41 550w

"The textbook here considered is not intended for pupils preparing for college but is intended rather to give a new approach to American history. This aim it fulfils in a striking and engaging manner. Since the book has in large measure achieved its declared purpose, one must not labor minor deficiencies. To the makers of textbooks the gods do not grant perfection." D. R. Mathews

+ School R 49:473 Je '41 1250w

"It is not American history as it is generally taught or as most people know it. . . . The attempt to be meaningful through vocabulary adjustment seems to promise success. Unit II,

FAULKNER, H. U.—Continued

'America Chooses a Democratic Government,' makes good, clear reading of a section of material too often a nightmare to history classes. . . This book points to a course that might well serve as the culmination of the social studies program in the high school. The courageous and imaginative teacher will find it highly challenging." R. W. Crary

+ Social Educ 5:391 My '41 900w

"Written in a dynamic style, the language of the book has been adapted especially to pupils with limited reading background and with reading difficulties. It is concrete and objective. The text is illustrated by a wealth of appropriate maps, charts, diagrams and graphs, and schematic drawings which have been especially prepared for this book by Mr. Emil Herlin of the New York Times. Undoubtedly, this book will be very useful to the student who is curious about his own environment." R. T. Solis-Cohen

+ Social Studies 32:235 My '41 320w

Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

FAULKNER, JOHN. Men working. 300p $2.50
Harcourt

(W) 41-13934

This is the story of the family of Taylors, once sharecroppers, now moved into town to work on the "W P and A." The Taylors are themselves numerous and they add other destitute families to their household. Then the WPA lays the men off and they fail to pay the rent or the instalments on the radio; the sanitary arrangements are nil and they have to depend on a public fountain for water supply. Some of them die, some leave town, the others continue to drift along, hoping listlessly for work on the "W P and A."

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

"You can't just say about John Faulkner's novel, 'Men Working,' that you don't like it. What you really mean is that you find his subject matter distasteful. For in spite of this antipathy or because of it, perhaps, the book and the characters stick with you. You remember the Taylors the way you remember the Lesters in 'Tobacco Road.' They're like a loathsome disease you can't shake off." Rose Feld

Books p6 Ag 10 '41 650w

"A first novel, but a thoroughly mature one."

+ Christian Century 58:1007 Ag 13 '41 60w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester
Commonweal 34:451 Ag 29 '41 410w

Reviewed by R. D. Minnich
Library J 66:669 Ag '41 70w

"The achievement of the book is the author's complete lack of condescension toward his characters. Their moving story is simply and amusingly told, without diagnosis or prognosis, in the terms of their own bewildered lives."

+ Nation 153:126 Ag 9 '41 80w

"The novel consists of two elements: a comic one and a pathetic one. The former is immensely successful, the latter fails to get into the dimension of living. Perhaps this is because of a total lack of drama and because the people are nailed down to a purely physiological and vegetable plane. Perhaps that, too, is the reason for the freshness and lucidity of the book's comic side. It is unusually witty and warm, not unlike Silone's 'Fontamara,' where a sly sort of humor results from a genuine love for the naïveté of the peasants. The author is the younger brother of William Faulkner." Harvey Breit

+ New Repub 105:196 Ag 11 '41 420w

"Mr. Faulkner, who happens to be a brother of William Faulkner, which is neither here nor there, has written what seems to me a remarkably sensitive study in this story which has many more obvious qualities. It lacks perfection but it has worth. It is neither Faulkner nor Caldwell nor Steinbeck nor, although not outstanding for literary originality, anybody else particularly. It is remarkable, it seems to me, in its sense and simplicity, its justness of observation, the ease with which it hits the nail so frequently squarely on the head, above all for its entirely unobtrusive compassion." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '41 800w

"For a first novel, the book is unusually sure-footed and direct, rich in its characters and their talk and a detailed knowledge of their customs. Even in his blunt frankness, Mr. Faulkner is not without sympathy for a people represented by Paw Taylor, who was 'drawn to a fate that he did not recognize as unkind. . . Not compelled by seasonal or even yearly mutations, the limits of his developments of even changes were as stagnant as the land from which he sprung. . .'" W. J. Gold

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 9 '41 500w

"Assuming that the author out of his own experiences with WPA groups in the South, has told a story which has some counterpart in fact, he has produced a work valuable beyond its fiction qualities. It ought, in that event, to induce some corrective measures, for the conditions he depicts, are unbearable in a nation of any self-respect."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 550w

"This book is a powerful indictment of an impractical method stupidly applied. In the great simplicity of Mr. Faulkner's style and language, his controlled use of words, his amazing character drawings, this book possesses a power which impresses the reader with great accumulative force." Caroline Slade

+ Survey 77:340 N '41 600w

Time 38:68 Ag 11 '41 2250w

FAULKNER, RAY; ZIEGFELD, EDWIN, and HILL, GERALD. Art today; an introduction to the fine and functional arts. 358p il $3.50
Holt

700 Art. Art industries and trade

(W) 41-8311

"This book, written for laymen and students alike, is an introduction to those arts of form and color with which we come in contact every day. . . The field comprises city planning, architecture (including the furnishing of interiors), painting, printing and the graphic arts, sculpture, and the arts of industry and commerce." (Pref) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:542 Jl 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 12 '41
100w

"This provocative study, based on a course given at the University of Minnesota, provides a valuable supplement to such books as Goldstein's Art in Everyday Life. Volume has attractive format and the illustrations are excellent." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 100w

"Although more elaborate and more penetrating studies have been made of individual subjects here included, there is no more intelligent, comprehensible and convincing all-round treatment than this of the sources of art in living and the impacts of contemporary arts upon living." Oliver Larkin

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 9 '41 410w

School & Society 53:647 My 17 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 17 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

FEARING, KENNETH. Dagger of the mind.
286p $2 Random house

41-2089

Mystery story.

"Take it any way you like, the story is a novelty in the mystery field and the total effect is most impressive." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 F 2 '41 270w

"Amateur psychologists—and this means practically everybody—will have a fine time interpreting this exciting book." Dorothy Hillier

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 320w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 22:511 D 20 '41 60w

"The artist colony described in this curious tale is located, apparently somewhere on Long Island, just where does not particularly matter. What does matter is that here are gathered some of the most eccentric and unconventional characters that can possibly be imagined. . . Taken as a whole, this book is not so much a mystery story as a study in abnormal psychology—an absorbing one at that—although the mystery element is by no means negligible." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 F 2 '41 240w

"A strange sort of murder mystery, and completely psychological. . . The story is morbidly interesting."

New Yorker 16:68 F 8 '41 10w

"The resolution of the plot, if not altogether satisfactory, is pretty sound; certainly the basic gag is a very good one, and it is only regrettable that Mr. Feeney was more interested in caricaturing the establishment than in sticking close to the development of his central twist." F. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:19 F 15 '41 220w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 167:520 N 28 '41 60w

FEENEY, LEONARD. Survival till seventeen; some portraits of early ideas. 141p $1.50 Sheed 818 41-2380

Father Feeney describes his thoughts and his growth from babyhood to the age of seventeen. "A child turns his playthings into thoughts," he says. Most of the present playthings were people—Mr Wigglesworth, the grocerman who abhorred bananas; Wing Lee, the laundryman; and the large company of guests who filled the Feeney home on Sundays.

"These are brief essays, but there is nothing slender about this sensitive, robust record of childhood recollected in tranquillity."

+ Books p41 N 2 '41 140w

"We can depend upon Leonard Feeney to do what is different, as we found out in his highly entertaining 'Fish on Friday' and 'You'd Better Come Quietly.' Consequently, it is hardly surprising to find him devoting the better part of his new book, 'Survival Till Seventeen,' to a lighthearted account of an uproarious childhood. . . Most to be appreciated by the general reader, however, are his witty descriptions of the people and events of his childhood." J. C. Moynihan

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 200w

"Only a poet could have caught so surely the wonderings and wanderings of a child's mind and have ensnared them in words so delightful. Feeney followers, who naturally expect to find in these pages many a wholesome lesson dressed up in oddly original garb, will not be disappointed."

+ Cath World 153:126 Ap '41 100w

FEIWEL, RAPHAEL JOSEPH (T. R. FYVEL, pseud). The malady and the vision; an analysis of political faith. 276p $3.50 Knopf [10s 6d Secker & Warburg]

940.5 Europe—Civilization. Political science. World politics A41-2956

An interpretation of the life and culture of Europe between the two Great wars. The situation is analyzed by a Viennese of Jewish parentage, who went to school in Switzerland and England. He discusses political conditions, describes the people and their leaders, and proposes a program for the future. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Books p31 My 11 '41 950w

"This is a moving and impressive book, even though its conclusion is a disappointing one. . . Mr. Fyvel is impatient with that slow-moving precision of scholarship which insists that accuracy of proportion is the outcome of patient exactitude of detail. But, all in all, as a panorama of the lost years, Mr. Fyvel has written the best book known to me in many a day. Yet when he has caught the mood of those years, his power deserts him. The reason, I suspect, is the simple one that Mr. Fyvel's ability is that of psychological description and not of philosophic explanation." H. J. Laski

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:548 N 30 '40 650w

"Mr. Fyvel is disappointing in both his analysis and his program. This might have been an interesting book had it come out three years ago, when it really seemed to matter who bore the responsibility for Munich or for the collapse of the French Popular Front, or for the failure to act in Manchuria. Today, it is not even really important any more to know why France collapsed. Mr. Fyvel spends many pages complaining bitterly about past mistakes. He does not even attempt to contribute anything to the future, short of reminding us not to forget the problem of the colonial peoples." P. F. Drucker

— Sat R of Lit 23:17 Ap 19 '41 100w

FELDMAN, HERMAN. Stabilizing jobs and wages through better business management. 334p $3.50 Harper

653 Employment management. Industry—Organization, control, etc. Efficiency, Industrial. Wages 40-33538

Discussion of the ideas and methods by means of which business management has improved and can continue to improve the stability of employment. The author considers several main methods: regularizing employment by the control of "demand" thru market research and distribution planning; balancing the work schedule; regularizing employment thru proper labor management; and the diversification of industries within a community. Index.

"Timely and well documented." F. J. Roethlisberger

+ Ann Am Acad 214:248 Mr '41 600w

Pratt p14 spring '41

"Dr. Feldman has rendered a signal service by his thoughtful analysis and systematic presentation of various methods successfully used by many different concerns in varied lines of industry to give workers steadier jobs and earnings." Elizabeth Brandeis

+ Survey G 30:89 F '41 450w

FELKER, CHARLES AURAND. Shop mathematics. 380p il $2.20 Bruce pub.

621.75 Mathematics. Machine shop practice 41-51596

"The material in this book has been assembled for use in vocational schools and vocational departments of general high schools. An effort has been made to treat the material so that it can be understood by the average high-school student, and at the same time the requirements of industry have been held in mind. Throughout the book, shop mathematics is correlated with shop practice by means of practice material, questions on shop practice, and descriptive matter." Pref.

Booklist 37:320 Mr 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:43 Jl '41

FELT, EPHRAIM PORTER. Plant galls and gall makers. 364p 344il $4 Comstock pub. co.

632.2 Galls (botany) 41-1073

"An aid to the identification of insect galls, and an explanation of the relations of gall

FELT, E. P. Continued
producers and plant hosts. Common names are used; drawings and photographs of both galls and hosts. Bibliography: p.339-340. "This work is an extended revision, a rewritten version with much additional matter, of the author's 'Key to American insect galls' which appeared as New York State Museum bulletin #200 in 1917." Booklist

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41
School & Society 52:640 D 14 '40 60w

FELT, EPHRAIM PORTER. Pruning trees and shrubs. 237p il $2 Judd

631.542 Pruning (W) 41-8470

"In concise, understandable chapters and paragraphs [the author] gives instruction for meeting the special requirements of a great many kinds of plants, especially notable being his explanations of the reasons for the advice he gives. 'Tree repair,' one of the 12 chapters, is eloquent of the advances made in recent years in this branch of arboriculture, and its instructions regarding storm-damaged and wrecked trees are an especially interesting up-to-date item. A large number of photographs and pen drawings add greatly to the interest and practical value of the book." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 38:4 S '41

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon
Books p9 Je 22 '41 30w

"A subject that has been treated by many authoritative writers, but this contribution to the voluminous literature is exceptionally satisfactory." + Springf'd Republican p12 Je 12 '41 120w

FENNER, PHYLLIS R., ed. There was a horse; folktales from many lands; with il. by Henry C. Pitz. 282p $2 Knopf

Horses—Legends and stories (W) 41-10472

Collection of sixteen stories about horses, selected from the folk literature of many lands—from Albania, Spain, Russia, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary, among others. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"Mr. Pitz's galloping, rearing, curvetting steeds, whether in Scandinavia or among the Basques, are all taking part in something vast and grand—though the most lovable and tender of these tales, 'The Mud Pony,' from Frances Olcott's 'Red Indian Fairy Book,' is grand in spirit rather than in scene." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 16 '41 320w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:375 D '41 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 18:29 Ja '42 70w

"This is a collection for the fairy-tale age and the hero-story age, a book that would be even better to own than to check from the library." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:848 O 1 '41 150w

"The collection as a whole is heavy. Henry C. Pitz has done the illustrations and page decorations, all forceful and very artistic." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:848 O 1 '41 70w

"Children can rarely have enough of what they like. Eagerly boys and girls ransack the library shelves for books to satisfy their particular interests. Tales of horses are always in demand and 'There Was a Horse', with its sixteen folk tales, in each of which a horse plays a leading part, will find a warm welcome among readers from 9 to 12. This collection has the advantage of adding variety to the reading of those children who know only the realistic horse story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 N 8 '41 210w

FENTON, ALFRED H. Dana of the Sun; il. by Leon D'Emo. 278p $2 Farrar

B or 92 Dana, Charles Anderson—Juvenile literature (W) 41-15033

"Especially interesting for the background of Dana's experiences—his life on a New England farm, the Brook Farm experiment, in which he had a part, and the importance of his work with Horace Greeley. His comments, as a newspaper correspondent in Paris during the uprising at the time of the abdication of Louis Philippe, are not totally foreign to present day experiences. The political situation, the panics, and the war between the states reflect the times; while the story of his newspaper career gives not only a cross section of American journalism but also an account of a unique American. Junior and senior high school." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 38:115 D 1 '41

"Charles Anderson Dana lives in history, not merely because he was one of the titanic figures of his time, but because he was what might be called 'the newspaper man's newspaper man,' just as his paper, 'The Sun,' was during his editorship 'the newspaper man's newspaper.' Here is his biography, written simply, concisely and accurately." Stanley Walker

+ Books p9 N 2 '41 430w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:380 D '41 180w

"The author, a newspaperman himself, has made this an interesting biography for high school students. Recommended for boys and girls of twelve to sixteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:160 O '41

FERBER, EDNA. Saratoga trunk. 352p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 41-51972

Life in New Orleans and Saratoga in the 1880s, as seen thru the lives of Clint Maroon, once a Texas cowboy, and his beloved Clio, the daughter of a New Orleans aristocrat and his mistress, a beautiful adventuress. Driven from New Orleans because she killed her lover, Clio's mother fled to France and there brought up her daughter. After her mother's death Clio, devastatingly beautiful and outrageously clever, returned to New Orleans, determined to marry a wealthy man. There she met and loved Clint Maroon. In Saratoga, where Clint went to play the races, and where Clio joined him, they met the Morgans and Vanderbilts and other railroad barons, and Clint decided he would make his fortune in railroads rather than horses. Sixty years later, when Clint was eighty-nine and had given away most of his enormous wealth he tried to tell his life story to the press, but nobody believed him—nobody but his still lovely Clio.

"The novel wears too much make-up: Clio is play-acting too often, Clint is too stagey a Texan, and the millionaires at Saratoga are comedians—not people of power. Despite Mrs. Bellop's breezy candor, despite the delectable food and the charming clothes, despite Clio's Parisian turn of phrase, there is throughout an unmistakable trace of musical comedy in this prose." Edward Weeks

Atlantic D '41 420w

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"One closes 'Saratoga Trunk' with the feeling of having lived in a rich and exciting world, peopled by fascinating and exciting characters no less real because they are eccentric and romantic. The secret of Miss Ferber's achievement is rooted in many things—her vitality and belief in the people she creates; her meticulous care with all the details of background and characterization; her unfailing sense of drama. Possibly this adds up to genius. At any rate, 'Saratoga Trunk' will be relished and remembered." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 N 2 '41 1150w

"[The book has] not, obviously, the ingredients of a pretty romance; but in Miss Ferber's skillful hands, the story, for all its worldliness, acquires so much vigor and color that it has indubitable entertainment value. It may be garish, theatrical, and no more subtle than a circus, yet the sparkle is genuine. Nothing of Miss Ferber's could ever be tawdry." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '41 550w

"An utterly delicious concoction. This expertly written, absorbingly entertaining satire likewise adroitly contrasts the ideals of a plutocratic America gradually emerging into a true democracy. A 'must' book for all libraries." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 66:950 N 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

New Repub 105:708 N 24 '41 80w

"The most cautious reviewer can predict skyrocket success for 'Saratoga Trunk'—and not feel that he is getting out on a limb, either. Few of Edna Ferber's vastly popular novels of the past decade have arrived on the book counters with more fanfare. In abridged form it has been serialized by a national magazine, and it will be seen on stage and screen as soon as the ponderous machinery for producing an A spectacle can begin grinding it out. 'Saratoga Trunk' is what is known in a field of human endeavor only slightly less hazardous than the publishing business as a natural." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p4 N 2 '41 900w

"The author draws a sound, truly patriotic moral from her story, but it won't disturb anyone excessively. As flashing and agreeable a yarn as Miss Ferber has fashioned for some time, it should be a walkaway for La Dietrich and Mr. Gary Cooper." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:94 N 8 '41 180w

"It is absorbing entertainment. There's everything in it but the kitchen stove—no, that's in, too, and the New Orleans and Saratoga dishes cooked on it will make your mouth water. . . Miss Ferber serves up some very nice phrases, too." Fairfax Downey

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 N 22 '41 700w

"The story is in itself a good yarn, but its real value lies in its revival of another phase of American growth and national character. This is a glimpse of America in the making, romanticized to be sure, but none the less worthwhile because it is written to catch the public fancy. Clio and Clint are dynamic and fascinating characters, but the world which was their proscenium is more fascinating still."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 550w

"Miss Ferber's noisy, flashing manner never really gives you a period, but always makes you enjoy the fraud. Saratoga Trunk is so neatly made that the scenarists need only bracket the non-dialogue as stage direction, and call it a half-day's work."

Time 38:112 N 24 '41 250w

FERNSWORTH, LAWRENCE A., ed. Dictators and democrats. 375p $3 McBride

932.2 Statesmen. Dictators (W) 41-12303

Portraits of many of the famous men of our times, drawn by journalists who have had interviews with them. Some of the sketches were written for this volume, others are reprinted from earlier works. Among the interviewed are: Adolf Hitler; Hermann Wilhelm Goering; Benito Mussolini; Winston Churchill; Eamon De Valera; Henri Philippe Petain; Thomas Garrigue Masaryk; Alexander of Yugoslavia; Josef V. Stalin; Kemal Ataturk; Chiang Kai-shek; Manuel Quezon; Franklin D. Roosevelt. The writers include: Dorothy Thompson; Lothrop Stoddard; Emil Ludwig; Ralph Ingersoll; Louis Adamie; Vincent Sheean; Carleton Beals.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

"Mr. Fernsworth explains in his foreword that he has gathered this volume for two purposes—first, to maintain a sense of continuity and perspective, showing these personalities in their relation to the present, to the future and to each other; second, to interest students in journalism in the technique of interviews and portrait writing. The book is interesting, although some of the stories appear outdated by the events." Sonia Tomara

Books p8 Je 8 '41 370w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:193 O '41 20w

N Y Times p7 J1 13 '41 550w

"An interesting and valuable background book."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 7 '41 60w

"What make this really enjoyable book especially worthy are short introductions to each of the interviews written by Mr. Fernsworth with brilliance and political insight. Here one finds the necessary background data on all the great men. And one also finds some sidelights on the interviewers themselves. Since history is often no more than events and men seen through the eyes of the observer, one must not forget to view this observer when judging events and men. 'Dictators and Democrats' in this sense is not only a lively history of our times but also a monument to the foreign-correspondence interviewer who has recently emerged as the 'king of all journalists.'" H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Je 28 '41 430w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 J1 '41

FERRARS, ELIZABETH. Murder of a suicide. 276p $2 Doubleday

41-25822

Detective story.

"Once you become reconciled to a slight goofiness in the characters, you'll find an interesting enough puzzle here, and you probably won't guess right about the death of Edgar Prees, curator of the Asslington Botanical Gardens. . . It's always dangerous to make up your mind too quickly in a murder-or-suicide plot." Will Cuppy

Books p22 D 14 '41 180w

"You will enjoy seeing these three sleuths pit their wits against each other, even though you may find the plot a bit overcomplicated." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p11 D 21 '41 150w

New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 50w

FERRARS, ELIZABETH. Rehearsals for murder. 275p $2 Doubleday

41-6692

Detective story.

"Watch George closely—he may be a comer in the sleuthing field. By the same token, E. Ferrars ought to go places, with this first promising item off the chest." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 30 '41 90w

"The story presents an interesting problem which is unnecessarily complicated by the introduction of several eccentrics who appear to have been dragged in just to make it more difficult." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '41 110w

"Giddy and amoral lot of British artists etc. give Toby Dyke & Co. some tough moments in bizarre and befuddled yarn. Exotic."

Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 29 '41 40w

FERRERO, GUGLIELMO. The reconstruction of Europe; Talleyrand and the Congress of Vienna, 1814-1815; tr. by Theodore R. Jaeckel. 351p $3.50 Putnam

940.27 Vienna. Congress, 1814-1815. Europe —Politics. Talleyrand-Périgord, Charles Maurice de, prince de Bénévent

(W) 41-14380

"This volume is a translation from the French of the second volume of the trilogy

FERRERO, GUGLIELMO—Continued

in which Professor Ferrero is seeking to learn from the revolutionary world wars of 1789-1815 useful lessons to guide us in the present series of revolutionary world wars. Of the three volumes . . . the first was translated into English several years ago as 'The Gamble,' and the third has not yet appeared in the original. . . . The volume at hand deals with the real, if precarious, settlement of the world crisis arrived at in the Congress of Vienna. The third volume will apparently be more purely philosophical, and will sum up the lessons Professor Ferrero wishes to teach." Sat R of Lit

"I believe that this very fine piece of historical partisanship and special pleading should be scrutinized with the utmost rigor. Taken with proper care, it will, like other dangerous drugs, prove extremely stimulating." Albert Guerard

+ Books p5 S 14 '41 1400w

"It may be possible to build a brighter and newer world tomorrow. It may be advisable to aim at rebuilding with the best of tried materials. To the reader of either view, Professor Ferrero's latest book offers a profound and stimulating experience, marred only by unnecessary details of revelry and debauchery during the Congress of Vienna." C. W. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 26 '41 650w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 34:500 S 12 '41 240w

"Mr. Ferrero lives in the past with the same intensity as in the present. He approaches with a fresh astonishment a part of history which has been reviewed very often as if it had never been told before and as if the things he tells of could after all have happened quite differently. There is no way of judging our own era except by comparison. There is no way to understand and vivify the past except in the light of our own experiences. To be sure, Mr. Ferrero does not ignore the abyss between the age of Talleyrand and ours, but he is also aware of a mechanism of politics and forces, we might even say a mechanism of the human soul, which remains the same through the ages." Golo Mann

Nation 153:674 D 27 '41 1100w

New Repub 105:381 S 22 '41 80w

"In this important book an eminent historian discusses how, after twenty-two years of Revolutionary-Napoleonic war, Europe succeeded in making a genuine, fruitful peace. The translation has its blemishes. . . . Alas, the prescription with which Ferrero would treat the pathological fears and violences of today is less convincing than his masterly diagnosis of the disease. . . . The reviewer closes this valuable book with a fear that perhaps the real evil lies deeper. Perhaps we must wait for genuine peace until the revolutionary delusion of greatly increasing human happiness by sweeping changes in the laws has subsided." Hoffman Nickerson

N Y Times p1 S 14 '41 800w

"The analogy may seem overslick, but Ferrero's study of Napoleonic Europe is undoubtedly profound and original."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 60w

"The Reconstruction of Europe' should prove a book worth while. It tells skillfully and mostly from the sources the story of one of the most fascinating assemblies of statesmen and diplomats ever held, and one on which we are extraordinarily well informed. Professor Ferrero's love of superlatives . . . and his tendency to draw grandiose conclusions have aroused the distrust of his more cautious colleagues among professional historians. But there is no doubt that he has mastered the art of holding his readers." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ag 30 '41 800w

Time 38:68 S 8 '41 1500w

Reviewed by W. L. Langer

Yale R n s 31:411 winter '42 700w

FETTA, EMMA LOU. Dressed to kill. 288p $2 Doubleday

41-7798

Detective story.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

"Miss Fetta stresses the puzzle interest and leaves you gasping with a final surprise. She has been a bit careless with her wordage in spots." Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 18 '41 170w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 My 18 '41 210w

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 24 '41 40w

FETZER, HERMAN (JAKE FALSTAFF, pseud). The big snow; Christmas at Jacoby's Corners; il. by David Hendrickson, 146p $1.75 Houghton

818 Christmas

41-22668

This companion volume to the author's Jacoby's Corners (Book Review Digest, 1940) describes the joys of a country Christmas in Ohio, where a thirteen-year-old boy went to spend the holidays with his German-Swiss relatives.

"Because pure happiness transcends time and place, and because a good childhood is shared by all those who were children then, there are people all over the United States who will read this record as if they had written it out of their own recollected joy. There will be people for years to come who will so read it. There have been this year more books about Christmas than for years past: some will scarce outlive a Christmas card and some, lasting through the year, take on new life with each succeeding holiday season. This is such a book: it well may be that it is already on its way to become a minor classic of American literature." M. L. Becker

+ Books p22 D 7 '41 450w

"The genuineness of the author's sympathy with small-town and rural American life and his robust, realistic humor make this a good library purchase." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 70w

"A rather lovely little book, of places and things that may still be there but cannot be proved simply because we cannot go back again." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:676 N 17 '41 360w

"Many readers who have shared some of Lemuel's and Jake Falstaff's boyhood experiences will find 'The Big Snow' a mine of blissful memories." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p25 D 14 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 120w

FEUCHTWANGER, LION. The devil in France; my encounter with him in the summer of 1940; tr. from the German by Elisabeth Abbott, 265p $2.75 Viking

940.547244 World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons, French. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, German (W) 41-2137

An account of the author's imprisonment in French concentration camps during the summer of 1940. He finally was helped to escape and is now living in New York.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic F '42 230w

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by Virgilia Sapieha

Books p3 N 30 '41 750w

Christian Century 58:1546 D 10 '41 160w

"A sincere, moving story. While the book does not make light, pleasant reading, neither does it dwell on cruelty or mistreatment. There are no bitter complaints, no accusations; but there is contempt for that Devil in France—a friendly, polite Devil, who shows only dilatory red tape and slothful indifference to suffering." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 120w

"The Devil in France" possesses qualities beyond comparison. Among many others there is in this narrative the quality of serenity, of simplicity and genuineness. The sincerity, the uncompromising sincerity—"the prerequisite of all literary composition," according to the author—makes this book a document and a source which would interest the psychologists of the celebrated author of 'Oppermanns' and 'Power.'" Milos Safranek

+ N Y Times p9 D 7 '41 850w

New Yorker 17:107 N 29 '41 40w

"Lion Feuchtwanger says: 'Had I not been thinking always of the ludicrous aspects of my own plight, or of the plight of the others, I could not have survived that depressing, degrading experience without spiritual harm.' This wise philosophy makes 'The Devil in France' the most human, moving account of Gallic prison life, and a document of lasting value." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 25:11 Ja 3 '42 650w

Time 38:98 D 8 '41 500w

FEUERLEIN, WILLY, and HANNAN, ELIZABETH. Dollars in Latin America; an old problem in a new setting. 102p $1.50 Council on foreign relations

332.67 Investments, Foreign. Debts, Public. Latin America—Economic policy. U.S.—Foreign relations—Latin America 41-3398

"[This book] treats such problems as causes of former defaults, exchange control, dollars for hemisphere defense, distinction between direct and portfolio investments, whether the unpaid old debts should be written off or forgotten or the resumption of their payment required before new loans are extended, etc. It discusses the government policies affecting alien investments and the new directions in our Latin-American policy." (Living Age) Bibliography. Index.

"The principal merit of the volume is that, with a notable absence of partiality and a minimum injection of opinion, it sets before the reader a well-rounded picture of the main aspects of the problem. It is not a book for persons wishing a full analysis of American investments in particular countries, but it should be useful as a primer on the economic bases of closer hemisphere coöperation." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Am Econ R 31:379 Je '41 600w

"The volume is sane and impartial; the authors appreciate and discuss both sides of the problems that have arisen. One phase of the subject which they largely neglected, however, may be of greater importance than the authors have realized, namely, the record of the investment bankers of the United States in the 1920's. The truth, if set forth fully and judiciously, probably would be on the whole helpful in the development of harmonious relations. In this reviewer's opinion, many Americans, both North and South, have generalized too freely on the basis of certain instances of bribery and excessive profits. A sober narrative of the whole story—with due attention to bond issues previously distributed in European markets—would correct misconceptions and possibly change attitudes in respect to both government bonds and direct investments. The whole subject demands fuller treatment." J. F. Rippy

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:597 Je '41 220w

Reviewed by W. T. Moran

Ann Am Acad 216:194 J1 '41 230w

Booklist 37:318 Mr 15 '41

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 16 '41 140w

Foreign Affairs 19:688 Ap '41 40w

Reviewed by Edgar Turlington

J Pol Econ 49:774 O '41 500w

Living Age 360:398 Je '41 200w

Reviewed by Emile Bruguere

Survey G 30:483 S '41 270w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Guns from Powder valley. 252p $2 Morrow

Western story.

41-4259

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"Killing, kidnaping, hearty lingo and real Western love." Will Cuppy

Books p13 Mr 16 '41 80w

"A rather ordinary Western yarn, with little deviation from an established pattern. It is fairly well written, but, on the whole, is inferior to Mr. Field's best work." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '41 180w

Springfd Republican p7e S 28 '41 110w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. The man from Thief river. 246p $2 Morrow

Western story.

40-33360

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 22 '40 160w

Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 30w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN (MRS ARTHUR PEDERSON). Christmas time; il. by [the author]. [32p] 50c Macmillan

811 Christmas poetry

41-23514

Small book containing eleven Christmas poems for children. A few of the poems have been previously published in The New York Herald Tribune, or included in the author's earlier books.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 D 14 '41 40w

"Recommended for Christmas exhibits in the children's rooms and for Christmas stockings." Irene Smith

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 D 14 '41 320w

FIELDS, JOSEPH, and CHODOROV, JEROME. My sister Eileen; a comedy based on the stories by Ruth McKenney; with a foreword by George S. Kaufman. 187p il $2 Random house

812

(W) 41-51627

Comedy about two nice girls from Columbus, Ohio, who came to New York looking for jobs. They rented a Greenwich Village basement apartment, blissfully unaware that it had formerly been occupied by Violet, a lady of questionable morals. Their difficulties began at once. Based on short stories written for the New Yorker by Ruth McKenney.

Booklist 37:355 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p14 Je 1 '41 120w

"My Sister Eileen" is based on the New Yorker stories of Ruth McKenney, and it is a very funny play. George S. Kaufman, who doesn't do them very often, has written a short introduction." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '41 120w

FINEMAN, IRVING. Jacob; an autobiographical novel. 295p $2.50 Random house

Jacob, the patriarch—Fiction 41-21279

A retelling of the story of Isaac, Jacob and Esau, Rachel and Joseph. The tale is told in the first person, in the words of Jacob addressing his young son Joseph. The story ends with Jacob's return to Canaan, and with the deaths of Rachel and Isaac.

FINEMAN, IRVING—Continued

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic N '41 240w
Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"'Jacob,' is one of those unusual novels that deals only with the essentials of any man's life and yet is everywhere as fresh and pithy with insight as if these things had never been written about before. As I have perhaps indicated Mr. Fineman's kind of writing, put down with loving skill, is something to talk about." Milton Rugoff
+ Books p4 O 12 '41 900w

"The novel has some lovely passages portraying the depth and beauty of a father's love and delight in his new-born child." G. F. T.
+ Churchman 156:18 Ja 1 '42 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"Despite some primitive frankness, Mr. Fineman is not trying to recreate a primitive society or a hero at home therein. His Jacob knows the mind of the twentieth century; and though some of his thoughts, particularly on the divinity within men, seem far from his ancient character, most of the more central ones are comforting, wise thoughts." O. B. White

+ Commonweal 35:96 N 14 '41 360w
New Repub 105:630 N 10 '41 60w

"With language deeply attuned to his subject-matter, possessed of an austere lyrical beauty, as lovely at times as the Psalms or the lamentations of Job, Fineman re-creates the character of Jacob and the men and women with whom his life was bound. His concentration throughout the book is on characterization rather than background, and whatever action he introduces has significance in terms of human strength or weakness rather than geography or calendar." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '41 1200w

"Mr. Fineman is a skillful novelist who can write with dignity and passion. He quotes long passages from the King James Bible that sound magnificent, and he has established a relationship between Jacob's story and the story of every man, yet he is obviously laboring under enormous handicaps: first, the Bible itself; second, Thomas Mann. Worth reading anyway."

+ New Yorker 17:86 O 4 '41 110w

"The book is beautifully written. The strength and poetry of the style are characteristically Mr. Fineman's; his work is not bolstered but rather ornamented by the Biblical rhythms which arise naturally, here, out of the subject." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 O 11 '41 650w

FINKELSTEIN, LOUIS. Religions of democracy. See Religions of democracy

FINNEY, BURNHAM. Arsenal of democracy; how industry builds our defense. (Whittlesey house publication) 284p il $2.50 McGraw

355.26 U.S.—Defenses, U.S.—Industries and resources. Industrial mobilization
(W) 41-6458

A popularly written survey of the part played by American industry in building up our defenses. The author is editor of the American Machinist. Partial contents: Starting from scratch; The industrial mobilization plan; Bottlenecks; The all-important machine tool; New plants; What about labor? Wanted: trained men; Essential materials; Plane help from Detroit; OPM; Priorities; Trying to keep prices down.

Booklist 37:540 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:876 J1 '41 20w

"There is much in this book for the lay public and the industrial executive. The facts given and general tenor are such as to tell the true story without mincing words and yet at the same time to convey an attitude of confidence and build public morale." R. S. Schultz
+ Living Age 360:393 Je '41 800w

Management R 30:272 J1 '41 180w

"There has been no attempt to make this an exhaustive book, but it covers a great deal of ground in a manner that gives the reader confidence in the facts as presented and in his country's ability to measure up to the titanic job that is being done." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p6 Je 1 '41 650w

FINNEY, THEODORE MITCHELL. Hearing music. 354p il $3.50; text ed $2.50 Harcourt 780.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 41-10515

This book is intended for the non-musician who wishes help in "the art of active listening." Part one: The listener's technic, contains chapters on tone-color, rhythm, harmony, and various forms of music; part two discusses music as literature, as a method of expressing thought; and part three: Independent listening, analyses several pieces of music including Act 1 of the Valkyrie, Brahms' First Symphony, and a Bach Cantata. Index.

Booklist 38:31 O 1 '41

"Professor Finney—he functions at the University of Pittsburgh, by the way—is careful to emphasize the fact that you can't learn music by reading a book. This is true enough, but the reader who knows a very little music to begin with unquestionably will learn much about it by reading this book. Incidentally, if he has any appreciation of English, he will at the same time enjoy the extraordinary cleverness and skill of the presentation." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p10 S 14 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '41

Reviewed by H. A. Carpenter
Library J 66:667 Ag '41 70w

"Mr. Finney has had wide experience as a teacher. . . The ideas he presents here have taken form during his work in the class room. He does not believe in selling the reader a lot of extraneous information, but adheres closely to the subject. . . The writing itself is direct, simple, unvarnished. Mr. Finney employs few literary graces. He is much too immersed in the major theme of his book. For those who are willing to work at it, Mr. Finney can help along the path to 'active listening.'" Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p38 O 26 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

FIRBANK, THOMAS. I bought a mountain. 320p $2.75 Countryman [8s 6d Harrap]
630.9429 Sheep. Agriculture—Wales

(W) 41-5030

After two years of work for a Canadian fruit cannery the author decided that his bent was for country living. Going to North Wales he purchased a 2,400 acre mountain sheep farm, within sight of Snowdon, and settled in to become a working farmer. He describes his contacts with the Welsh farmers, their delightful characteristics, and his wife's part in the struggle to make a living, but mainly the phases of sheep-farming, and the beauties of his farm and the surrounding country.

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

"An extremely readable book, not so hard on the back as actual farming. For with all this man's gifts is one for pure literature. He can transmute experience into emotion so directly that nothing is lost in thinking it out, and when that happens it creates literary style. 'I Bought a Mountain' is no week-enders' work; it is on its way to become a classic of farming. There have not been many in all the years since Theocritus." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 Mr 30 '41 550w

"A book most remarkably lacking in egotism of any kind, and also remarkably full of interest in subjects which might not be expected to appeal to the general reader but which are so well written of that they do attract and interest consistently. . . The sheep farm is the heart of the thing, and Mr. Firbank writes about it so well that he seems to open a door into the world of this all-important life that goes on in the mountains of Wales."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 S 3 '40 220w

"Mr. Firbank's pictures of his grim yet glorious Welsh hills will arouse the nostalgia of any mountain addict. But still better are his accounts of the lives, characters, and conversations of his Welsh neighbors. They are grand, genuine folk, though more than a little suspicious of 'foreigners,' and it speaks volumes for the author as a man that despite his totally different background he has been so fully accepted into their community. Mr. Firbank at times grows eloquent about his bucolic life, but he does not gloss over its risks and hardships." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 152:506 Ap 26 '41 240w

"Fresh with the air of a wild and formidable and rewarding outdoors."

+ New Repub 104:610 Ap 28 '41 60w

"Mr. Thomas Firbank's book is marred by no muddy nor fanciful contemplations. . . One of the pleasant and sensible things about this book is its attractive drawing of the Welsh character. He had heard the usual stories about Taffy the thief and the Celtic boycotts, but he found himself among kind, generous neighbours." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:238 S 7 '40 1000w

"Mr. Firbank writes with power and distinction, conveying at once the actuality of the working day and the spell and mystery of the mountains, of a place where present and immemorial past are linked in unbroken continuity." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p3 S 21 '41 550w

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 26 '41 130w

"Mr. Firbank has made a book remarkable for its energy of style, its feeling for atmosphere, its receptivity to the moods of wild places and its extremely keen observation of wild life. . . The book is completely remote from the category of week-end chatter-idylls in which the townie plays at farming." H. E. Bates

+ Spec 165:200 Ag 23 '40 420w

Springf'd Republican p12 My 2 '41 550w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:440 Ag '41 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p400 Ag 17 '40 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

FIRESTONE, CLARK BARNABY. Flowing south. 263p il 33 McBride

917.7 Rivers—U.S. Mississippi valley, U.S.—Description and travel (W) 41-15850

An account of more than 5000 miles of travel on the inland waters of the Mississippi and Missouri river systems, and some seventy-five tributaries to them. The author traveled mainly on packet boats and government launches, and his journeys included all the territory from St Paul to New Orleans. Bibliographical notes. Index.

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"Despite the modern vigor and vividness of Mr. Firestone's writing there is a casual and easygoing gentleness running throughout the book; something that characterized the sprightly old-time essayists but which today has been dropped by most writers of non-fiction. . . The book is well executed and the steamboat and river photographs are arresting." G. L. Eskew

+ Books p5 S 28 '41 750w

"There's a grist of smooth sailing and pleasant reading in this book for both river rat and general reader." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 25 '41 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '41

"Several years ago Mr. Firestone published 'Sycamore Shores,' a book full of charm and rhythm, in which he explored the tributaries of the Ohio. In this new book he turns to larger valleys. . . 'Flowing South' is closer to journalism than was 'Sycamore Shores,' but it is good and, in the main, veracious journalism." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p54 D 7 '41 1050w

"For those who sometime intend to obey that impulse and take a leisurely trip on a Mississippi steamer, Mr. Firestone's catalog of places and events of history connected with them might prove of value; there is a good map on the end covers and 22 excellent photographs. But for those who wish to understand the river and its people, the mere recounting of distances and facts is not enough. The books of Ben Lucien Burman are ideal in this respect, especially 'Big River to Cross.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 26 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

FISCHER, MRS HELEN (FIELD). Flower family album; family histories, by Helen Field Fischer and portraits by Gretchen Fischer Harshbarger. 130p $2.50 Univ. of Minn.

580.84 Botany—Pictorial works. Flowers (W) 41-12828

An arrangement by families of flowers, weeds, and a few vegetables. A full page of illustrations in black and white is devoted to each family, with accompanying explanatory text on opposite pages. Index.

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

"Only people who are not at all interested in flowers and botany, or else those who are already real experts on the subject, can fail to find this book most readable, interesting, helpful and attractive. . . It is most useful as an introduction to the fuller works of identification and classification. . . Use of the album undoubtedly makes it much easier to use the big books and it furnishes an agreeable, direct and gentle instruction in the increasingly popular field of horticulture and botany." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 34:355 Ag 1 '41 320w

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

FISCHER, LOUIS. Men and politics; an autobiography. 672p $3.50 Duell

E or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Europe—Politics (W) 41-51778

"We know now that 1939 was implicit in 1919. We know also that the interval between the two dates was a period of war, war carried on by concealed, non-military methods. . . The value of Louis Fischer's autobiography lies in his ability to perform the visualization for us. He is particularly rich in his memories of Leninist Russia, which he covered for many years as foreign correspondent for the Nation and other periodicals, but he also speaks with authority on Central Europe and especially on the Spanish Civil War, in which he served for a time as a member of the International Brigade." (New Yorker) Index.

"Traces of pro-Soviet bias survive in the autobiography and probably account for the fact that the author, in his long book, finds no space for the Ukrainian famine of 1932-1933 or for many other atrocities of this phase of Soviet development. In general, however, Mr. Fischer's work stands far above the ordinary journalistic autobiography in permanent value, because it is written by a man who can appraise as well as describe the significance of the European tragic era with which he has been in such close contact." W. H. Chamberlin

FISCHER, LOUIS—Continued

+ — Atlantic Je '41 240w

Booklist 37:463 Je 1 '41

"It is an honest book he has written, in the sense that even what it leaves out is honestly revealing of the man who wrote it. . . His book is absorbing reading. Its pictures, especially those of individuals, are rich and clear. It is studded with minor news stories. . . Here is a fellow traveler who came home to find himself substantially where he had started from. The end of this book, like its beginning, is a protest against poverty, tyranny and dishonesty, with an added warning that Fascism means these things and war." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p3 My 11 '41 1350w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 24 '41 500w

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 155:21 Ag '41 260w

"This is one of the most illuminating of the journalistic autobiographies that have appeared in recent years. . . In Russia, where he spent many years, his experience was particularly rich. Because of his sympathy for the Soviet experiment, he enjoyed privileges and acquaintances almost unique for a foreigner. Only in the late thirties did he turn against the Stalin régime, and even now he seems to harbor certain blind spots—for example regarding the great government-induced famine of 1932-33. He also joined in the defense of Loyalist Spain, and some of his best pages are on this tragic story." R. G. Woolbert

+ — Foreign Affairs 20:193 O '41 110w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 140w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft

Living Age 360:490 Jl '41 1050w

"So Louis Fischer has come home to the America he never knew and has written his story of the Europe he knew too well. Correspondents are becoming as important as diplomats, and both write books. But Louis Fischer's 'Men and Politics' is unique both in its insights and its intimacies. It is unique also in Louis Fischer's own writing, for its flashes of wit, its abundance of personal anecdote—about almost everybody except Louis Fischer himself. The old Puritan!" Lewis Gannett

+ Nation 152:559 My 10 '41 1700w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:669 My 12 '41 1300w

"Apart from the hangover of early pro-Soviet sympathy the book is an extremely independent, straightforward, well-informed record of the pageant of modern European history. It has been the author's opportunity to range widely, and this adds color and variety without detracting from the depth and penetration of his writing. Just because he has never been tied down to the end of a telegraph or telephone wire he has possessed more physical possibility of turning over in his mind the historical significance of the events which he has seen. And he has made excellent use of this possibility." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p3 My 11 '41 1750w

"This book is straight reporting and political analysis. It is without passion, almost without personality, as if Mr. Fischer had consciously stricken himself from his own pages. He tells us nothing of his childhood and early life—a refreshing variation from other recent autobiographies. He knows that all that interests us is his work as a shrewd, observant journalist over the last twenty years, and that is all he cares to put in his book. Highly recommended." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:86 My 10 '41 250w

Pratt p6 autumn '41

"This is an exciting and important book, one of the most important that any foreign correspondent has written. No other book that I have read gives so intimate, full-bodied, and memorable a picture of Europe in the last twenty years. . . It is impossible in a brief review to enumerate all the virtues of so monumental a book. It is one of the most moving and valuable documents of our time and makes exciting reading from beginning to the end." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 My 10 '41 1200w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 30w

"'Men and Politics' will increase the knowledge and understanding of its readers who are emotionally or intellectually alive to the import of the international situation. It is entitled to front rank among the current multitudes of treatises and dissertations on world affairs. To travel with Mr. Fischer will increase your capacity to consider and discuss the present world travail intelligently, whether you be interventionist, isolationist or mugwump." R. B. Scandrett, Jr.

+ Survey G 30:404 Jl '41 750w

Time 37:96 My 12 '41 1650w

"Even by American standards Mr. Louis Fischer's 'Men and Politics' is slightly gargantuan. Its 640 pages are never dull—American journalists never are dull—but some compression would have added value and virtue to a book which is clearly and rightly addressed not to the expert and the pundit and a particular coterie but to the general public."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p626 D 13 '41 1600w

FISCHER, MRS MARJORIE. All on a summer's day; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 157p $2 Random house

41-13239

The adventures, humorous and otherwise, of a group of New York children, who are spending the greater part of their summer vacation in Central Park and its museums. Eddie, who wanted to be a musician, and organized a comb and harmonica band among a group of satellites, is the central character.

"All this romps along in up-to-date talk and recognizable action on the part of New York kids in the city's great old playground." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 17 '41 280w

"Some things about this story please me: the sprightliness and humor, the up-to-date feeling, and the setting in Central Park, and the portrayal of the boy musician Eddie as boyish boy. But some things are not satisfying: the people seem like caricatures instead of characters, and Eddie has more leisure for playing in the park than any young prodigy I ever heard of. Also, I think the appeal of this book is very much localized—New York children would enjoy it much more than those outside." Josephine Smith

+ — Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 80w

"This is Central Park to the life, with its easy comradeship and democratic gayety, but boys and girls are much the same in every city park and those who don't know this particular one will recognize some of their own friends in Eddie's lively companions. In Eddie, Marjorie Fischer has done successfully a difficult task, making us feel a gifted child's love and understanding of music without in any sense making a prig of him. Fritz Eichenberg's illustrations pick up the humor of the story with knowledgeable renditions of children at play and of adults in grimmer moments." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 27 '41 360w

Reviewed by Zoë Durrell

Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

FISHER, AILEEN L. Guess again! [il. by the author]. 111p $1.25 McBride

793.73 Puzzles—Juvenile literature
(W) 41-18968

Puzzles, question games, magic, and guessing games to be used for children's parties. Illustrated.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:374 D '41 20w

"Very cleverly done." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"An attractive little book which will be very popular for use in children's parties at school and at home. . . A fine item for public or home library purchase." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 66:907 O 15 '41 50w

"Forced, but amusing for a rainy day." Zoë Durrell

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 30w

FISHER, ALFRED YOUNG. Ghost in the underblows; ed. with an introd. by Lawrence Clark Powell, and designed by Alvin Lustig. 11d ed 304p $6 Ritchie, W.

811

41-2381

"The poem draws on the Bible for its structure, its rhythm, and, to a great extent, for its images. We can take the introductory word of Lawrence Clark Powell that Mr. Fisher has used 'the progression of the books of the Bible as a sort of model.' There are ten books corresponding roughly as to pattern with ten books of the Old Testament. Whereas Mr. Fisher uses a loose if prosaic iambic foot, he is much indebted to the biblical roll. The poem also holds a caravan of Old Testament prophets and warriors, and uses the images of altar and sacrifice, stones and deserts, armies and tents, walls and trumpets. The Ghost in the Underblows is divided into a series of discursive poems averaging perhaps a page in length. They could be roughly classified as poetical essays, united by a central theme, which, in the words of the introduction, is that of 'absolute disintegration.'" Poetry

"[The] poem has good lines, which seem better than they are when detached from the poems in which they appear. To make his text the author has unfortunately combined the emotional disorder of dithyrambic prophecy with the logical disorder of free association."
— + Nation 152:221 F 22 '41 120w

"The Ghost in the Underblows cannot stand up to its size; and its reach does not get beyond its form. One feels that if Mr. Fisher had not allowed it its own weight but pruned and cut it down, his poem might have had a lasting effect. Certainly the quality of his poetry improves as it goes on; the latter tenth of the book seems to have an element of control which much of the rest of it lacks. It is a poem which has substantial aspects, but its success as a whole seems to stay in the world of 'could have been.'" John Hay + — Poetry 57:391 Mr '41 650w

FISHER, GEORGE CLYDE, and LOCKWOOD, MARIAN. Astronomy. (Sciences: a survey course for colleges) 205p 11 maps $2.25; college ed $1.75 Wiley [10s 6d Chapman]

523 Astronomy

40-13497

Introduction to astronomy, written by the curator and assistant curator of the Hayden Planetarium at the American Museum of natural history. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:288 Mr 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:4 Ja '41

"'Astronomy' succeeds admirably in answering many of the questions that so often go unanswered in the oversimplified and so-called 'popular science' books. On the other hand, the ponderous and oftentimes discouraging array of mathematical formulas and other technical data abounding in many full-course textbooks on the subject are lacking. The essential concepts of the science, the method of investigation and important discoveries have been set down briefly but clearly."

+ — Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 13 '41 190w

FISHER, HARRY LINN. Rubber and its use. 128p il $2.25 Chemical pub. co.

678 Rubber

41-9356

"The author, who is Director of Organic Research of the U. S. Industrial Chemicals, Inc. and the Air Reduction Co., and formerly research chemist of the B. F. Goodrich and the U. S. Rubber companies, offers an excellent survey of the subject, covering the history of the industry, the sources, production, and properties of crude rubber, the compounding and vulcanizing of rubber (i.e. accelerators, retarders, antioxidants, reinforcing and coloring agents, &c.), manufacturing rubber (i.e. mixing rubber compounds, tires and tubes, play balls, golf balls, rubber bands, &c.), latex manufacturing processes, synthetic rubbers or elastomers, rubber derivatives, and a final chapter on reference works for supplemental reading." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Met Eng 48:148 Ag '41 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:28 Ap '41

FISHER, MRS HELEN STEVENS. A good time at your party. 290p $2 Mill

793 Games. Entertaining (W) 41-12865

Party plans, games and menus for each month of the year supplemented by a section on miscellaneous parties and another on games. Indexes.

Booklist 38:5 S '41

Christian Century 58:911 Jl 16 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

FISHER, HERBERT ALBERT LAURENS. An unfinished autobiography. 163p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

B or 92

A41-1404

"H. A. L. Fisher, historian and liberal statesman, author of Britain's present public education legislation and warden of New College, Oxford, was struck by a motor truck and died of his injuries just a year ago. He had been active in important, and delicate work in his country's service since the outbreak of war, and his ordinary official tasks had also been complicated by war conditions; but at the age of 75 he had found relaxation, through those hard days, in writing his memoirs. It is these memoirs which form this 'unfinished autobiography.'" N Y Times

"Written with a grace and naturalness that seem easy till one attempts such a task, it combines incidents, pictures, comments, vivid vignettes of Oxford characters like Pater, Jowett, Lewis Carroll, York Powell, Sewell, and Spooner and of foreign scholars like Taine and Renan, the whole shot with lights of feeling, wisdom, and wit. The early chapters should be a compulsory textbook for all writers of biography; some of them would recognise their unfitness for the task, others would learn to do it better." Sir Richard Livingstone

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 3 '41 700w

Reviewed by F. S. Marvin

Nature 147:523 My 3 '41 800w

"Memoirs [which are] at first almost wistfully enchanting, then alert and stimulating, and in their last phase politically interesting and informative: memoirs which bridge two epochs and picture both, in the experience and response of one broadly human, deeply scholarly, keenly active and receptive mind."
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 20 '41 600w

FISHER, H. A. L.—Continued

Reviewed by Gilbert Murray

Spec 165:642 D 13 '40 1200w

"It is a pity that the late Warden of New College left an unfinished Autobiography: it is not only unfinished but also discontinuous. What, however, he was able, even after the war had broken out, to commit to paper, is of real value, for the more that masterpiece of his ripest years—the History of Europe—is read, the more will readers desire to know something of the writer; and they will gather not a little from these chapters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p620 D 7 '40
500w

FISHER, MRS. MARY FRANCES (KEN-NEDY). See Parrish, M. F.

FISHER, STEPHEN GOULD (STEPHEN GOULD, GRANT LANE, pseud.). Destroyer. 236p $2 Appleton-Century

41-15439

A story of war in the future when the United States must defend her own waters and territories against attacks by Germany, Italy and Japan. The principal scenes are laid at sea and in the Canal zone; the main characters are: Kathie Winters, an American newspaper writer; Nick Waters, World War veteran now serving Naval intelligence; and Jeff Barret, a young submarine officer.

"The author of 'Destroyer' has served on battleship and submarine, and what he knows about action at sea hasn't been picked up from books. But he contrives to put into a book quite a lot of that knowledge, so his novel is enlightening as well as being a lively melange of love, international spying and combat." Lisle Bell

+ Books p9 Ag 31 '41 90w

"It is a thrilling yarn by a well-known short story writer, cut to the pattern of slick-paper magazines. Mr. Fisher is at his best in his realistic descriptions of naval strategy, tactics and battle scenes, of which he writes with the assurance of one who has seen service with submarine S boats and battleships." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p22 S 7 '41 280w

FISHER, STEPHEN GOULD (STEPHEN GOULD, GRANT LANE, pseud.). I wake up screaming. 231p $2 Dodd

41-3327

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Mr 30 '41 110w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 40w

"The curious feature of this story is that, although there are long periods during which nothing pertinent to the investigation appears to be happening, one always knows that the detective has not given up his pursuit. While we are being afforded glimpses of life in Hollywood and of an unconventional love affair, there is always the menace of arrest hanging over the head of the leading character. Both the background and the mystery element are skillfully handled." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 16 '41 200w

"Lurid lowdown on studio intrigues. Killing is open-and-shut affair. Realism rife in lingo and descriptions. Good writing wasted. Feverish."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Mr 1 '41 40w

FISHER, VARDIS. City of illusion. 382p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-5220

Story of the discovery of the Comstock Lode in Nevada in 1859, the boom which resulted, and the final failure of the mines which left Virginia City a ghost town. The central characters are Eilley Cowan, who ran a boarding house in the canyon before silver was discovered, and became enormously wealthy afterward, and her weak, but lovable husband, Sandy Bowers.

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

"The student of the period will time and again come across dates that do not match up, characters out of their time, incidents lifted bodily and used in other settings than their own. But what of it? Mr. Fisher is not writing the truth in the limited historical sense. He is, however, writing essential truth, which is far more to the point. There remains the matter of Mr. Fisher's style, never, even at its best, an easy or simple one. In this newest sample of it the reader will discover that the author has changed very little. His prose still tends to be turgid, swollen, faintly exalted when it is not merely awkward, dead-level, schoolboyish. Yet—well, the proof of a novel, at any rate a novel of this kind, is in the reading. Do you go on with the story? You do." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p5 Mr 30 '41 1250w

"One doubts if a better book could be written on the subject. The descriptions are fine. The mad scramble of the early days, the big wind, the great snow, the Indian scare, and the thousand and one incidents of daily life in such a place are vividly done. It is an intensely alive book."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 460w

"The treatment of the subject in the form of fiction enables the author to give a satirical twist to an account of human nature responding to one form of mass hysteria and to emphasize its eccentric phases. This story does not represent the author's best work." G. W. Hill

Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 S 26 '41 90w

"The story calls for intelligent realism, imaginative understanding and laughter. None of these qualities is present in Mr. Fisher's novel. He has made a commonplace tale out of rich contemporary data, without the addition of creative imagination or the artistry of style." M. R. Werner

— New Repub 104:705 My 19 '41 360w

"I should not recommend Vardis Fisher's latest novel as anything of a model. It is a sound bit of selection and rationalization, lacking distinction, it seems to me, both in expression and as a novel. No question about it, however, he has done admirably by the record. And the record itself makes a yarn that is practically unbeatable." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '41 950w

"Unconvincing novel about the Comstock Lode, and a sad letdown from his 'Children of God.' The ambitious Eilley Cowan and her nondescript husband, Sandy Bowers, who made a fortune from the mine, are legends in the West. Mr. Fisher neither makes them real nor leaves them legendary. Instead, he converts them into what appears to be another consignment of screen characters."

— New Yorker 17:70 Mr 29 '41 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Sabin

Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ap 19 '41 600w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 167:364 O 10 '41 150w

Time 37:100 Ap 14 '41 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p481 S 27 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

FISHMAN, NATHANIEL. Heirs to your money and how to protect them; with an introd. by Peter B. Olney. 133p $1.50 Liveright

347.6 Wills

41-19739

By use of many case histories the author explains for the layman the why and how of wills. A final section contains extracts from the wills of Cardoza, Carnegie, Grover Cleveland, Will Rogers, and others. There is also a glossary of technical terms used in wills. Index.

Spring'f'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 40w

"A few of the quoted excerpts are more interesting than instructive. Now and then the author is not above a bromide, and some of his definitions don't quite jell. A customer may finish the book with the melancholy impression that wills are the happy hunting grounds of attorneys and the green pastures of litigants—a reflection that may be the beginning of wisdom. The lay reader who acquires the idea that the making and executing of wills is replete with pitfalls has laid hold of a useful notion."

Ralph Hayes

Survey 77:311 O '41 300w

FITT, MARY, pseud. Aftermath of murder [Eng title: Death and Mary Dazill]. 274p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Joseph, M]

(W) 41-8541

Detective story.

"Miss Fitt tells it with a nicely varied set of narrative expedients, including flashbacks, arousing no end of suspense on the way and polishing off her performance with an up-to-the-minute solution—vastly surprising, too. . . Ill-starred love, family skeleton, real emotion and impressive detection in this highly recommended item. Exactly the thing for readers who feel that they cannot face any high-pressure pep at the moment." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Je 8 '41 160w

"One sees and hears everything at second hand, not even as in Conrad's stories from an actual participant in the events described, and this seems to envelop events in a distant and unreal atmosphere. Yet the story is one in which a direct impression of passion and emotional intensity would appear specially needed."

E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 4 '41 200w

"Mary Fitt has told the story with keen understanding and skillful craftsmanship. Even those who dislike mystery stories in general should be able to appreciate this book as a tragic novel of love and hate and jealousy and misunderstanding." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Je 8 '41 350w

"This is a quiet, gentle tale told between cribbage games and at tea-time in the pleasant, dusty atmosphere of the vicarage. Very fine indeed."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 7 '41 60w

"Tale of country family disruption by fatally fascinating governess told with fine artistry. Post-facto detective work surprisingly good. Worth while."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Je 7 '41 30w

"Miss Fitt shows her talents in the way she sinks herself absolutely in a place and period which she makes not decorations but an integral source of the crime. Mary Dazill, the governess whom the squire selects to companion his nubile, charming, ignorant daughters, and who becomes the ruin of the whole household, is a deeply imagined and really frightening figure." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 166:324 Mr 21 '41 250w

Time 38:72 Jl 7 '41 30w

"The unwritten law that reviewers should not give away the secrets of unsolved crimes hampers one from praising the author in any but vague terms. Yet the type of reader who puts down the book at intervals to anticipate the ending will not be puzzled for long, and the other type will not realize what a delicate piece of group psychology (to use an old-fashioned term) this is until the epilogue. Now the pages will be turned back to read, with understanding, what Mary Dazill's witchcraft was; and then if you are not conscious of a feeling that your heart is turning in upon itself, you had better limit your reading in future to blood-and-thunder detective stories.

The author has a fine human sympathy that acts like a charm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 15 '41 330w

FITZ, FRANCES ELLA. Lady Sourdough; as told to Jerome Odum. 319p il $3 Macmillan B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—Alaska

41-21810

Reminiscences of a New York girl, a stenographer, who in 1900 went to Alaska during the gold rush, made good, and returned to New York with her gold, and was married.

"Fizzy's autobiography starts out well, then slumps into a stretch of repetitious musing here, musing there, while storms rage like all get-out and the huskies howl. There are just a few too many men found dead of violence every morning in Nome's alleys. But don't hesitate, pardner. Mush on stoutly through the stretch of heavy going and you'll come to pages of rousing good narrative that will hold you to the big clean-up of the sluice boxes at the very end. The book pans out pretty." S. H. Holbrook

+ — Books p29 O 26 '41 500w

"This is a chapter in the epic of gold, told by one who viewed it from a fresh and unusual angle. She tells it well."

+ Christian Century 58:1306 O 22 '41 60w

Spring'f'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 420w

FITZGERALD, FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. The last tycoon; an unfinished novel together with, The Great Gatsby, and selected stories. 476p $2.75 Scribner

(W) 41-21401

The book contains a little more than half of the author's last novel, all that was completed at the time of his death; a synopsis of the rest; a selection from the notes; a letter to his publisher; a reprint of The Great Gatsby; and five of Fitzgerald's short stories. The hero of The Last Tycoon, is one Monroe Stahr, an executive and creative genius of the motion pictures.

"With The Great Gatsby, that superb short novel of the violently disorganized life on Long Island in Prohibition, Fitzgerald came to the peak of his first period. . . In Tender Is the Night . . . one saw the author struggling toward maturity. It was anyone's guess whether he would ever arrive. But that he did arrive, bringing with him a book of great power, clarity, and characterization, we now know. His friend Edmund Wilson has presented with skill and intuition Fitzgerald's new novel, The Last Tycoon. To the manuscript, which was two-thirds complete, he has fitted the author's notes, the outline and those fine passages in which the novelist's mind had raced ahead. Thus we have the feel and scope of the story, partly by execution, partly by intent, and if it is less than Fitzgerald would have lived to give us, it is less only in degree." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Ja '42 650w

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"In addition to an introductory note by Edmund Wilson the volume includes that fine short novel, 'The Great Gatsby,' and several of Fitzgerald's best short stories, making the whole a kind of 'selected works.' And however much the bulk of Fitzgerald's writings may now appear to have been only a matter of literary fashion, such selected pieces as these are something much more—rich and rewarding enough to warrant the attention of another generation besides his own." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p18 O 26 '41 700w

"In this novel Fitzgerald had not only returned to the level of 'The Great Gatsby'; the internal evidence of the finished chapters—and of the working notes which are included—shows that he would have gone beyond it. This triumph of Fitzgerald over himself and over the hazards thrown up by a world in disintegration is a tribute to his stamina as an artist and a man. . . . This volume presents the best of Fitzgerald. . . . The notes are extremely interesting for the glimpse they give into the process of a writer at work. They are full of insight and humor; they are also intensely moving as the intimate remarks to himself of a sensitive and highly gifted human being." Margaret Marshall

FITZGERALD, F. S. K.—Continued

+ Nation 153:457 N 8 '41 600w

"'The Last Tycoon' [is] an ambitious book, but, uncompleted though it is, one would be blind indeed not to see that it would have been Fitzgerald's best novel and a very fine one. Even in this truncated form it not only makes absorbing reading; it is the best piece of creative writing that we have about one phase of American life—Hollywood and the movies. Both in the unfinished draft and the sheaf of Fitzgerald's notes which Mr. Wilson has appended to the story it is plainly to be seen how firm was his grasp of his material, how much he had deepened and grown as an observer of life. His sudden death, we see now, was as tragic as that of Thomas Wolfe." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p1 N 9 '41 1100w

"'The Last Tycoon,' even as it stands, is the only grownup novel about Hollywood that I have knowledge of. . . . His story therefore has a solidity and depth lacking in such merely readable narratives as 'What Makes Sammy Run?' It might have turned out to be his masterpiece, and even in its present state it is an advance over 'The Great Gatsby,' which, by the way, is unexpectedly rereadable." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:107 N 15 '41 500w

"Wit, observation, sure craftsmanship, the verbal felicity that Fitzgerald could always summon—all these are in 'The Last Tycoon.' But with them, there is a richness of texture, a maturity of point of view that shows us what we all lost in his early death." S. V. Benét
Sat R of Lit 24:10 D 6 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. J. Conklin

Spring'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 550w

"F. Scott Fitzgerald was the last U.S. romantic. To the end his writing was preoccupied with flowers, perfume, rain, the rustle of women's clothes, warm darkness and music in the night. He sometimes deliberately blurred his narrative line, resulting now in effective suspense, now in mere teasing. Yet this fragment contains scenes of beauty and power. Completed, it might or might not have been a Citizen Kane about the movie industry." Time 38:95 N 3 '41 400w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:vi winter '42 450w

FITZGERALD, PITT L. Drovers east; il. by the author. 352p map $2 Macrae Smith co. (W) 40-33280

The period of this story for sixth and seventh grade readers is the early 1800's. At that time the settlers fed their cattle on their bountiful crops in the southern Ohio country, and drove them east to the market in Baltimore. Andy O'Farrell's first trip with his father, driving the cattle of all their neighbors, is the central fact of the story.

Booklist 37:274 F 15 '41

"Not a great story, but a straightforward one, which boys of sixth grade and above will like. Recommended." Mary Lucas

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 160w

FITZPATRICK, FREDERICK LINDER. The control of organisms. (Science in modern living ser) 334p il $2.75 Teachers college 632.95 Pests 40-7337

"This volume presents a comprehensive view of man's progress in control of organisms and, at the same time, a challenge to extend these controls. It is obvious from reading this book that all the knowledge at our command has not found application. Undoubtedly, we could increase our security and derive even greater satisfaction from living if we could further apply what is known about control of organisms. This suggests an important aim of general education, and this volume is offered as a most significant contribution to the furtherance of this aim." (Editor's pref) Bibliography. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 25:50 O '40

Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Mr '40 420w

FITZSIMMONS, CORTLAND. The evil men do. 281p $2 Stokes 41-610

Detective story.

"Miss Ethel Thomas, amateur sleuth nearing eighty, is just the person to make a Hollywood mystery more bearable. Whether in a closet, in a faint, accused of double murder or whatever, she's a gallant, plain-speaking old party with a knack for snooping against heavy odds, and goodness knows how she made any sense of those loonies out there." Will Cuppy

Books p15 Ja 19 '41 110w

"The fact that the evil men do lives after them has been proven and reproven, but seldom as effectively as in Cortland Fitzsimmons 'The Evil Men Do.'" Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 70w

"'The Evil Men Do' is not precisely Grade A stuff, but it has plenty of action and excitement." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 160w

"Fast and frenzied."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 11 '41 40w

FLACCUS, LOUIS WILLIAM. The spirit and substance of art. 3d ed 593p il $5 Crofts 701 Esthetics. Art 41-51523

"About 100 pages have been added, covering the dance in relation to music and to expressionism, motion pictures, non-objective painting, and surrealism, with fresh interpretations of several other topics." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1927.

Booklist 37:273 F 15 '41

"This book remains fresh and alive and continues to grow. Unlike most estheticians the author is a practicing artist, and unlike many philosophers he is a practicing and not merely a professing empiricist. The result is that although his work is not lacking in generality, one feels and finds its generalizations to be rooted in a wealth of references and responses to specific works of art. Refreshing though this kind of treatment is, it results in certain faults that might have been avoided. For example the author does not make clear the relation of his theory of art as semblance to other theories such as Croce's theory of art as imagination." J. S.

+ J Philos 38:165 Mr 13 '41 360w

FLACK, MARJORIE (MRS WILLIAM ROSE BENET), and BENET, WILLIAM ROSE. Adolphus; or, The adopted dolphin and the pirate's daughter [il. by Marjorie Flack]. [32p] $1.50 Houghton (W) 41-22515

Nonsense tale told in picture and rhymed couplets. It is all about a helpful young dolphin who rescued a maiden from the sea and delivered her to her beloved.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:29 Ja '42 80w

"Adolphus as he meets a shark, or gambols in the waves for pure joy, or as, very gratified after the success of his efforts, he leaps and curves from the foam, is irresistible. Unfortunately the text is less successful. Unless set forth with the verve and metrical facility of a Bab Ballad by W. S. Gilbert, a tale of thwarted lovers, finally united, has little interest for boys and girls. However, though McHenry and Angelina may leave young readers cold, they follow the antics of Adolphus with unmixed delight. For readers from 8 on."

A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p42 N 30 '41 200w

"A handsome, amusing book."

+ New Yorker 17:141 D 6 '41 40w

"Whale of a book. Must." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 40w

FLANAGAN, MRS HALLIE (FERGUSON).
Arena. 475p pl $3.75 Duell

792.0973 U.S. Federal theater project

41-231

"Hallie Flanagan describes the story she has to tell in 'Arena' as 'an adventure in the American theater.' . . . This is the personal history of the Federal Theater Project, that late and often lamented offspring of the W. P. A., as told by the courageous and energetic woman who headed the government-established theater from the brave, hopeful days of its inception to the grim, embattled period of its demise." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:266 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:6 My '41

"Mrs. Flanagan tells the story clearly, forthrightly, bitingly, with much detail and with a proper determination not to gloss over the more unpleasant and discouraging side of a courageous dream that had more than its share of discouragements and was, on the whole, a valiant failure. I admire the book and I admire Mrs. Flanagan so much that I will not even protest when she says that the W. P. A. production of 'Coriolanus' was reviewed in New York by the second-string critics, a statement that either ignores the review that I wrote for the Herald Tribune or is quite a crack at it." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ Books p4 D 22 '40 650w

"'Arena' is no dull, objective report, though it has a few barrels of statistics and data in its appendix. It is a fighting book and a glowing book; it makes you proud and it makes you sad. When you talk of the creative life that you believe is the essence of democracy, this is the kind of crazy, vital thing you are talking about. And they killed it!" Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 D 18 '40 700w

"A book which must be praised for its frankness and its humor, even though it does not draw the final conclusions warranted by its facts." Grenville Vernon

+ — Commonweal 34:110 My 23 '41 650w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch

Living Age 359:489 Ja '41 1300w

Reviewed by Sherman Conrad

Nation 152:187 F 15 '41 1100w

"By talking little about herself and a great deal about the Federal Theatre, Hallie Flanagan gives us an extremely favorable impression of both. And she can write, too, another circumstance that sets her apart from most of the people now publishing their disgruntled memoirs." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 104:57 Ja 13 '41 2000w

"Despite the inclusion of a good deal of necessary documentation, here is a book that is as exciting as a novel and twice as provocative." John Gassner

+ N Y Times p5 D 22 '40 1350w

Pratt p17 spring '41

Reviewed by Louis Kronenberger

Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ja 4 '41 900w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

Theatre Arts 25:168 F '41 1300w

FLAVIN, MARTIN. Corporal Cat; the story of a German parachute soldier. 305p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-21168

A young German parachutist comes down by mistake in his own country. The story is of his life, which is revealed in backflashes, as he wanders over the countryside, until he is at last brought to bay and killed by his own countrymen, who do not realize he is a German.

Booklist 38:95 N 15 '41

"It is a sobering, bitter book, written with urgency in which one vivid and painful picture succeeds another, as in some frightful kaleidoscope of a hell on earth. If any one who reads it has sometimes felt inwardly that perhaps there is much to be said for the Nazi system because it is efficient, then 'Corporal Cat' is certainly apt to dispel rather permanently any such opinion. Forty times more efficiency would not justify the cost in human terms or cancel out the deliberate creation of a world based on cruelty, fear, blind servility. For that, it is a blessed book. But, while in the long terms of history it may perhaps be true that men tutored to such an existence may come in the end to destroy one another, this conclusion seems to me a rather dangerous one." Iris Barry

+ — Books p8 O 26 '41 750w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 22 '41 600w

"One might suppose this to be the stuff of which exciting yarns are made; but actually the story falls quite flat. The reader's sympathies never can get oriented, for the moral blacks and whites are muddled." Harold Strauss

N Y Times p7 O 26 '41 700w

"The material is familiar enough, but Mr. Flavin presents it simply and touchingly."

+ New Yorker 17:97 O 18 '41 60w

"As a picture of the state of mind which has produced, still animates, and will eventually destroy the Nazi system this novel is an outstanding achievement. Technically the author has handled his story with magnificent economy and efficiency. The mood of pity and terror achieved in the first dozen pages is maintained unbroken to the final catastrophe, and the significance of character and incident achieve a flawless pattern." R. J. Conklin

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 550w

FLEISHER, WILFRID. Volcanic isle, 345p $3 Doubleday

952 Japan—Politics and government. Japan
—Foreign relations (W) 41-51936

"An eye-witness account of events preceding and following Japanese alignment with the Rome-Berlin axis. The bloodless revolution now taking place has ushered in new statesmen. Although their ideas hark back to medieval days, they find some counterpart in Germany and Italy. A totalitarian state at home seems inevitable. A 'new order in east Asia' with Japan as supreme leader is now a dream whose fulfillment, the author believes, will depend on Japan's own capacity to carry her schemes into effect." (Library J) The author was for many years managing editor of the Japan Advertiser, an English language newspaper. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic N '41 200w

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"Mr. Fleisher's book is one of the most authoritative, informative and illuminating reports to come out of Japan for a long time. He does not labor to be profound and he does not tell everything he knows. This not only makes for easy reading, but the book's modesty and simplicity impart to it strength and integrity. . . . This is a highly important book written in a manner which brings a complicated subject fully within the grasp of any intelligent reader. That is fortunate, for it ought to get the widest audience." Edgar Snow

+ Books p1 S 14 '41 1850w

FLEISHER, WILFRID—Continued

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '41
310w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 34:521 S 19 '41 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 60w

"Those who are interested in the international scene will find this an intensely interesting book." O. G. Lawson

Library J 66:668 Ag '41 100w

Reviewed by Willard Price
New Repub 106:124 Ja 26 '42 700w

"At the present time, when the United States must keep one strategic eye fixed on the Atlantic and the other on the Pacific, any up-to-date report on Japan is uncommonly topical. And Mr. Fleisher's report is more accurate and authoritative than the average, because he writes with a background of many years of experience as a foreign correspondent in Tokyo and as the editor of one of the best-known English-language newspapers published abroad, The Japan Advertiser. . . As a political account of modern Japan, enlivened by personal sketches of a number of leading Japanese officials, Mr. Fleisher's work is excellent, sober, factual and informing." W. H. Chamberlin
+ N Y Times p3 S 21 '41 1350w

"Though carelessly composed and written in jog-trot prose, contains some information about the Japan of yesterday and today that I do not recollect having seen in other recent reports from the Orient." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 17:74 S 6 '41 200w
Pratt p13 D '41

"Fleisher's book is good reading and a valuable reference for the interpretation of current news." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 13 '41 450w

FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD. South star. 117p $2 Macmillan

811 41-6401

This new book by the 1939 Pulitzer prize winner for poetry, consists of a long poem in four parts called 'The story of Arkansas, followed by shorter lyrics.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic S '41 200w

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by G. S. Hellman

Books p25 O 19 '41 360w

"There is little in this book of Mr. Fletcher's earlier style and manner, and that is to be regretted, for it is impossible to say that the poet finds himself at home in the conventional lyrical expression. The present volume begins with a long poem, 'The Story of Arkansas,' written in a rather heavy epic tradition. . . If Mr. Fletcher's latest volume brings disappointment it is not because it lacks the essential stuff of poetry. Mr. Fletcher is an established poet and it is impossible for him to write in any medium without revealing the gift of poetic expression which is native to his mind and to his pen. It is rather because he has not found the means to employ his individual talent in these later days in a manner to reveal the originality and impact which marked his earlier work. One has a feeling that this is the work of a poetic mind in transition." John Ritchey

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 24 '41 400w

"The earliest suggest some of the graces and strangenesses of Chinese poems, without their brevity. If they are exotic, with 'pale terraces' and 'lacquered mandarin moments' and 'flamboyant crenellations,' the words are appropriate to one another; the repetitions and phrase permutations, the various 'mood-movements,' recall forms in music. But as they begin to move from 'pure poetry' to personal meaning and observation, this resemblance diminishes. The orchestrations are ruined by an apparent belief that any theme, repeated and expanded, gains in significance. It is all done with pedals." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ Nation 152:704 Je 14 '41 400w

